Classical Club Prepares For Annual Roman Banquet

Honorary Society Marks Tenth Anniversary Feast

Antiquity and the twentieth century will join forces to provide a utopian atmosphere to an occasion of restrained revelry—to take place in the Southwick Ballroom on Tuesday night, February 3. The cause for this festivity is the annual Greco-Roman banquet, planned, arranged, executed and enjoyed by the Goodrich Classical Club.

Nor is this an ordinary banquet, but one marking the tenth anniversary of similar ones. Begun in 1938, succeeding generations of Classical Club members have made these banquets the highlights, the pièces de resistance, of the Club's yearly activities. The approaching celebration—because it marks a milestone in the Club's tradition—is expected to be a particularly ecstatic one—with the only regret that one of ancestors cannot be present to laud it with immortal verse.

Features of the banquet are: a horizontal position for the intake of food (to afford a more leisurely downward propulsion of same), Roman-Hellenistic delicacies, though consisting of good Vermont victuals and prepared with twentieth century implements, yet cooked to 2000-year-old recipes, classic ceremonies and rituals surrounding ancient repasts, as well as togas, finger-bowls, and slaves.

It has been the custom to assign the menial tasks connected with the banquet (such as table-waiting, cooking, and lug-ging of the couches) to the more recently recruited members of the Classical Club. After a year's apprentice period, these "slaves" (unless they have proven particularly able in one of the above activities) are graduated to "imperators" from which lofty heights they survey with tranquillity, serenity, and repose—and without doing any work—the splendours unfolding about them.

"A veritable spectacle of an exuberant near-saturnalian carousal has been mapped out," said Phyllis Page, chairman of the entertainment committee of the Goodrich Classical Club and a classics major, and she added, "with all the trimmings."

The banquet will deviate in just one important respect from its antiquarian prototypes: it will extend over just one evening. Only members of the Goodrich Classical Club may attend. One may become a member by taking courses in the classics or in subjects connected with the classics (history, literature, etc.) and by making a decent showing in the grades.

"New Vermonters" Make First Appearance at Engineers' Dance Tonite

PLAQUE PAYS TRIBUTE TO AGGIE WAR DEAD

A Memorial Plaque was presented by the Green Mountain chapter of Alpha Zeta, National Agricultural Honorary fraternity, to the Agricultural College at the regular meeting held on January 14, 1948. Chancellor Fred Webster presented the plaque for Alpha Zeta and it was received with a word of thanks to the Chapter by J. E. Carrigan, Dean of the College of Agriculture. The Plaque is in the memory of those graduates of the Agricultural College who gave their lives in World War II. The names appearing on the Plaque are: Donald Bashaw '27, Richard Iby '43, James Lee '43, Robert Marzari '45, Lawrence Rice '46 and Glen Streeter '42.

The Plaque is of brass with a varnished wood background. The letters are of raised copper and the names of the men are engraved on copper plates. The Plaque will be placed in the Men's Reading Room in Morrill Hall until completion of the proposed Agricultural Science Building, which will be its permanent home.

FACULTY WOMEN TO HEAR ADDRESS BY PROF. WILLARD

Russian Drama Chosen For Topic on Feb. 9

Sumner Willard, assistant professor of Romance Languages and of Russian at the University of Vermont, will be the featured speaker at the third 1947-1948 meeting of the University Faculty Women's Club, according to the announcement by Prof. Muriel Hughes, president. The Club will meet in the faculty lounge on the third floor of the Waterman Building Monday evening, February 9, at 8 o'clock.

The Faculty Women's Club is inviting all members of the Ladies of the Faculty, association of faculty wives and faculty women teachers on the campus, to attend this meeting.

The lecture continues the study of "America's Pacific Neighbors" which the faculty women began last fall. Russia will be the country under discussion at this meeting, and Professor Willard will speak on an aspect of Russian life which is of much interest not only to the people of that country but also to students of Russian life and to all those interested in the drama—the Soviet theatre.

Professor Willard has recently completed an article for an encyclopedia on the development and present status of the Soviet theatre. He points out that the contemporary Russian theatre, inheriting a great theatrical tradition from the Russia of the czars, has continued to experiment and develop during the past generation in a way which has attracted the attention of playwrights, theatre people, and drama lovers everywhere.

Professor Willard, who came to the University last fall, became interested in the study of Russia and the Russian language while he was teaching languages at the United States Military Academy at West Point during the war. A native of Massachusetts and a graduate of Harvard, where he received his Ph.D. degree, he enlisted in the army during the war and soon found himself transferred to the Military Academy, as a member of the teaching staff, because of his knowledge of languages. While he was teaching French, Spanish and Portuguese, he became interested in the instruction being given in Russian and began his own intensive study of that language. Professor Willard had risen to the rank of major by the time he was separated from the service.

UVM Students Hear Stassen Stress Weaknesses of UN at Vt. Forums

GOP Hopeful Stands Pat Against Veterans' Bonus

Harold E. Stassen, Republican presidential nominee aspirant, stressed the weaknesses and the ineffectiveness of the United Nations' Organization before a huge throng of dignitaries, UVM students, and Burlingtonians at the Memorial Auditorium on Monday night.

The Minnesota GOP leader, who was sponsored by the Vermont Forums, criticized the UNO for its failure to establish a police force to carry out the partition of Palestine. He firmly believed that the UN was a good step forward but nevertheless the set-up was not foolproof.

Stassen slapped back at those Americans who felt that open conflict with Russia was inevitable. War with Russia can be avoided at the peace tables, he asserted, but "none can predict the moves of the men in the Kremlin" so he strongly advocated the rebuilding of American military strength.

His opposition to any veterans' bonus brought mixed comments from the veteran-studded crowd in the lengthy discussion period which followed. He felt that the money could be appropriated to better usage, particularly to the establishment of VA hospitals.

In attempting to arrive at a possible solution to the problem of housing, the GOP presidential hopeful offered the suggestion that the government should run housing units off the assembly lines en masse. Half of these (or whereabouts) would be sold to the general public while the remainder would be used as investment instruments, etc.

As far as other pertinent domestic questions were concerned, Stassen advocated the support of the Taft-Hartley Bill with certain stipulations, universal military training, extension of governmental rent control for a minimum of two years, and stern measures by the government in an attempt to roll back the rising inflation tide.

The former Minnesota governor pro-

Pres. Millis Honor Guest At Adsit House

President and Mrs. Millis were dinner guests at Adsit House on Friday evening, January 23. Following the meal, Kathryn Mears and Pat Reed served coffee in the living room. Vocal harmonizing around the piano provided fun for all. During the evening, Mrs. Blake conducted President and Mrs. Millis on a tour of the house to see how cooperative living is conducted.

posed that the United Nations hold a general assembly in 1950 to revise the entire United Nations' constitution in an attempt to make the system workable. Definite weaknesses in the UN exist, according to Stassen, especially in the veto power clause, in the international court set-up, and in the impotent police force.

Many other important issues were lightly touched, including the taxation question, by the skilled speaker during the one hour and a quarter session. Stassen cleverly, however, with the exception of the bonus question, closely adhered to the general national consensus of opinion throughout his speech and the cross-fire questioning from the floor.

Ski School Announces Additional Lessons

Completing their fourth week of instruction, members of the Barrel Stave Academy, some 80 strong, are fast learning their A-B-Skis under the able tutelage of J. W. Howard, certified USEASA instructor and director of the UVM Ski School. One more week remains in the current cycle of classes, which provides instruction for students three days weekly. Classes are held Tuesday and Saturday afternoons at the Country Club and Thursday afternoons at Centennial Field.

Howard states that a new cycle of classes, extending over a four-week period, will be offered for beginners, intermediate, and advanced skiers beginning Tuesday, February 10. For students and University personnel, instruction is made available at a special student rate of one dollar a lesson. The second cycle of classes is so scheduled to be completed before dead week.

Nine Vital Posts Filled By Able Upperclassmen

Committee chairmen for Kake Walk, 1948, were announced by Alan Pratt, co-director, last week. Students who received these honors, which carry with them a great deal of hard work, are: Charlie Traverse and Jean MacLaughlin, campaigns; Art Langer and Pat Malmquist, stunts; Bob Harrington, Kake Walkers; Seward French and Rod Galbraith, lighting; Bill Gilbertson, sports; Joe Waterman, awards; Bill Elgood, sculpture; Torrey Carpenter, tickets; Mary Jane Farnham, program.

Jean MacLaughlin, feminine partner of the team which will manage the King and Queen campaign is a Sophomore and lives in Burlington. Her major is musical education and she is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta and the UVM twirling team. Also a member of the class of '50, Charlie Traverse hails from Morristown, N. J., and plays football for his alma mater. The two have gone to work setting up campaign rulings concerning publicity space and eligibility.

Art Langer, sophomore pre-med from Brooklyn, will work with Pat Malmquist of Post Mills, Vt., on super stunts for the festivities. Pat is a junior and a member of Staff and Sandal.

Managing the entries for the Kake Walking competition will be Bob Harrington '49, an upstate New Yorker in the Liberal Arts Curriculum. Bob is an SAE and served on Student Government last term.

The task of planning dramatic lighting effects goes to Rod Galbraith and Seward French. Both belong to the ranks of the married students. Rod is a business major from Enfield, N. H. He has been a very active member of the Outing Club during his college career. Seward French, '48 is a Kappa Sigma and working in Secondary Education.

Another Kappa Sigma is Bill Gilbertson, arranging the sports events to be held Kake Walk week-end. A strong advocate of more and better sports at UVM, Bill has three years in which to pursue his interests. He comes from Manchester, N. H. Basketball and hockey are on schedule for the weekend already.

Handling awards for the various Kake Walk winners will be Joe Waterman '49, business major from Newton Center, Mass.

Bill Elgood of Island Pond, chairman of sculptures, will have the icy job of persuading dormitories to build bigger and better snow sculptures to foster the spirit of Kake Walk.

Ticket man Torrey Carpenter '48, is a Phi Delta Theta from Burlington. He and his wife, the former "Duck" Frazer, '46 editor of the CYNIC, live at Fort Ethan Allen.

Mary Jane Farnham of Burlington will direct the designing and printing of Kake Walk programs. A Theta, Mary Jane recently served as chairman of the Eastern colleges debate tournament.

The 'Streamlined' Staff

The new system! What is it? What is its purpose—something new, something radical? By all means, the answer is no! The outgoing staff, who have had the benefit of several years work on the CYNIC, consider the new streamlined staff as the most logical step in making our newspaper truly a publication of, by, and for everyone on this campus. The merging of several of the key positions will eliminate the overlapping of duties and the consequent fulfillment of others which have been sadly neglected.

Will it work? Who knows? Some deem it needless to even try. We sincerely will do our best to see that this publication lives up to the high standards established throughout the years.

As a forerunner of the future CYNIC policy, we offer the following statements:

1. The CYNIC solicits the fullest cooperation from everyone on this campus—not only the CYNIC workers, but every professor, department and organization.
2. Please do not ask us for an editorial on your pet scheme. The "Letter to the Editor" column is your voice. Use it wisely and discreetly.
3. While contributions in the form of features, gripes, etc., are welcome, we cannot under any feasible conditions guarantee the print of same. Poorly written articles are at a maximum.
4. We shall give a comprehensive coverage to all students functions, with the ultimate aim of ridding this paper of non-UVM tidbits which have the quaint characteristic of somehow finding their way into the columns of the CYNIC.

We trust that we will be able to live up to the great faith Ben Bursten and his associates placed on us. The co-editors have complete confidence in the entire senior staff, and feel certain that the CYNIC will fill your expectations to the highest possible level. Yours for a better CYNIC.

Fable 'n Folly

By JOHN D. ADAMS

I shall first answer a few well-timed questions that were asked of me when I acted as Editor of the January 10 and January 14 issues of the CYNIC. To Mr. Ian MacNeil and others who felt that I reversed the policy of the CYNIC by taking sides on a political issue I can only answer that you are probably correct in assuming that a college newspaper should be unbiased. It is for this reason that I asked Editor Bursten and the Senior Staff not to consider me as a contender for an editorial position. I questioned many of the students who had slyly mentioned that I pulled a journalistic "coup d'etat" and tried to learn what their idea of an ideal editorial policy of a college newspaper should be. Their replies were vague and I don't condemn them for it because I can't answer the question adequately myself. They told me that the policy must be progressive and objective, and here I am stifled by a confusion of terms. It can either be a process of sticking one's neck out a little more each issue until finally the axe falls and the student body can exclaim "My, my he progressed fast" and goes on to pick a new editor or being objective by working the "hearts and flowers" routine to death by distributing journalistic petals to each side.

When I supported Mr. Miele in the recent election I did so because my belief in what a newspaper should be conflicted with the impractical policy above. I believe that anyone working in an editorial capacity should try to be a keen critic and inform his public if some eggs are rotten in Shangri La. As a human being it is his duty to speak out against that which offends him; to be honest in what he writes regardless of disapproval from people who want everything packed neatly away; and to feel that everytime he picks a pen up his integrity and character are going to flow from it.

Golden Gloves for GOP

In past columns I have ridiculed many students who have prostrated themselves before the altar of extracurricular activities without the honesty or imagination to help make their group one that contains a slight minim of effectiveness and enlightenment. They are 75-carat phonies who care more about adding an extra line under their year book picture than trying to build a group which will merit the interest of new students.

These people are fast losing ground and their control is weakening in many places and broken completely in others. The recent election of Harry Miele proves that our cliques and factions are now pressing dirty noses against the window pane watching a representative body who has substituted thinking for scheming.

The latest opportunity for the thinking student who likes action is the introduction of the Young Republican federation on campus. It is still in its infancy but already is raising a cry for the vigor interest and participation of those who are tired of the grimy, soiled paws of the Old Guard machine. We are aware that classroom theory minus practical application provides no solution to national and international problems. We are aware, whatever our major field of study, that practical politics are the common denominators of these problems and the federation can provide the outlet for all who espouse the cause of the Republican Party.

Ed Costello, 27 year old veteran from Rutland, Vt., has been doing an excellent job of canvassing student support and promises an initial meeting next week. Ed is a member of the Freshman class and was recently chosen as a council representative in Student Government. He says the federation or YR is more interested in securing the help of students who have a sincere interest in carrying out the program than the BMOC's or "brains" of the school. Recently another person named Plumley entered the Vermont political arena. To Vermonters at UVM this should be enough to enlist their aid in building a bigger and better Republican Party by aiding in a little housecleaning. Watch for further announcements in next issue. Fireworks promised.

Clotted Tears in a Gothic Manse

Being a series of poetic flights into the phantasmagora of fulgurating fancy created by the cosmic mind of the vicious Arab Abdul Ahazred whose occult powers were immortalized thus:

"At his command ten thousand knitting ladies dropped a stitch."

Abdul the Magnificent, first describes a mystical experience that occurred after a raid on Jerusalem.

"I raised my hand into the night
And heard a sudden eerie sound
As if a ghost had stopped its flight
To frighten one who is earth-bound
In disdain he glanced around
Then hurried forth in fretful frenzy
To catch the last ten minutes Of Jack Benzy.

How would you like to find
A rhyme for frenzy
Maybe cadenzzy or Montmorency?

Next week the emphasis will be placed on light raillery accompanied by the usual conceits.

Best regards,

J.D.A.

Elliot Lawrence's Band Holds Record For College Proms

Nation's Youngest Band Leader Began His Career At Univ. of Penn.

One year after his auspicious debut, Elliot Lawrence stands as the outstanding new band leader in the nation. The young pianist has appeared everywhere in the East and Middle West where name bands are featured. His music has been heard on every major radio station in the country and his Columbia records are rapidly moving up on the best-seller lists.

Twenty-two-year-old Elliot Lawrence is truly a phenomenon in the music business. Starting from scratch on July 1, 1946, he stepped up the ladder of fame almost immediately through an engagement at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York City, the home of America's most famous orchestras. He followed with a stint at Frank Daley's Meadowbrook in Cedar Grove, N. J., where the new band surpassed all expectations. A personal appearance tour through the East and Middle West was next on the agenda, furthering the popularity rating of the nation's youngest name bandleader. In November he returned to the Hotel Pennsylvania in the fastest repeat engagement in the history of the Cafe Rouge. Just before Christmas the band hit the high roads for points west. It emerged from this tour as a prime collegiate favorite and it holds the enviable record of playing more proms than any other name band in a twelve-month period. In the spring of 1947 the band continued its tour of colleges, playing for dances at the Big Nine, Ivy, Missouri Conference and leading independent schools. The Lawrence aggregation was elected the "Band of the Year" by Look Magazine and won a similar award from Orchestra World Magazine.

Feature spreads in Look, Saturday Evening Post, Time, Esquire, and many other widely read publications introduced Elliot to countless millions. Guest appearance on "The Chesterfield Supper Club," "We the People," and "The Jack Smith Show" added to the tremendous volume of publicity that has been accorded the band.

After graduating from the University of Pennsylvania, where he was active in the musical organizations on campus, Elliot Lawrence signed a contract with General Artists Corporation, an organization which has also developed Woody Herman, Stan Kenton, Jimmy Dorsey, Glenn Miller, Frankie Carle, and other top bands. He was booked into the Hotel Pennsylvania, the first time that any band played its very first engagement at the showcase. In the nine weeks that he was there Elliot appeared on over 20 radio shows and was selected for the Harvey Moon Ball at Madison Square Garden. The Look Magazine award came in December and coupled with other honors assured his popularity.

Originally he confined his activities to local dances in Philadelphia and at the famous Sunnybrook Pavilion in Pottstown, Pa. He appeared for proms at Penn, Penn State, Cornell, Virginia Polytech, and Villanova. Early in 1946 he played his first promotional dances at Baltimore, Allentown, Wilmington, and Pottstown. In June, he was featured in a concert at Philadelphia's staid Academy of Music. For his services Elliot was received by such large crowds that his price was comparable to those of Harry James, Benny Goodman, the Dorseys, and other top-flight orchestras.

His new-found success has not affected Elliot Lawrence. He is determined to set a rapid pace in modern music. His type of dance music attracts attention and is obviously a welcome change from the more rudimentary styles employed by other bands.

Elliot closed out his first twelve months of show business by winning the Billboard Magazine Campus Poll as the "Band Most Likely to Succeed." He also finished an amazing fifth in the contest for all name bands, losing only to Stan Kenton, Tex Beneke, Tommy Dorsey, and Vaughn Monroe.

Now he is coming East after a successful stand at Hollywood's famous Paladium. Elliot Lawrence's first year has truly made show business history.

Hinkley, Cote Wins Golden Gloves Titles; Stewart KO's Daley in Rough-House Bout

Cote Gets 118 lb. Title
Hinkley Wins Crown

By TED BATTLES

The University of Vermont representatives won two titles and gained the finals in a third at Memorial Auditorium before 3,500 fans. On the last night of the Vermont Golden Gloves, Dave Hinkley, by virtue of his sensational knockout of Ed Robinson, won the heavyweight title and Charlie Stewart, who came off the deck to put away Burlington's Rockabye Kid, Bob Daley, gained the welterweight finals. Lyman "Shorty" Cote won the 118-pound championship without competition.

It took Dave Hinkley twenty-five seconds to dispose of 230-pound Ed Robinson in the heavyweight final. Hinkley tipped the scales at 177. The fighters met in center ring, whereupon the UVM student opened up on his heavier opponent with a two-fisted attack to the head and body. Robinson tried to go beneath his flailing rival's arms, but was caught with a short right to the jaw that put him down for the count.

Robinson tried to make it in time, but was too stunned. When he eventually did regain his feet he was set to continue the bout and was quite indignant that he hadn't been around when the winner had been declared.

Hinkley won the state title with a minimum of effort. In two bouts he spent a total of forty-five seconds in the ring and only sixteen of those in actual fighting.

However, the fight that caught the crowd's fancy was the welterweight semi-final in which Charlie Stewart kayoed Bob Daley in 1:05 of the third round. As the bout started the packed Auditorium was in an uproar with Daley going out for a quick kill.

Both fighters had two previous K. O.'s to their credit, but Daley was considered the favorite. The first round saw the Burlington boy land everything in the book, including haymakers that started from the floor. Near the close of the opening session Stewart, whose gameness alone carried him through the better part of the first two rounds, finally wilted under the barrage and went down for nine. Upon arising the UVMer fought back, but was forced to give ground under his opponent's blistering attack.

In the second round it was still Daley pounding away with both fists and dropping Stewart for nine again. However, midway through the session Stewart began to land with both hands, putting Daley on the deck for nine. At the bell Daley was holding on and the multitude roared in support of the underdog's comeback.

In the last canto it was definitely Stewart who was coming on and he sent a flurry of blows at Daley, who clinched and on the break turned and fell dead to the world, to finish an amazing comeback.

Scheduled to meet Maurice Kelliher in the championship contest, Stewart was unable to return to the ring.

Lyman "Shorty" Cote put on a fast exhibition with 112-pound champion John Martel of Winooski. Cote gave his less-experienced foe a boxing lesson in a fast sparring session.

Kittens Behind Goulet And Galli Squeeze By Midd Yearlings 50-48

The University of Vermont freshman basketball team won their fourth straight game in a thriller over the Middlebury Frosh in a preliminary game to the Varsity tilt at Middlebury last Wednesday. The score 50-48. That the Kittens are really under way now, is well evidenced by this hard-fought victory. Their only loss to date, is an early season defeat at the hands of Burlington High School.

The Frosh scoring was divided between Goulet, Grant, Galli and McCarthy, but it was the scrappy little substitute Goulet, who sparked the Kittens to victory, with his 12 points. Galli connected with 11; McCarthy 10; and Grant 8. For Middlebury, Nightengale took high scoring honors with 16, and Sierra followed him with 13.

Sports Parade Of Yesteryears . . .

The football season of 1889, in which clashes with Williams and Trinity colleges were scheduled, Vermont showed a growing interest in the game. UVM played and lost to the Ephrims twice, but toward the end of the season, though they were defeated, the Green and Gold held a strong Trinity team to a 18 to 6 score. Five hundred people, which was a good crowd for those days, witnessed the game with Trinity here at Burlington.

On February 8, 1890 Vermont was admitted membership into the New England Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association at a meeting held at the Quincy House in Boston. Delegates from Amherst, Brown, Dartmouth, Trinity, Wesleyan, Williams, and Worcester Polytechnic Institute unanimously voted UVM into the association. At that time only track and field events composed the competition provided by the New England Association. In April of 1890 Vermont sent a few athletes to the meet, which was at Worcester Poly, but they failed to place in any of the events.

UVM Splits With Pros

Sports Slants

By GORDON BICKFORD

U. V. M. sports teams were really in high gear this past week. While the Catamount basketball team was doing away with the Middlebury Panthers for their sixth win and second State Conference victory at Middlebury, Wednesday night, the U. V. M. boxing team was literally laying 'em in the aisles at Memorial Auditorium.

Capt. Ed Kotlarczyk of the basketball forces returned to his last season's form to cause the Panthers seventeen points worth of anguish, and approximately at the same hour, Charlie Stewart, "Shorty" Cote, and Dave (One-Punch) Hinkley were slugging their way to wins in the Golden Gloves.

The McGill University wrestling team was in Burlington, Sunday night, waiting for an overdue bus to Montre-bee. The boys, tired and bruised after a losing match at Williams, were fast losing patience with the Queen City. Said a battered McGill matman: "Our basketball team loses here; our skiers lose here; we are just innocently passing through, and even our bus is late. Sports life in Burlington is just one damn thing after another."—Which may or may not explain to the amazed patrons at the fights Wednesday why U. V. M.'s Charlie Stewart after taking a terrific beating for two rounds, and down on the canvas for two nine counts, came back and knocked Burlington's Jack Daley colder than the proverbial mackerel.

Word comes in that John McNanama, last year's ski team ace, is hospitalized in Nevada. John broke both heels when he overjumped the landing hill while giving an exhibition at the ski resort where he is an instructor. . . . Jimmy Conniff, another member of the '47 ski team, is currently instructing at a New Hampshire resort.

Next week, both the Catamount basketball and hockey teams face strong opposition. The hoopsters meet the University of Connecticut, and the icemen play Norwich. Both home games.

But before looking into next week's sports calendar, our nomination for the U. V. M. athlete of the week is Dave Hinkley in his 25 second K. O. of big Ed Robinson for the Vermont Heavyweight Golden Gloves Championship.

Captain Kotlarczyk Sparks Catamounts to 63-38 Win

Livingston, Henderson, Durkin Tally
Maurer Adds 13 to Losing Midd Cause

By "SAM" HOUSTON

The University of Vermont basketball team hung up its second State Conference win last Wednesday night as they easily defeated Middlebury College by a score of 63-38 at Middlebury.

Capt. "Hi Eddie" Kotlarczyk led his Green and Gold quintet to the top of the Vermont Conference standing as he jammed in 17 points to take high honors for the game. The "King's" seven field goals were all made via the long set shot, six of these being made without a miss, in the first half.

Sharpshooting by Cats

The game looked to all aspects to be a close one at the start. The Panthers from Middlebury played the Catamounts closely at first on the small home court, and kept in the game for the first eight minutes. At that point the Evansmen had only a 11-10 lead, but as Middlebury began to tire with the fast pace set by the Catamounts, the latter hit a hot streak.

Kotlarczyk sank his six long sets with bomb sight precision. Squeezed between the long, "net burning shot," were one-handers by "Googer" Durkin, set shots and push shots by scrappy Ham Livingston, and a couple of net swivelers by Niemann and Pierce. As a result Vermont led 32-24 at the halfway mark.

In the second half the Catamounts continued to look like a rifle sharpshooting team as they fired away at will and hit the hoop from all over to build up a 52-31 margin with four minutes left. Here Coach Evans gave his second club a chance to see the ball and they showed good forming in outscoring the Panthers 10-7 in the closing minutes of the game, to give Vermont its 63-38 win.

Following Kotlarczyk's 17 for Vermont was Livingston who scored five goals and two fouls for 12 points. Maurer and Whalen were high for the losing Panthers with 13 and 10 respectively.

HIKERS LEAVE FOR BOLTON LODGE TODAY

Hey, all you Outing Clubbers, here's the chance you've been waiting for! The Outing Club will sponsor an overnight hike to a lodge on Bolton Mountain known as Bryant's Upper Camp Saturday January 31. One of the favorites, or rather the favorite lodge for winter hikes, it is situated somewhat off the Long Trail, about six miles up Bolton Mountain. The road is plowed from the main highway in Bolton village to Bolton Lodge. Hikers usually drive to Bolton Lodge and hike the two miles from there. The Upper Camp is perhaps the snuggest and most livable winter camp in the vicinity. It is owned by Mr. Bryant of Bolton village, who also owns a sizable part of the mountain and two other camps below Bolton Lodge. Each year Bryant's camps are used by such interested parties as the Pennsylvania Outing Club and of course our own Outing Club. The Upper Camp is situated in an excellent partially developed ski-country, although not generally well-known because of its inaccessibility. Surrounding the cabin are various trails for all kinds of skiers, including expert and touring trails. In fact, one can ski right out of the woods to the front door of the cabin. The trails are well-cleared, and for the skier who likes his nature "unspoiled" they are tops.

It is not necessary to bring blankets to Bryant's cabins, since they are all well supplied with heavy robes. It is advisable, however, to take along a light flannel or cotton blanket. Transportation will be furnished and the time will be announced on the bulletin boards. The food will be bought by the club and the cost split among the hikers. Hike-leaders this weekend are Bob Perkins and Cliff Havens. Hikers can sign up in the hall opposite the Bookstore. It is a co-ed hike, and either snowshoes or skis may be used.

Fraternity Corner

KAPPA SIGMA

"Trapper" Morgan was elected president of the pledges for the ensuing year. Larry Kimball will act in the capacity of vice-president while George MacDonald was named secretary. Brother "Reverse" Traverse was unanimously chosen to be the "pledge-master."

Through pure coincidence, Al Niemann, Jack Hurley and Jim Turnbull celebrated birthdays on January 26. So, the boys were feted at a closed party within the realms of one of Burlington's finer lunch rooms.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Gov. Harold Stassen, candidate for the Republican nomination to the presidency, was extended an invitation to attend an informal get together at the SAE house last Monday, but his heavy schedule of meetings, banquets, and speeches prevented his attendance. The former Commander attended the University of Minnesota where he was an active member of the Minnesota Chapter of SAE. Robert Harrington and John Carpenter spoke to the Governor just before he gave his speech at the Vermont Forum. He gave his best regards to the fraternity and said that he was sorry that he could not visit the house.

The work on the amusement rooms in the basement is progressing rapidly and it is quite definite that the job will be completed before Kake Walk week rolls around.

The new pledges elected their officers at the meeting of Tuesday, January 27. Jack K. Hinman was elected president; William C. Farrell was selected for treasurer; and Robert A. Billhardt, who has been acting as temporary secretary, was elected to the permanent position of recording notes at the meetings.

vard and Michigan received word that the University of Vermont developed first class baseball teams and requested a place on the schedule. Yale and Harvard won their games, Brown cancelled their game, but Michigan, which travelled all the way from Ann Arbor, was defeated by UVM 6 to 2. A great deal of favorable comment was received through this victory over a strong mid-western college and the reputation of UVM as a powerful baseball school, became more pronounced.

The record of the season showed the UVM had won 19 games while losing only 6.

The annual Field Day in 1891 produced four records in track and field events. The records at UVM for the various events did not compare too well with the marks set at other schools, but the fact that much improvement was shown could not be denied.—V.M.

Student Gov't Council Rejects WSSF Plea

Young Republican Federation Makes Campus Debut Friday

GOP Meeting Open To Interested Students

The elephant of the Grand Old Party clad in a green cap and a sport jacket has invaded the UVM campus and intends to welcome all students who want to carry their political opinions farther than the conversational stage. The party will flash underway with an initial meeting scheduled for Friday. It is an unrestricted open meeting with all students interested urged to attend, and work plus action promised for those who link their fortunes with this official action program of the Young Republican Federation.

Edward Costello '51, twenty-seven year old veteran from Rutland, will handle the first get-together and has obtained recognition from the Student Government along with the necessary facilities for future meetings. Questioned as to the role the Young Republican Federation would play in local and state politics Mr. Costello stated that similar programs were starting full-force in other Vermont colleges with an unprecedented amount of the student populations showing an interest. He said the group would discuss the various candidates in the primaries and bring in Republican leaders as speakers so the student would be better able to consolidate and whip his political course of action into shape. Mr. Costello hastily disavowed that the UVM YR's were a discussion group; the YR's scope is considerably larger than the usual college activity for election time will provide the opportunity for all members to help in the campaigns by working in party headquarters, loudspeaker "stumping", rallies, transporting voters to polls and acting as poll watchers on Election Day.

A UVM student working in his college YR will find that the Republican contingent in his home town is well aware of the YR's work and interested in having him help in community work. At all times the college YR will maintain contact with the National Headquarters, local and state senior party and city Young Republican Organizations. Concerted effort will be made in Burlington to interest the community and provide pertinent information to the discriminating voter.

Throughout the country the organized collegiate Republicans has shown itself to good advantage. A YR survey at the University of Utah found that 48% of the students were eligible to vote, but only 5 to 10% were registered. The Young Republicans saw to it that by election time, through short announcements on the radio, and diligent personal contact, these 48% were voting.

In the last congressional elections in Missouri, that state for the first time in its history elected two Republican Senators and nine Republican Representatives, largely because of the help of a Veterans Brigade made up of students at the University of Kansas City. This organization grew to a membership of over 500 in a few months, did the investigating in the wards of Kansas City, to help reveal the political corruption there. The college Republicans defeated President Truman's own candidate by taking time off from school to campaign, by serving as election judges and clerks, by using, for Party uses, money they received from these services.

The UVM YR promises to be in the forefront in the approaching drive for votes and there is no doubt that their activities will profoundly influence the final tabulation.

Pres. Miele Pushes Five Point Plan

Harry Miele, newly elected President of the Student Government announced early this week that his council and he were whipping into shape the Five-Point Program he offered students during the recent campaign.

Mr. Miele has spoken with Professor Lange of Student Personnel in connection with the extension and placement service which will aid the student in securing the job he wants after graduation. Miele will release information on this project early next week. He also stated that he and Dr. Lange had discussed the possibility of increasing guidance and individual attention for the student.

For the first time since the formation of a UVM Student Government a press representative has been permitted to attend meetings of the council and report the doings of the representatives to the students. This is being handled by CYNIC columnists John D. Adams. The purpose of this is to let the campus know the business and problems on hand and how the Government is handling them.

The remodeling plans of the Student Lounge and the study rooms must await the Kake Walk decision which may turn over a portion of the profits for this purpose. Mr. Miele has personally made inquiries into complaints received in connection with the Cafeteria and feels that the findings should be reported to the student body in a report combining his actions with rebuttals and acknowledgments from Miss Godfrey, UVM Cafeteria supervisor. Press representative Adams will interview Miss Godfrey this week and plans to print a joint report in the next CYNIC.

In order to insure clear-cut and effective action of the proposed reforms of the athletic program Mr. Miele feels that an interview with heads of the various sports program would be the essential initial step and plans to have these leaders present their case before a future student government meeting.

SCA Makes Preparations For Brotherhood Week

Plans for a fellowship supper were discussed at a cabinet meeting of the S. C. A. on Monday, January 26. The supper is to be held during Brotherhood Week at 6 p.m. on February 12. The purpose of the supper is to give the three faiths an opportunity to unite. Three speakers will be present from the National Association of Christians and Jews: Rabbi Ziamond, director of the Harvard Hillel group; Dr. Frank Jennings, secretary of the Massachusetts Council of Churches and Father Crowley, Superintendent of Parochial Schools in Burlington. Tickets for the supper will be on sale for fifty cents.

Also discussed at the meeting were plans for the Universal Day of Prayer which is to be on February 15. This day will be observed by students all over the world. Milton Pike, who was a delegate at the Oslo Conference last year will speak at a vesper service which will be held at seven-thirty in the evening.

The Deputation Committee has their plans for the next few months well laid out. Their program consists of taking over church services and holding discussions with the young people's group. They have received requests from Waterbury, Richmond, Sheldon Springs, and Northfield for the next few weeks.

ALPHA CHI'S PLAN "HI" COFFEE HOUR

Want a quick lunch before going to the movies? Come to the "HI" Coffee Hour at the Alpha Chi Omega house, 384 Main St., on Sunday, February 8. The welcome mat will be out anytime between 4:30 and 7:00 P.M. There you will find sandwiches, coffee, cake and ice-cream served to you at small tables by beautiful waitresses.

This Coffee Hour is being held for two purposes. First, all proceeds will be turned over to the Religious Life Office to be added to the growing fund for world student relief. Secondly, this is an ideal opportunity to get together with your friends in cheerful surroundings to eat, smoke and talk over old times.

Tickets for this supper will be on sale in the Waterman building opposite the book store from Tuesday, February 3 until Saturday, February 7. Although it is not absolutely necessary to purchase a ticket in advance, it will help the girls to know on how many to plan for.

Remember the date—February 8—and try to come. Tickets are only 35c so come and bring your friends. This is a very informal hour and both dates and stags are very welcome.

Decision of New Members Thwarts Success Hopes

Previous Action Had Forbade Other Gifts

By a majority vote the Student Government Executive Council voted to give nothing to the now barely-surviving WSSF drive at its last meeting, January 29. With its new members in full stride the Council thus became involved in one of its most controversial matters yet.

Al Redway, chairman of the World Student Service Fund Drive, had presented a report on WSSF's purposes and accomplishments. Since the drive last year had not reached its goal and this year, by all indications, is doing even worse, he asked the Council as was asked them last year for a donation on behalf of all the students (the Executive Council being the factor in allocating student funds.) Then the fireworks started. Al Pratt, sophomore representative, objected to students' being asked two or three times to give to the same cause. If they refused when asked personally, he said, they would resent Student Government's giving the money. Tom Hayes, vice-president, Bob Perkins, sophomore representative, and Karl Webster, sophomore representative, stated that they agreed. But Lucille Wetherby, junior representative, and Stan Ursprung, sophomore representative, took the affirmative. Lucille emphasized the worthiness of the project and then pointed out that the Council was thinking of spending $4500 for furniture for the student lounge.

Ursprung said that up until then inefficient expenditures had been rubber-stamped through the Council without a second thought; while now, with a worthy purpose they hesitated. Ed Costello, freshman representative, said that the Council has a surplus to use for any purpose it sees fit. The discussion dragged on; the Council resolved into two factions, each repeating its own arguments until Bob Perkins made a proposal: that nothing be given. It was immediately seconded, voted upon after more discussion and passed, and the Council passed on to further business.

On this controversial subject, the fly in the ointment is this: last year most organizations on the campus made a substantial donation to the drive. In addition to an amount estimated between $200 and $300 given by these organizations, Student Government contributed $500. Later, however, the Council passed a motion making it impossible for campus organizations to give.

Rev. R. A. Hall feels (see "Letters to the Editor") that many students did not give personally but said that the "Student Government contribution" would have to be their part. Harry Miele, speaking as a solicitor and a team captain for WSSF, supported this position and stated that many had expressed the desire that the Government give.

A petition is now being circulated to have the student body itself decide the important question.

Notice

At the request of the Directors of Kake Walk the University Council has voted that Friday February 20, shall be a University holiday. This applies to the undergraduate colleges but not to the College of Medicine.

The Council agreed that absences on Thursday, February 19, and Monday, February 23, should be regarded as occurring on the day immediately preceding or following a University holiday and that students absent without excuse on those days should incur the penalty prescribed in the University Regulations.

The Council further agreed that this action should not be a precedent for the coming year when the college calendar will be more crowded and it may well prove impossible to diminish the number of teaching days.

E. SWIFT,
Secretary.

Seven Greek Letter Sororities Pledge One-Hundred Women

Following three weeks of intensive rushing, the seven UVM sororities pledged a total of one hundred freshman women and eligible transfers on Thursday, January 29, in solemn candlelight ceremonies. Although only 56 prospective Kake Walk Queens were pledged a year ago, the Greek letter sororities followed in the paths of the fraternities by admitting the record number of rushees. Pi Beta Phi led the circuit with 27 pledges, Kappa Alpha Theta was second with 18, closely followed by the Alpha Chi Omega with 17, Delta Delta Delta 14, Alpha Epsilon Phi 10, Delta Phi Epsilon 7, and Sigma Gamma 7.

Student Court Trial Reconvenes Feb. 10; Open to UVM Students

At a recent meeting of the Student Court, it was decided that the pending trial on the court docket would be heard on Tuesday, February 10, at 7 p.m. The accused is charged with violating a rule of academic dishonesty. The session will be open and will probably be held in one of the rooms on third floor Waterman.

Proposed changes to the Student Constitution with reference to Student Court organization and jurisdiction have been drawn up by a committee of the court and are being checked by Professor Nuquist. A meeting of the court together with a Student Government committee to determine final form of possible amendments was planned. The student body will eventually vote on any such revisions once they are fully drawn. The changes will be such as to clarify the position of the court in adequately acting as an effective judicial body. At present the court feels that its jurisdiction is not clear-cut nor are its responsibilities well defined in the Constitution.

ARIEL NOTICE

There have been several changes in the Ariel group picture schedule. Everyone is requested to consult the bulletin boards for last minute instructions.

The Vermont Cynic

The Official Student Newspaper of the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College

VOL. 66                      FEBRUARY 4, 1948                      NO. 2

Whose fault is it?

With the current bogdown of the WSSF drive, the CYNIC feels it its humble duty to state what it feels may have happened. May we state also that it is not a question of the merits of WSSF as far as we are concerned—we believe in it—but rather why has it not succeeded?

The Student Government Executive Council—why didn't they approve the measure? We don't know. But were they influenced more by the way the matter was presented to them than with the actual content of the matter? Were they fully representing their constituents? At any rate, we must remember: on one side, the jump from "average student" to student representative is a big one—this Council has operated for a very short time and is relatively inexperienced; on the other side, the true representative (1) must conceal his immediate reactions to the outward aspects of an issue and consider what is really at stake and (2) the representative must be truly that—he must strive to fulfill the wants of his constituents and not himself alone.

Are UVM students as callous and indifferent to the wants of others? We doubt it. Is a petition the right means for finding the true desires of all; will it arouse us to "righteous anger?" Might not a vote by the students be more accurate?

Can there be other causes? Assuming the solicitors were carefully chosen—did they do their job? More important did they know their job and why they were soliciting?

We do not know. Not intending to hurt anyone we have simply tried to show that, assuming that the majority of the students favor WSSF success, perhaps parts of the drive itself were not well enough organized.

The drive is not doomed. A vote by the students would show the Council their real views.

Letters to the Editor . . .

January 30, 1948

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Last year the World Student Fund drive was aided materially by official action of the representatives of student Government when at the start of the campaign they voted $500.00 towards it. Other campus groups also voted Student Funds to the same purpose.

Thursday, January 29, the UVM Student Executive Council voted to give nothing at all this year. A prior Council rule had made it impossible for any group except the Council to vote any student funds for relief purposes.

Many students are reported by solicitors as saying that they could not give personally but would have to consider the "Student Government" contribution as their part. This means, of course, that they expected their representatives to contribute from student funds. It seems hard to believe that in the face of the terribly increased need and distress of European and Asian students UVM students are going to give this year only half of last year's gift ($4,000 last year).

Personal resources of students and faculty are depleted by inflation. The resources of the Council are not. Is not a substantial contribution from Student Government indicated in the premises?

Sincerely yours,

RAYMOND A. HALL.

Dear Editor:

I should like to ask the student body whether or not they are being represented by their Executive Council.

Last week an outburst of personal prejudices influenced enough of the unthinking "Representatives" to defeat a proposal that seems to be in the favor of about eight hundred students by count, and perhaps eighty percent of an estimated two thousand more.

In voting to "give nothing" to W.S.S.F., the following facts will show that the Executive Council did not truly represent the student body. On checking the W.S.S.F. files on those who have already contributed to relief, we find that about 800 students are included. Of the 2000 pledge cards yet to come in, it is estimated on pass returns that some eighty percent will contribute something. Thus almost two-thirds of the student body will be behind the effort. How anyone in the Council can say the reverse is true . . . that the students are not backing W.S.S.F. is truly not understandable. If they still persist to hold that opinion it must be said that it then exists within their own distorted minds. And, if such is the case, then it is a sorry situation indeed that the "Representatives" use their own narrowness to misjudge the pulse of their constituents.

Your sincerely,

ALBERT S. REDWAY

P. S. . . .

By RICH HARPER '48

We see where the CYNIC staff has changed hands for another year, and in the true tradition, the new brains are hard at work. We were a little shocked, if not disheartened, to read the other day that there is to be a drive to rid the paper of "non-UVM tidbits." All of which proved to us that we are old fashioned, and that we mustn't stop the onward march of progress. As a matter of fact, just to show that we can get in the spirit of things, we decided to cover one of the local meetings, and see what the hell gives on campus. Don't say we didn't warn you. . . . The local chapter of the SPCBUVM met last Wednesday night in Room 36 Waterman, the place of meeting having been changed from Room 34 Waterman, which in turn had been changed from Room 32 Old Mill. In the absence of the president, who was attending another meeting, the secretary took over and called the roll, gave the treasurer's report (also absent—the treasurer, not the report, that is), and conducted the meeting. A motion was made and seconded that the Constitution be changed, but was defeated when no copy of the Constitution could be found. A motion was then made, seconded, and passed to request $250.38 from Student Government to buy three cartons of badly-needed foitfoynders for the club. All agreed that this was a dandy idea, and a committee of fifteen was chosen to think about the matter further. A motion was then made to amend the Constitution, but was thrown out as there was no second. The dance committee reported that as they found that the date for their dance was already three weeks ago, they felt that the club might as well forget the whole idea. Amid a din of catcalls and hollering it was finally decided that the club would accept the recommendation of the committee. It was 11.45 and time that we were all home and in bed when our president—oops, our acting president—asked for a motion to adjourn. As the members were filing out of the door there was still one man making a motion. We think it was something about changing the Constitution, but we're really not sure. All and all, it was a simply peachy meeting and all the members were agreed that we must make the SPCBUVM the biggest thing on campus. . . .

Read Johnny Adams column last week, and for once it seemed to lean heavily on the folly side. Regardless of who takes over in the editorial staff of a paper, it still is our contention that a paper has to say something. For our money we'd love to see someone with the strength of a few convictions, and with the added talent of putting them in black and white. If the policy of this paper is one that is "progressive and objective" we are definitely inclined to say rot—let's say something, right or wrong, and get far away from these handsome little terms which don't mean much. You were off the track, Mr. Adams, but let's get back in there and pitch. . . . Last Friday the world lost two of its capable leaders as Orville Wright died in the Miami Valley Hospital in Ohio, and Mahatma Gandhi, the great Indian leader was killed by an assassin's bullet. We can only go on in the hope that the spirit of their work will continue now that they are gone. It seems almost ironic that the airplane, which Mr. Wright invented, is being groomed for such an important and dramatic role in this world which hangs precariously between peace and total war. . . . All is not well on the Olympics scene as the spirit of good sportsmanship seems to be not quite up to snuff. After some controversy about the American hockey team, the play-offs in hockey have been cancelled, and the latest kick in the pants came when somebody sabotaged the American bob sled. We're not quite sure just how you would go about to sabotage a bob sled, but the fact remains that there are some who are not too interested in seeing Uncle Sam walk off with all the Olympic honors. . . . Out in California our own Shirley Temple, the "ideal daughter" of a few years back, has produced a 7-pound 6-ounce baby. Just to show you what can happen if you live right. . . . Best Laugh of the Year Department: Be sure to read H. Allen Smith's newest creation, "Lo the Former Egyptian." It's earthy, and that's putting it mildly, but for those who just like to laugh their silly old heads off this is sure-fire. In this latest riot Mr. Smith visits the scenes of his childhood and kids everybody and everything along the way—including himself. Our taste must be jaded, because we loved it. . . .

To whom it may concern: A recent criticism of this column was well placed, and deserves a sober reply. In regard to our earlier comment on the Palestine situation, we feel that the reader inferred something from our remarks which was not there. We have our biases and prejudices on several matters—after all, we're only human—but would deny being unsympathetic to the suffering of minority groups. On the contrary, we would doubt if any man who fought in this last war could be anything but acutely conscious of this suffering, and what is more important, was willing to put his thoughts into action and was not satisfied with empty, hollow-sounding talk. If the chief criticism is with our style of writing, which may border on the flippant and "collegiate," it may be an attempt to see the lighter side of a world which in many ways strikes us as being silly. The more profound writing which some CYNIC readers seem to prefer we leave to better writers—with pleasure. . . .

That's it for now, but we'll be back with more "non-UVM tidbits which have the quaint characteristic of somehow finding their way into the columns of the CYNIC."

Letter To Editor

January 31, 1948

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

A week ago last Thursday I was privileged to appear on the same forum program with Professor Evans and Rabbi Wall in a discussion of the Palestine question. I accepted the invitation to present the Arab case because I believe and do still believe, that there are points in that case which have been generally overlooked, just as there have been certain mistaken assumptions on the other side of the issue. In the spirit, therefore, of presenting the true picture, may I correct a definite misconception contained in CYNIC's report of that meeting?

"His Majesty's Government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people and will use their best endeavors for the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

In an interpretation made by the British Government in 1922, and agreed to by the Zionist Organization, before the confirmation of the mandate by the Council of the League of Nations, it was stated that a Jewish national home did not contemplate "the imposition of Jewish nationality upon the inhabitants of Palestine as a whole." The United Nations Special Commission on Palestine accepted this interpretation that while a future Jewish state was not precluded by the Balfour Declaration, it was quite evidently not promised by it either.

I am sure therefore that Rabbi Wall is misquoted when he is said to have referred to the Balfour Declaration as "promise of freedom," for such it clearly is not, and it is certainly not true that "preamble to the British Mandate mentions specifically the reconstruction of a national Jewish state." What that preamble does, among other things, is to quote, word for word (with the omission of one but clause and a change in tense in the words), the Balfour Declaration.

With respect to the Arab case, may I point out that I said that they base their claim to Palestine upon centuries of occupation, not "opposition." In all justice it should have been pointed out too, that while there have been no barriers to Arab immigration into Palestine, the implication that Arabs have moved freely into the area is not warranted by the facts.

Let us note finally that, far from vouching the Jewish claim to Palestine as a national state, the United Nations merely sought what is, in its collective opinion, a statesmanlike solution to the lamentable problem of Palestine. A duly adopted decision, it must be strongly supported by the United Nations, but ever open to legitimate criticism it is.

Very truly yours,

ROBERT E. LONG

Textile Scholarships Open to Chem. Students

The Textile Research Institute of fellowships for graduate study at Princeton University in the Department of Chemistry and Chemical Engineering. Recipients of these fellowships must be acceptable candidates for graduate work in the Departments involved. The progress of study will in every way be identical to those of other graduate students in these departments. Their work will be performed on problems in fields of textile research under the direction of the Textile Research Institute staff in Princeton which includes several of the members of the Chemistry and Chemical Engineering Departments.

The fellowships carry a stipend of a month for first-year graduate students and $100 a month for the more advanced men. In both cases, tuition and laboratory fees are paid by the Institute. The fellowships are granted for a twelve-month period with a one-month vacation in summer, during which time the student continues. Applications and inquiries should be addressed to J. H. D. Director of Research, Textile Research Institute Laboratories, P. O. Box 1, Princeton, N. J.

A Pledge Speaks

The tension grew for three weeks, and climaxed last Thursday afternoon when rushees at UVM signed up for sorority pledging on third floor Waterman.

An impartial observer would have been quite amused to see some people standing on first one floor and then the other just outside the door, trying to decide whether a long walk would be better than a short walk, or whether they liked a certain group better than another because it set a goal for them or because it typified themselves as they were. An impartial observer would have had conniptions and little cat fits. (Ho!) Complete happiness was the aim, and one hundred girls decided they had found the mark.

While these hair-raising and splitting decisions were being made in the upper regions, through the windows of each sorority house anxious eyes were keeping a sharp lookout up and down the street. A girl accepting a bid was instructed to tell no one what she had decided, but to go directly to the house of her choice. The afternoon was cloudy; a sharp, bitter wind accentuated the penetrating cold. Bare branches, the stormy lake, and the mountains beyond left a definite impression of winter as she went, a confusion of thoughts tumbling through her head. (I've made it—this decision is with me for the rest of my life—have I done the right thing—will I be happy—is it worth it— isn't it exciting—will it measure up to my hopes and surpass my expectations—how much of my time and independence am I losing, and is it going toward something greater—it's up to me to see that it does—what did everyone else decide—will they all be glad to see me—what will I do when I get to the house—) And then she turns up the walk, a great cry goes up, and people come dashing out of the house to surround her and welcome her in.

Talking (after that thirty-six hours of silence), laughter, deep happiness, a few tears, songs (she, too, can sing them now, if she knows the words—the tune is incidental—), a wonderful supper, the pledging ceremony either then or the next morning. According to the best Vermont tradition, all of the new pledges and their sorority sisters then go to the movies, and during intermission each group sings its songs—(the movie itself was too much competition). Back to the house, where everyone spent the night and some sleep (some four across two beds, one in the tub, some on the rug before a glowing fire) and then everyone appeared at Waterman for an early breakfast. Competition to discover which group could fill both sides of the longest table and which could sing best—and for the next two days, the sorority colors were much in evidence, calling attention to the pledge pins of the proud wearers.

Next on the agenda are ten weeks of pledging. It takes a while for one to get used to the idea of becoming a "sorority woman"; each sorority needs time for a "return to normalcy plus," and to rejoice in its extraordinary luck. This year everyone was rather happy with the girls who chose to go their way. The gals are happy, too. What about the fellows? Another best tradition of Vermont is that people draw their friends from all of the sororities regardless, as well as from those who decide upon independence, and like other Vermont traditions this has a sound basis.

Socrates said, "The way to gain a good reputation is to endeavor to be what you desire to appear" and that's our little thought for today.

"THE SANDWICH KINGS"

Fleming Museum Shows "Colonial Vermont" in February Exhibit

"Colonial Vermont" will always bring to mind a rude log cabin with oiled-skin windows, rough hand-hewn furniture and rough hand-hewn men. The part about the men is irrefutably true. Vermont's earliest settlers were, in general, as rough and as rugged as the physical topography of our fair state. But there was another Vermont. A Vermont, surprisingly, of tinkling glass chandeliers, candlelight on silks and laces, polished pewter, and stately mansions. Hospitality and gracious living were not confined to the grandiose plantations of the Old South but were present in Old Vermont.

This is the purpose of an exhibit to be held in the third floor gallery of the Fleming Museum which will be open to the public sometime in the near future. This exhibit, under the direction of Mrs. G. G. Brooks of the Museum, includes many such interesting objects, some of which have unusual histories. There is, for example, one horse hair covered sofa which is six inches longer than a sofa ought to be. This is because it was built for one Horace Loomis, an early and six-foot citizen of Burlington. There is also a lowboy, with a brass tea kettle on it, both of which are reported to have belonged to Ethan Allen himself. For less legendary figures, there is a lovely Southern Colonial sideboard and mysterious-looking secretary belonging to Martin Chittenden (governor of Vermont, 1813-1815), both of which have a lovely inlay and great delicacy of design.

The exhibit, as now planned, will be comprised of four main units. Perhaps the most interesting of these is the kitchen section, with its weaving and spinning utensils, and old-fashioned fireplace complete with all the kitchen paraphernalia of the day. There is a beautiful set of Delft-Blue Staffordshire, and the inevitable soft pine kitchen chairs painted with what was left of the red paint used on the barn.

The living room section is the most gracious, of course. Features of this unit are a six-foot grandfather's clock and a charming three-foot grandmother's clock, a genuine petit-point chair and footstool; and many other necessities of the well-to-do home.

The dining room section has a Duncan Phyfe-style refectory table, a corner cupboard filled with a set of Ethan Allen's china, a graceful Sheraton sideboard with inlay, and an extensive collection of copper luster ware.

A music room contains a spinet from the Woodbury Collection, that still plays, a Vermont-made violin and a handsome wooden clarinet. The entire exhibit is provided with the correct background by reproductions of authentic 18th Century French wallpapers, oil paintings from the Reynolds Collection and several old hooked rugs. There is also a collection of Civil and Revolutionary War uniforms and costumes, including a 1790 wedding dress; a set of fire buckets belonging to Burlington's earliest fire brigade; a Revolutionary musket such as the Minute Men carried; the Ira Allen memento collection; and the same trowel with which Lafayette laid the foundation stone of the Old Mill in 1825.

One piece of furniture has such an interesting history that it deserves a paragraph by itself. It is one of three identical Duncan Phyfe sofas made in the early 1800s. This one was made for Cornelius Van Ness, who bought it for his mansion, Grassmount. One of the other two sofas is now in the Metropolitan Museum, the other is in a private collection. This particular sofa was the first one in Burlington. A ball was held in its honor at Grassmount, and the evening's entertainment was furnished by the sofa since the young men and women took turns sitting on it between dances. This was probably the first sofa to put on a floor show!

Midd. Professor States Fraternity Will Meet Test In Near Future

Middlebury, Vt.—(I. P.)—"Fraternalities will be compelled in the next few years to prove that they can make a significant contribution toward college educational purposes," commented W. Storrs Lee, Dean of Men at Middlebury College, after reviewing decisions of the thirtieth annual National Interfraternity Conference, held recently in New York City and attended by over 500 deans and fraternity representatives.

"Pot shots are being taken at fraternities from all laughs," he continued. "They are on the defensive in many colleges, and despite the militant attitude of the National Interfraternity Conference in insisting that fraternities have the right to discriminate as much as they wish in the selection of members," consideration is being given on many campuses to the banning of fraternities with discrimination as the motive.

The Conference went on record strongly favoring discrimination. David A. Emsbury, past chairman said:

"The college fraternity is the closest knit, most intimate group to be found anywhere outside the family group. The members live together, eat together, sleep together, date together, and share each other's joys and sorrows. What then could be more natural, more important than that in choosing new members they should seek men with the same racial, religious, social and cultural backgrounds as their own?"

"But it is one thing to say that a group may omit such restrictions—that is democracy. It is quite a different thing to say that a group must omit them—that is regimentation. . . . If you or I want to form a fraternity whose membership shall be limited exclusively to bowlegged men, it is our privilege to do so. Our bowlegged fraternity does not infringe on the rights of the knock-kneed man or the man with straight legs, because, they too, are free to form their own groups."

Dean Lee does not question the "right" of fraternities to limit membership on the basis of physical infirmities, race, religion, and political conviction, but he maintains that it is a narrow approach to a far-reaching problem.

"The college cannot exist for one purpose," said Dean Lee, "and the fraternity within the college, for another purpose. One of the objectives of higher education is to bridge differences of religion, politics, and creed—to bring an understanding among men of varying beliefs and backgrounds, so that they may live together with a degree of amicability.

"Brotherhood of man is the college ideal. The two ideals can be brought closer together without damaging any fraternity organization."

The University of Vermont basketball team moves into some select basketballing company tonight when the Cats meet the U. of Connecticut. The U. Conn's are not exactly world-beaters on the boards, but they have lined up satisfactorily against the hoop powers in New York's Metropolitan area and the Ivy League. The Nutmegers have ten wins for the season and must be conceded a slight advantage, but if the Green and Gold play the game they are capable of, they could upset the visitors. The game will be one of the outstanding basketball attractions this season, and might well be a repetition of last year's Manhattan affair.

If there is any confusion as to why U.V.M.'s Charley Stewart did not wind up in a title fight despite his win over Daley, the reason lies in that he would have had to appear within an hour after his bruising encounter with the Burlington lad. Stewart went all the way to cop his win over Daley, and in the first two rounds, the Shelburne boy absorbed as many punches as any boxer can in two rounds and still fight. He very definitely was in no condition to go again that evening.

Walt Hickey and the Free Press Foundation did a fine job on the Golden Gloves Tournament considering that it was the first such affair to be held here in Vermont. The confusion that some quarter claim existed was nothing but the uncertainty that surrounds firsts of any kind, but a suggestion that a lot of students on the Hill have made is that in next year's Tourney, the final night be reserved for title fights only, with no boxer having to appear twice in the same evening to gain his crown.

These long winter nights have produced a lot of sports reminiscing here and around, about great athletic exploits of the not too distant past, at U.V.M.

Just to get into the thing, might we mention the name of Al Baker. "Bake" was a slim halfback who might be remembered as the gent who crashed through to give Vermont a 12-12 tie with Middlebury in 1946. When the '46 football team is mentioned there is talk of Rinfret, Abrahamovich, Eddy, etc., all very capable performers, but too often Baker, a reserve half who always could make a yard when it was needed is overlooked.

Back to the '46 football team; that year the Cats, supposedly loaded, went to Northfield to meet an underdog Norwich team. Well, the little affair wound up in a 0-0 deadlock. The Cat backs tried to live up to expectations, but each time they encountered a 200 lb. tackle named Barry, one John Patrick "Bruiser" Barry of Bellows Falls. Now it might gladden hearts here and there to know that this same lad is at the present time duly enrolled in our institution. He entered U.V.M. last fall, but was ineligible to compete due to the transfer rule, but this autumn should see the welcome addition of this ex-Cadet to the tackle ranks of the Green and Gold.

For the present—tonight the basketball team and hockey team face Connecticut and Norwich respectively, and if both squads can continue on their winning ways, more sports history will be in the records.

Don Steenburn Leads Riflemen To 4 Wins

The University of Vermont Rifle team came through this week with three wins and one defeat, winning from Western Kentucky State Teachers College, the University of New Hampshire, Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, Pa., and losing the one match to Dartmouth.

The team, as a unit, scored better than in their previous matches, with sharpshooting Don Steenburn again leading his mates to victory. The Catamounts ran up a total of 1806 points to 1645 points for Western Kentucky State in a four position match. The second win found the Cats downing Drexel by a score of 1346 to 1300. New Hampshire didn't extend UVM at all, as the riflemen took an easy victory 1356-1311. The lone loss at the hands of Dartmouth, one of the leading rifle teams in the East, was a 1406-1356 verdict.

This gives the UVM rifle team a season record of 5 wins against an equal number of losses. In the last two previous matches, the Cats won from Worcester Polytechnic Institute and dropped a close match to the Coast Guard Academy. Don Steenburn again led the Cats in scoring for both matches.

The Varsity Squad led by Captain Dwight Burritt, consists of D. Carron, D. Steenburn, R. Weaver, A. Davis, S. Chester, H. Spear, L. Mercia, W. Jacobs, and B. Leavitt.

IMPROVED SKI TEAM FACES CADETS IN MEET AT NORWICH

Led by Coach Hawley and Capt. Sim Rolph, a much-improved ski team meets Norwich in a dual meet at Northfield this week-end. Needed competitive experience has been gained by the squad in the first two meets of the season. Coach Hawley with only Captain Rolph left from last year's team has had to experiment with his men in competition but believes that a win from Norwich can be expected.

Ken Belding's release from the college dispensary gives the team some added strength in the downhill, slalom and jumping. Ken's addition to the very capable squad of Captain Rolph, Dave Sylvester, Duane Pierce, Elbert Isham, Glen Woods, Andrew Buchanan and Jack Harwood gives UVM a team which can readily compete with the top teams of the country.

NOTICE

The Sports Staff of the CYNIC is holding tryouts for a sports reporter to cover WAA News. If there is anyone interested in the position see Gordon Bickford, Sports Editor, or Nancy Bachman, Campus Editor.

This Thursday the 1948 version of the Catamounts will face one of the best basketball teams in New England. The University of Connecticut has manufactured a team which has been playing the top teams of the East on an equal basis. Against N.Y.U. in the Garden the U-Conn's were nosed out by a slim six points. This same N.Y.U. team has come on to defeat Colgate, Cornell, Tulane, Duke, and North Carolina State. Against Rhode Island State, another powerhouse in New England basketball circles, the Connecticut team gave no quarter and only in the closing seconds were finally edged out 65-63.

U-Conn's Are Well-balanced

Led by Co-Captains Luchuk and Maloney the U-Conn's floor a team that has an abundance of speed and scoring drive. At left forward Muzikevic averaged 11.3 points per game with last year's great team. Sorota at guard and Fisher holding down the other forward position balances a first five averaging six feet in height. Among their victims the Huskies claim Brown 59-38, Maine 63-29, Massachusetts 58-20, and Wesleyan 54-38.

Game May Be Close

Captain Kotlarczyk and his crew of UVM cagers are no picnic for any team. The Midd game gave an indication that they are quite capable of pouring the sphere through the hoop. If the Cats get any of the breaks Thursday night the U-Conn's will find themselves in a real ball game.

Conference Standings

The UVM Catamounts are in the lead in the Vermont Basketball Conference as a result of their last week's win over Middlebury. St. Michael's is in second place as of this date, and the future games between the Green and Gold and the Purple Knights will undoubtedly settle the Conference Championship, as Norwich and Middlebury are in a race for the cellar spot.

The standing:

School	Won	Loss
St. Michael's	1	0
Norwich	0	1
Middlebury	0	2

Basketball Featurettes

Little introduction is needed for the rough, little guard on the University of Vermont basketball squad, known to all as Hammy Livingston.

Christened Hammond Lloyd Livingston some 22 years ago, Hammy grew, after a long struggle, to become one of his home town's sports stars while attending Bellows Free Academy in St. Albans. He made a name in basketball, football and baseball while in high school, but his real fame came to him via basketball and tennis. In 1942 the diminutive guard from B. F. A. was chosen on the all-state court team. In that same year Ham burned up the tennis courts and was runner-up in the state junior tennis championship.

After graduating from high school in '43, Ham enlisted in the Army Air Corps where he spent twenty-five months, six of them as a radio gunner in Italy. The "tall hawk" entered U.V.M. in January of 1946 and immediately bolstered Coach "Fuzzy" Evans' hopes for a hoop team that year. Hammy led the team in '46, and played for a short time last season with Killick, Jake & Co., until studies required all of his time.

A member of Kappa Sigma fraternity, Hammy also finds time to play tennis and was captain of last year's team. So now when you see a diminutive but aggressive ball hawk out on the floor getting rebounds from his bigger opponents, and you see number eleven adeptly handling the ball—that's "Hammy."

STUDENT GOVERNMENT PRESIDENT BELIEVES VOTE IS SOLUTION

Harry Miele, new president of Student Government, in speaking on the Council's action stated recently in an interview that he personally had hoped that the Council would vote in favor of some amount to be allocated to WSSF. He made the following statement: "I feel at the moment that perhaps some members of the Council thought of allocation not in terms of the student body as a whole—but I think possibly they thought in terms of their own personal viewpoint. I feel the whole matter one important enough to directly concern the student body and that some plan should be followed whereby the students can all vote on it."

Frosh Win Fourth Grant Pace Kittens To Win Over R.J.C.

Chalk up number 4 in a row for the Kittens—they journeyed to Rutland, Saturday evening and defeated Rutland Junior College 46-39 in a rather loosely-played contest at the Rutland Armory. Though the Frosh did not play the brand of ball which they have been displaying of late, they led from the opening whistle. However, it wasn't until the closing minutes of the last quarter that Coach Norm Strassburg's boys acquired a comfortable margin over the locals.

It was tres' froid on Saturday night's trip back from Rutland, 17 below to be exact. One of the cars had a radiator malady, and half the squad was detained in Middlebury until aid was forthcoming from the Queen City.

Though the boys were near the freezing point when the gym hove in view in the wee hours, it was the fourth straight victory for the Frosh and all hands were satisfied.

Delta Psi and Kappa Sigs Continue to Set Pace in Hoop Leagues

The interfraternity basketball leagues enter the second half of their rugged eight game schedule this week, with the Kappa Sigs and the Delta Psis continuing to dominate the league play. The competition in the clashes thus far has been very keen and there is every indication of extremely close tilts in the final leg of the intermural matches.

In League A, the Main Street boys are in a strong position to coup high honors as they have vanquished both the Phi Delt and the A. T. O's. The league had little difficulty in their last encounter with the Owls as they racked up their four straight triumph.

In League B's highlight of the early season's play, the undefeated Delta Psis pulled a coup d'etat in the final three minutes to hand the Phi Sigs their first loss by a score of 41-29. The tilt was a thriller throughout the initial three quarters as first one team would snap the twine and then the other. But the pace finally caught up with Goldberg, Brown & Co., in the closing minutes which enabled the Deltas to build up their commanding lead. Ralph Kehoe and Bill Dingerson were the big cogs in the winning machine while Sid Levine was the outstanding player for the losers.

The Traynor Trophy-minded fraternities are all anxious to capture league honors as the precious 'five' points will come in handy when the final tabulation is made in the spring.

The standings in the respective league are as follows:

League A	Won	Lost
Kappa Sig.....	4	0

Barwood And Switzer Lead Puckchasers To Easy Win

Fists, Sticks and Skates Fly As Catamounts Rack Up Fourth Win

By VIC MURDOCK

Last Saturday at Plattsburgh, N. Y., after squaring off with Champlain College, the University of Vermont hockey team was victorious by the one-sided score of 10-1. It was the fourth win of the year for the Catamounts while the rivals from across the lake suffered their fourth loss of the season in as many starts. The Bluejays did just about everything but call out the New York State Guard to try to stop the Green and Gold attack. The temperature was well below zero but the temper of the Plattsburgh pucksters was well above 90. They used every illegal play in the books from body checking in the neutral zone to beating Jack Hurley's skull on the ice. The Catamounts should be congratulated for keeping their heads throughout most of the game; for while the rough house gang from Champlain was playing a rough, ungentleman-like game of hockey, our sextet was calm, cool (very cool in fact), and collective. The teamwork, pass play, and defensive skill of the UVM squad has improved considerably and they should give a good account of their ability in the remaining games.

Barwood Opens Scoring

For the first few minutes of the game both teams took the puck up and down the ice to feel out each other's defenses. The vastly improved Vermont defense held up under the pressure by back checking and skating the Champlain wingmen off to the side whenever they came near the goal. At 7:50 Barwood broke through the Champlain defense, after taking a pass from Lareau, to score the first Vermont goal. The other two scores of the initial period were well-divided as to time and to those who did the scoring. Dempsey took the puck from Monieson at the twelve-minute and twenty-five-second mark to put the second score into the net for UVM. The third and final score of the first period was made by the combination of Ferriter and Perreault at 17:05. Ferriter was responsible for the scoring.

Captain Purcell of the boisterous Bluejays let his heated temper get the best of him midway through the first period. He was ordered to the penalty box for roughing up a Vermont player against the boards, but insisted upon arguing with the referee to the point of being indignant. Plus the two-minute minor penalty, he was assigned a ten-minute major penalty for misconduct. The game was held up for three minutes while the referee persuaded him to take a seat in the penalty box.

Hurley is Mauled

Champlain opened up the second period with a few tries at the Vermont goal, but Adams, the Catamount goalie, made some beautiful saves to stave off the attack. At 1:55 Switzer received the puck from Barwood to score the first tally of the second period and to push Vermont into a 4 to 0 lead. The Blue and White finally found the mark, for the first time, when LaGoy hit Adams' stick with the puck, which bounded off only to be picked up by Van Hoogenstyn, the Champlain center, who slid the puck into the net. This was the only score of the afternoon for the boys from across the lake. The next Vermont goal came at ten minutes and six seconds when Lareau passed to Dempsey, who made the score. Hurley was in on the play, along with Lareau and Dempsey, which was executed right on top of the Champlain goalie. The play ended up in a big heap of men, sticks, and flying fists. Moye, the Champlain goalie, lost his temper, jumped on Hurley, and proceeded to slam Jack's head on the ice. Jack received a cut over his left eye, but he held his temper to prevent a major conflict. Lareau again came through to aid in boosting the Vermont score when he hit the net after taking a pass from Switzer at 14:75. The score at the end of the second period read 6 to 1 in favor of Vermont.

The third period was again all for the Maynardmen as four more goals were added to the score. The pass play was particularly outstanding in the final twenty minutes of the game; Barwood, Lareau, and Switzer stood out in this department. Barwood made two goals in a row in the first five minutes. The first one came at three minutes and twenty-eight seconds by virtue of a pass from Lareau. He scored his second goal of this period when he scooped up a pass from Switzer fifty-seven seconds later. At approximately half way in the period Hurley passed the puck to Ferriter at midice from where he outmaneuvered two Bluejay defensemen and went on to score unassisted. The final score of the game was made by Plankey who glided the puck into the net after receiving a pass from McCracken. The final score showed that Vermont was victorious by a 10 to 1 margin.

The Champlain puck pushers were definitely outclassed throughout the game. Vermont's passing and defensive play was just too much for Coach Watson's man handlers. The improved defense play of Mickler, Lareau, and Dempsey is what Coach Don Maynard has been working on all season; it certainly proved that they can live up to their expectations when they continuously thwarted the thrusts of the Bluejays.

Student Government Notes

The council meeting was called to order at 4:00 by ex-president, Robert Smith. The secretary's report was read and accepted.

Announcement was made of the appointment of Stanley Ursprung, Ed Costello, and Harry Miele to confer with Chief Justice Norman Vercoe, Justices Leona Felix and Warren Jones, and President Millis on clarification of the jurisdiction of Student Court.

Regarding his consultation with Miss Godfrey, Pres. Harry Miele reported that an adding machine for the soda fountain entrance has been on order for some time but is not expected until early next quarter. Until that time students may have their food slips checked by any attendant in the cafeteria. As to the opening of the soda fountain during evenings, Miss Godfrey has stated her willingness to cooperate with the council a second time. Should the plan fail again, from a financial standpoint, its renewal will be quite improbable.

Daniel Burke questioned the availability of the Waterman study rooms for student use on Sunday afternoons. Tom Hayes suggested that the added space provided by the East Hall reading room is probably thought to be sufficient. Mr. Kingsley will be approached on the matter.

In answer to Bob Perkins' request for a definite statement pertaining to the publication of Student Government appropriation of funds, Bob Smith informed the council that until this year the accounts have been audited free of charge through the accounting office. Consequently, formal statements were often received as late as two quarters after the time pertinent for publication. For the current year an accountant has been engaged at the expense of $100. Reports should be forthcoming each month.

Lucille Wetherby opened discussion on the possibility of securing special rate cards for UVM students to be used for bus travel in the city. She remarked that high school students may purchase one for one dollar a ticket useable for twenty bus trips. Her motion that the chair appoint someone to contact the Burlington Rapid Transit Company, Inc., was seconded by Sherman Sprague and carried unanimously. Lucille Wetherby received the appointment.

An earnest discussion ensued when Al Pratt expressed student criticism of the new CYNIC set-up. As presented by Bob Smith, Al and other council members, the staff as published in the CYNIC had not been approved by the Publications Board, which must endorse CYNIC and Ariel staff appointments. Secondly, the "streamlined" structure of the senior staff had been presented to the incoming officers rather than originated by that group itself, and had not been approved by the Publications Board. Following an evaluation of the new system, Ed Costello moved that the council go on record as favoring the old system in light of the points presented within the council, that Harry Miele meet with the Publications Board to arrange a review of the action taken by the former CYNIC staff and to suggest that the new staff be permitted to devise its own make-up, and that the old staff be requested to continue publishing the paper until notified to the contrary by the Publications Board. The motion was seconded by Al Pratt and carried.

Albert Redway, chairman of the World Student Service Fund drive, presented to the council a report on the purposes and accomplishments of the fund. He stated that last year $500 was allocated to W.S.S.F. and between $200 and $300 by other campus groups. Because the former council abolished the right of organizations financed by UVM students to donate to charitable institutions, and due to the increased enrollment at the University and increased need abroad, Al expressed the hope that the council would consider a larger donation to W.S.S.F. Bob Perkins, Tom Hayes, and Karl Webster volunteered that many students are bound to contribute two or three times because of fraternity and club membership, and that a student's refusal to donate when contacted personally indicated his disinterest. The majority of the council felt reluctant to allocate a portion of any person's activity fee under these considerations. Lucille Wetherby and Stan Ursprung urged the council to consider thoroughly the fact that only Student Government now is able to donate a large sum to the project. Bob Perkins moved that Al Redway's report be accepted but that no appropriation be given W.S.S.F. by the council. The motion was seconded by Karl Webster and carried by a majority vote.

Respectfully submitted,
JANE SMITH,
Secretary UVM Students.

Fraternity Corner

PHI DELTA THETA

Karl Switzer was recently elected to the position of President and Doug Pierce and Stan Ursprung became pledge captains.

Reg Linsenmeir of Burlington was initiated as a brother into Phi Delta Theta before the last meeting and all extend congratulations to him. An informal get together followed immediately thereafter in order that the pledges and brothers could get to know each other better.

An informal "come as you wish" ski dance was held Saturday, January 30, under the capable direction of Brothers Linsenmeir, Linke, and Ed Comolli. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Preston and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Martin acted as chaperones. The limps of several of the fellows brought to mind the fact that they have recently suffered injuries on the upper slopes of Mansfield. As they are members of the "pro" circle of skiers they don't wish to have their names divulged.

The frigid temperatures on the ramp lately have been invigorating and sub-zero to say the least. There are several types of shiverers: those with sleeping bags, the ones with blankets, and those who creep downstairs after turf and sit up all night rather than face the icy blasts.

Brother Howie Kirk claims he'll have to have a private phone installed in his room unless the others use the schedule he's arranged for telephoning between five and ten at night.

Bob Sumner has the best wishes of everyone in his engagement to Jane McCormick of St. Albans.

The Marketing Club, a new club sponsored by the Commerce and Economics Department will hold its first meeting on Thursday February 12, at the Student Lounge in East Hall. All those interested in Business and Administration be sure to attend.

Initial Sale of Student Kake Walk Tickets Goes Off Smoothly

Excellent Management
By Directors Dominant

The sale of the limited number of Kake Walk tickets celebrated its premiere on Thursday afternoon in the lower Waterman hall. Everything went off according to schedule—in fact the handling of the actual sale was carried out with the utmost precision. The Kake Walk Directors were very pleased with the orderly conduct of everyone concerned.

The Saturday tickets were the most in demand by the huge throng of students although a considerable number of the Friday ducats passed over the counters. The pride of Burlington's police force maintained a strict control over the entrances to insure the safety of the clerks as the clamor arose for specific seats.

Early Bird Gets the Worm—

A couple of hardy individuals, who underestimated the seating capacity of Memorial Auditorium, plunked their chairs in front of the bookstore at the unbelievable hour of 8.30. Not to be outdone, several of the cream of UVM's many bridge "experts" lugged their card tables into most convenient positions and irrespective of the passing traffic proceeded to continue with their game.

By the time that the go-ahead signal was given, the long queues extended to the cashier's office in one direction and to the Ariel office in the other. But, the system had been so thoroughly planned out, that the halls were all but vacant a mere half hour after the first tickets were sold.

Sale Continues Today

According to the Kake Walk Directors, the ducats will continue to be sold up to Saturday. Meanwhile Hayes and Carney are making final preparations for the grand opening of the downtown sale which is scheduled for Monday afternoon. The entire selling of the tickets has been handled in a most commendable fashion by the ticket committee. To them, a grateful student body says thank you.

Economics Department To Sponsor Two Films

The Department of Economics will present two films, Tuesday afternoon, February 10, at 4.10 in the auditorium of the Fleming Museum. The first is "Mainline, U. S. A.," a color film depicting American railroads today and their importance to the national economy. "One Man Listens" is the second film which tells the story of the building of a successful hardware business and explains modern business methods that have been valuable to retail stores.

Admission is free and anyone interested is cordially invited.

Canterbury Club Gives Ski-Skating Party Sun.

Canterbury Club is presenting a skating and skiing party on Sunday night, February 8. The participants will meet at North Avenue at 7.30 p.m. and proceed to the scene of activities. Refreshments will be served at St. Paul's Parish House afterwards. Miss Abbe Lack, parish worker, and Father Martin will be chaperons. This party will take the place of the regular Sunday night meeting. Everyone interested is welcome.

Notice

Beginning February 9, the Medical College Library will be open at 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday.

UVM GIRLS EVACUATE ROBERTS HOUSE WHEN OIL BURNER EXPLODES

An exploding oil burner uprooted twenty-one girls from Roberts House on Thursday afternoon. The explosion, which occurred while the city's electrical power was partially halted, wrecked the dormitory's heating unit and filled the building with smoke and gas fumes.

The house was evacuated, the majority of the girls going to the Old Mill. There they replaced the nursing students from the burnedout Mary Fletcher training home who had left there a few hours before. The remaining girls took refuge in private homes, sorority houses, and other dormitories.

It was estimated that it would take from two to three days to repair the unit. The water pipes were drained and filled with kerosene to prevent their freezing. The girls' temporary living arrangements will continue until the oil burner is repaired and water service has been restored.

FRATERNITIES BEGIN GROUNDWORK IN ICE SCULPTURE CONTEST

All of the fraternities have had visions of super-duper ice sculptures at this stage of the game although few have ventured into the ice and snow as yet. Sigma Nu and Sigma Phi have laid the bases for their sculptures and have their visions down on paper. Paul Hunt is Master Artist at the Sig Phi House.

The Phi Sigs have set February 4 for their start production deadline, while the Kappa Sigs figure with all that manpower they can wait until February 7. TEPs, Phi Deltis and ATOs have their plans all made but are laying in supplies of Wheaties before attempting any construction work at below zero temperatures. No word from the SAEs and Owls as yet.

Classical Club Fetes Members At Traditional Roman Banquet

Amid pomp, perfumed water, and extensive licking of finger-tips, the Roman Banquet of the Goodrich Classical Club took place on Tuesday night at Southwick—to the unmitigated joy of newcomers and the stoical pleasure of experienced banqueteers.

Patterned in its details to feasts of antiquity, the banquet featured a bevy of slave-girls, numerous courses prepared to ancient recipes, large-scale entertainment and a general conviviality that, together with some particularly well-flavored grape juice, caused a glow of happiness and well-being in all.

The squad of fair slave-girls consisted of Dorothy Elmer, Nancy Hafely and Ann Baker and was in charge of slave foreman Peggy Harris. In charge of purchasing food and preparing same into an edible Roman facsimile were Theresa Litster, Carolyn Cross and Louise Gee.

The repast began with a perfume bath for all revellers, which however, extended no further than the finger-tips. Hors d'oeuvres à la Pompeii, of an excellent quality, were served, followed by another perfume bath, and that in turn by the main dish: Ham au Epicure. The food was consumed without the intermediaries of silverware, or even chopsticks, and while this added a certain tang (perfume) to the taste, a few difficulties were encountered with the more slippery and carefully diced beans.

All diners were clad in togas and the Roman equivalents of dinner-jackets which had been secured by Phyllis Page. The couches used for this occasion, as well as all other appurtenances had been assembled by a mover's team supervised by Julia Hurley and consisting of Harold White and Jim Frink. Each of the participants however, had arrived for the festivity equipped with pillows and blankets to ease the strains usually associated with eating in a horizontal position.

A skit in the great Euripidean manner was performed by a large cast that left the ranks of the audience slightly depleted. The skit's theme dealt with a mythical assault upon the Library of Alexandria, and was (almost) devoid of references to incidents of the twentieth century. Professor and Mrs. Prindle, Professor and Mrs. Kidder, Professor Pooley and Mr. and Mrs. Turner joined in the Bacchanalian merriment. Professors Prindle, Kidder and Pooley each gave addresses in Latin which received chuckles from the better-informed contingents of the audience and understanding sympathy from the rest.

Miss Powers received special thanks from the Goodrich Classical Club for having made the holding of the banquet possible and for having helped in the arrangements.

UVM Alumni Plans Drive For Athletic Field House

Kappa Sigs Sponsor Leap Year Dance Tonight In Lounge

The Kappa Sigs are sponsoring their big Leap Year Dance tonight in the Waterman lounge from 8.30 to midnight. The music will be furnished by the Mike-men.

This is your one and only chance, girls, to ask the man of your dreams or persuade your steady to ask you. So let's all get on the Band Wagon because you'll be in for an enjoyable evening of fine dancing and excellent entertainment. The price has been established at a mere fifty cents, a bargain in any man's language.

So, come on all you girls, invite your beaux 'cuz an extra special show has been arranged for the occasion. Remember, 'the Bowery Brawl' comes to Waterman Hall tonight. Everyone is welcome.

'Ski Bus' Tickets Reduced In Price

To encourage better attendance on the Sunday ski bus, the Outing Club has lowered the rates from $1.50 to $1.00 for members, and from $2.00 to $1.50 for non-members. The club undertook the sponsoring of the bus, which runs to Stowe every Sunday, at the start of the winter's skiing with the hope of enabling all to be able to ski at a reasonable cost. Last week, however there were only twelve people on the bus. The bus leaves from in front of the Waterman Building at approximately 9 o'clock and returns in time for supper. The tickets may be purchased on the bus.

Faculty Entertains Pre-Clinical Nurses

The sixty-five preclinical nurses who have been taking a four-months course at the University were entertained by members of the faculty at a tea on February 1. Directors of the Heaton Hospital, the Barre City Hospital and the Gifford Hospital were special guests. The tea was held in Southwick from four to six in the afternoon.

CAMPUS CHAPTER OF FFA REACTIVATES

Arrangements have been completed for the reactivation of the University of Vermont Collegiate Chapter of Future Farmers of America. The reorganizational meeting will take place at 7.30 p.m., Wednesday, February 11, in the Brick Barn. Agriculture Education majors and former members of high school chapters of F.F.A. are eligible to membership and are encouraged to attend this first meeting.

The Future Farmers of America is a national organization of high school students studying vocational agriculture and has a membership of over 200,000 boys. Collegiate Chapters are organized for the purpose of providing an opportunity for students training to become teachers of agriculture to learn about the ritual, program of work, and officer's duties in a local chapter.

The organizational meeting will be devoted to the election of officers, the appointing of committees and the showing of a colored film depicting F.F.A. activities in Vermont. A letter of invitation to attend this first meeting is being sent to students majoring in Agriculture Education and to former F.F.A. members, however, those who are eligible, but who do not receive a formal invitation may attend the meeting; it is difficult to learn the names of former F.F.A. members on the campus.

Committee Estimates Cost At 15,000 Dollars

At long last, Centennial Field may be equipped with dressing room facilities if the necessary money can be raised. The badly-needed additions would be located on the site of the old barn, which is situated in the right field foul corner of the baseball diamond, or beneath the first base concrete bleachers.

An alumni committee composed of Al Gutterson, Henry Seamans, Dr. W. M. White, and Coach "Larry" Gardner, which is working on the proposal, estimates that the cost of the project will range in the vicinity of fifteen to eighteen thousand dollars. There is already some money in the fund but the goal is still "out of sight." The successful completion of the undertaking rests on the committee's hopes that the remainder of the large sum will be realized through contributions from the many ex-UVM lettermen.

Everyone is proud of Vermont's athletic field which contains one of the best college baseball diamonds in the East. For some time, there has been a definite need for field house facilities on Centennial Field but nothing has been done. The alumni are pushing the project with a tremendous amount of zeal.

The Athletic Department feels that the University of Vermont should be equipped to offer visiting players the same conveniences and services which our men receive away. Is this too much to ask?

So, if everyone places his full weight behind the drive for the badly needed field house, our school will take still another step forward along the long road to perfection.

MARKETING CLUB SELECTS CARPENTER TO HEAD NEW ORDER

The Department of Economics and Commerce is sponsoring an organization to bring to the students a first hand account of some of the principles of business. This organization, the Marketing Club, is composed of some fifty students, all of which are in the business curriculum here on campus.

The first meeting of the Club is to be held Thursday evening February 12 at 7.00 p.m. in the East Hall Lounge. Plans are being made to obtain a speaker from the many Burlington business men who have offered their services.

Newly elected officers of the Club are Torrey Carpenter '48 of Burlington, president, and Betty Simms '50 of Fords, N. J., secretary. Professor Wentworth of the economics department is the faculty advisor.

This club was started by interaction of the students and the faculty. The marketing classes have had various speakers during regular class periods, but because it was difficult to arrange for many speakers at these times, it was felt that a separate organization could devote more time and energy to this important phase of economics.

The purpose of the Marketing Club is to give additional opportunity, through monthly meetings, to the students to hear business executives followed by informal discussions or a short movie on the various aspects of the business world.

The Marketing Club is unique in that it is one of the few professional clubs on campus.

Notice

Anyone who has not handed in his proof returns for the Ariel please hold on to them. Sargent's Studio will be sending up another representative to take proof returns very soon. You will be notified. Watch the bulletin boards and CYNIC for the date.

Congratulations - - -

A year ago, the sale of Kake Walk ducats was very poorly carried out as far as the UVM students were concerned. If the ticket chairman had started out to make as many mistakes as possible, he couldn't have done much worse. No successful attempt was made either to shorten the lengthy lines or to inaugurate a plan by which everyone would get a chance to attend. Furthermore, the machinery in the University Store was very poorly handled. Students contemplated for extensive periods of time as to whether they preferred seat No. 62 or seat No. 64 while a couple hundred others lingered restlessly in line.

But—the sale of tickets for the 51st Kake Walk was handled with superb effectiveness. It is quite obvious that the individuals, who were named to the top positions, carefully studied all the flaws in the previous systems. The instructions and diagrams in the Book-Store window looked slightly perplexing but they proved to be most ingenious.

In spite of the fact that the lobby was crowded to capacity with card tables, chairs, etc., the actual sale of the precious ducats went off in excellent 1—2—3 fashion. The uniformed messengers of justice performed their duty notably although some characters endowed with plenty of thoughtlessness did succeed in crashing the lines.

So, if the rest of the committees carry out their agenda with about one-half as good results, everyone can be assured that this, the 51st year of the 'Walking fo' da Kake,' will be the best Kake Walk ever.

A. A. H.

Oh, it's all right. They aren't let loose until 12:25 1/2.

Fable 'n Folly

By John D. Adams

After the crusades of the past few weeks I feel that it is time to settle down and not take life or my fellow man so seriously. Kake Walk is looming in the horizon and students are prepared to throw restraint to the winds and enjoy themselves for a few casual days. Letters to the CYNIC complaining about a certain impishness I have preserved from a happy childhood have stopped and as yet there is no new mischief on hand. A week ago I thought of hiring a few armed bodyguards to accompany me across the campus especially when two students lifted their hands as I was walking to East Hall. For a moment I thought I was in for a drubbing but breathed a sigh of relief when I realized it was only two members of the Campus Reserve Officers Association saluting one another.

Cooking Hint

1. enough water to fill a ten-gallon barrel.
2. enough fat for seven bars of soap.
3. carbon for 9,000 lead pencils.
4. phosphorus for 2,200 match heads.
5. iron for one medium-sized nail.
6. lime enough to whitewash a chicken coop and
7. small quantities of magnesium and sulphur.

Take these ingredients, combine them in the right way and the result apparently is a man.

This particular recipe is often helpful in judging people for you can see what mineral etc., they have a surplus of, and, what they lack. Recently I have noted that my critics have possessed considerably more lime than iron but differed from the above recipe in what their caustic lime was not enough to wash a chicken coop.

The Culinary Casbah

To those who like to play the bon vivant and gourmet extraordinary a trip to the cafeteria is worthwhile because there are hundreds of new tastes to be discovered. Food flavors never before experienced are innovated here and reach the highest point of subtlety when they are introduced under well-known names. The cottage cheese is always good for a surprise for it inevitably tastes like a new type of putty mixed with rock wool used in insulating clapboard houses, while the weekly meat loaf makes one wonder whether Armour Meat Packing car got mixed up with a shipment of Bostonian shoes. Perhaps it is hasty to say that civilization is unacquainted with these various tastes because we must consider the animal world. In this case we are naturally obstructed by the fact that we are not able to speak with the beasts or domestic livestock to learn of the many tastes that make up their diet. One could offhandedly say that the Veal Loaf is reminiscent of a popular brand of dog-food but then our judgments are based only on the appearance and the smell, and then never having eaten Pard or Red Heart it would be inaccurate for us to make such a statement. I'm glad we didn't.

However, if the spirit of adventure and the love for a few dashing episodes overwhelms you, enter this Culinary Casbah with the colliness of Ronald Colman and the adenoidal monotonies of Boyer. I edge up to the serving table like a Somerset Maugham character approaching the baccarat table at Monte Carlo willing to cast my lot in with chivalric chance and lithoidal luck. I consider each choice a decision and once in the eating room cannot help but feel I am an antiquarium searching out the musty, dank, dismal odors of the past and savouring each morsel with the ardor of a Saracen sorcerer.

As with those who at one time capture a mystical experience I urge my fellow students to become Poets of the Duodenum and to collect your dregs of causeless care and fly lithely into this world of lyrical dyspeptic fantasy—the Cafeteria.

Burlington's Nob Hill

Very few of us realize that the high plateau that houses the University is plumb in the middle of the cream of Burlington society. It is on this elevation that the Now Yorker and the New York Times finds its Burlington subscribers and if there is a mortgage on the house there is a fair chance that the London Times will be found on the home's gate-leg table.

A young man arrives in town, goes to work for one of the local burgomasters and finds lodgings in the lower part of town and after several years of "Yes" work and later "Yes, Yes" work and carrying his bosses golf clubs every Saturday he slowly moves up the "hill." When he reaches South Winooski Avenue we may assume that he can buy a Chevrolet and play the piano at the Kiwanis meetings and after he has risen above South Union he is well on the road to becoming a Chittenden County god. For the student unacquainted with the town you may investigate this amusing situation by noticing "in-town" students. The "silver spoon" segment of the Burlington student population treat their downtown neighbors with a tempered civility and only speak when they can unfold the fact that the house is painted. Daddy won the class "D" championship at the Country Club, or Big Brother received a gold medal from the Rotary. More Folly but no Fable. Best regards.

Station WCAX To Carry Brotherhood Week Skit

Brotherhood Week will be the subject of a radio broadcast Friday, February 6 over WCAX, sponsored by the College Street Congregational Church. The script, written by Rev. Lillian Gregory, will be presented at 2.30 p.m., Dean Mary Jean Simpson will be narrator.

Several women students will take part in the inter-denominational observance to be held at the Church Friday, February 13.

It's The Spirit . . . That Counts

By JOYCE ABERDEEN

Do you find living quarters rather chilly these cold winter months? Does the struggle against the blasting wind while you are going back and forth to classes leave you breathless and weatherbeaten? Do tingling ears and thawing feet render you painfully uncomfortable? Are you self-conscious about using your tongue to advantage when caught in public with a runny nose and no handkerchief?

Well, my friends, just heed my words and your worries are over. The one solution to the problems is to build up a rugged constitution—so rugged that you won't be phased in the least by such trifling difficulties.

How? Why, come to the mountains and ski. We'd love to see you "down" up there, and in a few months (some do survive months) you may be spending some time up—like when you are standing in line for the chair lift, or posing gracefully on the crest of the mountain before the thrilling descent. Even if you can't quite stay on your feet over the crest don't worry. You wrap around the same old trees. It's just a slight difference in contact surface.

It is the spirit of the atmosphere that counts. It is at times like this that one feels close to God (every time you see a tree or hit a bump, come visions of the final leap into His open arms).

This is Mother Nature. No longer are we gazing from afar in superficial admiration, but rather we are embowered in the bosom of her beauty.

The temperature of Coolidge and Willoughby will seem tropical after you've spent a few weekends encased in the sheath of ice that forms from the part of that snowbank you take with you.

Burlington winds will seem like the summer breezes that barely wave the field clover back and forth compared to the thirty mile an hour wind that turns tears to ice as you meet it head on when you're flying down the mountain at twenty five miles an hour. (You too can become an angel.)

But far more significant than the negative approach are the distinctive qualities of skiing in which lies the heart of the sport and makes it the wonderful thing that it is.

Skiing Breeds Friendship

Have you ever been in a group where people were so non-committal and plain that unless you were among close friends you were neglected and lonely? It wouldn't happen at Stowe. There seem to be an instinctive friendship between skiers. Just stand in the middle of the S-53 for a minute or so. Before you know it another skier will come whizzing down the trail—perhaps going at a snappy clip of thirty-five miles an hour—but do you think he'll just pass you by with a nonchalant wave of his ski pole? No, never! not on S-53. Most likely he'll stop and fling his arms around your neck—or rather, fling his arms around your neck and then stop—soon there will be a third, a fourth, etc. There you'll be, lying in the snow embracing your new acquaintances. There is nothing that attracts a skier more than another skier.

Good Voice Practice

Besides these demonstrative episodes there are the verbal greetings received each day from various fellow-skiers.

Why just last weekend I was practicing kick-turns on one of the narrow parts of the Lord. Some fellow had just come into view from around the bend when I started to traverse the hill, stopping just about in the middle and began doing my kick-turn. Something happened that I had my feet pointing in opposite directions with my legs crossed and couldn't seem to get assembled. The fellow had to take a detour around a tree as he landed in a thicket of bushes. Immediately, he began making conversation. He shouted it. (Perhaps he thought that I was deaf because I did not pay any attention to him when he started screaming "track" as he came down the trail.) He even waved at me with his ski pole such a nice, wholesome looking boy, he was, with his cheerful face; (only it had purple veins starting out in it at the time.) I was in a hurry, so I just waved back and left him shouting as I snow-plowed down the trail.

I hope I have imparted to you an inkling of the spirit behind this wonderful sport and why those of us who participate have successfully built the desirable rugged constitution!

Powerful U-Conns Roll Over Catamounts

Huskies Use Third Period Spurt to Down Cats 54-39

By SAM HOUSTON

The University of Connecticut's Huskies opened up with a second half barrage to run roughshod over the Vermont Catamounts by a score of 54 to 39. Although the tilt was a nip and tuck affair during the first half, the spirited U-Conn attack was too much for the tired Evansmen in the third quarter.

Led by Joe Maloney, the Huskies scored 18 points in a row after Vermont had tied the game up at 23-all during the opening minutes of the third canto.

Close First Half

After Coach Hugh Greer's boys from the Nutmeg State had run up a 3 to 0 opening lead, Niemann and Pierce put Vermont out in front with nice pop shots. The Huskies countered three more times before Pierce and Niemann connected from the charity stripe to make the score read 9-7 for Connecticut. Here, the U-Conn's looked as if they were going to salt the game away as Tarbell and Muzikevic each tallied once and Maroney three times to give the visitors a commanding 20-9 lead.

The game Catamounts came roaring back as Niemann, Durkin, Livingston, and Henderson tossed in six straight foul shots with Niemann's hook shot and Henderson's set sandwiched in. The crowd let out a tremendous roar as the scoreboard gave the U-Conn's a slim 20-19 lead. Maloney and Luchuk hooped in three charity shots between them to give the Huskies a 23-19 half-time lead.

OFF THE BOARDS

By MORT KAUFMAN

Every year in intercollegiate basketball, there arises during the season some discussion and many times conflict over rules and officiating. This year is no exception. Recently, in Madison Square Garden, there was the customary exchange of words between a visiting Western coach and an Eastern mentor over the refereeing. The Westerner contended that the "refs" are too strict in the Garden and in the East in general, and are slowing up the game. It is very true that officiating is not standardized throughout the nation and with the increasing amount of inter-sectional contests, there should be more uniform officiating.

The Western Conference is known for its bruising football teams, but with the type of basketball that Wisconsin, Iowa and other mid-western institutions have been showing of late, that adjective will apply to their basketball teams as well. In a recent game between Iowa and the Badgers, no less than 47 fouls were committed, and feeling between the two teams was and is very high. That sort of thing is detrimental to the game, despite the claim of the western teams to "showy" ball.

In the last few years, the fast-breaking type of basketball with emphasis on points has become increasingly popular. One of the few teams in the country today that stresses defense instead of offense is Oklahoma A. & M. Hank Iba's boys play a slow breaking game and stress possession of the ball, only shooting when set. It is not the most sensational type of game to watch, but it is good clean ball, and A. & M. have turned in their share of wins in the past few years.

Huskies Run Away

It looked as if the Evansmen were going places at the start of the second half as Henderson sank a nice set shot and Niemann and Livingston tied the game up at 23-all with two foul tosses. But the Catamounts threat was shortlived and the screaming Vermont fans soon quieted down as the Huskies went on a spree. The local club fell completely apart at the seams.

The Connecticut hoopsters scored eighteen consecutive points here as the Cats threw passes all over the auditorium and obliged the visitors by allowing them to fast break for eight lay-up shots within a relatively short period of time. Maloney tallied five, Fisher three, Tarbell six, and Sarota four during this splurge. Finally, Livingston and Durkin found the hoop with pop shots but the Huskies continued to pour it on. With two and a half minutes to go, the U-Conns had built up a 49-31 lead.

At this point, Coach Fuzzy Evans inserted his second squad. Art Collier brought the fans out of their tantrum with two beautiful set shots. Ken Pierce then connected with two one-handers but Maloney retaliated with two field goals to insure the Huskies of their 54-39 victory.

For the rampaging U-Conns, Maloney was high with 17 markers, followed by Tarbell, a reserve center who played a whale of a game, with 10. Big Al Niemann was the leading scorer for the Catamounts with nine points, the rest of the scoring being pretty evenly divided.

Hillel discussed plans for a cooperative dance with Student Christian Association during Brotherhood Week at a business meeting held Sunday January 25 at the Fleming Museum. Pres. Newman Rome conducted the meeting, which was followed by the showing of several movies.

Kappa Sigs Attain Top Slot In Rugged Intermural Bowling

As the Interfraternity Bowling League enters its final phase, keen competition characterizes every match as each fraternity strives to gain first place honors. At the present moment the team standings are as follows:

Team	Won	Lost	Pts.
Kappa Sigs	5	1	33
ATO	4	1	28
Phi Sigs	4	0	26
Sigma Phi	3	2	21
Sigma Nu	3	3	20
Phi Delts	2	2	20
SAE	2	4	16
Delta Psi	1	5	9
TEP	0	3	2
Owls	0	4	0

On Tuesday, January 20, the Kappa Sigs defeated the Owls with Sonny Dixon taking high single and double with 121 and 236 pins to pace the winners. SAE won from the TEPs by virtue of forfeit. In the third match of the evening, the Sig Phis downed the Delta Psis with Paul Goulet leading the pack. He captured high single with 130, and high double with a score of 227.

The Sig Phis came back on Thursday to edge out the Sig Nus behind Ron Page, who copped high single and double with a total downfall of 130 and 227 pins. On the other two alleys the Sig Nus downed the Phi Delts to come within striking distance of fourth place. Danny Monieson of the victors held high double with 220 while the high single of 119 was bowled by Reg Linsenmeir. The ATOs continued their rampage by downing the SAEs with Stanley turning in excellent strings of 138 and 123.

The Kappa Sigs gave indications of better things to come as they whitewashed the Sig Phis on Tuesday. Dixon set a torrid pace by scattering 132 and 120 pins to take high single and high double honors. The Phi Sigs proved to be too much for the SAEs as they emerged victorious in the second league contest of the evening. Frank spearheaded the attack with strings of 111 and 109. The Phi Delts defeated the Delta Psis but Fletcher and Haven of the losers copped high sin-

Norwich Puckchasers Eke Out 7-5 Decision Over Maynardmen

Maroon Build Up Second Period Lead As Late Vermont Rally Falls Short

The Norwich puckchasers, behind the brilliant playing of Melendy and Adams, vanquished the UVM hockey team 7-5 on Wednesday night to gain revenge for an early season 2-0 whitewashing. This was the first win in four starts for the Cadets as they had previously fallen before the attacks of Middlebury, New Hampshire, and Vermont. Although the clash was more cleanly fought than last week's bloody fray with Champlain, the game was bitterly contested from start to finish.

Norwich Draws First Blood

Early in the first period, Adams of Norwich, after receiving a fast assist from Melendy, shoved the puck through to start the ball rolling. That constituted the scoring during the initial canto although both sides threatened consistently. Gomez of the Cadetsmen tried to skate through Mal Mickler twice in a row but his attempts were fruitless as he must have realized when he picked himself up off the ice. Jim Turnbull also "slowed down" a potential Maroon speedster via the same technique.

Second Period Dilemma

The second stanza proved to be quite disastrous for Vermont as Melendy countered soon after play was resumed. Bill Dempsey pushed one through for the Maynardmen unassisted to bring the Green and Gold up to the short end of a 2-1 score. Wharton and Adams tallied in short order as the Horsemen offense began to click. Minutes later, Wennie Barwood roared up the ice and tallied for UVM but shortly before the period ended, Adams connected again for the Cadets to push his teammates ahead 5-2.

Vermont Comes to Life

In the final canto, Melendy tallied twice in rapid succession after receiving tricky passes from Wharton. The Vermont pucksters finally came to life as Lareau, Switzer and Ferriter countered but the damage had been done.

Highlights . . . Mickler, giving out with his usual fine performance, saved our hard-working goalie John Adams considerable toil. Jim Turnbull, spare defenseman, showed promise of better things to come as again and again he broke up Norwich plays single-handedly. Capt. Karl Switzer played a fine game but his brother, who is the Cadet goalie, seemed to have the Indian sign on him by holding the UVM speedster to one goal.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

The pledges are in the limelight this issue, and rightly so, because they certainly started their season off with plenty of spirit—you know if you were at the movies the night of pledging or in the cafeteria the following morning! The first pledge meeting was presided over by Renee Finberg, pledge mother. Officers for the group were elected and are: President, Esther Thomas; vice-president, Sarita Goodman; secretary, Suzette Levine; treasurer, Cara Cohen; campus activities and social activities chairman, Claire Orson; scrapbook chairman, Lois Rutstein; scholarship chairman, Sarita Goodman.

At the meeting of the sorors, plans were made for an informal dance to be given by Alpha Epsilon Phi in honor of its pledges in the very near future.

Marion Rosenhain '47, took time off from her skiing at Stowe to pay us a visit this week. It certainly was good to see an old friend again.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

The new Theta Pledge class elected its officers at meeting Monday night. Officers are: Anita Swasey, president; Ginger Hageman, vice-president; Nan Nelson, secretary; Jean Farr, treasurer. A tea dance in honor of the Pledges is scheduled for Saturday afternoon at the house.

International rehabilitation will receive the proceeds from the covered dish supper planned for February 15 from five to seven.

Janet McDonald accepted a Delta Psi pin from Warren Jones last week-end, swelling by one more the growing number of Delta Psi fans. Pat Brush spent the week-end at home in Hartford, Conn. Practice teaching has put Aileen Nichols on the absentee list temporarily. President Toots is now living at the Home Management House where she will be followed shortly by Lee Church and Ann Tuttle.

BOWLING

gles and doubles respectively with pinfalls of 130 and 200.

The Kappa Sigs rudely shoved the ATOs from top spot in the league by a score of 1060 to 988. Wally McGarey easily garnered high single with a second round downfall of 140 while his double total of 236 was also high. The Owls forfeited to the Phi Sigs. The SAEs went down before a strong Sig Nu attack with Monieson again capturing high honors. The Kappa Sigs continued to roll by defeating the Delta Psis by 100 pins. Bill Gilbertson was high man for the winners with strings of 130 and 245.

Captains of the winning team in each match are responsible for turning in the results of the matches as early as possible the next day. This is very important and should be taken care of as promptly as possible to facilitate tabulation of team and individual standings.

All participants are reminded that when a match is forfeited the winning team should bowl if any of its members expect to gain a place on the roll-off teams which will consist of six men from each league. Total pinfall is the basis on which bowlers are selected and if a man fails to bowl he may lose 200 points toward his total score, which then enables an inferior bowler to take his place.

Open house was held at the Lodge on Saturday afternoon in honor of incoming Student Government president, Harry Miele and vice-president, Tom Hayes. Refreshments and dancing were enjoyed by the large number of students who dropped in to greet the new heads of our Student Government. Mr. J. Vargas ably represented the faculty at the function.

Monday evening, January 26, a formal initiation was held in solemn ceremony for Al Schoff, Harold Edwards, Ed Brownell and Doug McSweeney. Congratulations to these men, our new brothers in Sigma Nu.

Following the New Hampshire game and again last Saturday evening, open house parties were held to the tune of a roaring fireplace fire, sweet canned music and refreshments to top-off a couple of swell week-end evenings. It is amazing how the addition of the basement playroom relieves the over-all crowded condition on "top deck," as social chairman Bill Fitzgerald puts it. "A person who wants to dance now and then has a chance," says big Bill, by whose ideas and efforts most of this new room was possible.

Ed Ellis, Sigma Nu moving picture producer, has just completed the filming of his new extravaganza, in technicolor! Those who have viewed his recent productions shouldn't fail to view one particular scene in which Ed's own car, a Chevy club coupe, approaches, stops, and lo' and behold, disgorges thirteen men, all complete with winter clothes. Ed says his next picture will star Vermont's own Jack French in a Home Ec serial entitled "Protecting Georgia Peaches from the Cold Cold Wind." This should make Jack a star over night! Good-bye till next time.

Outing Club Members See Three First-Rate Films in Fleming Aud.

As fifteen hardy souls braved the sub-zero weather Friday, January 30, the UVM Outing Club presented "America the Beautiful" in the Fleming Museum. The principal presentation of the three motion pictures shown, "America the Beautiful" was a graphic portrayal of the wealth and majesty that is America. Produced by Warner Brothers under the auspices of the United States Treasury Department, this picture has been shown to millions of Americans both here in the United States and abroad as a constant reminder of what America really is, and what it means to the 43,000,000 Americans all over the world.

Also shown were "Playtown, U. S. A.," a picture story of how Decatur, Ill., overcame many obstacles and prepared a year-round recreational program for all ages, and "Ski Revels," a sports scope on the skiing thrills encountered all over the United States and Canada.

Prior to the showing of the movies it was announced that anyone who worked January 18 on the ski jump in Underhill, and who has not been paid yet should call at the Outing Club Council meeting on Tuesday to receive their pay.

Now that the official dedication ceremonies are over and Governor Gibson has accepted the new dormitories on behalf of the State of Vermont, these new buildings can take their places among the other proud landmarks of the campus. In anticipation of the many visitors, the dorms were given a thorough cleaning and students made certain that their rooms were in perfect order. A picture of the person after whom each dorm was named, was hung in the respective lounges. And thus during open house, which was held immediately after the ceremonies, many interested visitors were observed inspecting the premises with pleased looks upon their faces.

Meanwhile Buckham has commenced setting up its recreation room with a ping-pong table, canteen, and coke and cigarette machines. The "B" was economical as well as original in obtaining its ping-pong table. The dorm purchased the plywood, and after the university carpenter had constructed it, the Activities Tutor had it painted. To Chittenden and Wills, who seem to have trouble raising money for these things, may we suggest the same idea? Now that we have one ping-pong table, and with the other dorms falling in line with the same thing in mind, our next step will be to organize a tournament. All interested in participating should watch the bulletin board.

The new dormitories were well represented in the Ski Meet held a short while ago with two of the entries being Freshmen David Sylvester, who lives in Wills, came in in twelfth place. He hails from St. Johnsbury where he attended the Academy for four years and was captain of the ski team. Duane Pierce of Buckham took fourteenth place. He went to Lyndon Institute at Lyndon Center and also was on the ski team.

To those of you who listened to, or attended the Golden Gloves fights held in Burlington recently, the name of David Hinkley of Wills Hall will be familiar. But if for some unexplainable reason you did miss them, Dave is the boy who came through with high honors in the heavy-in that class. Hinkley has always been more or less interested in boxing and weight bouts by winning the Golden Gloves has practiced the sport since his high school years back in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. his hometown. He served in the Merchant Marine for a couple of years prior to entering college. About two years ago he was affiliated with the Adirondack Boxing Association in New York as a middleweight, but this was his first experience in the Golden Gloves.

Meanwhile Hinkley is looking forward to wearing the Vermont colors to the New England Championship fights to be held in Lowell, Massachusetts, soon. In answer to the question of what he did for recreation outside of boxing, I was informed that he had time for little else as he was kept busy commuting back and forth between Montpelier and Burlington visiting his "one and only." It takes a considerable amount of training to keep in shape, and understand that at the first of the year, Dave had difficulty in obtaining sparring partners. So he resorted to a rather novel method of keeping exercised, namely that of "hanging statues!"

OUTING CLUB NOTES

No longer can our elders look down upon us as a "weak-kneed" generation. It remained for twelve hardy members of the Outing Club and Prof. R. G. Sidle of the Engineering Department to prove that this generation can live as comfortably without modern equipment as they can with it, even in the middle of the winter. And prove it they did. Of course, beyond a doubt they were helped immeasurably by the fact that it was a warm sunshiny afternoon (January 31), when they started out at 1.30 from UVM. Not only were they blessed by fair weather but these modern explorers had the use of the cozy Bryant's Upper Camp in Bolton, Vt. When they arrived at the camp the boys spent the remaining sunlit hours skiing and snowshoeing while the girls domestically prepared the evening meal of hamburger, cookies, and coffee. Following the proverb, "Early to bed and early to rise," the brave adventurers went to bed early. Two of the virile he-men, Cliff Havens and Rod Rice even managed to spend the entire night in sleeping bags out in the cold world. The next morning and afternoon brought more sunshine and fun until the expedition returned to the UVM campus at 6.30 p.m. Sunday. The group was sponsored by the Outing Club Association as part of their winter recreation plan.

UVM Placement Service Offers Solution to Student Problems

Counselling Provides Exams For Doubtful Students

J. D. ADAMS

Being the first of a series of articles sponsored by the president of Student Government, Harry Miele, designed and intended to afford the student with a synoptic view of the various administrative instruments now working in UVM student's behalf.

Organized a year ago last September the UVM Placement Service has steadily climbed to an important niche in the UVM administrative arm. The director of this hypodermic is UVM's director of Student Personnel, Dr. Albert Lange, who counts this new bureau as one of the most important assignments of his office, and last week stressed the duty of the college in aiding the student after graduation as well as serving him while he is in attendance. Concisely, the placement and the counseling service serve as an advisory reservoir for individual problems and later work with the student in securing a future job.

It is well known that an educational institution is complimented and benefited by turning out successful alumni and a placement service of a substantial and effective scope is the media for its achievement. By keeping its ear close to the pulse of economic opportunity and forming worthwhile contacts with industries and professions the service provides the graduate with positions that he normally would not have known of if he had planned his career through individual solicitation.

Doctor Lange noted the high correlation that exists between the counselling and placement functions of his office. A student's future career is endangered by pursuing a course of study which he is not fitted for, because he will later find that he is inherently indifferent to and uninterested in his chosen vocation. The counselling service has sought to aright the student and provide the most suitable solution by the giving of aptitude and placement tests to the incoming freshman and then following his early progress in college. If difficulties ensue an interview is arranged where the student and the advisor try to discover the root of the trouble by a series of consultations and judgments based upon the student's presentation and numerous accredited tests. A situation like this presents many pitfalls it is hardly insolvable in the eyes of the advisor who often finds that the maladjustment is caused by the student's enrollment in a course of study he cannot handle. From tests it can be adjudged where the change should be made and arrangements are made by the Student Personnel Office with the Dean of the particular college in which the student is enrolled to see that this effected.

If a student's failure is due to an inability to make the proper social adjustment, tests of a psychological nature are given to adduce his shortcomings. These are private, deep-dyed secrets are the property of the advisor and the student and cannot be revealed to any other authority. It is thus that a student working under physical and mental strain or weight of personal problems finds it his advantage to take his difficulties to the office.

This year an influx of job opportunities are poured into the Student Personnel office from companies and organizations looking for the right UVM graduate to their order. Representatives have come to this campus and have conducted interviews for interested students and lately many have been placed. The number of inquiries from industries are daily increasing and his office has recently notified the seniors of a prospective employer by means of personal communication and bulletin board announcements.

Relig. Life Sponsors 'Fellowship Dinner'

For the observance of Brotherhood week this year the Religious Life Committee is planning a Fellowship Dinner for the evening of February 12, Lincoln's birthday, Thursday.

Newman Rome, president of Hillel, is chairman of the committee in charge which consists of the Student Government interfaith committee and the heads of the faith groups, Hillel, Newman and S. C. A.

The dinner will be held in Waterman third floor dining rooms with reservations made for 50 of each of the three groups. Tickets may be obtained from officers of these organizations at a very attractive price.

Following the dinner there will be short speeches by each of the three speakers, two of whom are coming from Boston for the occasion. Dr. Frank Jennings, secretary of the Massachusetts Council of Churches will speak for Protestantism, Rabbi Maurice L. Zigmond, advisor to Hillel Foundation at Harvard and Radcliffe will speak for Judaism, and Father William A. Crowley, superintendent of the Burlington Diocesan schools will speak for Catholicism. The underlying theme of all the speakers will be the necessity for an essential unity even while maintaining the integrity of separate ways of worship.

VT. WRITERS LEAGUE MEETS AT LIBRARY

The annual midwinter meeting of the League of Vermont Writers, originally scheduled to be held at the Jesse Weldon Inn in St. Albans, has been transferred to the University of Vermont campus in Burlington, according to Morris R. Wilcox, president of the League.

The date remains the same, Saturday, February 14, beginning at 10 a.m., and the meetings, both morning and afternoon, will be held in the Wilbur Library at the Fleming museum. Luncheon will be available in the university cafeteria in Waterman building.

The St. Albans Writers Club, who had planned to be hosts to the League at this time, are in charge of the program. The morning program will consist of talks by Allene Corliss, St. Albans novelist whose latest serial has been recently featured in Colliers' Magazine, and Will Thomas, Westford, whose most recent novel, "God Is For White People" reached the best seller classification even before publication.

The afternoon will be given over to clinics on the different phases of writing, including poetry, news-writing, the article, the short story, radio writing and contesting. Leaders of the clinics will be members of the League experienced in the various fields.

HIGH SCHOOL GROUP PRESENT "MARCO POLO" BEFORE GRADUATE CLUB

A musical presentation of "The Travels of Marco Polo" will take its audience to France, England, China and Spain on Thursday February 12 at the Graduate Club meeting in the Waterman Faculty Lounge. A group from Cathedral High School will perform the musical revue, to be followed by general round and square dancing.

Previews of "The Travels of Marco Polo" indicate an excellent show with a good cast. Jack Morrissey takes the part of Marco Polo with Dick Beauchemin and Ned McCarthy as his assistants. The accompanist is Margaret Stone. Soloists and chorus provide proper renditions of popular songs representative of the various countries.

All graduate students are invited with wives, husbands, girl friends and boy friends! At 8 p.m. in the third floor Faculty Lounge of the Waterman Building, Thursday February 12.

UVM Students Will Be Surveyed Wednesday on College Expenditures

The Bureau of Business Research which has been set up within the Economics Department at the University of Vermont is beginning this week, (February 9-14) a collegiate market survey which should prove of great value not only to the university and the student body, but also to the local community.

For the purposes of the survey, a sample of UVM students has been selected to participate as representative of a stratum of the student body. The Board urges the full cooperation of these students, since by means of the survey it expects to determine 1) for the use of students, what it costs to go to college, 2) for the university, the cost of an education; 3) for the community, how much the student body contributes to the community.

To this end, questionnaires dealing with student expenditures will be distributed on Wednesday morning of this week (February 11) to members of all 10 o'clock classes meeting on that day. The approximately 1150 students who make up those classes will be asked to fill out the questionnaires, making the best possible estimate 1) for the Fall Quarter; 2) for a typical month; 3) for the past 12 months. Different questionnaires have been prepared for men and women students, as items of expenditures may be expected to differ for the sexes.

The completed questionnaires will be collected at the next meeting of the same classes on Friday, and will then be classified by members of the Bureau of Business Research, including Professors George C. Grosscup, L. E. Knollmeyer, Sally B. Maybury and Robert B. Wentworth. Classification will be on the basis of college class, sex, organization belonging to including the additional cost of belonging to a fraternity, in order to obtain a stratified sample for evaluating student expenditures typical of the various classifications.

The findings of the Board, when completely tabulated, will be made available not only to students and university administration, but also to merchants and others who might make use of statistics on what the student can be expected to buy and what he can pay for it.

Home Ec Majors Now Practice—Teaching In Vermont Schools

The Home Economics Education majors are out in the public schools of the state doing their first period of student teaching. Lois Brown is in Newport, Inez Farrow and Laura Byington are teaching in St. Johnsbury. Aileen Nichols is in Bennington, Marie Farrow is in Poultny, Helen Boyd and Betty Whitney are in Brattleboro, Elaine Plumley in Essex Junction and Blanche Parker in Randolph. There was a bit of excitement when Inez Farrow found out two days before she was to leave for Thetford that the school's homemaking department had burned to the ground. The girls were a bit concerned over how they would get along teaching the Junior High Girls "How To Prepare a Breakfast," a group of Freshmen, "The Essentials of Good Grooming," guiding the eighth graders through "The Making of a Cotton Dress," and teaching a group of junior and senior girls, "How To Make Pies, Cakes, and Bread."

The girls will be back on campus just before the big Kake Walk weekend and will resume their classes with Miss Marion Brown, Instructor of the Home Economics professional classes, until the beginning of March when they will do their final period of student teaching.

Rules Ban Off-Campus Campaigning This Year

The annual Kake Walk king and queen campaign gets off with a bang Thursday, February 12, with the announcement of the candidates for the most coveted title of the year Kake Walk King or Queen. The candidates will vie for this title of king and queen for five days until the campaigns end on February 17 at midnight.

Within these hectic five days of campaigning the Fifty-first Kake Walk King and Queen, will see the traditional crazy stunts and methods of trying to persuade the voters to cast their ballot in this way or that. There will be multiple campaign speeches, along with a radio broadcast on WCAX. And on Saturday night, the campaigns will be given a further boost by "Pops" night at the Penny Carnival at Southwick featuring campaign skits.

The names of the candidates were submitted to Jean McLaughlin and Charlie Traverse, chairmen of the King and Queen Committee, on Monday, and at midnight tonight the campaigners will be busily at work putting up their posting and scurrying around to have everything ready for a grand start.

However, a few rules have been established just to assure the Burlington residents a few more days of peace. No off campus campaigning is the rule this year. Also no dropping leaflets from airplanes. (It's been tried you know.) Trees can be used for hanging posters, but no nails should be driven into the trees. And six square feet is the maximum for Bulletin Board campaigning.

Instructions on voting will be published by Mortar Board and Boulder who are in charge of the voting and other arrangements. It will be a busy week for the candidates and their campaigners, but by the time the old Masquerade Ball rolls around, I'm sure there won't be a doubt in anyone's mind as to who will make the better king or queen. And in that moment of traditional excitement when the king and queen are crowned, you can sit back with pride and say we helped elect this royal couple.

WAA Sponsors Penny Carnival Saturday At Southwick Hall

The Penny Carnival with all its thrills and attractions is coming to the University of Vermont next Saturday, February 14, via Southwick Hall. The Carnival will be heralded during the preceding week by all sorts of figures to be found in such surroundings as this Carnival. Penny pitching, dart throwing, and all sorts of booths with many a game and concession will be seen at the "Southwick Fair." One of the added features will be a "Laugh in the Dark," a sort of Fun House and Mystery Tunnel combined. Not many of the male inhabitants of the campus have ever seen or been in this particular place, so it promises to be a big treat. Many a surprise is expected.

The most attractive feature of all however, will be the presentation of skits for the Kake Walk King and Queen campaign. Southwick will be decorated in the Traditional St. Valentine's Day style and the gym and ballroom will be disguised in the atmosphere of your favorite carnival and ballroom. The gym will also house the UVM Band, and dancing will be to the music of your favorite bands. There promises to be something exciting to do every minute. A door prize will be given away, among the other prizes from the games, etc.

Joanne Howard is overall chairman for the big event, Miss Euler, Miss Hoffman and the WAA Council and managers are all assisting.

Watch the clowns in Waterman telling of the big date. Remember that's Saturday, February 14, The Penny Carnival.

Wanted:--Better Sportsmanship

Tonight, in Memorial Auditorium, the University of Vermont hoopsters face the Cadets from Northfield in their third state conference clash. With rare exception, there arises during the athletic encounters between college schools, situations which warrant considerable reproach by all. The Green and Gold rooters are no exception to the rule.

There are always many individuals, who incidentally wear out several pairs of britches during the course of several hair raising collegiate tilts, who actually, believe it or not, think that they possess more intelligence and foresight along athletic lines than all the coaches in the country combined. One does not know whether to condemn these bench warmers for their unsportsmanlike tactics or to feel sorry for them because of the lack of coordination of their marbles. In all events, UVM could do very well without them.

A never-to-be-forgotten incident in the Clarkson-Vermont clash will typify what I have tried to say. During the fading moments of the last quarter, one of the Catamount starters hit the sidelines via the foul route. To say the decision for his substitute was a crucial choice in view of the closeness of the score would be a vast understatement. After pacing up and down the long line of possibilities, Coach "Fuzzy" Evans signalled to one of his cohorts to enter the fray.

There then floated among the rafters the greatest collection of coon calls, hoots and boos that any sportsman ever heard directed at a replacement. How any group of college students could be guilty of belittling one of their own standard bearers is beyond all human comprehension.

Merely because an "athletic supporter" can recite by memory the left guard on Knute Rockne's great 1924 eleven or the second team All-American hoopsters in 1945 bears no indication on that person's knowledge of the sport. In closing, it is well to remember the old adage which points out the wisdom in the following line, "if you watch sports or if you play sports, be a good sport."

WAA CARNIVAL

I must say, this Carnival has revealed some behavior types that explain a few incidents in class.

Roberts House Dilemma

A vibrating thud, a scream, and the girls of Roberts House were started upon the path of misadventure. Being no common mass of functioning steel, but rather endowed with the distinction of serving a home of culture and learning, the oil burner of that worthy establishment refused to remove its functioning progress from one type of electricity to another for some period of time. When finally the point of condescending cooperation was reached, this worthy instrument decided to announce its decision to all who might be interested. This announcement took the form of a mighty blast, the effort of which weakened the machine so as to render it incapable of immediate service. In short, the oil burner blew its top.

Miss Mariella Crandall, the emitter of the beforementioned scream, was sitting calmly upon a bed in her room when suddenly she found herself located three feet south, southeast of her former position. Miss Janet Williams, another inhabitant, was industriously sleeping in her private abode when she was carefully lifted and smashed against the wall. Miss Williams has requested that in the future, any party interested in awakening her, please buy an alarm clock.

Clouds of sombre, evil-scented haze ascended the cellar stairs and permeated the halls. All and any who crossed its path emerged as from a minstrel show—black all over. One adventurous soul dashed into the murky hole to see if and what blazed forth in the lower regions. Seeing not the burning fires of the eternal underworld, she decided that life was yet with her and that this dark cloud was indeed the noble Roberts House.

At that precise moment entered one Lois Sundeen, who after five minutes in that murky gloom fully deserved her nickname of "Shadow." It took two strapping, healthy females to hold Miss Sundeen, Fire Captain Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, from pressing the evil button which might startle the residents by the clamoring of the fire bell. Finally convinced that there was no fire and that no fire bell was needed to announce the preceding house-shaking event, Miss Sundeen joined the enlarging throng of gay, carefree conversationalists in the front hall. By this time the decision had to be made. Were windows to be kept shut and conserve what little heat remained or thrown open to admit air? As the greyish faces began to acquire a purple undertone, the decision was reached in favor of air. Lustily the sashes were thrown open to admit mighty gusts through the quarter-inch storm window openings.

Three separate conventions were held. A conglomeration of oil men (Adsit had arrived ten minutes before with the week's supply of oil bitter irony!), repairmen, custodians and interested bystanders were grouped about the scattered remains in the cellar, the worthy inhabitants of Roberts House were clustered in the Hall, and Mrs. Richmond, the domicile's keeper of law and order was on the phone with Miss Simpson. The same momentous decision was reached by all three. Roberts House was going to be a trifle cool that evening. Mournfully the girls began to tenderly pack some personal belongings for the mass evacuation. With all their junk thrown together, the little blackfaced D. P.s prepared to remove themselves. Some went out into the dark night to the shelter of friends—and the rest—the wretched thirteen—were hurled without mercy into the Old Mill. There were thirteen in that small closet, half of them preparing furiously for hour tests the next day. The three bridge games ceased at an early hour (1 a.m.) and discussion of the world's affairs a half hour later. Easily the girls slid into their soft double-decker beds with little unusual discomfort (Nancy Bachman was the only one to fall out of a top deck) and peace descended upon the weary brows of the girls of Roberts House. Finally at rest, the blessing of sleep overtook all—until—clang, clang—it was 3 a.m.! The Old Mill was having a fire drill!

Fraternity Corner

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

According to the latest available "gouge" the three ATO fusiliers, Brothers Hill and Field and Pledge Wood are planning an excursion to end all excursions. Pledge Wood's "a outfit" will provide the transportation for the trip in a casual manner. With Brother Hill in charge of cooking(?) and Brother Field and Pledge Wood attending to the remaining domestic chores, this expedition promises to be one which will be an important topic of conversation in the "pit" for many ensuing months. . . . Brother Brown's bowlers are still maintaining the number one position in the league. The Pearl Street hurlers were our last victims as Brother Stanley led the undisputed champions to a decisive victory. . . . Province Chief Staley was a recent visitor at the chapter house. . . . Uncle Bill of the ever popular "Kiddy Quiz" program called the other night for little "Alby" Ketchum who is supposedly seven years old. He was more than surprised when informed by Brother Art Camire that "Alby" was attending night school!! . . . The kitchen has been supplemented by the purchase of a new refrigerator. . . . In our last report you were informed that Brother Pervier had a date. He was stood up!!!

Notice

Have you heard what's going on February 14 out at Southwick? It's the Penny Carnival. And a real carnival it is—a horror house, palm reading, fortune telling, and door prizes. There will be Kake Walk campaigning, too! Dancers will find music in the ballroom and refreshments will be served throughout the evening. There's no admission so let's all be there at 7.30 when the doors open for this full evening of fun and entertainment.

Letter To Editor

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

The University is failing in its attempt to reach the goal set for the WSSF drive. The situation is one which could be greatly aided by a Council dination.

It is impossible to believe that the students "lack interest" or are so concerned with their immediate comforts to see the need for success. I feel that the failure of the drive thus far is due entirely to the average student's lack of money. I should like to know if the Council, in voting down the proposal to make a donation, took into consideration this definite possibility. There are many students on campus who feel that it is impossible for them as individuals to contribute the blunt request of the WSSF for three dollars, and being greatly antagonized, have refused to give anything. These students, however, have considered the activity fee, from which the Council gets its money, as a college expense for which they have planned previously. They feel that the Council donation would not place them in financial difficulties but would mean only the giving up of added recreational luxuries. They accept this because they see the need for success.

I ask students, and the Council, who are questioning the advisability of a Student Government donation to consider on the basis of what will bring about a lasting peace, which is the more important; a few ping-pong tables and new chairs for UVM or the education of foreign students who have nothing.

Sincerely yours,
NANCY GOULD '51.

Posing n' Supposing

By GLADYS E. NEIBURG

Six—eight—nine—no, this is not a football signal. It is the cute little marks on the thermometer when I trudged back to Waterman to get into the group picture of the Dramatics Club and the University Players, said picture destined to adorn the pages of the 1949 Ariel. At least it will have 1949 on the cover whether or not it comes into existence that year. Just a light, incoherent reference to the 1948 'Lost but Not Yet Found' Ariel.

Yes, you guessed it. I had not noticed the changed schedule. Dramatics Club. . . University Players? Not one member in sight and so it dawned on me that I had better take another look at the schedule. I could not blame my lack of knowledge on the splendid corridor lighting system because I had not looked every day, every hour on the hour for changes.

The ray of sunshine was the fact that the Health Council appointment still held for 9:45 p.m. And so I sat with the photographer's assistant and watched the groups as they came, posed. . . and left.

There was plenty of assistance from the Rogues' Gallery, scattered around, a how to pose, how to smile, how to look. But the patient little photographer finally won out and the groups were dismissed. That is, except one time. This group had a nice little doggie as mascot. The dog posed beautifully, eyes right on the camera until the crucial second.

Ah—the next group. One hunk of intelligence looked like a little spanked boy, especially when he was asked to remove his glasses. (Eye glasses, I mean). There is no time nor place to discuss what other glasses might have been moved prior to this time. At any rate, he kept his eye glasses on, and the big handsome brute in the middle of the second row, showed his tooth-paste teeth to perfection. What a grin, what a grin! Noble, really noble. But you ain't heard nothin' yet. The next group was the motor boat—excuse me, I mean the Mortar Board group. I allow it was cold that night, but it was somewhat disconcerting to see one young lady come trooping in with ski pants showing beneath the dignified black robe. Ah—me, but that is college life. Illustration of the illusion or illusion of reality! Having said young lady stand in back of the seated group.

Later came the call for the literary group which I could call "Azure Sox." Many were called but no one answered. I wondered, for a moment that inasmuch as I had tried three times and had made the grade to the intellectual port whether or not I'd be doing a good deal by posing for this group. I thought might come under the caption of "informal" picture. However, by the time I had made up my mind, the next group had been posed, snapped and dismissed. This gave me a very good idea, and dismissed myself back to the dorm. was still nine below when I got home.

UVM Medical College Participates In First Nat'l Heart Week Drive

The American Heart Association, in conjunction with the Burlington members of the New England Heart Association, is conducting for the first time a Nationwide Heart Campaign, beginning on February 8, and culminating with Valentine's Day. The Campaign will be launched by prominent social and medical authorities over the press and radio and will consist of an educational drive for the prevention and early recognition of Heart Disease and a fund raising drive to enable continuation and development of Research in the recognition and treatment of heart disease. Here at UVM, the Department of Medicine and Public Health and the Student Health Council will cooperate in carrying out the drives. Every student is urged to read the following paragraphs, to make a monetary contribution according to his own means into the red heart-shaped coin collection boxes which will be set up in the Cafeteria and in other places around the Campus, and solicit for contributions from his parents, relatives and friends. These contributions should be sent to the New England Heart Association, care of Mr. H. W. Abraham, Burlington Chairman for the National Heart Campaign.

Some Facts about Heart Disease

One out of every three deaths is due to diseases of the heart and the blood vessels; these cause one death every minute in the U. S. A. Deaths from heart disease are three times as high as from cancer, six times as high as from accidents, eight times as high as pneumonia, eleven times as high as tuberculosis, and 500 times as high as infantile paralysis. One out of every twenty persons suffers from diseases of the heart and blood vessels; these diseases cause a greater volume of disability than any other single disease and are responsible for a loss of 152 million work days annually. In children and young people heart disease is also the leading fatal disease; it cripples twice as many children as infantile paralysis.

The Chief Types of Heart Disease

Among children and young people rheumatic heart disease is most common; this is due to scarring and deformation of the heart valves due to rheumatic fever. In the prime of life high blood pressure is the most common cause of heart disease; it causes the heart and the arteries to wear out sooner than they would if the blood pressure were normal. Among elderly people hardening of the arteries (arteriosclerosis) is the most common cause of heart disease. This hardening narrows the arteries and reduces the blood flow through them. When the blood supply to the heart muscle itself is insufficient, a symptom known as "angina pectoris" may occur—this is an oppressive pain in the chest, often spreading to the arms or neck. Localized stabbing pain over the heart is usually due to some other cause—but let your doctor decide about that. Many of the sudden deaths or "heart attacks" among middle aged people are due to sudden closure of a heart artery by a blood clot (coronary thrombosis). Another symptom is palpitation (a disagreeable sense of fast, or slow, or irregular heart beat). Many of the gravest signs of heart disease do not pertain to the heart at all, like shortness of breath, swelling of the ankles, a blue discoloration of the lips and skin, but all these signs may be due to other causes. Let your doctor decide about that too.

How Can I Avoid Heart Disease?

The chances of heart disease developing are less if you lead a well-balanced life, eat a well-balanced diet with plenty of vitamins, avoid physical overexertion, worry and anger. Heart disease is more common among smokers than among non-smokers. The sooner beginning heart disease is recognized, the easier it is to arrest its progress or cure it. It is therefore very important to have periodic physical examinations, including a heart check-up. Some kinds of congenital heart disease and some kinds of high blood pressure can now be entirely cured by operation. Other heart disease can be cured or greatly improved by drugs. Other forms may be controlled by reducing the strain on the heart. By living within the limits of your heart reserve you can protect your heart and prolong life. This means, among other things, doing the proper work, cultivating a serene philosophy of life, avoiding fatigue, overweight, infections and emotional upsets. Your doctor knows the answer. Let him prescribe for you.

What is Being Done to Fight Heart Disease?

The outlook for a cardiac patient is now much brighter than it was ten years ago. Incessant scientific research on the treatment of heart disease is responsible for this. However, none of the money the heart patient pays to his doctor or his druggist goes toward this research, and the general public has also been very negligent toward it. The general public contributed toward it $13,490 for every death of infantile paralysis, $293 for every tuberculosis death, $22.54 for every cancer death, but only seven cents for every heart death! As a result, important heart research had to be postponed or abandoned for lack of funds—and at the same time billions were spent every year on cosmetics! To contribute freely to the National Heart Drive is the only answer to this Shameful Situation!

How Will My Money be Used?

a. The New England Heart Association will receive 50% of the money raised. This will be used for research in prevention and treatment of heart disease and its interpretation to the general physician, to other groups of health workers and to the general public.

b. The remaining 50% of the money will be used to fight heart disease here in Burlington. For instance, it is planned to establish in Burlington a Clinical Observation Unit for Cardiovascular Diseases, which will apply the newest methods of diagnosis and treatment and further develop them. Funds are needed to equip this Unit with the most modern diagnostic apparatus, to purchase special drugs and to pay for the upkeep of patients who could not otherwise afford to stay in the Unit for greater periods of time.

Shades of Last Year? . . .

Pictured above is part of the initial line of Kake Walk ticket aspirants as they file silently into the Book Store to purchase their ducats. In contrast to the false "Daily News" report, the sale went off very smoothly as the queen disappeared completely within one-half hour after the first voucher was passed over the counter.

"Joe College" and "Betty Co-ed" Make Successful Bid For Kake Walk Ducats

Thursday, February 5 dawned bright and clear with 'ole' man thermometer giving the nod to slacks and ski-clothes, but all was warm and cozy within the marble palace known as Waterman. For on this day "Betty Coed" and "Joe College" would finally learn of their Kake Walk fate. Joe and Betty were going together, but Betty's folks from New Jersey were coming up for the big event, as they hadn't been up since their undergraduate days. After an early and hurried breakfast, each left on the run for an eight o'clock class. These classes passed all too slowly and as the clock neared ten of nine the entire room was tensed for the starting gun (ten of nine bell).

Upon reaching the Bookstore Joe and Betty were quite surprised to find no line formed so they decided to have their second cup of coffee with the "nine to ten" crowd at the coffee fountain. After spending an agreeable hour here Joe left for a ten o'clock class while Betty remained to secure a first place in line as soon as it formed. Shortly after 11 o'clock the halls were enhanced by the appearance of several blue coated members of the local constabulary. With the appearance of law and order the line began to form with all rapidity. Those who had secured the first places in line were seen to be dragging forth chairs which they arranged in sets of four and proceeded to play bridge.

Betty, who had waited in the soda fountain for the line to form, became absorbed in her knitting and was oblivious to time until 11:30. Dashing out into the hall she searched for the end of the line and fell in. Joe came by on his way to a 12 o'clock class and gave verbal encouragement. Shortly after 12 o'clock Betty found herself at the door—but not the Bookstore door—she had gotten into the cafeteria line by mistake. Once again she ran for the end of the line and this time she found a seat provided for her by the steps leading to the first floor. By this time the line looked like a bridge party or a game of military whist with no less than twenty tables under way.

At one o'clock Joe joined the line and held the fort while Betty gulped another bite and hurried back. The lines were assuming larger proportions as two o'clock drew nearer, one bookstore line wound up the stairs and north along the corridor to the Cashier's office, the second bookstore line wound up in the lower corridor towards the north door and Pearl Street. The lines at room 36 were quite short during the earlier hours of sale but increased somewhat as the Saturday night tickets grew thinner. At one-thirty the line crashers appeared only to be booted away by those who had stood in line for so long. This was followed by the rumor that the student identification card must be shown to obtain tickets. Betty had left hers at Coolidge Hall so she immediately sprinted for that precious piece of paper and was back by two o'clock when the Bookstore doors were opened to the surging lines of ticket hungry students. As three o'clock approached Joe and Betty slid by the doors and into the Bookstore where they were quickly relieved of eight dollars. They tried to obtain four seats together but the clerk had cotton stuffed in her ears to prevent any compromises. With smiles of triumph on their faces, Joe and Betty passed the long line of suffering students and went off to the S. H. to celebrate.

The best Valentine present is your own heart—but see to it that it's a good, healthy heart. Learn to fight heart disease and give to help others fight it.

The All-Vermont Camera Club Presents Exhibit

In recent years, photography has come into its own as one of the arts. It is a modern, up-to-date expression of creativeness and this is the treatment that it receives at the hands of modern photographers. Photography can be of two types. The first, and the one which we are most familiar, is the candid photo which informally catches people or places as a permanent memory aid. The second kind of photography, which is art itself catches fleeting beauty so that it can be a "Thing of joy forever."

The Seventh All-Vermont Camera Club Exhibit, being held February 6 to March 1 at the Fleming Museum and sponsored by the Burlington Camera Club, is an enlightening and thought-provoking exhibition of this kind of photography. There are, in all, 92 separate photographs on display in Art Gallery A of the Fleming Museum, and all are of varying approaches and subjects. This variety makes the exhibit the more interesting.

One of the big advantages of the camera over the paint brush is that it depicts things in the most minute detail. For example, a painting of a snowdrift merely gives the impression of a snowdrift. A photograph of the same snowdrift can show each snowflake as a separate entity.

When I drew up my list of favorites from the present collection at the Museum I found that scenics were my favorites although one interesting still-life study of organ pipes, entitled, "Muted Voices" by Lewis R. Brown of Brattleboro was my choice for winner. My second dozen of roses goes to Francis Hunt of the Bennington Camera Club for his "Low Tide," a seashore study. My favorite portraits were "Miss Contrary" by Clyde Field of Barre and "My Wife" by R. Wilson of Brattleboro. There was one kitten photograph (there is always a kitten photograph), which particularly claimed my attention. Entitled, "Two Roses," it depicts a small kitten vainly trying to pull one of the roses out of the bud vase. This study was done by S. J. Hatfield of Burlington. Other lovely still lifes are "Still Life and 'Peonies'" by Martin of Barre. Two other scenic photographs that I liked were "Cockington Village" by H. Barry of Brattleboro and "Mt. Ascutney" by Hemenway of Springfield.

Cadet Skiers Edge Out Vt. In Dual Meet

Sports Slants

By SAM HOUSTON

Tonight the University of Vermont basketball quintet gets back into state competition as it meets Norwich University in a return match at the Memorial Auditorium.

The Catamounts easily defeated the Horsemen earlier in the season and the latter has shown no great improvement since then, so it should not be a tough one to win for our Cats. However, the Evansmen will be putting up their state title to a tougher foe next week when they meet our friends from across the river, St. Michael's.

It is worthy to note that last Saturday night the Purple Knights gave Boston College a run for its money and that the "Beantowners" had to go all out to garner a 45-42 decision over the up and coming Mikemen. However, the Catamounts should be able to defend their state title successfully if they play the brand of ball they are capable of.

Connecticut Recap

Looking back to the Connecticut game gives us much to hope for in the way of basketball rating. The Huskies were rated above Dartmouth by most sports reporters in New York, in fact twenty points better in some cases. Yet, the Dartmouth club we saw in Burlington and especially the red-hot Indians that trounced our Cats in Hanover were much better than the Huskies. That opinion is based upon the fact that had the Catamount not suffered a letdown at the start of the second half in the game with Connecticut, the visitors would have had a close ball game on their hands. The Club on Saturday night. The Green and Gold sextet has won four out of seven to Dartmouth game in Hanover was no such game. The Green and Gold could have been at their best and still would have had a job keeping even close to the Lampemen that night. So, we will stick with the Big Green if they ever run up against the U-Conn's.

Turning to hockey, the Maynardmen have two tough games in New York State this week-end. They meet Hamilton College Friday night and the Clinton Athletic Club on Saturday night. The Green and Gold sextet has won four out of seven to date which is not bad considering the small number that went out for the school's roughest sport. One encouraging factor for the icemen was the turnout which gathered in back of the gym last week for the Norwich game. It showed that there actually is some interest in the sport and in the boys who get bounced around on the boards.

Intramural Hoop Leagues Close

There is also a lot of interest being shown in the intramural sports this winter. The fraternity basketball leagues are in the home stretch and the regular scheduled games finish up this Saturday. In league A the Kappa Sigs have things all sewed up and are assured of being in the playoffs. League B champion is still in doubt. However, the Delta Psis hold first place with a scatheless record, but the Phi Sigs have lost only to the Delts and these two meet again this coming Saturday afternoon. A win for the Delts will gain them a playoff berth while a loss will lock the two teams in a deadlock so the game should be a good one.

The playoffs begin the week after the big Kake Walk festivities are over and will be the best two out of three games between the winners of each league. The runners-up of each league will also play two out of three in a drive for third place for the Traynor trophy. In the meantime the Independent League gets underway and the winner of this league will vie with the winner of the Fraternity playoffs for the school hoop championship. All these games are played in the gym so there will be plenty of action for all Vermont sport fans to see.

At the time of this writing it is good to see the United States holding down third place in the Olympics at St. Moritz. A first place in the bobsledding event made it three firsts for the Americans, which is the most that have ever won in the real Olympics. Besides the bobsled title the American have won the slalon which Mrs. Frazer copped and the men's figure skating which was easily captured by Dick Button, the Englewood, N. J., flash. The United States is noted for its baseball, football, basketball and tennis stars, but it is good to see that the caliber of the athletes in games of track and field has also risen so as to give us worldwide recognition as a nation of athletes as well as leaders.

Catamounts Battle Norwich Hoopsters Tonight At 8 p.m.

The Catamounts should have little trouble retaining their position as leaders in the state conference play. In the previous encounter between the two clubs, the Cats soundly trounced the Horsemen by a score of 60 to 44. Since that time, the Cadets have won only one game that being a 44 to 42 victory over A. I. C. The Evansmen have defeated the same Massachusetts club by a 66 to 48 margin. Therefore, the Norwich rooters do not have too much of a hope of upsetting the Green and Gold.

Vermont will undoubtedly start the same three in the back court, namely Captain Kotlarczyk and Livingston in the guard slots and Big Al Niemann at the center spot. The forward positions are wide open as Coach Evans has been alternating four men in these two slots in the past few practices. Pierce, Henderson, Collier, and Durkin will all see plenty of action however, no matter which pair start the game.

The Cadets will have to stick with their same starting five that they have used all season. This means that Rudy Colo and Jake O'Connor will be up front, Thompson at the center position, and Jack Daley and Jim Sievwright in the back court. Mauriello will probably be used as a substitute freely by the Cadet mentor. O'Connor has been the big gun for the Cadets on offense this season, but the Catamounts should have little difficulty in stopping Jake and his teammates unless they should hit a terrific slump.

Ken Belding Stars As Cats Lack Cross-Country Power

Green And Gold Show Big Improvement In Copping Both Slalom and Downhill

In a battle to the finish ski meet which was not decided until the scorers arrived at their final calculations a half hour after it was all over, the University of Vermont ski team bowed to Norwich University in a dual meet held at Northfield this last week-end.

The Cadets won by a mere 1.64 points over the greatly improved Green and Gold snowspeedsters. The final combined total of points gave Norwich 390.25 and Vermont 388.41 points.

Cadets Take Opener

The opening event proved to be the decisive factor in the slim Norwich victory, as the home team took the first three places in the cross-country. Hugh Cairns raced over the long eight-mile course in 49.56 minutes. A half minute behind Cairns was his teammate Tinkham and then Hammond, also of Norwich, who ran the course in 55.03. The best Vermont time was made by Dave Sylvester who made the course in 55.23 and came in fourth. Duane Pierce of Vermont was only several seconds later than Sylvester to give him a fifth. Other Catamounts placing were Perry, Bellows, and Belding.

The Cadets took an even 100 points in this event while the Catamounts could only muster 93.17 points to fall almost seven points behind at the start. The cross-country course was a tough one and was the same the Cadets have been using all year so that although outshone the Green and Gold did not fare as badly as they might have in the event.

Vermont Shines

Coach Bob Hawley's barrelstavers came into their own in the next two events and went out in front as they took both downhill and slalom runs. In the downhill Vermont took first, third, fourth, sixth, and tenth.

Dave Sylvester sped down the steep slope two seconds faster than his nearest competitor who was Jack Pinney of Norwich. Sylvester made it in 1:29.3 as the terrific head wind on a flat section slowed down the time of most of the contestants.

Vermont's Capt. Sim Ralph came in third running it in 1:31.5, which was only two seconds behind Pinney. Ken Belding came in fourth thus giving the Hawleymen three of the first four places. In this event Duane Pierce collided with a tree as he raced down the hill, but he suffered no serious injuries.

The slalom event was taken by Ken Belding who gave a spectacular performance as he swished in between the flags on the tricky course to run it in 36.4 seconds. His closest competitor was Captain Ralph who made it in 40.1 seconds. Third place ended in a three-way tie with Elbert Isham and Duane Pierce of Vermont and Jack Pinney of Norwich all running the course in 40.3 seconds.

Jumping Final Test

Going into the final event which was jumping, the Green and Gold led by one-third of a point but their lead was short-lived. Hugh Cairns too his second first of the meet with a 93-foot jump to lead the pack. Don Erskine, also of Norwich, took second place with a 90-foot jump. Vermont took the next four places as Sylvester, Pierce, Belding and Ralph came in that order. The two firsts were too much to overcome however, as Norwich scored a total of 98.07 points in the event to 95.90 for the Hawleymen, thus copping the meet as well as the event.

Ken Belding led the Catamounts in combined totals, and was closely followed by Dave Sylvester and Duane Pierce. Captain Ralph who did not enter the cross-country event showed his usual prowess in the other three events.

Coach Hawley will take his skiers to Dartmouth this Thursday morning to enter the ski meet at the Dartmouth Winter Carnival. They will participate against several of the top ski teams in the East including Dartmouth, Middlebury, New Hampshire, McGill, Williams and many other of top ranking ski schools.

Campus to GENERAL ELECTRIC

ENGINEERING NEW LAMPS

The Story of Conrad Bechard

"When I came back to General Electric after getting my Army discharge," Conrad Bechard says, "the thing that impressed me most was the way the personnel people said, 'What would you like to do?' The way they said it meant very clearly that if there was any special field that interested me, they'd try to see that I got a crack at it."

Con had an answer ready. He had heard a lot about Nela Park, General Electric's "University of Light" in Cleveland, Ohio. "I'd like to go to Nela Park," he said.

It was a big leap for him. He was asking for an assignment in a field in which he had had no previous training—not at Union College where he had gotten his degree in 1941, nor on "Test" with General Electric. In the Army he had worked in electronics. Nela Park would be a totally new experience.

But Personnel said Okay. In the two years since then, Con Bechard has contributed to better production machinery for making the new circular fluorescent lamps known as Circlines, and has helped improve their quality and life.

During his Army service in Italy, Con won the Bronze Star for his invention of a "Chaff" dispenser used to foil Nazi radar.

Vermont Junior College Dumps Kittens 53-38 in Return Match As Ratti Sparks Yearling Drive

Vermont Junior College stopped the University of Vermont Freshman winning streak at five games as they defeated them by a score of 53 to 38 last Friday night on their home court in Montpelier.

This was the first loss for the Kittens since the opening game of the season when they were upset by Burlington High school. The clash also provided the Hill-toppers from Montpelier with sweet revenge, for their only loss this season was suffered at the expense of the same Kittens.

GOOD FIRST HALF

The game was close and well played throughout the first half. In the first quarter both teams hit the hoop with deadly accuracy. Ratti led the Kittens in this period and his sharpshooting enabled them to hold a 16 to 16 tie at the end of this period. In the second frame George and Sheridan racked up ten straight points for the Junior College but Stretch Galli came back with six points to get the Kittens back in the ball game. VJC led at half time by a score of 29 to 24.

KITTENS FALL BEHIND

In the third period the Capital City boys scored fourteen points while all the Kittens could manufacture were two field goals, one by Ratti, the other by McCarthy. This gave the Hilltoppers a 43 to 28 lead which enabled them to coast in the last frame and walk off with the 53 to 38 victory.

Guy George led the victors with 19 points and he was closely followed by his teammate Sheridan who hit the hoop for 16. For the Kittens Ratti connected for 18 to take high honors for them. McCarthy and Grant followed the great Kittens guard with eight apiece.

Sports Parade Of Yesteryears . . .

The first in a series of southern baseball trips, which is still carried on to this day, was started in the spring of 1892. Some colleges have been made synonymous with their athletic teams. Minnesota and football; Purdue and basketball; Vermont in the years 1892 and 1893 made itself synonymous with baseball as a result of the remarkable teams they organized.

The 1892 UVM team won all the games it played on the southern trip except those which were scheduled with National League teams. After UVM defeated Johns Hopkins, the manager of the losing team called the Vermonters the Champions of New England. While in Washington, where the Catamounts defeated George Washington University 8 to 5, the team was received and entertained by Senator Proctor of Vermont. The Senator extended the boys an extreme privilege when he gave the team a private reception with President Harrison. The following comment was printed in the Washington Post in regard to the Vermont team: "These ball players are a stalwart set of young players, whose brawn and athletic abilities speak well for the quality of Green Mountain air." While on the southern trip UVM also defeated Fordham 4 to 0, and the University of Virginia 10 to 1.

Cats Annihilate Syracuse

In May of that same year UVM soundly trounced Syracuse in two run away defeats with scores of 21 to 3 and 27 to 1. The UVM batters compiled 17 hits in the first game and slammed out 23 in the second contest. Syracuse was limited to 2 hits in the first and only 1 in the second game.

In June the team added more to its growing fame by beating Union 6 to 1, Cornell 9 to 5, Yale 8 to 1, Brown 4 to 1, Wesleyan 7 to 6. The game with Harvard was called in the second inning with the Crimson leading by 2 to 0.

Vermont received the following high praise from the Boston Globe, "The UVM baseball team of Burlington is playing as strong ball as any college team in the country, and the recent work shows that they are in the same class with Harvard and Yale."

Livingston, Pierce And Niemann Share UVM Scoring Honors

In the eleven games played thus far this season, versatile Hammy Livingston leads the University of Vermont Catamounts in individual scoring.

Livingston has played in all eleven games and has scored 37 field goals and 31 foul shots for a total of 105 points. This gives Hammy an average of 9.5 points per game. The aggressive Catamount guard is closely followed by slim Kenny Pierce who had held the lead in scoring since the start of the season. The Montpelier star has 41 field goals and 21 free throws to make him only two points below Livingston with a 103 total and a 9.4 average.

Npt far behind the leaders in third place is Big Al Niemann who has scored 98 points in eleven games. The rugged Vermont center, who usually spends most of the game struggling for rebounds, has been good for 35 goals from the floor and 28 foul tries to give him an average of 8.9 per game and practically assure him of hitting the century mark against Norwich tonight.

In game averages, Captain Eddie Kotlarczyk ranks fourth with an 8.6 average. "Hi Eddie" has played in only seven games but has scored a total of 23 field goals and 14 charity tosses for 60 points. George Henderson completes the top five in scoring, having rung up 83 points in eleven games for a 7.5 average.

Completing the Catamount scoring for the season Art Collier has 33 points, "Googer" Durkin who has participated in but four games, has 19 points, and Gene York and Pat Farma are tied with 17 points for the season.

The Evansmen are undefeated in state competition having conquered both Norwich and Middlebury once each. However, the Knights from St. Michael's will be out to stop them in next week's encounter. In total games won and lost Vermont also leads the state colleges with a six and five record. St. Michael's has won four while losing nine Norwich has won only three out of ten games, and Middlebury is deep in the cellar with only two wins in eleven games.

However, St. Michael's is much better represented in state scoring averages. Joe Brennan of the Knights leads the flock with 125 points in 13 games for an average of 9.6. Next comes Dean, also from St. Mike's, and Livingston who each have a 9.5 average. Dean leads Ham in scoring though with a total of 123 points. Yankowski of St. Mike's also tops the Vermont ace in scoring with 107 counters, but has an average of only 8.2. Pierce is next in line and the only other player in the four schools to have better than a nine point average is O'Connor from Norwich who has scored 83 points in nine games for 9.2 point average.

The Catamounts are not quite up to par in points scored and points scored against. In the eleven games played to date they have scored a total of 572 points for an average of 52 points per game. The opposition however, has outdone the Evansmen by also having scored 574 points in the eleven games.

Track Squad Limbers Up In Gym For Spring Meets

Three of Last Season's Stars Are Missing From Sixty Good Prospects

The first call for track and field practice was met by a large response from sixty prospective team members. At present slightly over thirty men have been working out since the first call which was announced on January 12. In a few weeks Coach Archie Post expects that the majority of those who signed up will be over at the indoor track and in the cage every day of practice to start the intensive exercise and limbering up that is needed. It takes from six to eight weeks to get in shape for the meets, which are not as far off as one might expect. It would please Archie if more men would report faithfully every day for practice instead of once or twice a week as is so often the case. Many men put off their conditioning until just a few weeks before the first meet only to find the going too tough when they attempt to win a place on the team at the time trials. Constant and serious practice would have given them a better chance to making a showing. The late spring, which is a characteristic of Vermont, is a serious handicap for the coach and the team, because the indoor track does not tone up the muscles and the form required for the cinder path. Too often old man winter hangs on until late in March and early April to prevent ample time for outside work before the first few meets. The better one can get himself in shape before the ground is hard enough to go outside the better the chances will be for winning meets and piling up points.

Only three keymen will be missing from last year's squad. Bill McIntyre, who was the biggest point collector for the team last season, has left for the foreign service. Mal Eddy has graduated and Bill Long has dropped out of school. All three played an important part in the sprints and replacements will have to be found. Several men are available but their abilities are unknown. In the weights McIntyre did his share of discus and javelin work, but Dick Evans and John Phillips are expected to fill this gap. Stan Ursprung will handle the shot-putting duties. Bob Perkins is already reported to be in fairly good shape for his post at pole vaulting. Bob St. Gelais will probably carry the burden in the broad jumping department. Irv Becker is back for another year of displaying his high jumping prowess. For the 220 and 440 Archie is pinning his hopes on Stan Bryden and Leonard Paul. The half mile position will be filled by Duncan McLaren, who came close to bringing his time down to two minutes last year. In the longer distances of one and two miles the standouts of last year's team, Earle Randall and John Bel-lows, will use their stamina to support the team. Dick Nostrand will probably hold down his spot again at striding over the hurdles. The lack of sprinters presents a problem in the 440 relay team. but the huge turnout of candidates should produce four able men to carry the baton for the Catamounts.

A large freshman squad is expected and from all indications UVM will be back to a prewar standing intrack and field within a year or two, as a good many of the men have had track experience in high school.

To help alleviate the problem of getting enough competition to season his team Coach Post has arranged two informal meets with Middlebury for the first few weeks of April. The Interfraternity Meet will be held March 5, 6, and 13 at the indoor track in the gym. The large group of new pledges should help to make this a closely contested affair. The athletic department has announced the track schedule for the coming season, which begins late in April.

Schedule:

- April 24 Bowdoin (here)
- May 1 Colby (here)
- May 8 Champlain (here)
- May 15 E.I.C.A.A. Meet at Worcester, Mass. (tentative)
- May 29 Middlebury

W. A. A.

The first Co-ed Recreation Night was held at Southwick on Thursday evening, February 5. About fifty people attended to make their selection of a variety of amusements. There was a choice of card games, piano playing, and just conversation in the lounge, square and social dancing in the ballroom, volley ball, badminton, ping-pong, darts, and shuffleboard in the gym. Eventually, however, all feet seemed inclined toward the ballroom and the entire group settled down to following the calls of square dancing.

Co-ed Night is an experiment planned by the W.A.A. Council, which, if successful, will become a weekly feature. It is aimed at providing a recreational means by which students and faculty, boys and girls will have a chance to get together for some fun. Dates are allowable, but not necessary, and the evening is free. Miss Euler, of the Women's Physical Education Department, seemed pleased with the turnout, but expressed the hope that more of the faculty would take advantage of future Co-ed Nights.

Student Government Notes

February 5, 1948

Pres. Harry Miele called the meeting to order at 4.06. The secretary's report was read and accepted.

Prof. Larry Gardner of the Physical Education Department appeared before the council to emphasize the right of college students to use the ice skating rink. Since the hockey team has precedence, a schedule of practice and game times will be prepared, together with a schedule of free periods. Downtown people have no authority or priority over the use of the rink, and it is the duty of students or faculty members to report those who monopolize or violate skating privileges.

Harry Miele reported that action is being taken to provide "no-smoking" signs for the Waterman study rooms. He also announced that the study rooms cannot be made available on Sundays because of the lack of sufficient janitor service. The north study room is open until 6:00 p.m. on Saturdays; the south room closes at noon.

Miss Barney, supervisor of the University store, has informed Harry that drugs may be provided for students at retail prices slightly higher than those downtown. A list of desired articles is being drawn up.

It was reported that a meeting of executive council and Student Court representatives resulted in revision of the Student Court constitution. As altered, it will be presented to President Millis for approval, published in the CYNIC, evaluated by the executive council and finally offered for the vote of the student body.

President Millis has given administrative sanction to the plan to secure special bus rates for U.V.M. students. Lucille Wetherby will write a letter including the requests of Student Government, which will be presented by Proctor Page to the president of the bus Company.

In regard to the CYNIC controversy, Harry Miele stated that an interview of senior staff members revealed that the Publications Board had formally approved the final co-editors and that the new staff had accepted its "streamlined" structure by a vote of four to two. Al Pratt offered a thorough review of the duties of each staff member, concluding with the hope that the council would demand through the Publications Board a revival of the old staff set-up. Tom Hayes questioned the authority of the council over the policies of the CYNIC. Ralph Conant and John Adams spoke up in support of the judgment of the old staff, and implied that a co-editorship, though requiring tact and careful observation, could be successful. With the council fairly evenly divided on the issue, Ed Costello made the motion that beginning Wednesday, February 11, the new CYNIC staff publish eight issues of the paper, that a committee of three council members be appointed to study the matter during that time, and that at the end of the period a consultation be held with the co-editors and business manager to decide the set-up for the remainder of this year and a permanent policy for future staff appointments. The motion was seconded by Stan Ursprung and carried with one dissenting vote. Al Pratt, Peter Haslam, and Ed Costello were appointed to the committee.

For the purpose of unifying student funds by shifting authority from the University treasurer to the student treasurer, Al Pratt moved that a committee be appointed to determine the facts regarding U.V.M. Students' control over the allocation of Kake Walk funds. At present the Kake Walk Committee receives no funds from Student Government. The motion was seconded by Ed Costello and carried. The chair appointed Jane Atwood and Norman Dennis.

Ralph Conant, former business manager of the CYNIC, requested the council's consideration of the salary for the present business manager. He pointed out that often fifteen hours per week are required to carry out necessary duties. Tom Hayes questioned the need for consideration since the former executive council had reviewed the case and had acted upon it negatively. Al Pratt moved that an investigating committee of three council members be appointed and that one of the appointees be an ex-member of the former council. The motion was carried, having been seconded by Bob Perkins. Mary Babbitt, Lucille Wetherby, and Tom Hayes received the appointments.

Curtis Mosher opened the meeting to discussion of W.S.S.F. A motion that all discussion be postponed until the next meeting was made by Ed Costello, seconded by Danny Burke, and carried.

Ed Costello moved that Mr. Kingsley be approached on the possibility of using one of the study rooms from 4.00 to 6.00 on Thursday afternoons for council meetings to enable greater student attendance. The motion was seconded by Tom Hayes, amended by Al Pratt in favor of Harry Miele's making the request, seconded by Bob Perkins, and carried. Robert Condon suggested better publication of the time and place for council meetings.

Tom Hayes' motion for adjournment at 5.45 was sounded by Peter Haslam and carried. Respectively submitted,

The office has on file credentials for each student containing pertinent information and letters of reference from professors, administrative heads and others which are available to the graduate at all times. If after leaving school the graduate decides that he wants a new job he has only to write in to the office and his credentials will be forwarded. Otherwise new job prospects will be published in Alumni News and by diligent personal contact.

These facilities are handled by Dr. Lange who is assisted by Mrs. Virginia C. Allen, senior psychometrist, and Deborah S. Eddington, junior psychometrist, wife of William T. Eddington. It may be mentioned that the various measurement tests sponsored by this office are utilized by the northern Vermont State Administration and are available to non-college residents as well.

Kake Walk Campaigns Move Into Full Swing

Delta Psi's, Phi Delts, Sig Nus, And Owls Enter Candidates

Seven Outstanding Students Vie For Top Campus Honors; Vote Wednesday

The four stalwart candidates for Kake Walk King are being sponsored by the following fraternities: Wendy Barwood—Owls; Reg. Linsenmeir—Phi Delta Theta; Doug Riddel—Delta Psi; and Sherman Sprague—Sigma Nu.

Wendy Barwood

Candidate Wendy Barwood needs no introduction to the upperclassmen on our campus. He is a graduate with honors from Hanover High School in Hanover, N. H. In high school he earned letters in three major sports. In his first year at U. V. M., Wendy broke into sports by playing on the varsity baseball team. Since then he has continued in athletics and has also been very active as an officer and member of the Lambda Iota fraternity. He is a member of the Canterbury Club.

Wendy's greatest ability, no doubt, lies in the field of hockey, where he has been a standout player all season as center on the first line.

Reg Linsenmeir

Reg was born April 25, 1925, in Burlington, Vt. He attended the public schools and graduated from Burlington High where he was a letterman in football, basketball, and baseball for three years. The Navy beckoned and he saw service for two years, 20 months of which were spent in the Pacific with the Amphibious forces. After being discharged from the service he returned to his native state and entered the University in September, 1946.

Reg is a member of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity and besides being active in inter-fraternity athletics found time to earn his varsity letter in football his freshman year.

He has participated in numerous campus activities, one of the latest, his stalwart performance as master of ceremonies in the Vermont Varieties Show last fall.

Doug Riddel

Doug Riddel is a member of the class of '49 and his home town is Barre, Vt. He is a graduate of Spaulding High School where he won 3 letters in basketball, baseball and football. He entered U. V. M. in the class of '44 when he also played freshman basketball. Doug spent 3 years and 10 months in the Marine Corps, receiving his training at Pensacola, Fla. He was discharged as a First Lieutenant after missions over China, Iwo, Okinawa, Guam, and Japan. In 1946 he returned to U. V. M. taking up the business course. Doug is active in intramural sports, played varsity football in '47, and is a member of the Masonic order.

Sherman Sprague

That really good looking guy—yeah, there in the tux—is Sherman Sprague, a junior, from Barre. Sherm came to UVM from Villanova College, in the fall of 1946, following a two-year hitch in Uncle Sam's Navy.

Sherm is a member of the Student Government Executive Council, and is active in campus activities, but he always finds time for his favorite hobbies (very kindly indeed) wine, women (with limitations) and song. His varied career has carried him to many of the intriguing spots in the world—from Broad Street to Beacon Hill—from Brooklyn to Battery Park. With this man-of-the-world background; a year at Villanova; and his stay here at Vermont, Sherm is quite capable of satisfying your desire for an outstanding and popular king at this fifty-first Kake Kalk.

Sherm is enrolled in the Agricultural Economics curriculum, and tentatively plans to work in economics after graduation. He is a member of Alpha Zeta, and a brother in Sigma Nu Fraternity.

Doris Holmberg

As a senior and future alum, rather than leaving a building full of classrooms and termite to the scholarly and eager students of U. V. M., I am making my last will and testament:

I bequeath:

To the freshmen—heat for Coolidge Hall and priority in activities.

To the sophomores—unlimited cuts and mail delivery to ten o'clock classes.

To the juniors—silent alarm clocks and time to enjoy the pleasures of upperclassmanship.

To the seniors—guaranteed positions with Hollywood salaries.

To the School in General:

1. A hot foot reminder for profs when the ten-of-bell rings.

2. Plush bleachers in Memorial Auditorium.

Esther Havens

"Did you ever see a queen walking?" Yes, you have, walking down the corridors of Waterman. Everyone has seen Esther Havens; she's that sparkling blue-eyed, vivacious, captivating blonde, she's Miss Santa Claus, she's a Sophomore Aide, a "Sweet Alpha Chi Girl" and she is your Kake Walk Queen.

3. A system of reservations for seats in the soda fountain.

4. A special hint course to the librarians on how to procure books published later than 1900.

5. Delivery of '48 Ariel within the next five years.

6. Supreme Kake Walks this year and in those to come.

Carol Farmer

I intend to import 900 polar bears from the Antarctica and an identical number of kangaroos from Australia. The two species will be cross-bred with the result that a large fur-bearing albino animal of a new species will emerge to carry students to classes in perfect comfort on sub-zero mornings.

Forty-three bull lions will be sent from Tanganika and will be installed in the Y.M.C.A. swimming pool as soon as the water is drained. Recalcitrant professors will be tossed into their yawning jaws. If there are no complaints the lions will be removed and malt and vinous beverages will be piped in.

All BMOCs and "big timers" will be given jewel studded motorcycle belts and a bow tie that lights up. To this will be attached a small charge of dynamite.

Selwyn James, IRC Speaker, Promotes Spirited Discussion At Open Lecture

At an open lecture Tuesday evening, the I. R. C. presented Selwyn James, formerly of the New York Times. Attendance was small, but enthusiasm ran high throughout the discussion, which continued until after eleven o'clock.

Mr. James, often cynical, expressed his views on most of the important issues of the day, including the Marshall Plan, Yankee Imperialism, Russia's attitude toward the United States and England, the Middle Eastern oil situation and the partition of Palestine. His main points were that:

(1) The Marshall Plan's passage uncut is the only hope for European recovery and that its merits are not as a force against communism, but as a means for reconstruction.

(2) The United States is definitely imperialistic now. We are seeking bases for defense and attack in a future war and we are maintaining governments friendly to us by means of the all-powerful American dollar. When popular governments gain control in such countries as Greece and Arabia, the U. S. will have many enemies where there were formerly friends.

(3) The United States and Russia are both thinking along the same lines, through fear and distrust, spending time and effort mainly for protection against each other. We make no more pretense of altruistic motives behind our actions. The military are gaining an undesirable control over governments all over the world. The big countries are all playing the same game of power politics now and none is advancing the peace one inch.

(4) Neither the U. S. State Department nor England backed the Palestine partition sincerely, and at present England is doing her best to see that the division will be unenforceable, and that the Jews will be left no adequate means of defence when the British troops withdraw.

(5) New methods of warfare make present diplomatic relations completely out of date. World federation is a wonderful idea but rather unrealistic. If trends continue and countries keep on talking of and preparing for war, eventually it will come. There is no evidence that it will be started by the Russian side, and when it does come it will be much more destructive and terrible than people can as yet imagine.

Gala Crowd Attend "Leap Year" Dance

The Kappa Sigs "Leap Year Dance" better known as the Bowery Brawl became the answer for "how to obtain new furnishings for the Kappa Sig House." With the profits, which were over $150, these "eager beavers" intend to re-model their abode so that even they themselves will scarcely recognize it.

At Saturday night's dance, which was given in the Waterman Lounge and soda fountain with the Mikemen furnishing the music, a gala crowd was present.

The highlight of the evening was the talent show presented by the Kappa Sigs. This included a quartet composed of Bob French, Gene York, Base Ferber, and Bob Ferriter. These Sinatras sang their own version of the "Whiffenpoof Song" and "Sweet Sixteen."

In addition to this a "Truth or Consequences" quiz show with Professor Sprague the "quiz master," was given. Two couples participated in this event giving the original radio program competition.

Chaperones for the dance were Dean Douglass of the Education Department and Professor Daggett of the Language Department, and Mrs. Daggett.

Gay decorations of "cafe style" tables with a numerous number of bottles (not coke either), colored napkins, and candles gave the soda fountain a more appropriate atmosphere.

Masquerade Schedule

9.50 Welcome speech—Phil Robinson
10.00 Procession by King and Queen
10.30-11.00 WCAX Radio Broadcast
11.00-11.30 Intermission
11.45 Costume Judging
12.15-1.30 Dancing (if possible)

Skits, Radio Broadcast Distinguish Campaigns

Campaigns for Kake walk King and Queen got off with a bang Thursday night at midnight, when candidates were officially announced, and posters extolling the virtues of each candidate were exhibited around the campus. But this year there will be more than posters. At the W.A.A. Carnival tonight skits advertising the candidates will be presented at Southwick.

Next Tuesday night, starting at 11.15 p.m., students may hear their candidates take to the air as they broadcast over station WCAX. Earlier the same night more skits will be presented between halves of the St. Michael's-Vermont game. Voting, to be conducted by Boulder and Mortar Board, will be held next Wednesday from 8-5 in the Waterman.

So far the Independents, two sororities, and four fraternities have entered candidates. They are: For King—Sigma Nu, Sherm Sprague; Phi Delta Theta, Reg Linsenmeir; the Owls, Wendy Barwood; Delta Psi, Doug Riddel. For Queen—Kappa Alpha Theta, Doris Holmberg; Alpha Chi Omega, Esther Havens; and the Independents, Carol Farmer.

Doris Holmberg

Doris is one of our most glamorous and versatile seniors, hailing from New Rochelle, N. Y. She is a member of Mortar Board, and has just surrendered the position of Personnel Editor of the CYNIC. As a sophomore she was a member of the Executive Council of Student Government and her junior year was Art Editor of the Ariel.

An English major and valuable member of Kappa Alpha Theta, with the prospect of graduation looming in the not too distant future. Doris hopes to delve into the mysteries of the magazine world.

Carol Farmer

Tall, svelte Carol is a member of the class of 1950 and comes to U. V. M. from General Burgoyne's old stamping grounds at Stillwater, N. Y., a mere rifle's shot from Albany.

Flaxen-haired Carol is an independent candidate sponsored by admirers who want to have a truly lovely queen for the 1948 Kake Walk and those who have an eye for remarkable beauty. She is active in W.A.A., the Spanish Club and is now working on the Ariel Staff.

A lovely woman she loves winter sports, is a charming conversationalist and is noted for her poise and even disposition. A representative American dream.

Esther Havens

Born in Springfield, Mass., Esther Havens is now a resident of the Queen City, where she graduated from Burlington High. Her activities include S.C.A., W.A.A., and the University choir. She is also a member of Alpha Chi Omega and Sophomore Aides. Earlier this winter Esther was urged to enter, as the Kiwanis Club contestant, a city-wide contest, in which she won the title "Miss Santa Claus" and a trip to New York City. Esther is a true Burlingtonian whose twin brothers and an older brother also attend the University.

LENTEN SERVICES

On Wednesday afternoons at 5 p.m. during Lent there will be a half-hour service in the Little Chapel under the auspices of the Student Christian Association. All students interested in using the Lenten period to strengthen their spiritual awareness are invited to share in these meetings. Student leaders will conduct the service; short Lenten meditations will be given by leaders whose names will be announced each week.

FOUR ON A CADAVER . . .

By RICH HARPER '48

We've had several good suggestions about this column, both friendly and threatening, and the latest was to ask just where we got such a title. The whole thing rather had us puzzled for some time, because try as we would, we could never decide where the idea originated from in the first place. It all seemed rather prosaic when you stop to think about it, to entitle a column "P. S. . . ." whereas some helpful soul suggested that we might as well call it "T. S. . . ." and be done with the whole problem. Just the other day we got in the company of some of the medics, and in the normal course of the conversation, which usually follows a rather interesting path, some one used the expression "four on a cadaver." That's all we needed. For several days now that one expression has stuck with us like a faithful old dog, and try as we may, we can't quite shake it off. All of which is a roundabout way of explaining our new title for the column, and if nothing else it may help to prove that variety's the spice of life, to coin a new phrase. In future editions if you run across a column entitled "Hackings from an Old Hacker," you'll know we took a turn for the worse. . . .

We paid a little visit to the new Director of the University Libraries, Mr. Sidney Smith, just the other day, and had a most enjoyable as well as instructive time of it. At the moment of our arrival, Mr. Smith was to be found buried in the depths of the Billings Library, calmly meditating over the endless stacks of old newspapers, old periodicals, and just generally old stuff that has been relegated to the basement. It's really quite a fascinating experience to rub elbows with a copy of the New York Times which may well date back to the 1860s and probably carries a hot story of the carryings-on of Abe Lincoln and his cronies. As part of our incidental information picked up, we learned from our confidante and guide, Mr. Smith, that the papers appearing prior to the Civil War were usually of a rag content, and consequently, can lie around on library shelves and look a great deal healthier than the wood-pulp papers which came later and seem to just go all to pieces. Perhaps we should have drawn some analogy between this and the fundamental differences between the modern generation and our rough and ready forebears, but we decided against it. We were introduced to one room, well secluded in one corner of the Billings basement, which immediately struck us with its possibilities for being remodeled into a first-class tap room. The atmosphere is something you would work years to recapture any where else. However, our suggestions along this line seemed to fall on deaf ears. Having become the spiritual daddy to the some 200,000 books here at the University, Mr. Smith was quiet ready to acknowledge that there was a definite job of filing this number of books, and generally keeping them in a place accessible to the students. Then too, there is the ever present task of culling out those very dead issues which have long outlived their usefulness—all of which we gladly leave for better minds than ours to puzzle over.

Just to get some idea of what a tremendous undertaking it is to maintain a library in a large university, we looked up some figures, and found to our complete amazement that it is estimated that 2040, the Yale Library will need in the neighborhood of 6,000 miles of shelves to house their books, and will have a staff of some 6,000 people all happily filing and cataloging. We don't exactly expect to be around when this great day comes, but we did think that perhaps this little bit of information might arch a few eyebrows around here. The most intriguing thing we heard of on our visit, was the news of a practically revolutionary movement in the library business. The Microcard Company is preparing to market a new type of index card which is similar to the present 3 x 5 inch card, has the usual informative data on the face of it, but on turning it over, one is surprised—if not horrified—to find that there is the actual book reproduced on microfilm. Any one blessed with about 20/10 visions might be able to read the book right there and then, but that's not quite the whole idea of the thing. Any library equipped with this system of Microcards, would also have available a number of gadgets similar to the old magic-lantern that your parents were thrilled to pieces with, and by simply putting the card in the projector, a photograph of the book, one page at a time, is thrown on a screen. Our immediate reaction was that the library should photograph its entire collection, and then throw the books to the winds. But, as with so many other things, there is one fly in the ointment, and it's a good-sized fly—the whole thing costs money. It is estimated at present that the cards will go for about 20 cents apiece, but that will be only when

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION SCHEDULE

Examinations for the Winter Quarter will be held the week of Monday, March 15. Four examination periods, each two hours in length, have been scheduled for each day—except Saturday, when three periods have been established.

EACH STUDENT SHOULD CHECK THE SCHEDULE CAREFULLY FOR CONFLICTS. REPORT IN WRITING TO THE REGISTRAR'S OFFICE IMMEDIATELY.

1. IF YOU HAVE TWO EXAMINATIONS SCHEDULED FOR THE SAME BLOCK.
2. IF YOU HAVE FOUR EXAMINATIONS SCHEDULED IN THE SAME DAY.

With a short examination period necessary under the quarter system, it is not possible to avoid three examinations a day for every student, particularly those who are irregular or who are enrolled in other than the usual patterns of courses.

However, if it is discovered that a sizable group of students in a given course have three examinations in one day, an attempt will be made to adjust the schedule by changing the time of the course involved. In such cases, the instructor should notify the Registrar immediately.

Instructors are not authorized to change examinations from the time scheduled to an earlier date in Dead Week. However, if the class and instructor can locate a more desirable time within the schedule so that no student has a conflict and 100% of the class desires the change, the adjustment will be made providing the instructor notifies the Registrar before Friday, February 20, at 12:00 p.m. At that time, the Final Schedule will be established, and no changes can be made thereafter.

BE SURE TO CHECK THE FINAL SCHEDULE FOR CHANGES WHEN POSTED.

Kake Walk King Aspirants State Varied Collegiate Platforms As Student Body Elections Draw Near

Sherman Sprague

Sherm Sprague will give this campus and its immediate vicinity the order and renovation that it has been lacking for so long. He will start by clapping Uncle Sam and Co., safely behind bars in Burlington's Bastille to ensure the security of students during their stay at Vermont, and Sherm trusts that this will quiet things on the international scene.

For the gals—nights out at their own discretion—enough said? But to add to this—lectures (when we must have them) by Gregory Peck (sans frau).

For the married men—duplex apartments with soundproofing for Juniors or uniorettes.

For those of the male contingent who enjoy a state of single blessedness—a downtown night life to please the most discriminating judge of the art so deftly practiced by Sally Rand et al.

For the men of distinction—Ruppert's to replace this Champlain H<sub>2</sub>O.

For the intelligentsia—no eight o'clock classes; no classes before noon; in fact no classes except on alternating first Mondays of the month.

OK. Here's your chance UVM—swinging with Sprague for King in '48—the only man to reign!

Reg Linsenmeir

If I am elected I guarantee to my loyal supporters a more enjoyable, well rounded, and beneficial life here on campus. My object, of course, is for the benefit of the student group as a whole. The changes will be as follows:

1. The Waterman Starvation Ration Diet will be supplemented by free BEER and CIGARETTES donated by the wealthy faculty of the University.

2. I believe that each freshman supply folder should contain a new deck of cards so that their time in the soda fountain will not be wasted.

3. I realize that the present subsistence allowance is inadequate and consequently I advocate the policy of supplementing the monthly check with four (4) coupons redeemable at the Vt. State Liquor Store.

4. Then for those who are shy but sincere, I plan the immediate removal of the street light in front of Coolidge Hall.

5. I shall endeavor to replace the present 12.30 Saturday night rule for girls with a plan for instituting not a 12.31, 12.32, or 12.33, but a liberal and beneficial 12.35 curfew.

6. I will do away with exams for the few students who don't want them.

7. I guarantee every married veteran a trailer complete with flush toilet, running water, and a mechanical baby sitter.

8. For the short men on campus who wish to take out typical, tall U. V. M.

Doug Riddel

If Doug is elected he promises:

1. A bar in every class room.
2. Standardized crib notes for final exams.

3. Free meals for entire student body at the Waldorf Astoria with transportation provided.

4. Elevators in Waterman run by the Goldwyn girls.

5. Classes to begin Tuesday at 2.00 p.m. and end on Tuesday at 2.15 p.m. Also free cuts for all students.

In conclusion Doug states:

If elected I promise to enforce this platform to the utmost of my ability, as reforms the campus has long needed.

beauties: I will offer a year's supply of Adler Elevator Shoes.

9. I believe in an extensive program of longer and more frequent vacations, but classes for those who request them.

10. And lastly, for each and every student I promise to have the comic strips available a week in advance so that you may keep ahead of Dick Tracy.

From a snack to a meal with a home appeal.

the Microcard Company has gotten into high gear and are turning the things out in mass production. At least we can look forward to seeing the day when we can go to Billings, pick out the cards we want, curl up in a lounge chair, and just watch the show. Maybe we will even be tempted to shed a tear or two for those forgotten days of yore when we had to sit on hard benches, and pour over our thumb-worn books. . . .

All of this may tend to give us the glow of a stuffy old scholar, but just to show you we're still human, we must confess that our latest find in the literary field was E. B. White's "One Man's Meat." It's as funny as any of the stuff that H. Allen Smith writes, and it's better done. We never could write a good book review, but we will say that if you don't find it funny and well worth the time and effort, we'll gladly eat our words. In fact, we'll even go so far as to eat three copies of it while standing on our head on the Ira Allen chapel. . . . We'll be back next week with more incidental information, and among the other stuff, we'll bring you the story of a man who was found walking around the streets at 3 a.m. with a sink in his hands. We've had the yarn for weeks, but never got around to telling it. . . .

That's it for now—be seein' you. . . .

Cats Beat Horsemen 61 to 44 in Dull Game

Livingston Scores 18 Points as Green and Gold Play Worst Game

The University of Vermont Catamounts racked up their third straight State Conference win last Wednesday night as they defeated an incompetent Norwich hoop team by a score of 61 to 44. The game was played at the Memorial Auditorium before a poor showing of Vermont sports followers, and even the small crowd was dissatisfied with the show put on by the Cats.

Dull First Half

During the first twenty minutes the two clubs did everything but play good basketball. Norwich fought hard and kept the score close as the Catamounts shooting was way off and their ball-handling was slipshod. The game see-sawed back and forth in the first ten minutes as Vermont could not find the range on even a fair percentage of their shots. Livingston kept the Cats out in front as they took a 19 to 14 lead at the fifteen-minute mark. As Norwich started to press again and as the Green and Gold tossed heaves from far out, law of average shots connected to keep the Cats in front at the half by a score of 26 to 22.

In the first four minutes of the final half both teams continued to play haphazard ball. With Vermont holding a 28 to 25 lead the offense of both clubs started to click for the first time. Pierce went in for a lay-up on a nice pass from Durkin, Colo and Daley both scored to put Norwich out in front, but Livingston came back with a long, arching set shot and a foul to give Vermont a 33 to 31 lead. After Jake O'Connor tossed in a free throw, Livingston countered again with a neat set shot to make it 35 to 32 as Norwich called time out with twelve minutes remaining in the ball game.

Cats Wake Up

At this point the Evansmen finally came to life and started to pour it on the game but incapable Cadets. Captain Kotlarczyk hit with a set shot. O'Connor scored for the Cadets and Lafayette sank a foul shot to make it 37-35. "Hi Eddie" then hit again, this time with a long net twister and the Cats came to life. Hammy Livingston made good two free throws, Kotlarczyk was hot as he flicked the net with another long set shot, and Durkin scored on a step shot to give the Green and Gold a 46 to 35 lead.

Norwich broke the Cats string when Daley scored a foul shot, but Livingston countered on a fast break. Hammy then committed his fifth personal and left the game with six minutes left to play. Ver-

W. A. A.

Do you girls want to learn a sport that doesn't require a lot of players, a sport that will last, and one that is handy when just you and yours are around? Lorraine Bosworth, manager of the Ping-Pong Club, says she has just the thing for you out at Southwick (on the stage in the gym). Many girls are already taking advantage of the free instruction given every Tuesday and Thursday in Ping-Pong from 3 to 4 o'clock. However, if you don't care for free instruction and for meeting lots of new girls out there, Lorraine says it is all fair and square to pass in six hours of individual credit for W.A.A. points. The present enthusiasm gives this club great hopes so why not go out and join in?

Thompson attempted to keep the Cadets in the ball game with a nice left-handed shot, but then the roof fell in for the Horsemen. Pierce hit with a one hander, Durkin tossed in a nice follow shot, and "Big Al" Niemann salted the game away with two one-hand bucket shots. This gave Vermont a 56 to 38 lead as both coaches installed their second teams. For the second club York, Farma, and Conrad all made good free throws and "Lefty" Collier threw in a going away shot to give the Catamounts 61 points, as the Cadets pulled up to 44 in a roly-poly ending.

For the Evansmen, Livingston and Durkin hit the double figures getting 18 and 11 points respectively. The Cadets only double figure man was Jack Daley who scored 14.

INTERMURAL SKIERS TO COMPETE IN KAKE WALK MEET FRIDAY

The directors have announced that several changes have been made in the interfraternity-sorority ski meet, which will be held on Friday, February 20 on the Tear Drop Trail in Underhill. Because the participants are not "in shape," there will be no cross-country this year. However, both a slalom and a downhill course will be run. The downhill will start in the morning as close to 8.30 as possible in order that the event will be completed by noon. During the lunch hour, the slalom course will be marked so that competition can begin soon thereafter.

Each fraternity and sorority can enter three persons in each event. A cup will be presented to the fraternity and to the sorority which have the highest team totals for both events combined.

The directors will have plenty of wide, open spaces available for all spectators. Bill Gilbertson, who is in charge of Kake Walk sports, requests all participants to be at the proper station at the proper time.

Evansmen Encounter University of Mass. At Amherst Saturday

UVM's up and down Catamounts leave this afternoon for Amherst for a spherical engagement with a not too potent but scrappy University of Massachusetts five. The Red Devils have a team which averages well over six feet, led by big John O'Neil, who stands six-four. This aggregation, boasting of seven lettermen who gave Vermont a good game last year, could easily slap the Cats down Saturday unless Kotlarczyk and company use the basketball ability everyone hears so much about.

However, Coach Evans is not a bit gloomy about the game, comparative scores with Norwich, Connecticut and New Hampshire give Vermont a slight edge. University of Massachusetts has but three victories in eleven starts, falling before Northeastern, Trinity, Maine, Fort Devens, Boston Univ., Springfield, Connecticut and New Hampshire. Their three victories are at the expense of Bates, W.P.I., and Norwich.

Cats Looking for Victory

To date the UVM cagers have six wins and five setbacks (not counting Wednesday's game with Norwich). Their victories include wins over New Hampshire and Norwich, both of whom gave the Mass. boys considerable trouble. Vermont beat New Hampshire while Mass. lost to them, which gives a fair indication how things will turn out—maybe.

Frosh Take Return Match From B. H. S. By 51 to 35 Score

Avenging an early season defeat inflicted by the "Blue and White" of Burlington High School, the UVM Frosh easily defeated the Seahorses 51-35 on Tuesday evening.

The game was played in the confines of the Vermont gym and the Green and Gold felt right at home from the opening whistle.

After a minute elapsed without a score, Ratti drove through the bucket for a lay-up and the Yearlings remained in the lead from this point on. The Kittens, led by Grant and Galli, racked up thirteen straight points before Burlington's Joe Anger hit with a push shot. The first quarter round Coach Buck Hard's five trailing 15-2.

The tempo of the game increased considerably during the second quarter, and the high school lads scored fourteen points to the freshman's nine. It was 24-16 at the half.

However, the lead that Coach Norm Strassburg's five had acquired during the first half was too great to be overcome by B.H.S. and the Kittens held on to this lead to cop the win.

Grant was high for the Frosh with 17, followed by "Stretch" Galli with 11 counters.

Interfraternity Bowling Enters Home Stretch; ATO's Take Lead

Kappa Sig's and Phi Sig's Battle For Second Place in Torrid Alley League

Top position in the interfraternity league again changed hands this past week as the ATOs overhauled the Kappa Sigs. With only a few matches left on the schedule the standings look something like this:

Team	Won	Lost	Pts.
Kappa Sig	6	1	40
Phi Sig	5	1	33
Sigma Phi	4	2	28
Sigma Nu	4	3	27
Phi Delt	4	2	26
SAE	2	5	17
Delta Psi	1	5	9
Owls	0	6	0

On Tuesday, February 3, the undefeated Phi Sigs clashed with the ATOs and went down to their first defeat by the margin of 1061 to 1011. High single and doubles went to George Stanley with 126 and 222. In the past two years the league leading ATOs have been the only team able to stop the hard bowling Phi Sigs.

The same evening the league doormat Owls forfeited to the Sigma Nus. On the opposite alleys the Phi Delt rode over SAE 959 to 893. Bill Dempsey of winners took the doubles with 218. Constantino of SAE garnered 131 on final string to take one point for losers.

On February 5, the only match was between Sigma Nu and ATO. In a close first string the ATOs pulled it in the second to win handily 1042 to 1011. George Stanley once again took single and double honors with 124 and 222. Interest in the independent league seems to be at a minimum with only a few teams showing up for the match. Looking at the scores of those matches that have been rolled the standings of teams are like this:

Team	Won	Lost
Claggett	2	1
Buckham	1	1
Wills	0	1
Chittenden	0	2
Rosemount	0	2

On January 30, Wills was defeated by the league leading VIP 986 to 893. Rosemount for the losers was high with 126 and 226. Claggett and Chittenden finished it out with Claggett behind Shepard with 914 to 854. Shepard capped off honors with 130 and 224.

CANTERBURY CLUB

The popular North Avenue toboggan slide was the scene of a Canterbury Club party last Sunday evening. Members of the group enjoyed an exciting evening sliding and skating on the rink across the road.

Meeting at St. Paul's Parish House at 7.00 p.m., the group drove out to give their three toboggans a workout. The unexpected steepness of the slide, the darkness and the cold added to the thrill. After several strenuous hours the group retired to the Parish House for coffee and doughnuts. Members of the newly-formed Canterbury Club Vestry cooperated with the Council to make the evening a success.

King and Queen Are Crowned By Elliot Lawrence At Ball

Carol Farmer, dressed in a black, changeable taffeta dress, square neckline with tiny shoulder sleeves and full-gathered skirt, and Doug Riddel, Delta Psi favorite, were crowned 1948 University of Vermont Kake Walk Queen and King at the masquerade at the Memorial Auditorium where a capacity crowd gathered to see this high-light event of the Kake Walk week-end.

The events of the evening were started by Phil Robinson who welcomed those who came. The procession by the King and Queen started at 10.00 p.m., the announcements and music were broadcast over WCAX from 10.30 to 11.00. The costume judging took place at 11.45. The judges were Miss Carrie Power, Miss Esther Knokes, Miss Muriel J. Hughes, Miss Mary-Alice Kelly and Francis P. Colburn.

The crowning of the King and Queen was performed by Elliot Lawrence whose band furnished music for the affair. Elliot, not so long ago a college student himself enjoys the reputation of being the youngest band leader in the nation. Only twenty-two years old the music of this youthful pianist and his band have been heard on every major radio station in the country. He started his spectacular career in the summer of 1946 through an engagement at the Pennsylvania Hotel in New York city.

Effective and original decorations of the auditorium lent themselves to the enjoyment of the evening. The center of the stage at the west end of the hall was converted into a trapezoid which slanted as a sound box for the orchestra. The two side walls, which slanted toward each other to the back wall were covered with white crepe paper, as was the base front of the stage. On the right wall was the black silhouette of a boy skiing. On the left wall was the black silhouette of a girl skiing. Their goal was the 51st zest of the occasion. Credit for decorations goes to Robert Herriott, chairman and his committee.

Chaperones were Pres. and Mrs. John S. Millis, Dean Mary Jean Simpson.

Candidates for King and Queen Present Skits at Auditorium

Following the usual Kake Walk tradition, the UVM King and Queen candidates held their minute and a half skits between the halves of the UVM vs. St. Michael's basketball game on Tuesday at the auditorium. Each group who ran a candidate took that opportunity to present their prospective King or Queen to the students of UVM and Burlington, in the most original and spectacular way they could think of. The skits fairly well topped off the hectic campaigns and brought a grand climax to one of the most spirited Kake Walk King and Queen Campaigns in UVM's history.

Leading off the parade of candidates was Sigma Nu's entry Sherman Sprague, introduced by two jokers who seem to have misplaced Mr. Sprague inside a rug which had been sent off to the cleaners. And then low and behold the rug was brought back from the cleaners with "Sherm" still intact.

Next in line for presentation was Doug Riddel representing Delta Psi. He was introduced by an old-fashioned chorus line of real men this time, stepping to "Four Leaf Clover," and finally made his grand entrance by way of a jeep driven through a huge paper four leaf clover.

Kappa Alpha Theta's queen, Doris Holmberg was carried in on the shoulders of prospective Kake Walkers. The house lights were darkened with only a spot floodlight to illuminate her. Two baton twirlers heralded the entrance of Miss Holmberg with lighted batons.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon introduced their candidate on the shoulders of the brothers as King of Kake Walk. Two Kake Walkers then strutted to the strains of "Cotton Babes" while King Harry Bolwell saluted them. At this small preview of the Kake Walkers the crowd fairly screamed its approval. King Harry was then carried off to make room for the next aspirant.

Esther Havens was carried by a jeep on top of a float. She wore a blue gown, and was slowly driven around the auditorium waving to her "fans." Esther was sponsored by Alpha Chi Omega sorority. Rod Smith a jovial master of ceremonies tried to sell one of the spectators a cleaner for removing spots, and proceeded to dirty his unlucky volunteer's clothes, to demonstrate the merits of his product. But he never did get very far, as he was interrupted by the entrance of Reg Linsenmeier, Phi Delta Theta's aspirant to the throne.

Carol Farmer another candidate for Queen was ushered in on the arms of two of the better known men on campus. To accompany Carol a tango was performed. Carol was introduced by Tom Hayes, and was sponsored by an independent group of students.

The Owl's King, Wendy Barwood, was escorted by members of his fraternity, in a small vehicle, to the strains of his theme song, "I'm Looking Over the Vermont Campus." The hockey king was introduced by Alan Luce.

The spectators were not allowed in the outer lobby during the half to make way for the campaigners. There was very little confusion with the result the audience were left with a feeling of apprehension as to the final outcome of the election.

Ten Fraternities Enter Candidates For The 51st Walkin' Fo' De Kake

As the strains of "Cotton Babes" fill the hall, all eyes are turned on the darkie couple in spectacular dance costume making their bow to the royal pair in the front. Then to the cheers of the crowd the darkie couple begin the difficult "Walkin' fo' de Kake."

The SAE's were training Marshall Sabens and Bob Billhardt for this year and future years. Sabens' ankle was injured, changing plans.

For ATO this year two inexperienced walkers, Bob Chittick and Dick McGill, both dancing as men, will bring new blood to that fraternity's competition.

Walking for Delta Psi are John Emerson taking the part of the girl, and Bob Ross, that of the boy. This is also that couple's first year at walking.

Royal Dynasty Presides Throughout Big Weekend

Tonight, when the lights are lowered, the king and queen, chosen by the student body, will enter the auditorium with their entire retinue to continue their rule over the 51st Annual Kake Walk. The highest social honors at UVM this year are bestowed upon lovely Carol Farmer and handsome Doug Riddel. These two well-liked crown-aspirants gained the plurality of the 1,759 votes cast in the largest election of the school's history.

Their official duties had a successful start last night at the masquerade ball. Following the crowning by the popular band leader, Elliot Lawrence, the attractive couple joyously reigned over the remaining festivities of the evening.

The flower girls for Queen Carol are her two worthy competitors Esther Havens, a Burlingtonian who was sponsored by the Alpha Chi sorority, and Doris Holmberg, the versatile Theta senior who hails from New Rochelle, N. Y.

Queen Carol, the flaxen-haired beauty, comes to UVM from the old revolutionary battleground of Stillwater, N. Y. Although she is only a sophomore, the queen is well-known throughout campus circles. Carol not only is active in the W.A.A. and Spanish Club, but also is a stalwart member of the '49 Ariel staff.

King Doug is a quiet, unassuming Delta Psi, whose sincerity and honesty have won him a position of high esteem among both his fraternity brothers and his collegiate friends.

Doug was an original member of the class of '44 at UVM, but Uncle Sam beckoned with the result that "the king" spent "nie on" four years with the Marine Corps. Following his share of military over the Pacific, Doug returned to the hill to resume his studies (Class of '48). The Delta is very active in intramural sports, played varsity football in '47, and is a member of the Masonic Order.

So, another king and queen campaign is over. Competition was most keen as usual with all of the candidates highly worthy of the great honor if he or she were selected. With enthusiasm and excitement running at a high ebb, the '48 Kake Walk promises to be another gold page in the annals of Kake Walk history.

Spirit of '48

Throughout the country, all of the universities, both large and small, concentrate the brunt of their social activities within the confines of a week or week-end. The schools of higher learning situated in the north country generally play host to a slew of other institutions at their Annual Winter Carnival. This festivity is the number one event in an overwhelming number of colleges. As one travels through the south and southwest, the importance of the harvest season becomes more and more evident. Universities schedule their campus celebrations to coincide with this picturesque changing of the seasons. Many colleges have their rodeos, some have their regattas, while others have only home-comings or music festivals.

Here at the University of Vermont, we are very proud of our Kake Walk, the holiday season on which we put away our cares and anxieties to pay tribute to the old darkie tradition of walkin' fo' da cake. The Kake Walk fever seems to get a toehold on you during your freshman year and somehow, every time the strains of Cotton Babes float skyward, a tingle ripples up and down your spine.

This is Kake Walk! Through its uniqueness and originality, Kake Walk will long live in the memory of every University of Vermont student. We would not swap our Kake Walk for Pasadena's Parade of Roses. So, when "Joe" Lechnyr, who is conducting the U.V.M. band for the twenty-eighth year tonight, lifts his baton for the opening strains of Cotton Babes and the first of the walkers bow gracefully before the reigning dynasty, each and everyone of you will realize deep down in your heart why Kake Walk continues to be the feature event of the year here at the University of Vermont.

Fable 'n Folly

By John D. Adams

A Fungoidal Fantasy

Being a visitation into the future in order to witness the horrible chaos wrought by the fifty-first Kake Walk held in the black year of 1948.

Ira Scrooge walked slowly along the gloomy, gutted streets in Burlington of the future with his head bowed and his eyes oblivious of the ruined and disordered structures surrounding him. At intervals the natives roused themselves from their drowsiness to stare at him with a gawking curiosity that can only come from a degenerated culture. Ira noticed that the bones they were gnawing were not those of animals but of human beings. He cared little. In his years of wandering he had seen worse, and a few femurs and sternums could not stir his excitement.

He moved silently up the deserted main street pausing occasionally to listen to a maniacal scream break the deathly silence that hung over the city and then continued upward. He finally stopped before a crumbling brick building.

Ira was threading a tortuous trail through the ruins when he suddenly stumbled over a block of marble. He noticed its regular shape and calmly began peeling the membranous decay that stuck to its surface like a grub on a wet stone. Under this slimy scaling appeared the inscription:

Memorial Auditorium
Erected 1_____

Satisfied, he advanced further into the interior stopping at last before a stairway which led to the dank darkness below. He felt his way downward till his feet touched the damp, cold clay that served as the floor in this eerie subterranean haunt. Directly ahead he saw the dimly lit corridor he was to follow. For several minutes he wended his way through these catacombs. He halted near a shaft of light that sliced into the passageway from a room whose door was slightly ajar. Ira peered inside and there seated around a crude table sat three of the most unique characters he had seen in many an eon. The first was a man, a tall man with white hair streaming to his waistline, and seated across from him was a wild-eyed woman whose vicious eyes were reminiscent of some primeval beast. Crouched between these two figures was a whimpering woman who was alternately wailing and sobbing.

Ira recognized them immediately. The man was Hezekiah Billis, the first woman was Lena Dimpleson and the grief-stricken creature was Miss Ging. All were former leaders of UVM in the 20th century. Miss Ging was heard to say "If I had only allowed those boys to serenade" and then she would break into her wailing again. Lena and Hezekiah sat silently throughout the scene.

This degradation had been caused by the episodes that occurred after the 1948 Kake Walk. The festival had run very smoothly until a most fantastic thing happened. The students who were elected King and Queen were forced by the student body to enforce their campaign platforms. Bars were installed in every classroom and soon 90% of the campus succumbed to a violent sort of alcoholism. The young ladies of the campus instead of losing their nights out when they arrived home late were fined and whipped for appearing before five in the morning. The administration and faculty were entirely disregarded in the ensuing disorder and dared not to venture into the streets for fear they would be struck down by unfriendly students. Soon the whole city became involved in this saturnalia and bonded rye and blood flowed freely in the main streets. The orgy spread to other colleges until almost every town and city in the United States was affected. In September the judgment came. A blight of a radioactive nature destroyed the major part of the populace and left the rest mangled and deformed.

It is difficult to adjudge exactly why the UVM students ran rampant in 1948. Some say it was incited by the women who refused to believe the Old Wives tales of Lena Dimpleson and Miss Ging while others contended that it was merely the result of mass dyspepsia contracted in the University mess hall.

Co-Editors Revamp Cynic Senior Staff

Wright, Houston and King Fill Vacated Positions

The CYNIC co-editors take pleasure in announcing new additions to the editorial staff. Due to the resignation of two of the original members, a wholesale revamping has taken place.

Nancy Bachman, Pi Phi spark plug, has been promoted from feature editor to campus editor. Although Nancy is a sophomore, she has been most impressive in her CYNIC duties to date.

A very able replacement, Joyce Wright, has been elevated to fill the position of feature editor. Joyce, who has been on the CYNIC staff for three years, has been very active in campus activities. "Pi Phi" kid lists as her extracurricular functions W.A.A., cheerleading and twirling (a year or two ago), and Home Ec Club.

To fill the gap of sports editor, Gordon Bickford vacated because of a tremendous amount of time CYNIC requires, the co-editors named Sam Houston, of Barre, Vt. Sam, who is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, was sports reporter on the old CYNIC for two years, is on the Athletic Council, Student Government Finance Committee and the Interfraternity Council.

Stan King, a Burlingtonian, is the new photography head. He has been a member of the photography staff for two years so he was unanimously selected to fill the vacancy.

The CYNIC also has two new cartoonists on its staff, Polly McMurdo and Frank Eklund. The Kake Walk figure adjacent to the frontispiece is the work of the former while the cartoon is first in a series by the well-known Delt artist.

Numerous good additions to the porter-scrub chain have been welcomed. Some dead wood has been dropped to make way for the new blood. The senior staff is most confident that the coming year will be outstanding in the annals of this publication.

Inquiring Reporter

Question—What is your conception of the ideal Queen of Kake Walk should be?

SCOTT MAHONEY: First, she should be beautiful, whether she could Kake Walk or not, and second, it would be if she could Kake Walk. She should be the girl with the most universal appeal, versatility, democratic ideals, and a scholarship—someone whom you would be proud to send anywhere as a representative of the University of Vermont. Social graces, personality, and ability to meet people are important—She should be a shining example of what four years at Vermont can do for a person.

PAUL BUTTRICK: Of course she should be attractive, but she should be more than that. She ought to be the girl the most well-rounded personality on campus. She should have at least an average intelligence, and an interest in school work as well as campus and community activities, and she should be friendly, able to be sophisticated and reserved in situation calls for it. (It would be naturally, if she had a car and record collection, both popular and classical.)

LYNN DERRICK: For the last few years the frats and sororities have pushed personality boy for King, emphasizing mostly the "all-around fellow" quality. While that is important, I think that emphasis should be placed on looks, rather than the exclusion of other qualifications with the purpose of giving a balance to both sides of the medal. People who don't know UVM and Kake Walk King will judge by appearances, and the King should measure up to their hopes. He should be very looking and neatly dressed, as well as having a "good fellow" personality. He should participate in a few activities, at least, and be well-liked not only by his own crowd, but by those with whom he works, and with whom he has contact. Of course it is impossible to find a person who completely satisfies everything I do believe people would be happy after the elections to find that their was a handsome man as well as a kid."

Fleeting Glimpses of Fifty-One Gala Years in UVM Kake Walk History

By GLADYS E. NEIBURG

Kake Walk, the highly organized gala event of the University of Vermont, with its ingenious stunts, cleverly costumed masqueraders, the agile and spectacular walkers "fo' de cake" grew out of a "gripe session" of students back in 1893 when a military ball did not come into existence as had been unofficially promised by one Captain Tutherly of the Military Department. It is gently whispered that, strangely, the Military Department was rather unpopular; and Captain Tutherly, in a brave and noble effort to give the department more prestige, promised the military hop which he could not produce. The late Frederick T. Sharpe '95 took matters into his own hands. Things began to hum. Sharpe, a leader in college affairs, proposed to a group of friends that they hold their own dance in their own way. Sharpe, who is described as follows, saw to it that the affair was held the very next day, December 19, 1893—fifty-five years ago. "Sharpe, a genius in all things clownish, gave more than one imitation of a cat fight to residents on the hill who thought they were hearing the real thing." Back in those days when dancing was more than walking to music or gymnastic feats of tossing your partner over your shoulder, the comic section of the 1896 Ariel had a so-called business card aimed to catch the attention of the swanky Cotillion Club on the hill: "T. F. S. Sharpe, Dancing Master. Spacious hall over the chapel."

Sharpe and friends discussed the disappointment caused by the inability of the Military Department to raise its prestige. This "bull session" took place in the "Hash House" as the Commons Hall (the university cafeteria) was known then. The next day there appeared on the bulletin board in the Old Mill, the following poster in Sharpe's handwriting: "Cake Walk in the Loft tonight. All invited."

How the Name Originated

The name was as spontaneous as the event itself. Old timers will remember that walking for the cake was very popular among vaudevillians. Some of the boys in the Hash House "bull session" knew or thought they knew what occurred at Kake Walks so their opinions were accepted. To them it was a celebration at the end of sugar harvest, down South, when darkies dressed up in their best togs and walked in pairs. Those who did it most skillfully, attractively or uniquely were awarded a prize, which was a cake.

Actual walking for the cake did not take place at UVM until 1894. The first event, Sharpe's spontaneous combustion, was in the form of a masquerade dance when all came dressed as darkies. In 1894, the dance was held in the drill hall in the Old Mill. There were so many who attended, and so many winning walkers, that the one cake had to be awarded to several couples.

Opened Doors to Better Spirit

The idea of cake walk caught on at once. According to Dr. "Ned" Randall '95, of Waterville, N. Y., "It was one of those spontaneous ebullitions of high spirits that rarely animated the whole college body." It was sponsored by no one in particular, no class, fraternity, or other group. George P. Anderson '96, of Boston, said that one of the principal reasons why the Kake Walk was so successful was because there was much need at that period for better feeling. There were many groups or fraternities and rivalries were sharp, and sometimes carried too far. The non-fraternities men in college, then a small group, were somewhat neglected figures. The Kake Walk was a happy diversion which tended to break up the spirit of aloofness and opened the doors to better college spirit.

Possibly the college spirits got too exuberant, or maybe the beer trickling down from the keg in the loft into the chapel below, the next day, was the reason why the Kake Walk was banned in 1895. However, in 1896, the faculty permission was procured for a third performance with the understanding that this time there would be good publicity and more restraint. Representatives of the several classes made the arrangements. Greater preparation on the part of the participants took from the affair some of its spontaneity but added to its effectiveness. This and the succeeding Kake Walks were held in the State Armory until 1904. Since then, they have been held in the University Gymnasium or the Memorial Auditorium.

In 1897, "the Kuilud Koon's Kake Walk" was held on a scale far beyond anything before thought of as possible. Specialties replaced the impromptu stunts of previous years. Judges were selected from the faculty and citizens, the hall was decorated, and a goodly crowd gathered. The stunts included the "Hay Hill Football Team," the "DeWolfe Hopper Opera Company," "the Salvation Army," "Chauncey Depew," "Lillian Russell," "Tom Sharkey," and even the doughty Richard Coeur de Lion appeared to delight the audience with conical capers and witty sayings.

It was also at the 1897 Kake Walk that the Master of Ceremonies was dressed as a devil. The YMCA Melodeon was borrowed for the occasion and the devil felt he had to strike or prod it with his pitch fork to make sure it would play, inasmuch as it was a Methodist organ. It was in this same year that Percy Winrich of Boston composed "Cotton Babes" which was later arranged by Band Leader Joseph Lechnyr.

Progress Continuous Since 1897

From 1897, the progress was gradual but continuous even though walkers, at times, diminished down to three or four couples. The impromptu specialties, which had been presented as evidence of youthful high spirits became more and more elaborately conceived and finely rendered stunts with plots, careful costuming and ingenious, often bizarre mechanical effects.

It was in 1904 that a stunt called "Varsity vs. Co-eds" was awarded the coveted cake. However, it aroused the ire of the University women attending to the extent that they all left the hall in a body, some weeping copiously. The stunt in question depicted a mock football game between the men and girls of the college. The men's team wore regulation football uniforms while the 'girls' were costumed in huge hats and flowing veils. Wide lace flounces were visible at the bottoms of their trousers. Time was called at short intervals to allow the 'girls' an opportunity to powder their noses with whisk brooms dipped into a conveniently placed bucket of corn starch.

It was in the previous year, 1903, that the fraternities presented their walkers and put on the stunts. The regimental band furnished the music. The week of George Washington's Birthday was officially designated as Kake Walk time.

In 1908, Clark C. Briggs '95, of Burlington, presented a cup to be given to the best specialty or stunt each year until it had been won three times by one fraternity, when it passed permanently into the possession of that fraternity. Later, T. B. Wright of the Syndicate Clothing Company gave a cup to be awarded to the winner of the Peerade which had become part of the celebration. The Boulder Society has given two smaller cups for the individuals in the winning teams of walkers. Mr. J. L. Southwick, editor of the Free Press, gave another for the best "Koon Kut Up," an innovation in 1921.

It was in 1920 that Kake Walk became a two night affair, with a parade and the Winter Carnival theme entered the picture. Hockey games and ice sculptures came to the fore at that time. One year, when there was not enough snow (believe it or not), one enterprising fraternity ordered cakes of ice. These arrived too late to be assembled into any pattern, and so remained as dumped off in the front yard. This heap of ice cakes created quite a bit of interest because some clever member of the fraternity had placed a huge card in front of it with the following inscription "Modern Kake Walk—Cubistic Style."

The masquerade ball, which had been given up, was revived in 1934 at which time the first King and Queen were elected.

Election of the first King and Queen was an exciting event. S. Thatch Hubbard, the successful candidate for King, was sponsored by the Communist Petting Party. According to Thatch, the Com-

"Joe" Lechnyr, 'Cotton Babes' Arranger, Hails 28th Kake Walk

How does one describe Kake Walk? How does one describe a three ring circus? You can talk on forever using adjectives like "stirring, thrilling, exciting," but nothing can quite equal that thrill when the first couple steps into the spotlight and the UVM band swings into the strains of "Cotton Babes." Nothing can quite explain the sensation we feel as, couple by couple, the flashily dressed, gesticulating "Darkies" bounce down the hall, "walking fo' de Kake" to that vivacious, lively melody we all know so well. Kake Walk wouldn't be the same without "Cotton Babes," but once there was a good chance that it would be lost forever. Its preservation was due to the efforts of one man, the director of the present college band, Joseph Lechnyr.

Those of you who have pictured musicians as half-starved, long-haired, and "aesthetic" should take a long look at Mr. Lechnyr. He is tall, genial, and vaguely resembles the President of any well-to-do bank. "Joe" is really popular with his students, too. After all, how many band directors can keep time for 55 pieces with one hand, and play a really smooth trumpet with the other? How many band directors can tell a joke about the "new look" one minute and pick you up on that sour F-flat the next? When Mr. Lechnyr took over the college band in 1921 he was faced with a problem that few band directors have ever been faced with. Kake Walk was going strong in 1921 and the only existing copy of "Cotton Babes" by Percy Winrich of Boston, had met a fiery death when part of the old Music Building burned in 1921. So "Joe," as his students know him, wrote the arrangement which we all know now, the arrangement which will never fail to conjure up scenes of the University Kake Walk at its gayest.

This is not the only problem that our genial band director has been faced with. During World War II the band was headed for quick extinction. In the years 1941-43 the college band dwindled and shrunk as man after man left his position with the college band for a bigger one with the Armed Forces. But there were still girls left on the campus and two of them, Fran and Marje Donahue of White River, decided to work for a coed band. The idea was successful and soon Mr. Lechnyr found himself leading another band, this time composed of 35 girls and 5 boys. This was a sudden revival since before the war the band had been R.O.T.C. and all male. The lilting strains of "Cotton Babes" didn't falter one bit but went on again while worry was quieted for a while in the lights and music of the annual Kake Walk.

Ask Mr. Lechnyr what he thinks of Kake Walk. He says, "Kake Walk is a tradition on the Hill. To take Kake Walk from college life would be a calamity. During the war we almost thought we'd have to give up but—Kake Walk came through."

But Kake Walk isn't the only activity of the college band. Right now it is working on the martial-sounding "United States Army March" and "Victory Over-ture." Also under construction, so to speak, are three catchy Spanish numbers, "The Mexican Hat Dance" by Howard Bennett of the Music Department, "De Quiero Dijiste," and "Suite Espagnole," a Stephen Foster medley, including some of that composers' gayest and saddest numbers and a Cole Porter medley of great beauty and cleverness, are just two of the band's selections which defeat the old superstition that bands can play nothing but marches.

SPOTLIGHT ON KAKE WALK SKITS AT WAA PENNY CARNIVAL

Following tradition almost as old as Kake Walk itself, the Women's Athletic Association held its annual Penny Carnival in Southwick Memorial, Saturday evening, February 14. Appropriate hearts and flowers decorated the gym and ball room where amusement was provided for a capacity crowd of UVM-ers.

Feature attraction of the evening was the group of skits presented by the sororities and fraternities and independents backing candidates in the campaign for King and Queen of Kake Walk. First in the line-up was S.A.E. whose three comedians gave a valiant plea for a man; tall, short or indifferent, just a man. However, despite vigorous campaigning the fraternity did not reveal the name of their "mystery" candidate.

The "Owls" rendered a spirited, original version of Four Leaf Clover in support of their candidate, Wendy Barwood, who, unfortunately, was unable to be present, having a previous engagement with the hockey team.

The Thetas then took over the stage, introducing their candidate for Queen of Kake Walk, with a Modern Dance routine, ending when they opened the cover of a life-size book revealing Doris Holmberg. Alpha Chi's skit described the difficulties in choosing a queen and the dangers involved, presenting as a solution to the problem their candidate, Esther Havens. Murray Crampton, representing the group of independent students running Carol Farmer, performed a bit of his magic and told several jokes in the inimitable Crampton style.

The Phi Delt's skit took its audience on a trip to Dogpatch, fictitious home of their candidate, Reg Linsenmier. In a violent football game between the Dogpatchers and the Skunk Hollowers "Lil Reg" revealed typical Phi Delt and UVM characteristics.

"Strolling Through the Park" was the theme song of the Delta Psi skit in which they pictured the ability of their candidate, Doug Riddell, to win fair maiden in any situation. A massed chorus provided background music for the hotly-contested courtship.

Sigma Nu provided its own Brazilian Band and a scantily-clad army of Russian slaves to drag in and introduce their candidate, Sherm Sprague.

Between skits, the R.O.T.C. band played several numbers. Other attractions of the carnival were arranged in booths and concessions about the gym: fortune-telling, handwriting analysis, weight guessing, and penny pitching were only a few. A chamber of horrors, known as Inner Sanctum, provided thrills for the daring, and, in the ballroom, couples danced to the recording of leading orchestras, at a nominal rate.

W.A.A. presents this carnival as a fund-raising activity for the different sports clubs which it sponsors. The council composed the committee in charge of arrangements and was headed by Jo Anne Howard, president of W.A.A.

1948 Kake Walk Directors

PHIL ROBINSON

Phil Robinson, Sigma Phi senior, is one of the production managers for the 1948 Kake Walk. A town boy, Phil attended Burlington High School where he was news editor of the school paper.

Now completing his political science major, Phil has continued his active career through four years of college. Besides managing things for Kake Walk, Phil is vice-president of the Interfraternity Council and director of the sports publication for the University.

JOHN REAGAN

Also in the Kake Walk Big Three is John Reagan '48, of Medford, Mass. John worked up to his Kake Walk position the hard way, from scrubbing his freshman year to walkin' committee chairman to assistant director last year. John is a fine example of the rarer college man who concentrates his interests in one extracurricular activity—and has certainly climbed to the top. He is a chemistry major and was '47 president of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

ALAN WEESS

Director of finances for Kake Walk is Alan Weess '48, Phi Delta Theta. Al is majoring in business administration and plays football, baseball and hockey. Carrying out his interest in sports, he has been on the Athletic Council for two years. Al recently retired as vice-president of Student Government.

In high school in Hanover, Mass., Al was an active member of the Camera Club, on the football team and editor of the yearbook.

SPANISH CLUB HEA PROFESSOR WILLAR "DESCRIBE" BRAZ

The highlights of a trip through Brazil were revealed to an interested audience at the Spanish Club fiesta, Friday evening, February 13, at the Fleming Museum. Sumner Willard, assistant professor of Romance languages presented a résumé of his travels through the country during a brief war mission in the summer of 1944. He described in interesting detail the various cities that he passed through as he flew down, and revealed that Brazil is "not all sun, scenery and samba." He offered a brief history of the country and then related several amusing incidents that befell him. Ordering a milk shake or vaile con maple, and hanging home every day hanging to the side of the trolley car with one hand, typical American experiences with South American flavor.

Following his talk, a movie, "Rio, Rio, Rio" was shown. It depicted a wonderful technicolor, the beautiful, modern city of Rio de Janeiro, with its tile sidewalks, year-round bathing, breath-taking scenery. The film was loaned by the Moore-McCormack Ship Co. in the hope of furthering the knowledge of our neighbor to the south.

The history of coffee and the story of its manufacture was interestingly presented in a second film. Then retiring to the East Hall lounge, the group was treated to coffee and doughnuts by the Spanish Club to top off the evening.

Fraternities == Sororities Welcome Kake Walk Festivities

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The Alpha Chis will open their doors to everyone on campus Sunday from 2 to 5 during their open house tea party. Lynn Davis and Dorothy Dexter are co-chairmen of the gala affair.

Audrey Hutchins has announced her engagement to Ed Bickford of the Sigma Nu fraternity.

Among the host of returning alumnae are Mary Ash, Sylvia Runnals, Janet Fickenscher, Phyllis Wright and Betty Rublee.

Cathy Eaton and Dee Caryl did a remarkable job in handling Esther Havens' campaign. All of the duties were performed with the utmost precision.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

A E Phi has been in a social whirl Saturday night February 7, the sorors gave a dance in honor of their pledges at the Apple Orchard of the Hotel Vermont. The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. Ricciardi and Mr. and Mrs. Hy Abraham. The chaperones' corner was also graced by the presence of Mr. Libresco and Prof. and Mrs. Miller. Punch and cake were the official refreshments. Candlelight and soft music provided a romantic setting. Many thanks to chairman June Grody and her able committee.

Sunday, February 15, the home of Mrs. Abraham was the scene of a fireside party given by the pledges of A E Phi for the pledges and sorors of D Phi E. Skits and songs by the pledges fulfilled our intellectual desires and hot chocolate and donuts satisfied our appetites.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Kake Walk spirit arrived early in the Tri-Delta house—Dona Donelan made her stage debut Saturday night at Southwick playing the leading female role. Poor Doug—blushing as usual and worrying about what Scotty would do to her.

Proctor Coffin of Melrose, Mass., is week-end guest of Barb Tucker. Sis Wriston is entertaining Bob Funesti, a N.Y.U. friend. Coach Cain is knocking off a few days from law school to spend with Polly Powers.

Paula Whelan is spending the week-end at U.V.M.—guest of Harry Bolwell. Paula is now section manager of the stationery department in L. Bamberger & Co., Newark, N. J.

Penny Byington returned for the campus holiday from her practice teaching at St. Johnsbury. It's been mighty cold there we understand.

During the past few days, girls have been madly piling up snow. As yet nobody seems to be able to decide what the finished project will be, but we all hope to come to some decision in the near future—real near, that is!

Mary Jean Cook, Jerry Balich, Sis Wriston have volunteered to ski in the inter-sorority ski meet. Betsy Cayey has volunteered to catch Jerry Balich's head as it bounces off a tree. Jerry has been reading too many books. Maybe we won't walk off with all the prizes, but we'll sure be really loaded with spirit.

DELTA PSI

Preparations for Kake Walk reached a feverish pace at 61 Summit Street during the past few weeks, although some of the ground work had been laid for some time. Bill Cooper and Al Pratt began developing a super skit before Christmas, but elation over the acceptance of the script was tempered by realization of the tremendous job required to perfect this skit which will involve every Delt at U.V.M. Some had already felt the pressure in their work on committee assigned to production, properties, costumes, and special effects.

Candidates for Kake Walking began working out early in January. A good Kake Walker must be rugged and willing to train intensively; ask any athlete who has tried it.

To avoid putting the final touches on their snow sculpture as the judges arrive this year, a large crew of Delts went to work early on a sculpture designed by John Warden and Jack Hudson, with the aid of Guy Page and Mert Ricker. Completion of the sculpture was delayed for only a short time by the unwelcome rain and thaw of last week.

Shortly before Kake Walk the stone mansion on Summit Street became "Rid-del's Royal Residence" whence issued a prodigious flow of high-grade propaganda proclaiming Delta Psi's candidate for 1948 Kake Walk King. Over the week-end, eager workers lost nights of sleep finishing publicity to put the final punch into an already powerful campaign. In charge of these operations were Bob Smith, Newell Curtis and "Colonel" Krause.

After much time and effort expended, Delta Psi has many reasons to expect this to be a celebrated Kake Walk.

KAPPA SIGMA

The Kappa Sigs will welcome all of their alumni back at an informal tea dance which will be held on Sunday from 3.00-8.00. "Trapper" Morgan, pledge president, is in charge of arrangements.

Jack Mellin and Art Arms were the big cogs in developing the intricate ice sculpture. The design, which depicts a Kappa Sig pin plus a football player and a student supporting a huge V, was suggested by Dom Rosa.

The fraternity skit, which was the product of the combined efforts of Cook, Niemann & Co., survived its initial test. "Ice" Berg will handle the props for the show if the dress-rehearsal judges pass their approval.

The house-dwellers have been striving hard to give the interior a new face. "Saltine" Setien started the ball a-rolling by Kentoning room No. 8. (Incidentally, Lolo wishes to find out if anyone has seen "H. L." Livingston, who mysteriously disappeared when the painting began). The fever spread fast with the result that the house is in tip-top shape. Curtains and venetian blinds have been purchased to add a 'homey' touch to the scene. A new radio-phonograph, which was ordered with the funds raised at the Kappa Sig Leap Year Dance, is en route. All of the Kappa Sigs wish everyone a merry Kake Walk week-end.

PHI DELTA THETA

As the deadline grows near everyone realizes that much work as well as good times go into the creation of a long remembered Kake Walk.

Work is progressing well on the ice sculpture under the expert direction of Brother Frank Eklund. There has been much speculation about the nature of this icy monument by passersby. These guesses have ranged from sheer bewilderment to the extremist who envisioned it as a kind of symphony shell with a frosty ten-piece band playing "Cotton Babes" daily with the help of a vic behind scenes. Time will tell!

The skit committee has Bill Clossey in charge with valuable assistance being given by gag men Burke, Kehoe, Mc-Cracken, Long, and Fimian. Let's hope the mental strain won't cause any breakdowns during festivities.

Rod Smith and Dan Burke are the men "Walkin' Fo De Kake" this year. Practise sessions are taking place daily to smooth out any rough edges before the big night.

A good Kake Walk to everyone this year!

PHI SIGMA DELTA

Carrying on in its traditional Kake Walk spirit, Phi Sigma Delta plans a gala week-end. There will be open houses on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and of course there will be an abundance of appropriate Kake Walk refreshments.

The entertainment really plans to be terrific with the open houses and all. The Kake Walk skit either good or bad will provide a getting together for all the brothers, after the skits at the house.

PI BETA PHI

The Pi Phi's are anticipating a big Kake Walk weekend with all of last year's class to be present with the exception of three sisters.

In the way of recent excursions, Bevy Grier journeyed to Boston to visit Rita McGarry. A fortnight ago Lynn Derick, Barb Purdy, Sonya Leach, and Toddy Page expertly traversed the slopes of Big Bromley in Manchester, Vt.

Hamilton College Rolls Over Catamount Puckchasers 14-2

Game With Clinton A. C. Postponed On Friday After Long Trip to New York

By VIC MURDOCK

Two games were scheduled for the hockey team's third trip to the Empire State, but only one game was actually played. The Clinton Athletic Club was to play UVM on the night of Friday the thirteenth, but rain prevented the match from taking place. The second game, which was played on the Sage indoor rink on Saturday night, resulted in a 14 to 2 victory for Hamilton College. The Continentals were probably the toughest sextet the Catamounts have met thus far this season. Nearly a thousand people witnessed the game, which was the highlight of the second day of the Hamilton College winter carnival. Hamilton has long been a strong school in the realm of hockey and they certainly proved that they are among the best in the east last Saturday night. The big gun for the Blue and White was Knapp, who scored five goals without being assisted. He continually got the jump on the Green and Gold defensemen to race down the ice for shots at the goal. Vermont was under a considerable handicap without the services of McCracken, Mickler, and Perreault, who are nursing injuries from past games. The Hamilton team did everything well and at the right time. Their defensemen were particularly keen at breaking up our plays by hitting the puck away from the wingmen and the center.

Hamilton Moves Fast

Hamilton got off to a fast start in the first period when Carner, the left wingman, scored unassisted at the half-minute mark. Adams made a few good saves in the next five minutes, but the Blue and White pucksters broke through too often for our goalie to keep them from scoring. At 5:42 two of the four Burns' boys on the Hamilton team paired together to notch up the second score of the game. R. Burns pushed the puck into the net after taking a pass from N. Burns. The next two goals were scored by Knapp, who went down the ice all alone each time. The scores came at 6:11 and 11:40 respectively. Before the period came to a close the fast team from Clinton had rushed two more goals into the net to place them securely in the lead. The Catamounts had a difficult job in getting close to the Hamilton goal all through the first period, but at 16:41 Barwood, who took a lateral pass from Switzer, hit the mark for Vermont's first goal. That ended the scoring for the first period, which showed Hamilton well in the lead by a 6 to 1 score.

The play itself was rough and fast, but very few penalties were called. A head-on collision between Switzer and R. Burns kept the former on the sidelines for about ten minutes, but he was able to play his share of the remaining part of the game. There was a small pool of blood on the ice from the gash Karl received over his right eye, but the accident was not serious to either player.

Second Period Improvement

The second period was a sudden change for the better despite the Catamount's lack of scoring punch. In the first period the Continentals played for the puck in back of the net so effectively that they were able to retain the offense the majority of the time. To those who were watching the game it appeared as if the Continentals were using some magnetic device to keep the hard rubber disc away from the Catamounts. To counteract this the Maynardmen kept close to the Clinton Club when they played next to the boards behind the nets in the second stanza. A favorite scoring play is to pass the puck from in back of the cage out to a man in the area in front of the goalie. Hamilton used this several times in the initial stanza, but they found the UVM pucksters checking so close in the second frame that they could not get their passes out to the man coming down the center. For three-fourths of the period the Catamounts ward off the Hamilton attack to prevent any scoring. Immediately after a near-goal by Switzer, Crew gathered in the puck close to his own cage, outskated the Vermont defensemen who were following up our attack, and went all the way down the ice to score. This score came at the 15:19 mark. Three minutes later Knapp again got behind the Vermont defensemen to score his third goal without being assisted. These were the only two scores of the second period. Dempsey did some fine work at defense for UVM in this period by stealing the puck away from the Hamilton wingmen and feeding it out to our attackers. The UVM offense improved considerably but the Continental goalie showed that he was equal to the test when he knocked the puck off to the side each time it came soaring in toward the net.

Another head-on collision came about when Plankey and R. Burns, the same man that ran into Switzer, ran into each other. R. Burns luckily escaped injury again, but Plankey received five stitches in his head as a result of the mishap.

Hamilton Runs Stark Mad

The third period was a repetition of that big first period. Knapp, the fastest man on the ice, again took things into his own hands to score two goals in a row without being assisted. His first goal of this period came at 1:09 and one minute and nine seconds later he contributed his fifth goal to the Continental cause. Fifty-three seconds later Carner scored the eleventh goal of the night for the Blue and White after receiving a pass from Scala. Vermont made their second score of the game when Hurley and Plankey fought their way through the tough Hamilton defense. Hurley took Plankey's pass from just inside the blue line and went the rest of the way to slide the puck into the net. Three more Hamilton goals were scored late in the period, all within two minutes of each other. Hurley shot the puck toward the Hamilton goal just as the bell sounded to end the game, but the alert Hamilton

In the early part of July, 1893, a baseball tournament composed of the leading college nines of the country was held in conjunction with the World's Fair at Chicago. Top teams from the East and West competed for a silver cup and the college championship of the country. The management of the tournament was in the hands of that great figure in sports, Alonzo A. Stagg of the University of Chicago. Vermont accepted an invitation along with Amherst, Illinois, Vanderbilt, Virginia, Wesleyan, Wisconsin, and Yale. Teams played until they were defeated twice; two defeats eliminating them from the competition. Vermont's team arrived in Chicago on July 4, after a long, delayed, and tiresome trip, which took four days to complete. On the afternoon of the day they finally reached the Windy City UVM was scheduled to play Yale. The game was won by the Catamounts by the score of 14 to 12. The game was costly for UVM as Pond, the star pitcher, wore out his arm in the fifth inning and was unable to play in the remaining games. Captain Stewart also overworked himself in the game and was forced to remain on the bench throughout the rest of the tournament. On July 8, Vermont was defeated by Amherst by the very close score of 2 to 1. The next day the most exciting game of the entire series was played between Vermont and Yale. The game went scoreless up until the top half of the seventh inning when UVM pushed one run across the plate. Cooke, the Catamount pitcher, held Old Eli hitless right to the last half of the ninth frame. To that point it looked as if Vermont was going to win out by that one-run margin they held, but lady luck gave out when Yale put a man on first by virtue of a walk and scored two runs from two hits to give Vermont its second defeat. UVM played a brilliant game but they were eliminated from the tournament by that last-inning rally of Yale's. Amherst and Yale were the only two teams left who had not been defeated twice and they had to play a double header to decide the championship. Virginia had been eliminated by Amherst on the same day that Vermont was eliminated by Yale. Illinois, Vanderbilt, Wesleyan, and Wisconsin all suffered two defeats early in the tournament. Old Eli Yale came out on top to take the championship by beating Amherst twice in a row.

The loss of Pond and Stewart, the long train ride (the team had to wait twenty-four hours in Troy before they could get connections) and the fact that they were scheduled to play Yale twice seriously handicapped the UVM team. Many people criticized Stagg for arranging the schedule as he did, but evidently it could not be helped. Vermont did show that they were worthy of much recognition as they were the only team that had defeated Yale. When the team arrived back in Burlington they received a big welcome and they were the toast of the town.

At Athletic Park on November 20, 1893, after a lapse of two years, the UVM football team resumed varsity play when they faced Norwich. The flying wedge was still legal in those days and Vermont used it to good advantage as they pushed the Horsemen all over the field. Led by a fullback by the name of Allen (who had the spirit of Ira and Ethan), the Green and Gold trampled the Norwich team by 50 to 0. In the second half Allen made three touchdowns, one of which he ran for fifty yards. This was the only major game of the season, but it was a start back to playing games with neighboring colleges.

In the spring of 1894 a New England trip was added to the now famous southern trips of the UVM baseball team. The team of the year before had set a high goal for the squad of 1894 to reach, but they fell far short of matching that record. The first game of the southern trip with Johns Hopkins which resulted in victory for Vermont by a score of 13 to 7. But a few days later Georgetown won everything the UVM pitchers put at the plate to trounce the team 24 to 7. Vermont then went on to split their double headers with North Carolina and Virginia to prove that UVM was still a first-class college ball club. Shortly after their return from the trip south, the representatives of the University of Michigan came to Burlington for their second game with UVM. What was supposed to be a closely contended affair between the two pitchers ended up in a batting slugfest which UVM outthrew the Wolverines by the game by a score of 15 to 8. The Cuban Giants made their annual visit to the campus and walked off with six victories to none for UVM. The England trip came toward the end of the season, but it was a disappointment as UVM lost to Williams, Brown, Harvard, and Holy Cross in succession.

The students were annoyed by the showing of the track team at the annual N. E. I. A. A. meet at Worcester in spring of 1894. Vermont failed to tally a single point in the events they entered in. This caused editorial criticism throughout the campus by students who placed the blame on insufficient financial aid and inadequate equipment. The material or calibre of athletes was reported to be just as good as any school's in the association, but received meager support.

Middlebury Skiers Nose Out Big Green By Two Tenths Of A Point As Vermont Places Seventh In Dartmouth Meet

Coach Hawley's Green and Gold Places Fourth in Slalom But Fall Far Down In Other Events; Ralph Places High

A ten-team ski meet was a little bit too much for the inexperienced University of Vermont ski team, as they finished seventh in team standings at the annual Dartmouth Winter Carnival.

Middlebury College, which has the foresight to take advantage of the natural ski resources offered to them by the hills of Vermont, edged out the Big Green of Dartmouth by a mere two-tenths of a point in one of the most closely contested ski meets ever held. The home team of Dartmouth nearly pulled the cat out of the bag as they took a third, fourth and fifth in jumping to almost eke out a win over the leading Blue from Middlebury.

Don Henderson of Middlebury took the downhill with Griffin of McGill placing second, running the course eight-tenths of a second behind Middlebury's star. McGill took third place in the meet as a result of their fine showing in the slalom and downhill and the fact that they took a first in the jump. For the Catamounts on the downhill Sylvester and Captain Sim Ralph placed 22nd and 23rd respectively out of a field of forty.

The rough cross-country race was taken by R. Wright of St. Lawrence. His team finished fifth in the meet, coming in behind the University of New Hampshire, who took a second and third in the cross-country as Dunkley and Hawkinson placed in that order. Again in this event the Green and Gold finished far down as Pierce and Sylvester took a 26th and 27th out of another field of forty.

Ralph Finishes High

In the tricky Dartmouth slalom course the Catamount slat men fared much better. McGill's ace, Griffin, took the event

Vermont Skiers Hope For Better Results At McGill

McGill University at Montreal, Canada, steps into the winter carnival scene this winter with an action packed three-day session lasting from February 19 to February 21. This will be the first attempt by McGill students to stage a winter carnival such as have become annual affairs on many American college campuses.

The carnival will get under way Thursday night when after a torch-light parade the Queen will be crowned in the Chalet on Mount Royal. Following the customary ceremonies the Queen will oversee the first athletic contest, a snow-shoe race conducted by the Montreal Snow-Shoe Club. At this point in the festivities Mayor Houde of Montreal is expected to give an exhibition of his skating prowess on the surface of Beaver Lake. Tobogganing, sleigh rides, and skating are amusements offered the spectators immediately following the competitive sports. A dance in the Chalet will end the first day's activity.

On Friday the University of Vermont ski team will enter the competitive end of the carnival. Captain Sim Ralph will lead the team to the Laruentian Mountains where they will match times with McGill, Dartmouth, Middlebury, Yale, St.

Lawrence, Laval, Montreal, and Toronto. Friday night features contests in basketball, squash, skating, boxing, and gymnastics. St. Michael's of Winooski will enter the competition by sending a team into the speed skating derby.

The Vermont ski team suffered a heavy loss last weekend at Dartmouth when Ken Belding fell in the slalom and wrenched his knee. Ken, fresh from his victories at Norwich the previous week, entered the Dartmouth meet with a team determined to win but had his rabbit's foot in the wrong pocket. This loss to the team was immediately felt at Dartmouth and Coach Hawley will find Ken hard to replace in time for the McGill meet. As usual the ever-dependable Sim Ralph will be on hand along with teammates Pierce, Isham, and Sylvester. The fifth man to join the team will be named by Coach Hawley later in the week.

Vermont's chances to win are slight, in view of Belding's injury, however if the downhill is tougher than the waxing ace at Dartmouth the skill of the team will be much more in evidence in the final scoring. The CYNIC hopes the team will finally get its share of good fortune this week-end.

Evansmen Vanquish Massachusetts As Captain Kotlarczyk And Collier Star

Cats Roll Up Easy 76 to 44 Victory Over Conference Foe

Vermont Team Gets Hot As All Players Score

The Catamounts from the University of Vermont opened up with a brand of praiseworthy basketball last Saturday evening and severely drubbed the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, 76-44. The win, which gives the Cats an overall record of eight wins and five losses, was their second Yankee Conference victory of the season in three attempts.

Captain Ed Kotlarczyk was the big gun of the Green and Gold's attack, blasting through nineteen points for the game's high scoring honors. Every man in the Vermont lineup broke into the scoring column as the Cats poured it on in preparation for their Tuesday rattle with the boys with the silver train at St Michael's.

The issue was never in doubt as the Evansmen drove to an early 15-1 lead and went on to build up a 36-15 advantage at halftime.

Googers Absent

Googers-Durkin, who is having no end of difficulties getting into shape this season, did not make the trip. But the rest of his teammates encountered no particular difficulty in disposing of the surprisingly incapable staters, scoring almost at will. Big Al Niemann played his usual steady floor game, and, aided by Kotlarczyk, Henderson, and Art Collier with forty-seven points among them, kept the Cats way ahead of the home club.

Tonet was the only bright light in the Mass. State attack, as he rang up ten points for his night's effort.

Delta Psi's Capture Interfrat B League; Kappa Sig A Champs

The interfraternity basketball loops wound up operations Saturday afternoon with Kappa Sigma and Delta Psi winning their respective leagues. Delta Psi was pushed up until the final gun by Phi Sigma Delta in league "B" but Kappa Sigma breezed home with plenty to spare in league "A." Final standings are as follows:

League A
Team	Won	Lost
Kappa Sigma	8	0
ATO	4	4
Phi Delt	3	5
Lambda Iota	1	7

League B
Team	Won	Lost
Delta Psi	8	0
Phi Sigma	6	2
TEP	0	8

On February 25, at 7.30 p.m., Delta Psi and Kappa Sig clash in the University gymnasium to determine the team to meet the independent winner for the school championship.

Kappa Sig led by Rosa and Anderson at the forward spots, Hoskiewicz at center, Fitts and Lewkowicz at guards presents a big, strong hard working team which had little trouble with any of the teams in league "A." The relative strength of the two leagues may well determine the winner in this all important game. Delta Psi has been pushed to the limit on several occasions by the various teams in league "B." This competition may give the Delta Psi crew the needed edge over Kappa Sig.

Delta Psi boasts a team consisting of Kehoe and Dingerson at forwards, big Al Pratt at center and the Ingram, Hudson combination at guards. This team several times has run its score into the higher brackets but how their fast break will work against a foe as rugged as the Kappa Sig forward wall will be determined only when the results of the first game are in.

OUTING CLUB NOTES

The Outing Club's ski party which is planned for next Saturday, the 28th, promises to be one of the best of the winter's schedule of activities. An afternoon of skiing at the Ski Bowl, with tobogganing for those who don't ski, will be followed by a buffet supper at Comstock's Lodge in Underhill. Those who eat at Comstocks after the ski meet report the meal to be one of the best to be had in the vicinity. The menu includes lobster stew, chicken a la king, cake, ice cream, and coffee. After supper a short song fest will be held, and, if enough are interested, the group will then adjourn to the Henhouse for an evening of rounds and squares.

The cost will be only $1.00 for supper plus $.50 for transportation. There will be a table in the lower hall of Waterman on Friday from 10.00 to 3.00 where those who are going may sign up. Anyone unable to sign up at this time may make reservations by calling either Cliff Havens, 2139-J, or Bob Perkins, 3042.

This is what you've been waiting for. So come on, all you Outing Clubbers—join in the fun and make the ski party a big success.

W. A. A.

Thursday night is a big night at Southwick. You have already read about it as the new CO-REC night, but how much do you know about the Square Dance Club that meets that same night in the ballroom? Gloria McGill, manager of the club, reports an average of fifty dancers there every week, usually more girls than boys. Come on fellows, you're welcome (no admission). Miss Hoffman teaches the dances to music offered by Walter Hayes and assisted by Robert Frederick. Dancing is from 7.30 to 9.30—just the thing for early evening entertainment. But Notice—there will be No Square Dancing This Week because of the Masquerade Ball. See you there next week.

Have you been way down under Waterman any Friday afternoon at 3.30 or 4.30 to try to get an alley in which to bowl? If you have you know what's going on then, but if you haven't, just read on. That's the time that Instructor-Manager Pat McGinnis is there teaching the girls in the W.A.A. Bowling Club how they should (or should not) bowl.

The traditional University of Vermont Kake Walk is once again displaying great talents and has, as usual, brought forth the unforeseen school spirit which buried on the Green and Gold campus. The student body as a whole is going all out to provide the onlookers with the greatest Kake Walk ever presented. An integral part of this student body is the athletes who carry the colors of Vermont into battle not only at Kake Walk time but throughout the year.

The athletes will be doing their bit to make this Kake Walk a success also. For those of you who are taking it all in, the basketball team will play host to a good St. Lawrence hoop team tomorrow afternoon. The hockey team will attempt to the strong Middlebury hucksters in a return match at the rink behind the Ver gymnasium. Besides these groups who are playing at home, the Green and Gold will be represented at the McGill Winter Carnival this weekend by its ski team.

Also active during the long winter months is the Vermont yearling hoop squad. In the fall the football team and the cross-country team spend many hours practicing and playing in order to bring their school credit; in the spring we are represented by baseball nine, the track squad, and the tennis team.

These numerable teams and the athletes who compose them deserve much recognition. It is true that since last Kake Walk there have been no remarkable feats performed by any one of these clubs. They have all been up and down ball clubs. There is much to be desired in sports on our campus, but a good start toward attaining this goal we wish to reach could be obtained through co-operation.

There needs to be greater co-operation between the members of the teams and their respective coaches. There needs to be greater co-operation between the coaches and the administration; and, above all, Vermont needs the co-operation of its alumni. Athletics must be taken into consideration more than they have been previously. Ample funds should be allocated to supplement the expenditures of all these aforementioned sports, besides other sports such as golf. Vermont should not have to cut out its Southern baseball trip which has brought much glory and fame to this school and its rich tradition dating back further than Kake Walk itself. Full co-operation should be given in the effort to raise funds for a suitable gymnasium to replace the ancient edifice which is now standing.

This co-operation will not come by letting the athletes work alone for it, or by letting the coaches or administration work for it, or by asking only the alumni for support. It will only come through co-operation from every student at Vermont, every coach, the administration, and all alumni of the college. All must pull together and work together.

In the meantime, don't forget those athletes who are now playing in any sport in Vermont. Carry on the Kake Walk spirit and, whether Vermont teams win or lose, let them see that every student, faculty member, administrative member, and alumni is giving them the support which they deserve.

Evansmen Humble Purple Knights 58 to 36

Livingston, Kotlarczyk Co. Direct Catamount Offense

Al Niemann Plays Remarkable Floor Game; Mikemen Handicapped by Loss of Coffey

The University of Vermont Catamounts racked up their 20th straight State Conference win Tuesday night as they pulled out a decisive 58 to 36 win over the Purple Knights from St. Michael's. The game, which was St. Michael's home game, was played in the confines of the Memorial Auditorium before the largest crowd of basketball fans to witness a college game this year.

The big guns for Coach Evans on offense were Hammy Livingston, who threw in 18 points, and Capt. Eddie Kotlarczyk, who hooped 10. However, Al Niemann was probably the most outstanding player on the floor although he tallied only three points. The big Vermont center did a magnificent job of rebounding, often going up with three or four Mikemen to wrestle the ball away and pass out to his teammates. Al's passing was just short of superb as he set up play after play, and also held big Stan Yankowski of St. Mike's to one floor basket and four foul shots.

Victor Never in Doubt

The Knights, playing without the services of their captain, Carl Coffey, took the tap on the opening whistle but were unable to work it in against the fast-shifting Vermont defense. The Cats took over and George Henderson opened the scoring with a step shot after receiving a nice pass from Kotlarczyk. Niemann then connected with a foul and Henderson went in for another nice layup after faking his man out of position. Dean finally hit the strings for St. Mike's and Tierney made good on a free throw to make the count 5-3 in favor of Vermont.

That was the closest St. Mike's ever came as Vermont went forging ahead on a hot spree. Collier tossed in two one-handers in sight of a minute, and Kotlarczyk pulled a terrific fake to go all the way for a twin counter. Livingston hit with one foul and after missing a second surged in to tap in the rebound to make it 14 to 3. Dean sank a long set and Brennan a foul shot but the Cats clawed away for 12 more straight points. Henderson burned the net with a high arching set shot, Livingston threw in one of his overhead jump shot specialties, and Al Niemann came through with one of the prettiest shots of the evening as he pivoted far out in the bucket and let one go over his head that was "good like Newf." Durkin kept up the Vermont rally with two foul shots plus a set shot and Pierce added a pop shot to make it 26 to 6 for Vermont with two minutes left in the first half.

In these last two minutes the Purple Knights had a sudden spurt of energy and played their best ball. Yankowski tossed in a free throw, Tierney went in for a lay up, Brennan threw in a neat one hander and Tierney broke loose again for a lay up as the half ended with Vermont in front by a 26 to 13 score.

Hammy and Eddie Hot

After the Vermont aspirants for king and queen of Kake Walk had amused the fans with their final skits of the campaign at half time, the two teams took the floor to resume their battle to the end. Brennan kept Coach Doc Jacob's hopes alive for a minute with a long set shot and two foul shots. Hammy Livingston connected with a set shot and Kotlarczyk duplicated his feat. Yankowski made good another free throw but Livingston-Kotlarczyk Co. came back with two more sets to give the Green and Gold a 34 to 18 lead. After Guter sank a free throw, Hi Eddie hit with another set, and Pierce and Collier notched charity tosses. The Knights put on another spurt here as Vermont slowed down considerably. Yankowski tossed in a nice pivot shot, Dean hit with a left hander, and Guter was fouled on a layup and made both tosses good. Livingston got things under control again as he scored twice on follow ups. His second basket was made after he had missed three shots in a row, got each rebound, and finally tossed the fourth one in over his head. Durkin added to St. Michael's misery as he took a beautiful back-hand bounce pass from Niemann to score unmolested. This was one of the nicest plays of the evening and the Mikemen called for a time out with six minutes left and the score 44 to 25.

Tierney and Brennan kept things alive for the Knights with two set shots but Pat Farma made good his first shot of the game for the Cats. Niemann committed his fifth personal here and Yankowski made good again. Cronin also hit with a foul try and then Yankowski got another charity toss and Brennan a pop shot to make it 46 to 34.

The Green and Gold broke away here however and salted the game away with twelve straight points. Livingston scored a basket and a foul, Pierce broke loose on a fast break for a lay-up, Durkin made good a free throw, and Livingston scored his 13th point of the half and 18th of the game on another fast break play. "Googer" Durkin was hurt at this time and had to leave the game, but it was later learned that the injury was not serious.

After Kotlarczyk added his final basket on a nice underhand shot Coach Evans poured his reserves into the fray. Gene York scored the final Vermont goal with an overhead shot from the basket and Fitzgibbon ended things up for St. Mike's as he tallied a pop shot to leave his team on the short end of a 36-58 count. So the home rooters for St. Michael's left the Memorial Auditorium still mumbling "Wait 'till next year." Their train is about due.

Phi Betes Face "Joe Colleges" In Hilarious Saturday Prelim

By GLENN FAY

Basketball comes to Burlington in its rarest form this Saturday, February 21, when the world-famous Vermont Vulcanizers tangle with the playboys of the warning lists, the Vermont Collegians, at Memorial Auditorium. This game, of course will not be the feature attraction of the afternoon, but will be staged as a preliminary to the Vermont-St. Lawrence game, since the Vulcanizers are scheduled to play an exhibition tilt in Saudi-Arabia later in the day and have to catch the Rutland Rattler after this game.

The Vulcs, who have been masquerading as Professors for the past quarter and a half, have a powerful team and an incredible string of victories, most of them at the expense of the schoolboys. This will be a good chance to turn the tables on the learned gents. The Vulcanizers are led by that slow-gaited mastadon and terror of the gymnasium's lower depths, "Stretch" Cote, who towers up into the ozone to four feet, eight inches. Cote is reported to be in excellent physical condition, achieving this peak by regularly pummeling Dave Hinkley and chasing the latter around the cage behind the gym. "Flash" Landa, a popular official of interfrat basketball fame, stands out as the team's scoring ace, to date having 201 points, all in practice. The ball handler and trick shot artist of the club is the incomparable R. S. Babcock, who, it is rumored, taught Larry Killick all he knows (about Pol. Sci.). Colonel Witherpoon will be in charge of tactical operations for the game with Captain Johnson second in command. The other two regular members of the team are Profs Baker and Smith who will leave their perpetual hydrogen sulfide stench for the custodian to watch over.

The Collegians, consisting wholly of UVM students, are looking for an upset win over the smooth-working, fast-breaking Profs, and will spare no expense for victory. The roster of this squad is not

Cats Play Host To Larries Saturday In Kake Walk Fray

Vermont's foe for the annual Kake Walk basketball game will be the rugged St. Lawrence Larries from Canton, N. Y. The Larries are bringing a fast team to town for the fray and are likely to present a big obstacle for the Cats to hurdle. To date the arries have steamrollered to nine victories, including a 60-37 pulverizing of St. Michael's, while dropping but three contests.

The Cantonites, ably coached by Ron Burkman, have a tall team which is made up of nine veterans from last year's campaign, led by high-scoring Bill O'Rourke, and John Lawrence, an eagle-eyed set shot artist.

Comparative scores put the teams on about even terms, both having beat McGill and Clarkson. The Larries hold two decisions over Union, while the Cats lost to them by one point. The Green and Gold, however, is just beginning to find itself and with all the bad games out of its system should give the curious Kake Walk visitors something to talk about when they go home.

Students wishing to take non-students to this game may obtain tickets for same at the athletic office, before Saturday and save themselves the grief and misery of waiting in line at the Auditorium.

KAKE WALK HISTORY

munist Petting Party should get the respect due old age inasmuch as it dated back to Adam and Eve. The campaign manager for the C.P.P. was none other than one Francis T. Colburn whose slogan was "A full bread basket."

The selection of the Queen was a very complicated matter. A rug was laid out in the hollow square of the spectators and huge dice rolled in. The monstrous ivories boomed across the rug and number 193 was announced as the lucky number. The lucky number was held by candidate Kay Mahoney.

How times have changed. Now, campaigning. Voting is voting. Elections are elections. Lovely queens are chosen to smile and bow sweetly and to be attended by their defeated rivals who also smile. Kings are elected and reign for the short time, self-conscious embarrassed rulers, looking as though they wished they were anywhere but under the heavy, royal robes and dignified crown.

Last year was called the Golden Jubilee Kake Walk. Nine fraternities entered Kake Walkers. Seven candidates vied for honor of king and queen, Bobbie Byrne and his golden trombone furnished music for the masquerade, the lines to the book store to buy tickets started on the right, left, north, east, south and west. Mary Ann Smith, Tri Delt, was the gracious queen and Eddie Kotlarczyk, Kappa Sigma took the bow as king.

The editorial of February 21, 1947 sums up Kake Walk very neatly. "When we think of college days..." We will always remember Kake Walk. Kake Walk is more than a tradition; it is a symbol of college life. The whole school becomes unified in one great surge of spirit—a spirit which is marked by the stimulating syncopations of "Cotton Babes." The competition is still there. Prizes are awarded to the group with the best skit, sculpture, and walkers. But the oneness of the laughter at the skits, cheering of the walkers, makes Kake Walk truly a University function. When the lights are dimmed, and Joe lowers his baton, a million intangibles are aroused inside every UVMer. Kake Walk is not described in words; it is described in feelings. This evening is the consumption of months of planning, campaigning, prop building, rehearsing and sculpturing. This is College Life—This is UVM—This is Kake Walk.

Faculty-Student Game

complete yet, as the manager has been scouting "ringers" in New York City and at St. Michael's. However, early indications are that "Reverse" Traverse and "Scotty" Ingram will play their usual bang-up game in the line, with Hudson, Conti, Linsenmeir, and Weiss backing them up.

Sprague Undecided

Shorty "Dead-Eye" Sprague will undoubtedly play in this fracas but as yet has not made up his mind which aggregation to favor. Each club has showered him with lollipops and ice cream cones—with no favorable result. It is clear he is holding out for more money.

This game shapes up to be a killer-diller, but undoubtedly the skill and rugged physical condition of the Profs will prove to be the margin of victory.

Hockey Game

goalie fell on it to prevent a score. The final score stood at 14 to 2 in favor of the Hamilton sextet. The scoreboard showed the final count to be 15 to 2, but a early mistake in the scoring was not corrected until after the game. To add to the blood on the ice and the stitches, Lareau broke his nose late in the third period.

Games with Norwich and Middlebury are scheduled for Wednesday and Saturday respectively. The hockey team should give a better account of themselves because one game is to be played in Northfield and the other here on our home ice. The trip last weekend to Clinton took a lot of pep out of the team. After traveling over two hundred miles they had to wait around three hours Friday night to see whether they were going to play or not. The weather not only canceled the first game but it caused much inconvenience both days at Clinton. The snow on Saturday caused the team to be several minutes late for the game with Hamilton.

with Bailey of New Hampshire and Neuberger of Middlebury placing second and third. The Green and Gold finished fourth in the slalom by virtue of Captain Sim Ralph's nicerun to earn him a tenth out of a field of forty runners. Isham finished thirteenth for Vermont to put them up in there behind Middlebury, Dartmouth and McGill. Ken Belding got a tough break as he fell on the second run and twisted his ankle. The Vermont ace would have undoubtedly helped out greatly had he not had this hard luck.

In the combined downhill-slalom results Captain Ralph finished 13th which was very good considering the tough competition. The jumping contest saw Vermont fall behind once again as Draper of McGill copped the honors with Cummings of Maine finishing closely behind him.

Sigs, Phi Delts Cop Skits, Walking Honors

Sigma Nu, Pi Phis, Capture Ice Sculpture First Places

Sigma Nu fraternity and Pi Phi sorority won the top honors in the Kake Walk ice sculpture with Phi Delta Theta and Warner House taking second. Although most of the other sculptures were not completed due to the recent thaw, these four finished with sculptures comparable to those of past years. The themes dealt with winter sports and Kake Walk. The judging took place Saturday morning and the prizes were awarded that evening.

The following is a brief description. Sigma Nu featured a Kake Walk king seated on a throne, complete with the Vermont "V" and crowned. He was flanked by two ice catamounts and a pair of walkers. The detail was especially noticeable. Lighted with a floodlight, and well glazed over, the whole effect was one of much detail and craftsmanship.

Phi Delta Theta depicted a skier with his leg in a cast, sitting before a fire and dreaming about Kake Walking which was shown in two Kake Walkers mounted on a huge back-drop.

Pi Phi winning ice sculpture, depicted a fallen skier at the end of a hill in a snow bank with the words "Kake Walk" inscribed on the snow bank.

Warner house showed a ski boot complete with straps and laces. The boot was built on the scale of 51 to 1 with size 51 imprinted below, signifying the 51st Kake Walk.

University Receives D. C. Fisher Collection

The Wilbur Library at the University of Vermont has recently received from Dorothy Canfield Fisher, well-known Vermont author, an interesting and valuable collection of letters, articles and books, to be added to the collection of Vermontiana now in the possession of the library.

Included in the correspondence are letters from Pearl Buck, Arthur Guiterman, Dr. Albert Einstein, Clifton Fadiman, Baroness Blixen (Isaah Dinesen), author of "Seven Gothic Tales," Henry James, Pulitzer prize winner, and Morleai Johnson, president of Howard University.

Of special interest are the letters, telegrams and newspaper articles about and from Dr. and Mrs. Carlos Layug of the Philippine Islands and during their year of post-graduate medical study at the Harvard Medical School and other medical centers. Doctor and Mrs. Layug were friends of the late Dr. James Fisher, who lost his life on Bataan. A newspaper article in the collection explains how Doctor Fisher's parents, Dr. John R. and Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher, came to offer this fine Filipino family a year's study in the United States.

The letters of John Nelson, who was Captain Fisher's sergeant in the Filipino Rangers, may have historical value in the future to show the relations between officers and soldiers in the American Army in 1941-45. Sergeant Nelson's letter to Dr. and Mrs. Fisher concerning Captain Fisher's death has been translated into both French and Swedish and published in those countries to illustrate this relationship.

Included also is a collection of letters written in French to Mrs. Fisher, from 1939 to the closing of postal communication in 1942, and since the liberation of France.

VIPS Commemorate 1st Year's Service At UVM

The Vermont Independent Party is celebrating an anniversary this month. Starting just one year ago under the leadership of Bob Norton, who was subsequently elected to be its first president, the organization has steadily tried to serve the interests of those students who are unaffiliated with any sorority or fraternity.

In pursuance of this aim, during the past year VIP has sponsored such activities as a highly successful meeting on the cut system, the nomination of independents for Student Government positions, four of whom were elected to office last spring and two this fall, and a meeting concerning an explanation of the increase in the activity fee. On a purely social level, the VIP's have held several dances and participated in several sport leagues. The latest of these was the Bowling League, in which the Independents achieved top position.

In a statement concerning this, first anniversary, acting president Bob Condon reiterated some of VIP's aims. He said that the organization was created not to form another "pressure group" but to give independents—all independents—the chance to take part in school activities to which they otherwise might be excluded. Part of this aim is a filling of the social vacuum which sometimes occurs for independents. While this vacuum has been partially filled in the past year, largely through the efforts of VIP, it still exists to a lessened degree. As a part of their current campaign to fill this vacuum, the VIP's are holding a dance on Friday, February 28, which will be open to everybody, independent or affiliated. The admission is twenty-five cents with all refreshments free. Bob, as his parting word, hoped that all would attend, stag or drag, to meet the Independents and to have a good time, whether singing, playing cards, or, of course, dancing. The Independents are waiting to welcome one and all.

Tryouts For "My Sister Eileen" To Be Held Soon

The scripts of "My Sister Eileen," the play to be given by the Dramatic Club during Junior Week are now on reserve at the Billings Library. Tryouts will take place during the first week of the spring quarter. Watch the Dramatic Club bulletin board and the CYNIC for definite announcements.

A cordial invitation is extended to all students interested in dramatics, to tryout for parts in the play. A large cast will be used and there is a great variety in kinds and types of people in this comedy.

The script books have been placed on reserve at the Billings Library this early to give all who are interested a chance to read them and become thoroughly familiar with the part he or she will wish to try out for.

Health Council Notes

The Health Council will meet in Room 234, Waterman, Thursday evening, March 4, at 7.15. All health officials are urged to attend this meeting as there is much important business to transact. If the health official cannot attend, she is requested to ask her alternate to replace her early enough so that the alternate may plan to do so.

Mrs. Richmond Injured In Serious Fall On Ice

Friday, the thirteenth, terror of all superstitious souls, brought misfortune to Mrs. C. W. Richmond, house director at Roberts House. Returning to the dormitory on Friday evening, Mrs. Richmond slipped on the ice on the Maple Street hill and fell, breaking her left hip and wrist. She is presently convalescing at the Bishop DeGoesbriand Hospital, following orthopedic surgery after her accident.

Mrs. Richmond, the "dean of U.V.M. house directors," has held that position longer than any other house director here. Returning to Burlington, her native city, twelve years ago, she became the house director first at Alpha Xi Delta House. Following this she went to Campus House, which stood on the present site of the Waterman Building, and then in 1941, with the opening of Roberts House as a girls' dormitory, she went there as its first director, which position she has maintained ever since.

SCA Meeting Invites Protestant Students

The Student Christian Association, organization for Protestant students at the University of Vermont, will hold its winter quarter meeting for members and friends on March 3, at 7.30 p.m. in the Waterman building. A panel group will discuss the question: "What Makes a Healthy S. C. A.?" Students will be invited to make contributions during the discussion. Refreshments will enable all to become acquainted. Protestants are urged to attend.

David Smith, Pianist, To Perform March 11

Is A Student At Midd Acclaimed By Rubinstein

The American Council of Camp Fire Girls will present the noted pianist, David Smith of Middlebury College, in a benefit recital March 11, at City Hall Auditorium. Popular young David Smith, who at the age of twenty-four has received national acclaim, took his first lessons at the piano from his mother. Born in Portland, Ore., his life has been an unfolding of unusual talent. In competition with college students, Smith who was then twelve years old, won the highest award given by the Oregon Federation of Music Clubs. His performance was sensational and won the unstinted praise of critics. Studying two years later with Dr. Karol Lisyniewski, a member of the faculty of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, David played for such audiences as Emmanuel Munz, Jose Iturbi and Artur Schnabel, all of whom acclaimed his rare talent.

His phenomenal gift developed at its own speed and it was until November 5, 1944, that David Smith, then twenty years of age, made his debut at Town Hall. A year and a half later, on the recommendation of three outstanding music judges, among them Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, the rising young pianist was given the Gainsborough Foundation Award, carrying with it concert presentations in two major American cities.

During this past summer, Smith worked at Basin Harbor where he made the acquaintance of numerous U.V.M. students, who are among the many looking forward to his coming recital.

QUEEN CAROL AND KING DOUG

Smith, Millis Officiate; Same Winners Both Nights

Phi Delta Theta's Rod Smith and Danny Burke, dressed in blue costumes, took walking honors both Friday and Saturday nights with Walt Brown and George Brigham winning second for Sigma Phi. In the skits it was a different story. Sigma Phi, with its "All this and Hell Too," won first prize both nights, while Phi Sig's UVM State Aggie School ("A Tale of Udder Delight"), placed second.

With Phil Robinson acting as M.C., the 51st Kake Walk ran smoothly again this year. Except for additional awards on Saturday for ice sculptures and an award to the band, the two nights were identical.

The directors of this year's Kake Walk were John Reagan, Phil Robinson, and Al Weiss, while Rep. Fred Smith of Burlington, and Pres. Millis officiated in awarding prizes and cakes. The judges were as follows: Skits—Friday: Dr. Chas. Braun, Prof. George Grosscup, Jr., Prof. Louis Knollmeyer. Saturday: Prof. Robert S. Babcock, Prof. Leon W. Dean, R. H. Kroepsch. Walking—Friday: Dr. Hovey Jordan, John Hamilton, Proctor Page. Saturday: Arthur Hayes, Lawrence F. Killick, Donald Smith.

A brief résumé of the skits follow:

The winning skit, "All This and Hell Too," was presented by Sigma Phi under the direction of Dave Cox. Feeling that suggestive remarks on college life had been overdone, writers Jack White and Dave Cox took the parts of two Western Union messengers who were sent from the Democratic headquarters in Vermont to hell to ask the advice of Mephistopheles, played by Norman Vercoe, about the chances of the Democrats in the next election in Vermont. The music for the skit was written by Sullivan of Gilbert and Sullivan fame. Words were supplied by able Sigma Phis. Accompanist was Bob Taisey who also played the part of that well-known Democrat, Harry Truman. The devils had their own small brass band who rendered a superb version of that famous classic, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." A minimum of money was spent on props, due to the ingenuity of the committee, under the direction of Bill Flanders. "All This and Hell Too" contained two realistic scenes, the graveyard complete with tombstones and a ghost, and hell, complete! There was no pause between scenes, the trip from earth to hell being extremely short!

Winners of second honors were the Phi Sigma Deltas whose skit, "A Tale of Udder Delight" was a take-off on UVM life as a country boy would see it. Various departments of the University were subjected to unlimited revision as all the men in the fraternity presented comic scenes with special emphasis on the romance and finance departments. Joe Levin was in charge of the props which consisted of a nearly life-size engine and cars of the smooth Rutland Railroad, a Venetian gondola and a miniature of the Eye-ful Tower. A twelve piece Spike Jones band accompanied by an octet gave a rendition of the Anvil Chorus. A quartet, composed of Don and Sid Levine, Ben Bursten and Wally Lash, accompanied by Lennie Miller on the trumpet, gave a parody on "Chiquita Banana." Herman Paikowsky was the general director of the skit with Ben Bursten directing the musical scores.

"Idiot's Folly" was the Phi Delta Thetas contribution to this great educational theater production. Written by Bill Clossy, who was assisted by Stew

The Aftermath

This is the aftermath. The effects of Kake Walk are now dulled and to the casual observer it would be difficult to determine that there even had been a Kake Walk—most of the sleepy smiles (in addition to the perpetual sleepy smiles) have disappeared. Kake Walk is now but a memory. We have again entered the rat-race for existence—and education. Hour tests have reared their ugly heads and, as usual, the average student has been engulfed in them the past week and will be so in the week to come. In colleges all over the country students have long since completed their mid-term exams. Our second set is due in two weeks. But it was a good chance to “forget it all”; and without the slightest regret, forget it all most of us did—from the dance Thursday night, through Kake Walk itself, the game—in fact, right through to Sunday morning.

It was undoubtedly one of the best ever. Everything went without a hitch—from the selling of tickets through the official ending Saturday night. The walkers were in top form; and one could enjoy, to the fullest, the satire and pantomime in the five skits. The fraternities were ever-more ingenious in their special effects; and the problem of hearing—one of the greatest of former Kake Walks—seemed to be solved this year. True, there are some dubious points that from an ideal—not a practical—standpoint could be eliminated. Everyone at UVM still does not participate (but nearly everyone can find a job to do if he really wants to); some complain that they cannot attend due to lack of facilities (yet there were empty balcony seats Friday night). And, of course, there is the question of the theme of Kake Walk. Some want strictly a theme based on college life and personalities; others want a broader basis whereby those not connected with UVM can fully enjoy them. At this Kake Walk we had both and, frankly, we enjoyed both! In fact, we enjoy almost anything connected with Kake Walk. To those who didn't go, you missed a swell show; to those who did attend, we hope you will long remember it. We will!

Practice, Patience Produce Perfection Learn Make-up Men

by GLADYS NEIBURG

“Break the nose farther up.” “Flatten it out more.” These words sound ominous, but they are harmless. Just instructions patiently given by Ronald H. Humphrey, speech and drama instructor, to the voluntary class in professional stage make-up, who meet with him for two hours once a week to learn the art of making one look like just what he ain't, by the use of a little powder and some grease paint.

“You're using too much cold cream. Wipe it off evenly.” “Learn to keep the make-up on a small section of the palm of your hand so you can manipulate several different shades at the same time.” The student looks woefully at the one color which has spread all over his palm, wondering how he was ever going to learn to handle several neatly and deftly. “Practice. Practice and more practice,” advises the prof.

Gladys Neiburg '49 and Keith Calkins '47 have been busy the past two weeks doing Kake Walk make-up. The results of their zealotry and hard work showed up on the faces of the real walkers for de kake at the Kake Walk, February 20 and 21.

The class were true martyrs to this noble cause because they made themselves up as walkers, happy walkers, sad walkers, and just walkers to be sure to get the white where it should be and the black where it should be. Pictures were taken of the group. Such interesting poses. Such fearful and wonderful facial expressions. Such self control not to move during the time exposure . . . and what a disappointment to find that only the bodies up as far as the necks developed in the negatives. Perhaps the film was faulty, or as Mr. Humphrey ruefully admitted, possibly his little daughter had gotten hold of the camera when nobody was looking!

Letter To Editor

We're very disgusted . . . and we want to know what there is about UVM (different from all other schools) which doesn't allow a fraternity to serenade girls' dorms without having the city police called out to stop them from disturbing the peace.

Why can't we Vermont girls be serenaded just once at Kake Walk time, without someone thinking that a well-organized group of campaigning college boys are a bunch of drunks who should be hauled in for disturbing the peace? And they sang pretty, too!!

We realize that all good little girls are in bed at 12.00 and maybe midnight serenaders prevent somebody from getting her eight hours beauty sleep, but . . . we weren't (in bed or asleep) and we're quite mad . . . and think someone was a pretty poor sport to take campaigning in this spirit. After all, Kake Walk comes but once a year, and then, most anything goes, certainly a little innocent serenade.

We want to know, why can't a serenade be sung?

(Signed) The disgusted
Robinson Hall "ites" who had their serenade interrupted by the Burlington
Police Department.

Museum To Display New, Universal Art

by ALLAN LUCE

The Fleming Museum Association, its directors deserve the applause of for their progressiveness in the field of art. As a part of their Northern Vermont Artists' Exhibition being held March 28, the Museum is displaying three of works of George Morris, instructor of art at Montpelier High School. Morris uses the unorthodox medium of wire and metal pieces. His airy, well balanced creations will provide a point for the entire exhibition. His are both unusual and modern. As they will undoubtedly be subject to condemnations usually accorded to modern art. For this reason, I for one, am grateful to the Museum for their foresight, ability to keep up with contemporary artists and styles. The three examples of Morris' work on display are entitled "The Universe," "Grasses," and the completely imaginative fantasy, "Dream B." All entries for the contest were submitted on February 22. As soon as possible these entries, the work of either Vermont residents or summer residents, will be judged. Due to shortage of space, only 125 of the expected 300 paintings will be on display in either Museum galleries or balcony display space. The types of work on display be many and varied, with oil paintings, water colors, and pastels sharing the light with etchings, lithographs, crayons.

DORM NOTES

by DICK CLOUTIER

Everywhere I go through the dormitories, I hear the now famous strains of "Cotton Babes." And yet a few short weeks ago, I didn't know such a march existed—the speed of college education is amazing! Now whenever I hear it, I can close my eyes and see two gaily-colored, silk-clad dancers dancing down the hall "Walkin' for Kake." Attempting to win honors Phi Sig was one of our own freshmen walking partner, Leonard Paul, a son of Roger Schoenfeld of Wills Hall and They presented a very entertaining novel number which drew tremendous applause from the audience. Five were also presented at the Kake Walk many freshmen such as Herb Burstead of Buckham, a Phi Delta plebe were observed participating in them. In all it can be stated that Buckham, Chittenden and Wills were well represented in this year's Kake Walk.

Coinciding with Kake Walk comes news that our cosmopolitan clarinet player, George Cram of Buckham, has recently become engaged to that lovely vivacious blonde, Miss Betty Van derstrand, a resident of Grace Coolidge Hall who comes from Nanuet, N. Y. George who spent a considerable amount of time in the Army stationed in Japan, hails from New Bedford, Mass.

During the last two weeks the Dorm list has come out, with the result many hearts were either broken or mended. Mine was neither—I knew what I was getting! However, the new dormitories did well for themselves, around two dozen honor students. Among them were such studious individuals: Dean Urie, John Tomasi, Richard Wheeler, Paul Stevens, Forrest Titcomb and Harold White. It remained for Buckham to again take the lead by getting the mark of the three dorms with an average of 72.74.

Last Monday the new dorms played their first basketball games in the gym. Chittenden met Wills at 4 o'clock and going was rather tough and close. Chittenden came out on top by a score of 25 to 24. At 5 o'clock Buckham met the court to face Converse. The players were quick, with the ball passing back and forth from one team to the other and despite "Doc" Porter's attempts to lead his Buckham team to victory, they were defeated in the last few seconds by a score of 18 to 20. Let's continue to have a turnout from the dorms to root for the teams.

Buckham has announced the formation of ping-pong teams for a tournament coming up in the near future if plans come through. A good percentage of the dormitory has signed up for it but it is yet undecided who will head the team. More information on this will be forthcoming in a future column.

Phi Delt's Tell How To Win Kake Walk Shoes To Be Preserved For Later Generations

Rod Smith and Danny Burke, winners of this year's "Walkin' Fo' De Kake," had several interesting things to say when questioned on this latest Phi Delt phenomena.

It seems that Rod, twice winner of the traditional competition, has been walkin' from the age of two, when he was accidentally set down on a hot stove and had to jump off rather quickly. Seriously, though, both winners have family tradition behind them. Rod's uncle took the cake for Sigma Nu back around 1915, and Dan's uncle walked off with it for TO in 1933.

Practice started after Christmas in the Phi Delt living room (and the house is still standing), to a certain record whose name cannot be here disclosed. (Incidentally, both walkers were lulled to sleep by it in their youth, way up in Newfoundland and in Virginia City, Ore., so I'm told.) Hal Mayforth of Burlington, last year's winner, with Mr. Smith, was the indirect inspiration for much of the routine. Practice Tuesdays and Thursdays until about a week and a half before the big event, then strained muscles every day, and the pair was ready. Attired courtesy to the Book Store (for a slight fee) and made up with a beautiful non-greasy paint, they endured the tension of their wigs and the tension preceding the event, watched other couples stumble back down the steps, and went on seventh in line—Rod, cool as a cucumber, so he says, and Danny, too, not knowing what to expect. The second night, after a brisk rubdown by Chuck Link, and knowing what to expect, they found aid and comfort in the reassuring smiles of the King and Queen. However, granulated sugar beforehand Friday and cubed sugar on Saturday are heartily recommended for that extra kick.

The time they most enjoyed was when actually doing the walking (it says here) and natch, carting away the two cakes and three cups—one cake each night, one cup for winning each time, and the Preston Cup, which is kept for half a year by each walk winner's fraternity, passing on from year to year. Just a comment on the cake—the frosting was delicious. Need we say more?

Rod, class of '50, of Scarsdale, N. Y., in liberal arts, and Dan, also '50, from Wellesley, Mass., and a pre-law student, are having the two pairs of sneakers bronzed, and will give one shoe apiece to the fraternity. They will keep the others as incidental mementos of the occasion, to show to their great grandchildren when relating the great narrative and crooning that grand tune. And, of course, a lively demonstration will accompany each account.

Their congratulations go to all of the other walkers for the first rate job they did, and their heartfelt thanks to Joe Lechnyr and the band for that inspired downbeat all the way through. With everyone else they are looking forward to ever greater Kake Walks in the years to come.

Catamounts Play At "Sadie Hawkins" Dance Tonight In Waterman

Call it "Health Council Dance." Call it "Sadie Hawkins' Dance." Call it "Leap Year Dance." Call it what you will, but be sure to come and join in the fun.

The place? Waterman Rotunda. Time? Saturday evening, February 28 from 8.30 until midnight. Price? Sixty cents per person—and so it is up to you whether you come stag or drag, whether boy asks girl or girls asks boy. And music? None other than the Catamounts—the big band.

Are you wondering if Health Council is holding two dances this season? The answer is "no." A dance was scheduled for January 24 but the Health Council relinquished that date in favor of the dance for the benefit of the W. S. S. F. Drive.

Money raised at the Health Council dance will be used to carry on work of Health Council, making loans to women on campus who need to meet an emergency expenditure pertaining to good health such as dental work, x-rays, or

Harv. Summer School Appoints Hartung

Asst. Prof. Ernest W. Hartung of the University of Vermont has been appointed to the faculty of the Harvard Summer School for the 1948 summer term, it was announced today by Harvard University.

He will teach the following courses in the department of biology: "Introduction to Biology: Zoology" and "The Principles of Heredity."

Revived after a six-year war-time lapse, the Harvard Summer School, oldest in the country, is open to all qualified men and women and will not be limited to regular Harvard students.

Instruction in the Summer School will be given by outstanding members of the Harvard faculty and by distinguished teachers from over forty American and foreign schools and universities. Among the schools to be represented on the faculty are Harvard, University of California, University of Chicago, Yale, Princeton, Johns Hopkins, Duke, Tulane, University of Texas and Columbia. Among the several hundred members of the faculty are professors from over twenty states, Hawaii and Europe.

The summer term will run from June 28 to August 21. This eight-week program is exactly half the length of a regular college term, and students will take two courses—half the number of courses given in a normal term. Courses will carry full value as credit towards academic degrees.

American Friends Will Interview UVM Students

Miss Ruth Houghton, a representative of the American Friends Service Committee, will be on the U.V.M. campus to interview students who may be interested in the work of the Committee Tuesday and Wednesday, March 2 and 3.

The Friends Service Committee is the outstanding group which has been continuously engaged in relief and reconstruction work since the first World War. An important part of their work consists of summer projects. These summer projects are of different types. There are, for example, community service units being set up for the summer of '48 in Howland, Me., Detroit, Mich., and Chicago, Ill. There are also interne units. In Philadelphia there is an interne-in-industry unit. In St. Paul, Minn., and Nova Scotia there are interne-in-cooperatives units. There are work camps in Maine, in southeast Missouri, among the Indians of the Southwest, the Southern highlands, in Negro colleges, in handcraft schools, and projects in Iowa and Texas in areas of racial tension.

The Service Committee usually asks those taking part in these projects to pay their own maintenance costs, but does have some grants-in-aid which are given to qualified applicants. Appointments for interviews with Miss Houghton can be made in the Religious Life Office.

Haydn's oratorio "The Creation" will be presented by the University Choir, assisted by members of the University Orchestra, in the Ira Allen Chapel Sunday, March 7 at 4.30 p.m. (Please note hour.) The soloists will be Janice Shively, Marilyn Holden, Alfred Quance, Ernest Stockwell, Carl Nelson, Bruce Butterfield, William Lane, and Morris Pike. The performance is free and open to the public.

and block prints. This exhibit is the eighteenth of its kind, the first one being held one year before the Fleming Museum was built in 1931. Another interesting fact about this year's exhibit is the 50 percent increase in entries over last year. Not only does this indicate a trend toward accelerated interest and participation in art, but it will also increase the aesthetic value of this year's paintings. A tea, in honor of the exhibit, will be presented by the Museum Association on March 5 from 2-5 p.m.

By SAM HOUSTON

Coach John C. Evans, better known to everyone as "Fuzzy," has probably got a bit grayer at the temples this winter with his Catamount hoop squad, but nonetheless today Fuzzy has his sixth straight state conference title tucked away for another year.

The Green and Gold buried Middlebury last Wednesday night and with the victory took the state title. To look back on the records we see that Fuzzy has not lost one since he has been head coach for old Ira Allen. The Green and Gold mentor started out with the season of '40-'41 and his teams copped the crown for three straight years. The war interrupted play in '44-'45 but after that lapse the Evansmen have taken it for three more years.

The Catamounts now have a 10-6 won and lost record with only four more to go. This weekend they play three games away. Friday night they will play Springfield College, who like the Cats have had an on and off season. Saturday they journey to Connecticut where they meet the United States Coast Guard. After a day of rest the Evansmen return to Massachusetts to meet Williams at Williamstown. March 6 closes the season with a game at home against the "not dangerous this year" St. Michael's College quintet. So with any good ball this weekend the Catamounts should not end up with too bad a season.

Pucksters Close Season

The hockey team closes its doors this weekend in a home contest against Champlain. In the last outing between these two clubs Vermont came out on the long end of a lop-sided 10 to 1 score but the game was very exciting. Champlain took to using high sticks and although displaying no talent in the sport made it real rough for the Green and Gold pucksters.

It is said that the Maynardmen are out for not only a victory but for a little vengeance over the Champlain club, so it should prove to be a bang-up game. The hockey team has done very well in its last two outings although losing both of them. They lost a thriller to Norwich last Monday by a score of 4 to 3. With the right support the Maynardmen should do all right in years to come.

After this next week sports will take a sideline seat on the University of Vermont campus as exams come into the limelight. It is not too soon however to start thinking about the coming spring sports. Baseball, tennis and track teams will all face formidable opposition this spring. It would be good to see a large turnout trying out for each of these sports and even better to see the rest of the student body backing up the athletes who make these teams by attending all the home contests.

Where Are The Cheerleaders

This last thought about students backing the ball clubs brings a question to my mind which I would like to bring to everyone's attention. What has happened to the University of Vermont cheerleaders? Has the student interest grown so small that out of a student body of some 2600 students that at least three or four cheerleaders can't be found? Look around at any other college in Vermont or in any other of the forty-seven states and see how they are showing us up in spirit. At one time Vermont had that spirit too, but now we have gone a whole basketball season without any cheerleaders. The student body has got to be the first to wake up at Vermont and back up their teams. Football isn't the only sport that requires cheerleaders and a band.

Catamounts Lose to St. Lawrence 52 to 47 In Kake Walk Game

The St. Lawrence Larries stopped a last-quarter threat staged by the University of Vermont Catamounts here last Saturday in the annual Kake Walk game to spill the Cats by a score of 52 to 47.

The Evansmen, who were definitely suffering from too much Kake Walk, came to life in the last eight minutes of the game to almost wipe out a thirteen-point lead as Capt. Eddie Kotlarczyk and Pat Farma got hot. Their final effort fell short however, and with it the Kake Walk game went down in the books as a defeat.

Close First Half

The first twenty minutes saw the Cats out in front for the majority of the time until the St. Lawrence team wore them down by using a fast break towards the end of the period. Both teams threw many balls away and were playing a loose brand of ball. Bill O'Rourke who played a great game for the Larries opened the scoring with a foul shot and Kenny Pierce put Vermont in the lead with two foul shots.

The Catamounts kept this lead until late in the period as Pierce, Livingston and Kotlarczyk hit the hoop with enough regularity to creep ahead of fast breaking Larries. At the fourteen-minute mark Vermont held an 18 to 17 lead. O'Rourke then hit with a step shot to give the Larries a lead which they never relinquished. Kuell broke away on a fast break and O'Rourke made good with another free throw. Kotlarczyk and York retaliated for Vermont but O'Rourke sank two more charity throws to give St. Lawrence a 24 to 22 lead at the half time.

Catamounts Tired

Captain Kotlarczyk brought Vermont hopes up again at the start of the second half with a long set shot to tie the game up. St. Lawrence continued to play a fast break game and it began to pay off here. Cioffi hit with a pop shot, Elmslie sneaked away on a fast break for a lay-up, and Bill O'Rourke brought a gasp from the crowd with a beautiful left-handed pivot shot. Pierce hooped two close-ups here to make it 28 to 30 for St. Lawrence with fourteen minutes left in the game.

The Larries pulled away at this point as Van Slyke broke loose on another fast break play. He then followed this with a one-hander from the key and O'Rourke showed the fans he wasn't lucky as he pivoted and tossed in another one-hander. Van Slyke found himself alone once again on a fast break and flipped the ball through. He was fouled on the play and calmly tossed the free throw in. On the next play O'Rourke decided to pivot the other way so he let it go right-handed, and the ball went swish to give St. Lawrence a 41 to 28 lead. Vermont finally called a time out and succeeded in getting their wind back.

Pat Farma was sent into the game by Coach Evans and the little scrapper brought the Cats to life. He hit with a long set shot and then stole the ball and went in for a lay-up. Van Slyke was fouled and made good on both tries but "Hi Eddie" Kotlarczyk caught fire and threw in a long set shot and a nice left-hander. Farma came through with another two-pointer and Livingston sank a step shot to bring the Cats up to within three points as the score stood 40 to 43 with five minutes left to play. John Moro broke away for the Larries at this point but Kotlarczyk put the Vermont fans into a mad frenzy as he threw in a beautiful long set shot and then tossed in a left-hander from deep in the corner to make it 44 to 45 for St. Lawrence. Moro tallied again, and after Pierce made good one of two free throws Moro found himself without a guard and went in all alone to make it 49 to 45 with two minutes left.

Play got very rough here with Vermont trying desperately to score. Warren Elmslie intercepted a long Vermont pass and dribbled the length of the floor to lay one up. He was knocked out of bounds on the play and made good the free throw to salt the game away. Kotlarczyk let one fly from mid-court as the gun went off and it swished through, but his club was on the short end of a 52 to 47 score.

Bill O'Rourke was the standout player on the floor as his pivot shots tallied for 16 points. Bob Van Slyke got 13 and Warren Elmslie 8 to help O'Rourke out. For Vermont Pierce and Kotlarczyk tied O'Rourke for high honors of the game by getting 16 apiece. Twelve of Kotlarczyk's came in the last half.

Catamount Hockey Sextet Loses Tough One To Middlebury Team In Return Contest

There were two hockey games scheduled for last week. One game was to be played at Northfield with Norwich, but the recent thaw caused the game to be cancelled. For a while it appeared as if the game with Middlebury last Saturday would also have to be called off, but the brief cold spell on Friday night was just enough to allow the game to be played. Originally the game was to be played at 3.30, however the time was changed to 1.30 in order to take advantage of better ice conditions.

For two periods it seemed as though Vermont was going to avenge the 11 to 5 defeat they suffered at the hands of the Middlebury sextet earlier in the season. The Panthers really had to extend themselves to overcome the 1 to 0 lead the Catamount sextet held in the first period and a half. After tying the score in the second period the skaters from down state went on to score four goals in the last stanza to give them a 5 to 1 victory over the Green and Gold. The ice was slow and there were many rough spots on the rink, especially along the boards which were not protected from the sun.

For sixteen minutes both teams went up and down the rough ice, but neither could work the puck into the net. The Catamounts outplayed the Panthers all through the first period, as they kept the puck near the Middlebury goal the majority of the time. Several tries were made at the Blue and White goal, but Casavant, the Panther goalie, kept his stick in the path of the flying disc to prevent any scoring. The first score came at 16.22 when Barwood, Stearns, and Switzer tenaciously fought their way through the tough Middlebury defense. Barwood took a shot at the goal after taking a pass from Switzer, however the puck was knocked off to the left of the net. Stearns followed up the play to slide the puck into cage. Vermont took a 1 to 0 lead at this point and held it until the middle of the second period. Middlebury was unable to score even though they made several attempts at our goal. They found Adams, Dempsey, and Mickler a tough combination to cope with. In the first game, which was played at Middlebury, the Panthers scored several goals through using long shots from within just a few yards of the blue line. These tactics were tried in the first period of last Saturday's game, but Adams adamantly guarded his post to prevent any scoring.

The second period was played on fairly even terms. Switzer got the puck right after the pace-off, wormed his way through the Panther defense, and made a marvelous shot at the enemy's goal, but Casavant brilliantly warded off this lightning attack. In the first four minutes the Panthers tried two blazing long shots at the UVM goal, but they found Adams still as difficult to penetrate as a stone wall. The Panthers finally moved the puck past Adams, when Prescott scored on a rebound at the 13.02 mark. Adams had made twenty saves before the Panthers broke through to score; a very commendable record. The score was all notched up at 1 to 1 at the end of the second period. This was quite a different story than after the second period of the first game between the two teams. In the third period the Blue and White gave up trying those long shots from out. Instead of pinning their backs to the net these chance shots they began to take the puck in closer to the Vermont goal. At the 57 second mark Corbisiero passed from Whittinghill to score the second Middlebury goal, to put the Panthers into a 2 to 1 lead. Eleven minutes before another goal could be scored upon the hard-fighting Catamount Painter did the scoring this time. Whittinghill again making the score 3 to 1. Two more scores were made at 15.19.14 to give the Blue and White a 1 to 5 advantage at the end of the game.

The Green and Gold was in the all the way and they showed improvement over their first game with the Panthers. The score was held somewhat by the conditions of the ice but goalie Adams and defenseman Mickler were big factors in holding back the highly-touted Panther attack.

Evansmen Win State Conference Hoop Title

Pierce Scores 21 As Cats Whip Middlebury 70 to 45

Vermont Takes Crown For Sixth Straight Year; All Green and Gold Players Score

The University of Vermont tucked the Vermont State Conference championship once again last Wednesday night as they literally trounced Middlebury College by a score of 70 to 45 in the Memorial Auditorium here in Burlington.

The Evansmen took full advantage of the last place Middlebury hoop club to up their sixth straight conference title. Slim Kenny Pierce had a field night against the loose Panther zone as he led Catamount scoring with 21 points. Montpelier lad found himself open and time again as his teammates unloaded the zone on the opposite side of the court. Ken was playing the weak and thus was able to get many good shots off and he connected on a good percentage of them.

Runaway From Start

The ball game was never in doubt after the first few minutes of play. Middlebury used the outmoded zone defense which Pierce and Captain Eddie Kotlarczyk found much to their liking. Kotlarczyk was red hot on his set shots at the start of the ball game. For the first twenty minutes the Cats worked the ball and beautifully. After working it would pass to Pierce who would fly with those long net twisters. The Ken and Gold captain threw in four set shots in the first eight minutes. Jimmy Livingston also hit with regularity in this first frame.

At the end of the first half Pierce had Kotlarczyk 8, and Livingston 7. They made 27 of Vermont's 31 points. The other four were made by Big Al Mann who got three and Pat Farma got one. So the Catamounts held a commanding 31 to 16 lead as the half ended.

Cats Run Wild

In the last frame the Catamounts made it from all over. In the first ten minutes Coach Evans used his first club and virtue of Pierce's push shots built up a 28 lead at the three-quarter mark. The Evans started to substitute and with subs coming in the fans began to get restless again. Farma and Collier hit in at the forward positions and they expected in that order to keep up the pace soon after they entered. Farma continued to be a whirlwind and the happy little forward dunked in eight shots in the last ten minutes.

With four minutes left and Vermont leading a 61 to 34 lead Evans sent in the second club. Conrad made a foul shot and Gene York hit with a set shot in a row to give all the Vermont players a score except Moffitt. Conrad hit with a set shot and then the Panthers drove for eight points.

Moffitt Comes Through

With one minute left and the score standing at 68 to 43 the Vermont fans were going wild. Half of them were cheering for Vermont to hit 70 and the other half were hollering for the boys to give Moffitt the ball so he could get a chance to score. But the beanstalk from North Carolina needed no help. Over in the right-hand corner of the floor he got tangled up with two Panther players, got the ball, lost it, stole it back, and then had nothing to do with it. Not being able to pass to anyone and having his back to the basket "Stu" just let it fly without looking and "swish," Vermont had 70 and everyone on the team had scored. They'll be talking about that shot for ages.

All Students Need Athletic Workouts

Doctor Kingsbury of the Health Service says that the need for more consistent exercise is quite apparent among many members of the student body. A considerable proportion of upperclassmen seem to feel that their exercise days are over when their Physical Education requirements are completed. The habit of regular exercise as everyone knows should be continued through life if one is to live at his or her best.

The Men's and Women's Departments of Physical Education and Athletic Associations are asking the CYNIC to publish the opportunities offered for voluntary and enjoyable exercise. One does not need to be an expert to participate in any of these activities. One has only to realize that overcoming a little failing common to all human beings, namely inertia, will bring rewards of greater vigor, new social contacts, and additional training in skills for in- and after-college use.

The programs of sports are as follows:

Frosh Defeat Panthers In Thrilling Overtime Game

By BOB HERRIOTT

In their most exciting game this year, the Vermont Kittens, fighting like real champions, came from behind to down a favored Middlebury Frosh team 48-41, in overtime. It took the Kittens three full periods, and all but 30 seconds of the fourth to catch the fast-breaking Middlebury club, but once in the lead they were never headed.

The game opened very fast with Vermont jumping into a quick lead on two beautiful one-hand push shots by Grant. After this opening spurt the game slowed down, and both teams began to play very conservative ball. The quarter ended with Middlebury leading 7-5.

Both teams began to open up in the second canto, with Loveys of Middlebury and Galli of the Kittens consistently finding the range. With the score 16-13 Terrill scored on a beautiful double screen hand-off from Galli, to bring the Kittens within one point of the leaders, but two quick baskets by Loveys increased the one-point margin. Middlebury led at half-time 20-17.

Middlebury continued to set the pace throughout the third period, but the Kittens kept matching them point for point, with McCarthy, Galli and Ratti all contributing two pointers. By the three-quarter mark Middlebury had stretched the lead to 29-25.

Then came the do or die period—Loveys hit with a set from outside and Middlebury led 31-25. A push by Grant and a driving one-hander by McCarthy narrowed the gap to two points, but Loveys' neat one-hander reopened the margin.

With two minutes left Sierra converted a charity toss making it 34-29, but Terrill and Galli then hit with driving lay-ups, narrowing the margin to one point. Both teams then registered on foul shots, but the ever-present Loveys drove through to make it 37-34 with one minute to go.

After a short time out McCarthy converted his all important foul shot, setting the scene for Galli's game tying jump shot, which came with 30 seconds left to go. In the dying seconds of the game, Galli again registered on a jump shot, for what was assumed by many to be the winning basket, but after much discussion it was decided that the shot was made after the gun had gone off.

In the five-minute overtime period which followed, the Kittens really let go, and after jumping to a quick six-point lead, coasted to victory, with all five players contributing to the scoring parade.

Ralph Loveys of Middlebury took individual scoring honors with 19 points, while "Stretch" Galli and "Hooper" Grant registered 15 and 12 respectively for the victorious Kittens.

B. C. W. Report

Each of the dorms has organized its basketball team, but Buckham seems to be the only one who has chosen a captain. The other two have apparently decided to dispense with a leader and play with no definite person in charge. These squads have been in practice for some time, and played their first games on Monday, February 16. Wills played Chittenden at 4.00 p.m. and Buckham attempted to upset Converse at 5 that same day. How about a big turnout of all dorms to root for the teams? A complete schedule of play has been posted in each dormitory and upon completion of it, the playoff of the champion team of the Independent League against the winning team of the Interfraternity League for the school championship will take place on Saturday, March 13 at 2.00 p.m.

Sigma Phi, Phi Delt Win Honors

MaCracken, Chuck Kehoe, Dan Burke and Walt Fimian, "Idiot's Folly" concerned the troubles of Dan Druff, a rustic character portrayed by Bob Holmes, who came to UVM from the small hamlet of Wildroot Ridge, Vt., on a small raft complete with all the comforts of home, namely his pet chicken and goat who were acquired by the prop committee, under the direction of Dick Long. At the same time that Dan made his appearance, another student, Clubby Character, entered with his car. All the men on the hill rushed him, leaving Dan and Clubby's girl, Pat Softly, played by Ralph Becker, alone to get acquainted. The second scene showed the familiar torture chamber-registration at UVM. Chuck Arliss played the part of the typist who efficiently burned up the paper—literally, that is! Strictly off the record, the most humorous part of the skit for the Phi Delt was "funny." The acid underneath the table, which produced the smoke for the typewriter decided to explode, leaving Chuck Taylor to struggle against the fumes, while his bosom buddy, Chuck Arliss, kept kicking him back under the table cloth. Luckily, no one suffocated. Hero of the bedroom scene was John Gallup, whose fine performance must have taken many nights of practice. The last scene was graduation, when Dan Druff pinned Pat Softly. The results were deflating.

Tau Epsilon Phi's skit, "The Man in the Gutter," was written by Murray Nussbaum, assisted by Phil Adler and Howie Aaron. This hilarious skit was a take-off on the radio man on the street broadcast. Divided into three acts, the skit centered around the reporter, Phil Robinson, played by Phil Adler who first interviewed Professor Hans Bonstocker, a name which has a familiar ring in many student's ears. Professor Bonstocker, played by Murray Nussbaum, stressed the importance of more psychology in the Kake Walk sculptures. The second act concerned an interview with a famous Russian opera critic. The heroine of this scene was played by Ivers Rifkin, the villain by Herbert Levine and the hero by Norman Moore. Music was from a recording with Milt Bayer conducting. The dueling scene between the hero and the villain was the climax of the act, with no one getting hurt, but everyone getting a drink. And Russian vodka can be just as devastating as the sword! In the final act, Doctor Tan, Howie Aaron, of the UVM Medical School introduced Doctor Bernie Lippman who was performing painstaking and delicate surgery on a 1935 Chevrolet. This operation was interrupted by a loud explosion in which the hero of the opera floated up complete with halo and wings. Quite a fitting ending to such a serious performance!

"My Gal Monday," written by Al Niemann and Hobie Cook, two well-known literary critics of Kappa Sigma fraternity, showed the life of a UVM coed, played by Dom Rosa, from her birth to graduation. Boyfriend was Hobie Cook, with the engaging title of Lushwell Armstrong, the All-American Ball Carrier. The scene in the education class was ably executed by several of the more intellectual members of the fraternity. Donned in a black robe was Charlie Lewkowicz, who played the part of the professor. Narrator was Jack Hurley. Bob French was quite effective as Lucinda Cricks, the sorority housemother, complete with rat-ty hair and padding. Props were under the direction of Bill Berg, whose committee spent three weeks building the steel cage used in the last scene to signify the results of four years in an institution of higher learning.

UVM Chapter Phi Beta Kappa Celebrates 100th Anniversary

Seven College Students Be Initiated Sunday

The University of Vermont chapter of Phi Beta Kappa will celebrate the one hundred anniversary of its founding on Sunday, with Dr. Alan Valentine, president of the University of Rochester as principal speaker. Invitations have been sent to all the leading chapters in the college of the country to be represented at the ceremonies and a good turnout is expected.

The Vermont Alpha of Phi Beta Kappa received its initial charter from the Dartmouth College chapter in March 1848, and is therefore among the first colleges in the country to honor its graduates with initiation in this honor society. The ceremony was held on the campus in what was then the home of Pres. John Wheeler, the University infirmary. All the chapters in New England, namely Dartmouth, Harvard, Yale, Brown and Princeton as well as the Alpha Chapter at UVM, acted as sponsors for Vermont.

The distinction held by the Vermont Alpha Chapter is that it was the first in the country to admit women to membership in Phi Beta Kappa. Consequently the first initiation of women occurred in 1875, twenty-seven years after the founding of the chapter. The first women to be admitted were Ellen Milton of Brandon, Vt., and Lida Johnson of Jersey City, N. J. They were the first women to be graduated from the University. Both these girls were members of Kappa Alpha Theta, which was then the only women's fraternity in Vermont. Their scholastic records showed higher marks than any of the men in the same class. At the time of their election, the Vermont chapter passed a resolution, which was sent to all other chapters in which they stated their opinion that all graduates should be eligible without regard to sex.

The first event of the program on Sunday will be the initiation ceremony for fifteen seniors and newly elected honor members. The initiation ceremony will take place at 2:00 p.m. on the South Memorial Building and will be followed by a general convocation at 3:00 p.m. at which time President Valentine will address the crowd. At 4:30 the annual Lenten-Easter concert by the University Choir and Orchestra will be held in the Ira Allen Chapel. The final event of the program will be a banquet at 6:30, at which time representatives of the various chapters of one hundred years ago, sponsored by the Vermont chapter, will extend greetings to this Vermont's anniversary.

Catamounts Sponsor Rotunda Dance

Have you wondered why there haven't been more dances lately, and why the Catamounts dance orchestra has been going so infrequently? Well, the Catamounts themselves are endeavoring to remedy the situation by sponsoring a big dance tonight. The recently won rotunda, with candle-lit tables will provide a casual atmosphere. And the still price of $6.00 a person will prevail. The Catamounts, having gone into debt during the few financial losses incurred during dances this year, are confident that U.V.M. can support a full-sized dance.

The Catamounts hope that 500 couples will discover what a nice place Waterman is on Saturday night. If they do, U.V.M. will be able to boast weekly dances that are hard to beat anywhere.

Oldest Traditional Campus Social Event Will Be Staged At Memorial Aud. April 2

The Catamounts Will Be Featured At Big Dance

The U.V.M. Military Department is presenting its annual Military Ball. This year's Ball is to be held on Friday, April 2 at the Memorial Auditorium, from 9 to 1. Music is to be furnished by the University Catamounts, acclaimed by many as one of the best college bands in the United States. Refreshments are to be supplied by Miss Ruth L. Godfrey, Director of Food Services for the University.

The annual Military Ball is the University's oldest existing social event. The first one of these took place three to four years before the first annual Kake Walk in 1898. As a matter of fact, the first Kake Walk was the result of student grouching over a Military Ball that failed to materialize. The Military Ball was revived in 1913 by a Captain Reeves and grew to be so popular and such a success that in 1917 the Military Department was sponsoring two a year. The Military Ball and Kake Walk Masquerade are the two University dances which are traditional on the Hill. The Ball always used to be held in the fall and the Masquerade in late winter but in recent years both events have been held in late winter or early spring.

This year the Military Department, under the general chairmanship of John G. Gilmore '49, is planning a more glamorous and exciting Ball than the University has seen in years. A feature of this year's ball will be the election of a Battalion Queen. She will be chosen from among the many nominations advanced by active R.O.T.C. members, by the Military Department. Not only will she preside over the Ball, at which she will be crowned, but she will also be present on the reviewing stand at Federal Inspection to be held this spring.

This year's Ball, under the Decoration Committee chairman, H. Brown Baldwin '49, will be decorated in green and gold with a military motif carried throughout. An integral part of this year's decorations will be the new R.O.T.C. uniforms. These uniforms consist of a belted, army-brown tunic with brass buttons, matching trousers, and army regulation dress shoes. The group of R.O.T.C. students, bigger this year than ever before, should really look their sharpest. The Ball is definitely a formal affair and many notables of Burlington and Vermont will be present.

Tickets, at $2.40 a couple, are on sale at the Military Office, Bailey's Music Rooms, Preston's and Hayes & Carney's, as well as being sold by a regular army of salesmen admirably directed by William Salmon '49.

NOTICE

There will be no advance enrollment for the Spring Quarter for students in the College of Arts and Sciences except that Pre-Medical and Pre-Dental students will enroll with the Pre-Medical Advisory Committee before the end of the current quarter. All others will enroll March 29 or March 30, filling out enrollment cards at that time.

Students with special problems regarding enrollment may consult their advisors or the dean before the Spring Recess.

At Spring Quarter enrollment students will be asked to fill out a card stating whether or not they plan to attend the Summer Quarter of 1948 and also whether or not they plan to attend during the academic year 1948-49. Offerings for the Summer Quarter will be determined when the administration knows the number planning to attend and can ascertain what courses will be in demand.

Women's Student Union Elects Kathryn Eaton To Presidential Chair For Ensuing '48-'49 Year

On Wednesday, March 3, at the Ira Allen Chapel the women students of U.V.M. held their annual election for the officers of the Student Union Council for the term 1948-1949. The results were as follows:

President—Kathryn Eaton
Second Vice-President—Barbara Larrabee
Chief Justice—Patricia Malmquist
House Chairman—Janet Brackenridge
Assistant House Chairman—Alexandra Dzikielewski
Secretary—Suzette Levine
Treasurer—Jean Austin
Social Chairman—Mary Jane Farnham
Scholarship Chairman—Beverly Hillman
Assistant Scholarship Chairman—Norma Hale
Town Representative—Janet Killary

When Kathryn Eaton was told of her election to the Student Union Council this is what she replied, "Isn't that wonderful? I feel it is a definite honor and responsibility to be elected to Student Union. I shall try to resume and carry out the duties of my office the very best I am able to." "Kathie" is a member of the class of '49 and is now an active member in the Staff and Sandal, Alpha Chi Omega Sorority and was previously a member of the Sophomore Aides. She is also co-vice-president of the Canterbury Club and before her election to the presidency to the Council she was a junior member of the Judiciary.

Barbara Larrabee, new second vice-president, is a graduate of Shoreham High School of Shoreham, Vt., where she was an active member of the Dramatic and Glee Clubs. At present, she is a sophomore enrolled in the Liberal Arts College at U.V.M., and a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority. She is on the CYNIC and Ariel staffs, a member of the Dramatic Club, a modern dance apprentice and is now busily engaged in the annual W.S.S.F. drive.

Liberal Arts College. She has been very active in school affairs being a member of Staff and Sandal, Student Union and W.A.A. Council. Pat was corresponding secretary of Pi Beta Phi in her sophomore year and recording secretary in her junior year. She also was a member of the Health Council in her sophomore year, worked on the Freshman Handbook, and Joint Conference of I.R.C. This year Pat is co-chairman of the Kake Walk Stunt Committee, a member of the Outing Club and a majorette with the school band.

Following Dean Simpson's address Joanne Howard '49, reminded all the house presidents that they should see to it that all the minutes from their House meetings be filed every Monday in the Dean's office.

It should be noted that the attendance of this quarter's mass meeting was well attended by the women of U.V.M. Every woman student except those in the infirmary and town girls were required to attend.

Cynic Reporter Investigates UVM Bookstore Atmosphere; Discovers Merely Higher Prices

JOHN D. ADAMS

Now on display and available to the U.V.M. student is a new line of toilet articles including ladies' cosmetics, tooth paste, shave cream, lotion, soaps and various other necessities to complement the accessory shelf. Annis Barney, manager of the University Store was approached early last month concerning the possibility of including the above articles in the store's inventory. Miss Barney agreed to order this merchandise and place it on a month's tryout basis. If the student response is strong enough the line will be reordered and henceforth considered a regular salable item.

In an interview last week Miss Barney said that student suggestions concerning the store would be appreciated. She is glad that the new student government is taking interest in improving the store and congratulates Harry Miele in carrying out the mandate of the student body. Miss Barney, a U.V.M. graduate, has held the position of University Store manager since 1923 and during that time has seen the store in several campus locations. In its earlier days it was located in the Old Mill and Converse Hall where oftentimes an eating concession was run jointly with the supply store. Shortly after the opening of the Waterman Building in 1941 the store moved into its present quarters. The advantages of increased space has made it possible for the store to offer increased services for the student as well as carrying many new lines of merchandise.

Thieves and Brigands

Last year's "opportunity day" will not occur again. A book representative spent several days at the University buying second hand text-books and collected an unprecedented number. It seems that a handful of student pirates "put the hooks" on every book in sight. By four in the afternoon the shelves near the cafeteria were cleaned out and the local co-eds were bemoaning their losses.

In order to stop the avalanche of letters that descended on "Daddy" there will not be any textbook selling this year.

The Question of Prices

Miss Barney was frank in her admission that University prices on toilet articles will be above those paid downtown but added that it was a situation incapable of being solved as long as the present volume of business necessitates buying in such small quantities. The reason why Burlington merchants are able to undersell these items is that they buy considerably larger amounts and thus pay a reduced wholesale price.

National Association

This year Miss Barney and her assistant, Arline M. Watkins will attend the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the National Association of College Stores. This convention provides the opportunity for college store managers throughout the country to see and understand trends in similar stores as well as buy new merchandise. It will be held in New York this year.

There's No Money Made Here!

Following a lengthy period of "dickering," the United States Congress finally passed the long-awaited-for bill authorizing the increase in the monthly subsistence for veterans enrolled in institutions of higher learning. This "mighty bit" of legislation heralded the approach of a new era for thousands of the G.I.s who so desperately need more spundulox to combat the ever-increasing rise in the cost of living.

To a complete outsider, who moulds his opinions concerning the veterans' needs from the neighborhood barber or from the heated discussions in the village store, it would seem that the ex-military clientele are "making a killing" out of their college training. Alas! What can we do when so many of these cranksters exist . . . from the logging camps of Maine to the sand dunes in Arizona?

For the benefit of these fool-hardy souls, who have proven to the general public that they know no better, the veterans, attending the University of Vermont or any other "authorized" college in the country, are having tough sledding from start to finish. Under the prevailing monetary conditions, the possibility of meeting the slim necessities of life becomes more and more remote day by day.

So, although some unmarried veteran students, who through fortune attend college in their home town (with little or no room rent or board to pay), manage to come out on top each month, and in spite of the fact that thousands of other veterans "learning how to mow lawns" or "learning how to become a gasoline station attendant" by on-the-job training are seemingly rolling the government, let it be known to everyone that the vast majority of the university students throughout the entire United States are "hanging on by the skin of their teeth."

To the members of the Senate and House of Representatives in Washington, we tend our humble thanks for the increase in our subsistence allowance. The servicemen gave their all in wartime—give them a break now.

Fable 'n Folly

JOHN D. ADAMS

Though the formal W.S.S.F. campaign is nearing the end, the U.V.M. committee under the chairmanship of Albert Redway will continue in the best way possible to keep student and civic interest alerted to the cause.

With the current threat of Russia looming so ominously on the horizon of international affairs it is interesting to note how W.S.S.F. thwarted the Communist Party several years ago and how it has since resisted any political infiltration.

The Communist party in the United States has tried since 1937 to break into the ranks of W.S.S.F. They saw the formation of such an organization as a fulsome treasury from which they could promote their ideas in European education, and summarily attempted to place agents within W.S.S.F. Social workers in the popular conception are supposed to be naive and unsuspecting of any evil machinations that beset them but Red intrigue did not find the bespectacled, simple group of social workers that they expected, but a dynamic alert organization that wished to give foreign students every break possible and in every way project democracy into their program for the resurgence of education in the devastated countries.

Marshall Tito, Communist satellite and junior broompusher in Yugoslavia, was ready in 1946 to embrace the W.S.S.F. like a bull-ape seeing Tarzan in his leopard skins, but on extending his grimy, eager paws, he grasped only an empty purse. The W.S.S.F. office in Geneva didn't quite subscribe to the idea that Tito would make a good Balkan Santa Claus and refused to put their eggs into his Adriatic Basket.

Communist infiltration has been balked at every turn and the ways in which they have given the "cold fish" to these tainted red walrus could well be utilized by other organizations who are finding some scarlet threads in the fabric of their organizations.

The Roman Catholic Church has worked with unsparing effort with the Protestant denominations to the achievement of a mutual goal—to save Europe and the world by once again promoting the "educated man" abroad.

Miss Joan Christie, executive director of the Newman Club Federation for Catholic college students, has pledged the support of her organization and has urged each member to assist in his way to give a square deal to the student victim of war.

The money is not sent to the vaporous, cloudy governments of Europe. That would be fatal and like poring ale down a street gutter. It is sent to the students and the professors who administer the outlay with the aid of W.S.S.F. representatives from the United States. It is used for food, clothing, medical supplies, books and the other "musts" of life and education. The program is not solely one that the United States student supports but is equally well-thought of and acted upon by students in countries that were not so enveloped in the late mess. These are the Scandinavian countries, and the W.S.S.F. drive there has been spirited and worthwhile. The Soviet Union unfortunately is either not aware of the program or feels that it is a democracy ridden organization which, we must confess, it is. Everyone in W.S.S.F. feels that the Declaration of Independence was an excellent piece of idealism and common sense, and that the Constitution is here to stay. W.S.S.F. does not enlist the aid of a Thursday night, ill-lighted-garret hodge-podge of Communists to act as solicitors for funds as they have a suspicion that the Red group might not be strictly honest. They would do more than count their fingers after shaking hands with Ichabod Communist, but would send their hands to a disinfecting station afterwards. WSSF finishes its campaign Saturday and we want people to realize that the student solicitors are not going to get an extra-line in the year-book or become campus big-wheels, for their work is a personalized matter of doing something and aiding something they believe in.

Many of the solicitors here at the University are still contacting students and it is necessary for the people to know that their work will not give them an extra line in the yearbook or transform them into campus big wheels. Their work is a personalized matter of aiding in a cause that they believe in and when they approach you they are giving you the chance to give a square deal to those who truly need it.

Your last chance for fun before exams!! Come to the Tri-Delt open house. Friday March 5 from 8.00-11.15. Dancing, bridge, and refreshments. Everyone welcome!!

The International Relations Club is sponsoring a Panel Discussion entitled "What is Communism?" It will take place in the Student Lounge, Waterman, on Friday, March 5, at 8 p.m. The speakers will be Professor Babcock, who will give the theory of Communism; Professor Evans, who will discuss the question: "Are the Russians Communistic?"; and Professor Levitsky, who will talk about the threat of Communism. The Panel Discussion will be followed by a question period. Everyone is cordially invited.

Student Court will convene Wednesday, March 10, at 7 p.m., to hear a case of alleged dishonesty in balloting during the recent election for Kake Work king and queen. The trial will be open to all students and will probably be held on third floor Waterman. The accused are two male students of the University.

During the Spring Quarter a course in Russian Literature in translation will be given by Robert F. Stoel, instructor in the English Department. Five novels will be read from the works of Turgenyev, Dostoevsky, and Tolstoy. Oral and written reports will be required. The number of students admitted to the course will be limited, and permission of the instructor is necessary before enrolling.

The Office of Placement has received notice from a well-known company stating that they will be interested in hiring two or three chemistry majors.

They plan to hire one inorganic analytical chemist and one in organic analysis. Further information can be had in Room 104, Waterman Building.

Mr. E. R. Weaver, assistant personnel director of the Prudential Life Insurance Company will be visiting the campus to interview June graduates on April 2nd.

He is interested in talking to business administration and liberal arts graduates. These positions are in the home office and do not involve selling.

Appointments to see Mr. Weaver are being made in Room 104, Waterman Building.

All student bills must be paid on or before March 12 to permit students to take their final quarter examinations.

We Are Four

Jo Buck

One evening, one of the firstnings of the year, my small family was seated before the fire in the living room. My family was relaxed. My younger brother, Butch, had been tardy for supper and, upon opening the door, was scolded by my father who, rather typically, did so for explanations.

Finally, Butch turned a rather shade of red and asked to go. He returned about five minutes later, the most miserable looking man that I have ever laid eyes on. He explained that he had found him in the snow and had bedded him in the garage preparatory to presenting him to the family.

Immediately, my understanding apologized and began making up the bed in the kitchen. My helpless mother looked knowingly at me and I realized that the number of children in my little family had increased by one.

As a rule, I don't like dogs, but this was the exception. His joyful bark as he entered the house, his soft feet when he awakened us in the morning, his soft, pink tongue on my face, one who stooped to pat him when we came to the four who had given him home. Gradually, he entered the family. Each of us so that he was soon accepted, wanted member of the family.

To be sure, Skippy was not a dog. He certainly was not a win any prizes, unless prizes were for adoration, affection, and understanding. He was a little, brown mongrel, sawed off tail, cocky ears, and brown eyes. He ran on sturdy legs that never seemed to tire, fast enough. He loved to sit on his rug before the hearth on winter's night after a hard day of work through the snow.

Spring came, and we began to feel an uncharacteristic uneasiness. Finally, with the ebbing away of the snow, our dog disappeared. My dad had anticipated this and had softened the blow, but, to Butch's surprise, it seemed as if a part of ourselves had been lost with Skippy.

It is winter again, and soon the snow will be thick on the ground. The family sits for hours before the fire. And poor Butch stares at the wall until he can stand it no longer, quietly goes to bed.

My mother and dad have always been early this evening and I am sitting finishing my homework. It is so quiet I can hear the first snow falling steps outside. Somehow, the room is a little like soft, padding foot on the wind banging the storm door, like scratchings on the door. It is Skippy returning to his winter. At any rate, it will do no harm to investigate as I have a dozen times as many dozen nights before. Maybe this

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

With the 51st Kake Walk a thing of the past, the SAE house has finally settled to normal. During the week-end the chapter house was the gathering place for numerous alums. John Lantman '47, Doug Parizeau '47, Al Tomosetti and George Collins were among the visitors. Along with these guests, we received a visit from Barry McNulty, assistant chapter supervisor, who although visiting in an official capacity, had the opportunity to see our Winter Festival.

Sunday afternoon the house was visited by the members and their dates, along with numerous other guests. Refreshments were served and the chaperons were Prof. and Mrs. B. C. Douglass and Prof. and Mrs. William Adams. Donald Kendall and his social committee were responsible for the affair.

One more SAE pin has disappeared and has been seen on Natalie Salls '48, a Tri Delt. The donor of this pin is none other than Norman F. Dennis '50. Congratulations to both.

The carpenters, painters, electricians, plumbers, and foremen of the house have been working night and day to finish the job on the amusement room in the basement. The extra details have been finished to make the amusement room both pleasant and attractive. A loud-speaker, which is connected to the combination radio-victrola on the first floor, will provide music for dancing and relaxation.

With the completion of our game room in the basement, numerous other house improvements are now underway. Among these are a boardwalk for the path in front of the house, a new stove (we mean it) for the kitchen, and one more room is being made in the second floor hall to increase the capacity of the house. During the recess at the end of the quarter the floors on the first floor are to be sanded and polished.

At present plans are being formulated to form a Minerva Club, consisting of wives, mothers and daughters of SAEs. This club is being organized under the direction of Burns R. Eastman and Robert N. Harrington.

SIGMA GAMMA

Barb Prior has finally moved back to Essex Junction and Florence Davis has taken her place at the Summit Street Prison, or the Home Management House as it is called in the higher circles. (Even the same cell and cot—imagine that!)

Two members were initiated recently and they are Dorcas Hadwen '49 and Jean Preston '50. Taking over in the pledge ranks, the following officers have been elected: Mildred McNeilly, president; Margaret Coffin, vice-president; and Olive Pratt, secretary.

SIGMA NU

To the boys at the Lodge this remain is regarded as "back to normal" week. It was a lovely Kake Walk, but at least for one week, we're glad it's over!

Sigma Nu takes this opportunity to thank all those who congratulated us on our ice sculpture. It seems that a few thousand others in this fair city thought it worth seeing and recording for posterity, and having their kiddies pat our icy "dogs"—(we thought they were Catamounts!). But the fun was worth the traffic jam, both in the street and around our cake Saturday night. To the other hard-working interfraters, congratulations on another successful Kake Walk.

It is rumored that Al Schoff dropped his newly acquired frat pin to a red-haired beaut from Newport named Elaine Newman. Congrats—All! Of course he's only one of the many as have about eight other fellows in the past six months. To old renegades like us, this step toward the iron collar is highly esteemed. We mustn't forget the guys whose plans have swung into action with the recent engagement announcements of Audrey Hutchins, Alpha Chi Omega to pledge Ed Bickford, and Jo-Anne Walkover, Beta Sigma Phi to Walt Collins.

Leaving Cupid, we look forward to the darkness of finals and the bright light of Easter "vacation" shining in the near future. May the profs have enjoyed Kake Walk as much as we, and have mercy on our souls! Adios again!

TAU EPSILON PHI

At a recent election of officers of Tau Epsilon Phi, Joseph W. Waterman succeeded Martin Goodman as chancellor, Stanley Fram succeeded "Bud" Lippman as vice-chancellor and Richard Kinsler succeeded Ivers Rifkin as secretary. Other officers elected were Alfred Goldberg, bursar; and Marvin Stone, warden.

TEP was pleased to welcome back to Kake Walk week-end Bill Birnbaum from Hofstra and Alan Kraft from B. U. Law School. Another welcome alumnus was Henry Seemans from Boston, a member of the Alumni Council of U.V.M. and an active organizer for the Centennial Field Athletic Field House Drive.

In addition to the regular Kake Walk festivities TEP men and their dates and folks enjoyed a delicious banquet at the fraternity house Saturday evening.

R.O.A.

"U.M.T. will not corrupt 'junior'" said Colonel Crooks. Addressing the R.O.A. members at the regular meeting of the U.V.M. chapter, Colonel Crooks gave the highlights of the Experimental Universal Military Training Program at Fort Knox which he recently visited. His report of the set-up there displaces any preconceived notions that such a training regime could be detrimental to the youth of the nation. On the contrary, Colonel Crooks found the Experimental Universal Military Training Unit to be not only morale building, but more important, moral building for our young men. Should a program of U.M.T. become a law, parents need have no qualms lest Junior be thrown in with a hard-living, tough-talking outfit of regular army men or be regimented into an Army career.

At the business meeting, several committees reports were heard. The tutoring program for the benefit of members of the athletic teams who need extra help in their studies is well under way. Recently inaugurated as the R.O.A.'s contribution to the U.V.M. academic program, its members give their time and services to help the athletes in Chemistry, Physics, Math., and Languages. Plans are underway for the annual R.O.A. dinner to which gala affair all U.V.M. veterans will be invited. A membership drive is also underway to spur all eligible members on campus to join the R.O.A.

SOCIAL ACTION COMM.

Social Action Committee held a meeting Friday, February 6 at which plans were made for a meeting with Miss Simpson regarding the housing policy in the Old Mill. Replies from Columbia, Mississippi, McGill, Colorado, and Middlebury Colleges concerning their housing policy and quota system were received. It was decided to hold a public meeting in the student lounge some time after Kake Walk.

Thomas Viertel gave a report concerning movies which showed minority groups in an unfavorable light. He said that there is a possibility of a special showing of "Gentleman's Agreement" in Burlington at students' rates. This film has been accepted as one of the most outstanding of the year.

The S.C.A. organized several community projects and would like to see anyone who is interested in working on them. You need no previous experience in this work—only an interest in helping other people. The projects include:

1. Hospital Work—Mary Fletcher Hospital needs volunteers for work in the words, labs, operating rooms and dispensary. Anyone who is interested in any work of this kind is urged to volunteer their services right away.
2. Community Center—The little house on Cherry Street is where the underprivileged children spend their afternoon hours. They need no supervision—only someone to help with their games, play the piano, or just "be there."
3. Scouting—The Girl Scouts need someone to lead troops or to assist in their projects. Here is a job for troop leaders or for girls who would like to lead folk dancing, singing, nature study or hiking.
4. Rock Point—Rock Point, a school for homeless girls, would welcome students who would give some time to come out and teach handicraft and art to the girls.

With your help, these projects a success. If you feel that you can contribute some time to any one of these projects, please contact S.C.A. at

UNITARIAN GROUP

"When You Were a Tadpole and a Fish" is the opening line of a poem by Langdon Smith which was read at the last meeting of the Channing Foundation Unitarian College group. "Evolution and Religion" was the theme of the meeting opened so appropriately by Mr. Heininger's reading of the poem. Ernest Hartung of the University of Vermont Department led the discussion.

Meetings are held at 30 Elmwood on alternate Sundays at 7 p.m. All students interested in liberal religion are cordially invited to attend.

How many operators will we need NEXT YEAR?

This is but one of the many questions telephone men are called upon to answer.

Part of their work has always been to anticipate demands for personnel . . . to determine what additional equipment must be provided, what new construction will be necessary to handle the constantly increasing demands for service.

Careful planning in every phase of telephone work requires the services of many qualified men. For them, this growing business offers the opportunity for active, interesting careers.

There's a future in telephony.

Torrid Evansmen Sweep Three Game Trip

U.V.M. 63—Springfield 48

Vermont's Catamounts, in their first encounter of their three game fling at the outside world slapped down Dr. Naimann's counterparts with a resounding 63-48 thud at Springfield's new field house last Friday evening. It was more than another check in the win column for the wandering Vermonters, for it broke a long standing jinx that the city of Springfield had on U.V.M.'s athletic teams and more than that, revenge for years loss which Killick, Jake and cohorts suffered at the hands of the Gymnasts.

The game was fast and furious all the way, but the Catamounts bared their teeth and ran right over the more rational-playing Springfield boys, never relinquishing the lead—much to the surprise of the big money men. With Pierce and Livingston breaking through the tight man to man defense almost at will for easy lay-ups, Vermont forged to an early lead and by the half had a comfortable 22 point margin.

Evansmen Determined

But the game was just getting to be fun and after one of Coach Evans' inspiring pep talks the stimulated Catamounts piled up a 22 point lead on every type of shot. Al Niemann played his usually brilliant floor game and tossed in a variety of hook shots to boot before being tossed out of the game himself late in the final chapter for committing five fouls.

The scoring was quite evenly distributed with Pierce, Collier, Niemann and Livingston hitting double figures.

Bright lights in a dark cause for Springfield were "Kootch" Kubachka and Burlington's own Pat Huntington who contributed nine and five points respectively.

U.V.M. 47—Coast Guard 43

Game number two of the Catamounts' latest road trip ended in a catastrophe for the powerful Coast Guard Academy five last Saturday evening at New London, Conn. The Cats led throughout the fray as Capt. "Daniel Boone" Kotlarczyk split the strings time and again with his long accurate set shot.

Livingston, Kotlarczyk and Big Al Niemann combined their efforts in the first quarter to flush the sailors down the drain with a gush of twin counters which ended in a twelve point advantage at halftime.

The third canto was a little more even and quite a bit more furious as the Green and Gold fought off a stubborn rally by the Red and White. A total of 47 fouls was called on the two teams, most of them in the last quarter as the pace quickened. Ken Pierce left early in this chapter being guilty of five fouls, but the Cats carried on admirably and kept the damper on the sailors.

Win No. 12

This victory was the twelfth against six losses for the Evans clan. With but one tussle remaining after this trip, it appears that the Green and Gold will end the season with a very respectable record indeed.

U.V.M. 54—Williams 45

The University of Vermont Catamounts completed its highly successful road trip by downing a stubborn Williams College five 54-45, and thus Coach "Fuzzy" Evans' hope for a 70 percent victorious season becomes more and more of a reality. This was the thirteenth victory against only six defeats for the Evansmen, and now all that remains between them and their goal is the not so impressive, but ever dangerous St. Michael's five.

The Cats were pressed all the way in getting by unlucky thirteen, but with the good right arms of Pierce, Livingston and Kotlarczyk, coupled with the defensive play of Al Niemann they came through with colors flying.

"Hi Eddie" Kotlarczyk opened the scoring with a long set and the Catamounts were on their way with a two point lead—never to be headed. The game began to look like a romp as Vermont took a 28-17 half-time advantage, but the home team was not to be denied and came roaring back strong in the next ten minutes to narrow the gap to 32-35. But then Pat Farma, Art Collier, Al Niemann and Hammy Livingston all hit with consecutive two pointers, upping the margin to eleven points, and enabling the Cats to coast on to victory.

Ken Pierce led the victorious Catamounts with 18 counters, while Jack Mason with 16 and the flashy Bill Dittmar with 13, led the home quintet.

Careers at GENERAL ELECTRIC

PHYSICIST...CHEMIST...ENGINEER

For each, General Electric has assignments to his liking

General Electric is not one business, but an organization of many businesses. Graduates of American colleges and universities are finding that the 93 plants of General Electric offer opportunities to all degrees of specialists, all sorts of enthusiasms, all kinds of careers.

ATOMIC PHYSICIST

With the construction of both a new Atomic Power Laboratory and a new Research Laboratory at Schenectady, and with the operation of the huge plutonium-producing Hanford Works in Washington, the opportunities which General Electric offers in all phases of nuclear research are increasing rapidly. Dr. Herbert C. Pollock (left) works now with electron accelerators.

CHEMIST

General Electric is the largest molder of finished plastics parts in the world. It has also aided in the development of silicones, new chemical compounds from which a whole new industry is springing. Chemical engineers and chemists like Dr. J. J. Pyle, who became director of the G-E Plastics Laboratories at the age of 29, are planning careers with General Electric.

ELECTRONICS SPECIALIST

For good reason, General Electric's Electronics Park has been called the "Greatest Electronics Center in the World." Its laboratories, shops, and production lines are the most modern of their kind. It's a Mecca for men like Dick Longfellow, who has worked his way up through television and high-frequency assignments and is today section engineer in charge of ground radar equipment.

Sports Parade Of Yesteryears . . .

During the fall of 1894 the rivalry between Middlebury and Vermont was further agitated through three football games, one in particular. This was the first time in several years that the two schools had met, but there was still the old desire to beat a school, in the same state, which was of similar size. The first game, played on October 20, at Athletic field, resulted in a 12 to 0 victory for U.V.M. Woodward, captain and star of the team, ran one touchdown for 55 yards. The second game was won by Middlebury 14 to 0. They scored three touchdowns and one goal after touchdown. Back in the eighties a touchdown counter for four points and a conversion would garner two points U.V.M. retaliated in the last game by beating the Panthers 4 to 0. The game was played at Vergennes on November 10, in soupy mud and snow. The game was stopped in the middle of the second half when several Middlebury rooters attacked Captain Woodward. Throughout the game Woodward had been making long runs and generally making it tough for the Middlebury team. From time to time shouts of "Kill Woodward" were expressed by the Blue and White rooters. Finally their frenzy and emotions reached the point of action when they clubbed Woodward with umbrellas and canes as he came near the sidelines to tackle a Middlebury player. The local police broke up what was a potential free-for-all between Middlebury and Vermont supporters. The game was officially conceded to U.V.M.

Vt. Organizes Hockey Squad

In January 1895 a hockey team was organized by the students, but only one game was played (no mention of the results could be found). Hockey was still in its infancy even though the game was organized at McGill University in 1870; the students here at Vermont showed much interest in the game however. The tennis tournaments of 1895 and 1896 were definitely of a better variety than they had been in years before. The medical school supplied some excellent competition in these two years to give the tournament a needed boost.

Vermont resigned from the New England Intercollegiate Athletic Association in the spring of 1895 because of difficulties in obtaining a gym, equipment, an athletic field and financial assistance. An editorial on the subject stated that colleges in the same financial class as U.V.M. were able to support their track and field athletes. But the University apparently stuck to the old tradition of non-expenditures for athletic teams and as a result the school lost a splendid opportunity for recognition in New England track and field circles. There was good material but no financial support to back it up.

Baseball Team Comes Through

The baseball team of 1895 lost the majority of the games played on the southern trip through the lack of an experienced and seasoned ball club. A good share of the players were playing their first year of varsity ball, however by the time the season was over they proved to be very good material. Much improvement was shown when the Cuban Giants paid their annual visit to the campus. The series proved to be one of the most exciting in years. The first game, which was played on Memorial Day, ended in a 9 to 9 deadlock after eleven innings of play. Both teams scored two runs in the eleventh inning which made the score all knotted up, but darkness caused a cease in hostilities. Vermont won the second game by 15 to 8 and the Giants evened things up in the series by taking the last game 14 to 6. By the time the New England trip was to be made the team had rounded into a fairly good ball club. They lost the first game to Brown but they won four in a row after that from some very good competition. Worcester Poly was defeated 9 to 2; Holy Cross lost to U.V.M. by 11 to 3; Harvard was beaten 9 to 6; and St. Lawrence received a thorough trouncing by losing to Vermont by 32 to 5.

U. V. M. Downs Ivy League Nines

The baseball team of the spring of 1896 did not go south, a New York trip was substituted in place of the annual trip. Union, Cornell and West Point were all beaten by Vermont. U.V.M. won two close ones from the latter two teams. Cornell was beaten 8 to 7 after they had used three pitchers and Army lost out by one run when U.V.M. defeated them 9 to 8. Dartmouth was beaten twice here at Burlington by identical scores of 5 to 4. Of the remaining games that were played away, Vermont trimmed Tufts twice, split a double header with Bates, and one with Dartmouth, lost two to a strong Wesleyan team, defeated Colby by eight runs, and upset a strong Amherst team by a 2 to 1 score.

Kappa Sigs Send Playoff Into Third Game By Upsetting Delta Psi's 37-36

By DICK MCGILL

The Kappa Sigma basketball team, winner of league "A" during regular season play, sprang a surprise 37-36 victory over Delta Psi last Saturday afternoon in the University gymnasium. In the second game of a best two out of three series to determine the team to meet the pride of the Independents, the Kappa Sigs put on a great last minute battle to come from behind and win. The Deltas were undefeated school champions last year and were seemingly headed towards the same goal when they won the first game easily 45-34. This easy victory apparently gave the Summit street crew a false confidence from which they were quickly shaken.

The underdogs demonstrated early in the game that the second game would not be a repeat performance of the first. Putting their best forward they managed to attain a 21-19 lead at the half time. During the third quarter the powerful Deltas showed their speed and went ahead 28-27 with ten minutes to go.

The fourth and vital quarter saw the Deltas build their lead to four points with only one minute to go. Referee Linsenmeir called a technical foul on the Kappa Sig team and Captain Kehoe calmly split the nets to give the Deltas a 36-31 lead. To all present these points meant the game and the second consecutive interfraternity crown for Delta Psi. Big John Hoskiewicz, however, had just begun to fight. From mid-court John hoisted a high one that had two points on it all the way. Proving that Captain "Hi-Eddie" Kotlarczyk is only one of the Kappa Sig dead eyes, Charlie Lewkowicz used this moment to get his fifth long one of the game. With eight seconds to go and the Deltas out front 36-35, Big John once more got possession of the ball at mid-court. Ignoring the frantic Deltas he scored on a great long shot, his second in 30 ticks of the clock. These two points were enough for the Kappa Sigs. The Deltas, baffled by six points in 30 seconds could not recover and went down to defeat 37-36.

For Kappa Sigma Hoskiewicz was the hero but the terrific floor game of his teammates can not be overlooked. Kehoe was high scorer for the game with five field goals and three foul conversions for 13 points.

The third and last game is scheduled to come off at 7.30 on March 3, in the University gymnasium. This should be a torrid contest from the opening whistle. Whichever team wins, the interfraternity leagues are sure to have a capable representative in the play-offs with the independent winner. Statistics for the second game are as follows:

ATO's Win Bowling Crown For Second Consecutive Year

ATO annexed its second consecutive Interfraternity Bowling League championship last week. After an early season rush the ATOs were knocked off the top when the Kappa Sigs handed them their only defeat. Led by George Stanley, the standout bowler of the league, the ATOs came back to sweep their last five matches and win the crown by three points.

The fight for second position and three points on the Traynor Trophy was waged between Kappa Sigma and Phi Sigma Delta. The Kappa Sigs in the final match of the season took six points from the Phi Sigs and claims undisputed ownership of the runner-up position. Immediately behind the Phi Sigs are the Sig Phis, Sigma Nu, Phi Delta, SAE, and Delta Psi, trailing in that order. The bottom two teams TEP and Lambda Iota were unable to have a team at most of their matches and as a result neither was able to win a match.

Final standings of the league:

Team	Won	Lost	Pts.
ATO	8	1	56
Kappa Sigma	8	1	53
Phi Sigma Delta	7	2	47
Sigma Phi	6	3	39
Sigma Nu	5	4	34

W.A.A. Notes

By RUTH WARRELL

Managers Janet Brackenridge and Pat Brush meet each Tuesday night with the Badminton Club. Although there is no specific instruction the girls practice and then play off by "Round Robins." The final play-off was last Tuesday night; the winners were Jane Hooper and Pat Brush. Congratulations, girls!

When I called Joan Chapman, manager of the skating club, she simply said, "Oh, dear!" and I got what she meant—the weather. It looks as though regular skating classes are over for this winter although there may be a few who can get in individual credit during favorable weather conditions.

It's swimming down at the Y this Thursday night. The special occasion is that of the National Women's Telegraphic Swimming Contest. The girls will be racing for records which will be sent in to compete with records from all the other women's colleges. The five girls who are racing are Tessie Gay, Nancy Bachman, Jean Hard, Dorothy Elmer and Polly McMurdo. You're invited to watch.

Last week Lillian Tucker and Martha Wood were sent to Smith to see the Smith Life Guard give its annual water ballet. They were much impressed by it and hope that, with the start that they had last fall doing this same type of swimming, they may be able to sponsor an annual show here at U.V.M.

If your favorite W.A.A. Club has not been reviewed here as yet watch for it next quarter. Also watch for the schedule of classes which will appear as soon as they can be definitely arranged and join at least one club for fun and friends.

EVANSMEN MEET ST. MICHAELS SATURDAY IN FINAL CONTEST

Coach Fuzzy Evans' red hot University of Vermont Catamounts will close their season here tonight when they tangle once again with the Purple Knights from St. Michael's. The game will be played at the Memorial Auditorium and will start at 8.00 p.m., following a preliminary tussle between the Vermont Kittens and the tough St. Mike's frosh.

The Catamounts, now boasting an impressive 13-6 won and lost record as a result of their fine showing this last weekend, will be definite favorites to take the second meeting between the two clubs. Having already won the state conference the Cats have two goals to work for tonight. The first one being the winning of their twentieth straight state conference win. The second goal will be a bit harder to achieve and will have to be performed by one of two Cats. That is the capturing of the state scoring race. Up to tonight's game Dean of St. Michael's is out in front with 197 points. Hammy Livingston is right behind him with 194 and Kenny Pierce is also in the race with 185. Dean has played one more game than the two Vermont scorers. So it is up to either Hammy or Kenny to take the lead away from Dean tonight and let all the basketball laurels rest with Vermont for another year.

V. J. C. Sponsors Girls Basketball Tourney; W. A. A. Team Second

Not only was the boys' basketball team on the road this week-end but also were the upperclass girls from our W.A.A. who accepted an invitation from the Women's Athletic Association of Vermont Junior College to play in its first basketball playday. With Mrs. Jackie Craig as chaperone nine girls started out early Saturday morning and arrived in Montpelier just in time to see the first game played between Green Mountain Junior College and Vermont Junior College. There was no victory in this match; the game was a tie, 29 to 29. At 10.30 the U.V.M. girls were ready to play V.J.C. The forwards of the game (for U.V.M.) were Margaret Jenne, Norma Stephenson, Capt. Patty Tucker, and Emily Young. The girls who played guards were Roberta Bicknell, Carol Farmer, Doris Hoffnagle, Mildred Joslyn, and Rose-Mary Traynor. This game was easily taken by our girls with a 25 to 17 score.

After a lunch at the college, U.V.M. faced another opponent—this time Green Mountain. The girls really played for this and at the half it looked as though they were holding Green Mountain for another tie but the latter ran away with a 28 to 23 victory over our girls. This gave Green Mountain the championship for the week-end, having one tie and one win. The U.V.M. girls were second with one win and one loss. These are the games that were held and the results. However, don't take them too seriously as V.J.C. assures us that the purpose of this new idea is not to stimulate competition but to provide a get-together so that the girls might meet others in W.A.A. teams. And to prove their hospitality, V.J.C. sponsored an informal dance after the banquet that night. When the girls arrived back Sunday morning they all reported having had a wonderful time and agreed with V.J.C. that the week-end might come to be an annual affair. Special credit should go to the W.A.A. managers who put quite a bit of time into practice with the girls. They are Pat Tucker and Rose-Mary Traynor.

Rep. Smith Welcomes Return of Youth to Republican Interests

Calls for New Leaders before Young Republicans

Members of the newly-formed Young Republicans Club on the campus gathered in East Hall last Friday afternoon for their first meeting and heard Frederick P. Smith, Burlington City Representative and announced candidate for the Republican nomination to the Congress of the United States, congratulate them on their political interest and state that the primary hope of the national Republican Party is in the fact that the Party is once again drawing the youth of the nation.

The speaker was introduced by Edward Costello of Rutland, temporary chairman, who, with Dean Moore of Middlebury, organized the club.

Criticizing the "vacillation, indecision, uncertainty obvious in high levels of our government," the speaker charged that the lack of progress toward permanent solution of our most vital problems, domestic and foreign, means that we are in danger of drifting toward economic collapse and war. Calling for new and vital leadership, he asserted that our problems can be solved only after years of long planning and patient effort. With all respect for the advantages of age and experience, the speaker emphasized his conviction that able, responsible, young leadership is needed in Congress at this time.

Such leadership will bring a fresh viewpoint, physical vitality and stamina, a driving incentive to succeed. He said "Whatever else war service may have done to us, it did give us a realistic attitude."

Outlining his stand on some phases of national affairs, Mr. Smith asserted that there is no realistic alternative to military strength until international organization can assure world peace. He advocated strong army, air, and naval forces, and continued concentration on scientific research. Universal military training, he said, is necessary and realistic under present conditions, but should be under control of educational and scientific authorities as well as a military.

We must maintain a strong, stable and highly productive economy to support our national debt and our military and social programs. "To do this a soundly conducted free economy with emphasis on education is better than any form of mixed economy. Every government over and over, and all our individual collective self-control and common sense, must be devoted to preventing any recurrence of periodic depressions. The immediate need is for legislation to coordinate government powers and activities to assure the stability of our economy."

Stressing the importance of national unity and loyalty, he emphasized the need for continued watchful protection of civil liberties together with additional measures to assure security and equality of opportunity to individuals, including such initiative measures as the extension of higher educational opportunity to all who can benefit from it.

In international affairs, he stated: "If we are to maintain leadership toward world peace, we must develop, state, and adhere to a firm, consistent, frank foreign policy on principle. The world must know at all times where we stand and what we are prepared to do to support our policy. At last, and always, we must work through the United Nations toward an organization with no veto power and with adequate military force to ensure peace."

In conclusion, Representative Smith said: "If we maintain progressive leadership, we need never fear that many of our people will turn away from traditional American attitudes and ways of thinking."

A question period followed the speech.

Kiwanis Club Offers Special Student Rate At Violin Concert

Leona Flood Appears April 6 At Auditorium

The Kiwanis Club of Burlington, which is sponsoring the violinist, Leona Flood, at a concert April 6 at 8.15 in the Memorial Auditorium has offered U.V.M. students specially reduced tickets. The student tickets, which benefit the club's underprivileged children fund, are on sale at the bookstore and are priced at $6.00, $1.50 and $1.80.

Leona Flood made her first debut in Oslo, Norway, the home of her maternal grandparents, at the age of 16, and for two seasons played in London, Berlin, Paris, Vienna, Warsaw, and other leading capitals. She began to study the violin at the age of five.

The Kiwanis Club has a twofold purpose in presenting Miss Flood to Burlington: To give the city's music lovers the opportunity to hear her play on this old, rare Stradivarius violin, and to build up the fund with which they are attempting to brighten the lives of Burlington's underprivileged children.

Outing Club Adopts New Constitution

Adoption of the new constitution was the chief order of business for the Outing Club at the open Council meeting which was held Tuesday evening, February 24. Pres. Dave Hagar presented the constitution and it was unanimously adopted. It is designed to provide a framework upon which future activities of the club can be based.

Phil Davis gave a Treasurer's report. Running the ski meet, fixing up the ski jump and furnishing the Outing Club cabin represented the main expenditures during the past few months. Other business was discussed including plans for future hikes. However, the lack of snow is hindering activities along this line.

Following the business meeting, Professor Puffer exhibited some of the Kodachrome slides that he has taken during his many years of hiking. The slides depicted in beautiful color and fine detail some of the wonderful scenery and breath-taking views to be seen among "our friendly mountains." He interspersed comments about the adventures and mishaps that have befallen him on some of the trips among the Green Mountains, the White Mountains and the Adirondacks.

The Outing Club hopes to hold more of these interesting programs during the coming months. They should appeal to all who love the great outdoors.

McGill Prof. To Speak To Sigma Xi March 11

Sigma Xi, the scientific honorary society at U.V.M., will hold a dinner in the President's dining room at Waterman on Thursday March 11 at 6.15 p.m. The dinner is open to members only.

However at 8.00 p.m. in Room 239, Waterman, there will be an address open to U.V.M. students and the public. The speaker will be Dr. J. Stuart Foster, professor of physics at McGill University. His subject will be "The McGill Cyclotron."

Doctor Foster has been doing important work in radar. They are now building the "Cyclotron" for work in nuclear physics at McGill. Anyone interested in physics or any phase of science should be sure to attend.

Meeting On Communism Crowded By Students

Students and townspeople crowded the student lounge for a panel discussion on several aspects of Communism as presented by Professors Evans, Babcock, Levitsky under the sponsorship of the International Relations Club, Friday evening, March 5.

In answer to the question, "What Is Communism?" Professor Babcock replied with a description of the three kinds: Utopian or the naive belief in a society which spelled happiness for all with no private property. The experiments of Robert Owen, Fourier and St. Simon exemplified this ideal. Marxism was the second type discussed and brought up the theory of conflict as the direct result of class struggle. Probably the dominant factor of the Marxist creed is its advocacy of revolution by an exploited proletariat followed by the establishment of a dictatorship of the proletariat group. Communism as practiced in Russia was also treated with special emphasis on the writings of Lenin and Stalin who interpreted Marxism according to the Russian background.

Professor Evans of the history department next took over the podium with a presentation of the various aspects of Communism as practiced in Soviet Russia. According to Mr. Evans, Russia does not pretend to be truly Communist but only on the way. He brought out opposite views of Trotsky and Stalin especially concerning the Communization of the peasant. Communism claims that it alone can end exploitation of one man by another and in Russia they claim that they have put an end to economic exploitation.

The future of Communism was thoroughly discussed by Professor Levitsky who forwarded the idea that it is today

Phi Beta Kappa Chapter Initiates Eight Seniors

Agreement Between Vt. Scandinavian U. Made

The U.V.M. Board of Trustees at their meeting Saturday approved an arrangement of students between U.V.M. and a Scandinavian college. The college is as yet unknown.

One of the main subjects discussed and approved was an adjustment whereby the University of Vermont Medical College will furnish pathological service to Gifford Hospital, Randolph; Heaton Hospital, Montpelier; and Barre City Hospital.

The Trustees also voted to create an advisory committee for the School of Education and Nursing, similar to the one now existing for the Agricultural College. The Agricultural Committee now in operation for approximately two years is made up of Farm Bureau members and farmers. It has proved highly successful as a steering committee, in the formation of policies.

Committee changes included Carlton A. Howe and Elias Lyman to the Auditing Committee, replacing Herbert R. Pierce and Joseph B. Johnson; John E. Lovely to the Executive Committee replacing Horace H. Powers; Ray W. Collins and Father Joyce to Buildings and Grounds Committee, in place of Lovely and Howe.

On the Education Committee: Collins replacing Pierce, College of Agriculture; Father Joyce in place of Powers, College of Arts and Sciences; and Lyman replacing Johnson, College of Technology.

The Board confirmed the degrees of 15 students who completed the requirements at the end of the fall quarter and of two students who became eligible for degrees at the end of the summer session.

The degrees were conferred as follows: Bachelor of Arts, Harold R. Archambault, Fort Ann, N. Y.; Paul W. Carey, Ludlow; Robert Ehrenbard, New York City; Grace B. Parks, Burlington.

Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering, Leroy H. Danyow, Jr., Enosburg Falls. Bachelor of Science in Electrical Engineering, Frederick A. Bosworth, Middlebury; Willard H. Buttles, Burlington; L. Richard Fisher, Hardwick; Robert Soule, Burlington. Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering, Marcelino Diez, Barre; Robert A. Humphrey, Needham, Mass.; John L. Kotuby, Rutland.

Bachelor of Science in Nursing Education, Irma M. Olson, Rutland. Bachelor of Science in Education, Wendell J. Ryan, Manchester, Conn.; Cecil J. Shapland, Jr., St. Albans.

Bachelor of Education, K. Salome Martin, Hinesburg; Mary B. Sennett, Poultney.

Large Audience Hears Dr. Stoehr at Lecture

On Friday, February 27, Dr. Richard Stoehr gave a lecture entitled "Principles of Musical Expression On the Piano" followed by a recital of some of his own works. The program, which was sponsored jointly by the Fleming Museum Association and the Ladies of the Faculty Music Group, was very well attended.

Dr. Stoehr began his talk by telling an interesting fact which he discovered (by means of slow motion apparatus) while he was still in Vienna. He said that a very good violinist achieves the sweetness of tone due to the tremendous rate of vibration of his left hand which makes the tone much more complex. He pointed out that on the piano it was not possible to make a key vibrate. Here we depend on other ways of rendering the music more expressive. One of these was to vary the loudness; but the most important was the device of "Agogics," the slowing down at certain parts of a composition. With the help of slides which

Ability of Young Men, Women Stressed in Talk

Eight student initiations to Vermont Alpha of Phi Beta Kappa were a part of the ceremonies marking the 100th anniversary of the chapter's founding, which was commemorated on the University of Vermont campus on Sunday, March 7.

The students who were elected to membership include two from the class of 1947, H. David Frank of Burlington and Robert Fitzsimmons of West Rutland. Six students, all from the class of 1948, as follows were elected to membership: Julia L. Hurley, Spring Valley, N. Y.; Margaret B. Larrabee, Hardwick; Marilyn A. Leathers, Nashua, N. H.; Albert Lowenfels, White Plains, N. Y.; Claire B. Muldoon, St. Albans; and Paul Pascal, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Other events on the centennial program included a general convocation at 3.30 p.m. in Southwick Memorial building at which time Dr. Frank Aydelotte of Princeton, N. J., was the speaker; a Lenten-Easter presentation of Haydn's "Creation" by the University Choir and Orchestra, in the Ira Allen Chapel at 4.30 and a banquet at 6.30 at Waterman building. Representatives from the six chapters which sponsored the foundation of the Vermont chapter brought greetings.

All the functions were well attended by members of Phi Beta Kappa, their wives or their husbands.

Speech By Dr. Aydelotte

"Our greatest natural resource in this country is not water power or mines or anything of that kind, but rather the ability of our young men and women," was the keynote struck by Dr. Frank Aydelotte in his speech at the convocation exercises in Southwick Memorial, Sunday afternoon, March 7 which commemorated the 100th anniversary of the Phi Beta Kappa Chapter of the University of Vermont.

Prior to Doctor Aydelotte's talk, four honorary members were elected to the U.V.M. Chapter. United Nations Delegate, Warren R. Austin, U.V.M. '99, Dr. Robert H. Chastney, principal of Montpelier High School; Dr. Edward N. Brush, U.V.M. '25, professor of psychology and director of graduate study at the University of Maine; and Bishop Vedder Van Dyck, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Vermont. The last three named honorary members were present at the ceremonies.

Doctor Aydelotte, former president of Swarthmore College and director emeritus of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton warned that the great increase in enrollment in colleges and universities might lower the "average standard of ability and attainment," of higher education.

Recommended by Doctor Aydelotte as a possible method of avoiding dilution of academic standards was the honor system of study. By more widespread use of this system, Doctor Aydelotte said, the exceptional student would be allowed to go ahead at his own pace without being retarded by less exceptional students. He suggested that Phi Beta Kappa give support to this movement.

In addition to members of the U.V.M. chapter, delegates from 23 chapters from other colleges and universities attended the ceremonies. Included among them were delegates from six colleges which sponsored the U.V.M. Chapter 100 years ago, Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Union, Bowdoin, and Brown.

Surely you've heard of those radio programs where, with their mouth full of soft-boiled egg and toast, the Master and Mistress of Ceremonies swap views on the Atom Bomb, Jack Benny, and Sweetheart Soap Flakes. This is an article just like that except that it is lunch instead of breakfast. The reason for this change is mainly that I can't act intelligent that early in the morning. It takes a long, long time to wake me up. At 1.00 p.m. Wednesday noon, I waited, in my brightest red shirt, on the second flight of steps going down into the Cafeteria. My guests today were to be the two leading UVM women skiers, Lena Gale '49 and Marjorie Gillam '50.

Promptly at one my guests arrived. Lena, an Alpha Chi, is the shorter of the two and looks like one of Mademoiselle's choices for the All-American girl, complete with freckles and turned-up nose. Marge is the delicate flower type, who probably looks wonderful in ski clothes. For some unknown reason, neither of the girls wore ski trousers, a fact for which I am eternally grateful.

At first I was rather worried as to how to keep them amused while waiting in the Cafeteria line-up, but the girls greeted each other like long-lost sisters and the battle was on. It seems that the girls had just heard that they had been chosen to represent Eastern United States in competing for Kate Smith International Trophy at Mount Gabriel, March 13-14. That kept them busy, conversationally speaking, until we got inside.

My original plan was to interview them as we ate, but Lena seemed so ravenous that I hesitated (Marge had already eaten). Finally however, I noticed that Lena had abandoned her fork and so, with my mouth full of cake, I started firing questions. It seems that both girls, to quote them, were 'born on skis.' I can imagine better natal care, but obviously the girls were perfectly happy that way. Marge began skiing at Rutland, at the tender age of three and Lena at the age of four at Stowe. Both girls come from skiing families. Marge has two older brothers who ski, and Lena 2 younger ones, but Lena said, with a non-committal shrug that her brothers, "weren't old enough to compete." Every Sunday both girls go skiing on Mount Mansfield where their favorite trails are the Nosedive and the Lord. Finally I asked the girls why they like skiing. For the first time my poised, at-ease, celebrities looked vaguely disconcerted. "Lena finally broke the ice with a five-word sentence, 'It's a Way of Life.' I had some doubts on that line, as I have skied, and believe me, life has nothing to do with it! Marge showed intelligence, surprising in one so pretty, reciting glibly, "Once it gets into your system you can't get it out."

The girls told me about their run at Pico Peak February 1, where Lena won first, and Marge second place, in the Slalom Run. They started, wisely enough, at the top of a long steep hill. After going through a tortuous flush, they turned sharply and sped through a hairpin turn followed by an H. From here on the run was nothing but a series of open and closed gates and one long flush by the finish line. If those terms mean nothing to you, don't be surprised, you have company. At any rate, congratulations and good luck, girls.

Health Council News

An enthusiastic meeting of the Health Council was held in Room 234 Waterman, Thursday evening, March 4. President Barbara Shen presided.

Projects to be sponsored through the end of this quarter and the beginning of the spring quarter are good grooming, posture and nutrition.

An informal discussion took place in regard to "mind fag" or that feeling that overwhelms students during dead week and exam time. Health officials were urged to bring the matter to the attention of their houses to see if a sensible attitude toward studying and finals could be inculcated in the minds of the students in the dorms.

Even though the Health Council is serving directly only the women on this campus, the men are invited to pick up any of the bulletins which may interest them. These bulletins are on the Health Council Board in "Bulletin Board Row,"

Rats Run Rampant . . .

by GLADYS NEIBURG

When better traps are made, Robinson Hall will undoubtedly use them!

At Robinson, so far this year, the size of the cute little animals has been reduced down to the "mice" size. Not a real, boisterous rat in the offing. But that fact did not console Elaine Schmidt, the lone freshman at Robinson, who still does not like them. In fact, she refused to sleep in the same room with them—and it was her room, too!

Elaine said she did not appreciate the shimmering movement of her housecoat as little mousey ran up and down the inside of the sleeve—the right sleeve. Fortunately for both Elaine and the little racer, the housecoat was on the foot of the bed, and not on Elaine at the moment.

And little mousey was not alone. He or she had a companion which made it two mice running around, scampering playfully, even unto the north end of the corridor where they were espied by Ann, the diligent maid. Ann ran to get a murderous broom. The mice ran.

Elaine elected to sleep in Charlotte Raymond's room—said room having a long, narrow window seat, with a warmed seat cover, not as thick nor comfortable as a "Lovely-rest" mattress, but a haven in the emergency even if Elaine did get—shall we say "side heavy" and fall onto the floor two times during the night.

A personal interview with Charlotte reveals that life is full of ironical injustices. "Monday night was the first night, in a long time" said Charlotte ruefully "that I got to bed and to sleep early. About midnight, I was rudely awakened by a pleading, scared voice asking me if it could sleep on my window seat. I didn't care where she slept. She slept on my window seat. And she disturbed me and woke me up twice by falling off and telling me she didn't know how it happened. Maybe she was getting even because I didn't offer her my bed, and sleep on the seat myself!" There was a slight pause. "I might just as well have for all the rest I got!"

The emergency squad, whoever or whatever they are, erected some traps. One adorned Elaine's room. One adorned the floor of the hall leading to the back door. No doubt, if baited with good, nutritious not-too-starchy food, little Miss Mouse

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The Tri-Delts and their guests served a delicious supper at the Monday night by that stand-in "Mystery Chef," Delta Psi's own ty" Ingram. Then instead of a Miss Maralice Kelly of the economics department spoke on Fabric and Fashion for 1948." It was interestingly supplemented by a display of fabrics and pictures to various points. The girls extended appreciation to Miss Kelly for her and interest. (Our hats off to too!)

and Mister Mouse may enter the hunting grounds for mice, with full from a delicious last meal.

Elaine removed the trap from her room and put it into Beth Mack's room. said it did not touch the nice corner put on the trap for it, but it was Beth's room which was larger. It was around in there and covered more territory, it might get hungry enough a delicious cookie.

The optimist of the house in Robinson next door to Elaine's room said to Elaine. If you catch these two, be only eleven more to go. Usually are thirteen in a nest!"

This is not the first mouse episode at Robinson Hall. Last fall, Lowell and Carolyn Kelly were around as though lost and forlorn. the hall they limped while mice scampered unfettered, foot loose and fancy free in their room. The holes to the runway found and the strong arm squad University blocked up the holes. Dotty and Carolyn sleep peacefully calmly—undisturbed by the patter of mouse feet.

Last year, the animal episode became epoch. Possibly the mice were more daring. Perhaps they ate chocolate bars so much they would climb the highest mountains for them. did climb up into the pocket of a hanging in the clothes closet—and Ella Chamer said it was the limit they did that, and refused to sleep in their room even though it was Shorty's room and Shorty's chocolate bars had heard mice in her room, and taking no chances. She moved. The mice stayed and were relieved of earthly worries.

Last year's mice were utterly thoughtless. They did not appreciate their comfortable quarters during a time of housing shortage. Nor did they care for their manners as guests when they were on sampling and nibbling chocolate when chocolate bars were scarce.

Vermont Hoop Squad Rolls To Final Victory

Sports Slants

By SAM HOUSTON

The winter sports program drew to a close last Saturday night at the Memorial Auditorium as the Catamount hoop squad racked up win number fourteen against St. Michael's College. The hockey team and the ski team closed their seasons two weeks ago in not quite so much glory.

The Evansmen after getting off to a slow start in December (one win out of four), rebounded to take twelve of the remaining fifteen games to end up with a good fourteen and six won and lost record. Congratulations go to both Coach Evans and the members of the squad for their fine season.

Dark Future for Vermont?

With the winter sports program concluded and with a lull before we start our spring activities, it seems like a good time to look into the chances for future winning Green and Gold teams. Much has been written on the possibility of this future being very dark and many have said that Vermont will take a back seat even next year.

In football the Catamounts already succumbed insofar as the state championship is concerned. The Middlebury Panthers were state champs last fall and from all indications of their freshman squad their chances for next year are a good bet. Vermont had a fair freshman club but so far three of that team's outstanding ball players have left school. One of these transferred to Brown. In out-of-state play it is hard to see our Cats giving such a team as New Hampshire much competition in the coming years. So without some unforeseen miracle the football team will have to play over its head in order to cop any laurels.

The basketball situation is still fresh in our minds and it needs much consideration. St. Michael's fans seem to think that their train is due next year. Their freshman squad has excellent material and with good reason. It might be noted that they have had little opposition by way of college teams. However, it is hard to see that club even on the same floor against the Catamount squad of this year. That same Catamount squad, with the exception of Henderson, will return next year and in our estimation will once again ride over all state competition as well as most of our other rivals. Vermont by getting a few ball players next fall could easily stop the Purple Knight train from pulling in even after next year, but otherwise in 1950 Vermont will watch the other teams ride in basketball as well as football. Material is at least seventy-five per cent of any coach's success and without material a terrific coach will suffer.

In skiing the outlook is dark indeed. Vermont, situated in the heart of one of America's greatest skiing areas, has not even shown any competition to other teams in this popular winter sport. The fault lies not with the skiers but with the general set-up. It is considered a minor (very minor) sport at Vermont and has to fight to be even represented in ski meets. Why don't the young high school skiers in the state go to their own university to ski instead of to other schools? Simply because Vermont does not offer any incentive to those good skiers.

Hockey is not in a much better situation although the spirit among team members was great this last season. This sport could come into its own at the University with a little drive on the part of the school itself.

The baseball future will undoubtedly be brighter after this year. It is said that there are bright prospects in this year's freshman class to bolster the squad in years to come. Let's hope they don't leave school.

Spirit Needed

These observations are not made to slam the University in the least. The school itself is recognized by any educator but not by any athlete. They are made with the hope that in the future, athletic teams will get a backing. The school needs to back all of its teams, not just those in the major sports. After the backing is provided, the fullest cooperation must be extended them by the student body. In other words to sum up the whole thing, the University of Vermont needs a new spirit and needs it fast so that we will not have to take a back seat to anyone.

Delta Psi's Star

The Delta Psi fraternity came into its own last week by capturing both the interfraternity basketball title and also the interfraternity ski championship. In basketball the Delts whipped the Kappa Sigs in the final game of a three-game series. In the ski meet they edged out the Phi Delts as Ev Baily took both the slalom and downhill to lead his team to victory. Summaries of both of these events will appear in the first issue of the CYNIC after vacation.

Two Rifle Team Have Impressive Records

With a record of eight wins against eleven losses, the University of Vermont varsity rifle team is heading into its last month of competition. Coach Captain Earle Johnson believes that his riflemen have an excellent possibility of winning their remaining matches.

The U.V.M. team has defeated Massachusetts, Harvard, Worcester Polytechnic, Rhode Island State, Clarkson University, Rose Polytechnic Institute, Bowdoin, and New Hampshire, while bowing to Brown, M.I.T. Coast Guard Academy, Dartmouth, Norwich and Cornell.

Most of the firing this season has been handled by seven members of the varsity, with Don Steenbunn usually leading the team, followed closely by the team captain Dwight Burritt, Andrew Davis, Winston Jacobs, Doug Corron, Leonard Mercia, and Barney Leavitt.

The R.O.T.C. rifle team, not to be outdone, under the watchful eye of Coach Sergeant Andrew J. Landa, though firing less matches, has an even better record thus far in the season, having defeated Niagara, Drexel, Louisiana State and Western Kentucky, while dropping only one match to Clarkson who also defeated the varsity in the New England College Rifle League and rated one of the best in the circuit.

Purple Frosh Beat Kittens 45 to 29 In Royal Contest

By BOB HERRIOTT

The U.V.M. frosh again bowed to the high-riding St. Michael's quintet, this time by the score of 46-29, but not before they had proved to everyone present that if any state team is going to beat this select aggregation, they are the ones who can do it. Coach "Doc" Jacobs probably picked up a good many gray hairs before his "Pride and Joys" pulled this one out of the fire, and much credit belongs to Coach Strassburg and his players for showing that this team isn't going to be able to run wildly over all opposition, just as it pleases.

Galli of the Kittens hit with a jump shot from the foul stripe after 30 seconds of play and the scoring was under way. Hennessey and Hart quickly struck back for St. Michael's, but two pointers by Ratti, Grant and McCarthy gave the Kittens an 8-4 lead. After a short time out St. Michael's came roaring back and by the quarter led 11-9.

With the start of the second quarter it began to look as though St. Michael's was going to run away with the game as Markey began to hit from all over, but great defensive play by Bob Ratti, the Kitten's stellar guard, kept the margin down to only 25-15 at halftime.

Hennessey opened the second canto with a driving layup. Welch quickly dropped in two more pointers, and the Kittens called time out. This extra time appeared to be all they needed as Gouger promptly dropped one of the longest shots seen on the auditorium floor this season. It was a beautiful, high arching, shot that "swooshed" cleanly through the net. Walsh again hit for St. Michael's, but Galli's set and Gouger's driving one-hander closed the gap to ten points at the three-quarter mark, 34-24.

One minute after play was resumed Galli hit with a pivot shot, and the Kittens were really rolling. Krupinsky countered for St. Michael's, but Galli again found the range, dropping a set from side court. It was here, with St. Michael's leading by only eight points, and only three minutes left to play, that Bob Ratti committed his fifth personal foul, forcing him to leave the game. With Bob and the sharp shooting "Hooper" Grant, who had left previously, out on fouls, St. Michael's quickly picked up eight points and won 45-29.

Evansmen Defeat Mikemen 73 to 56 To Sweep Series

Henderson Scores 21 In Final College Appearance; Dean Takes Scoring Crown

Coach Fuzzy Evans completed his sixth consecutive year as top coach in Vermont basketball circles last Saturday night as his University of Vermont Catamounts trampled the Purple Knights from St. Michael's by a score of 78 to 56 at the Memorial Auditorium.

The Evansmen, playing their final game of the season, were led by George Henderson and Kenny Pierce, who scored 21 and 17 points respectively. The great floor game and passing of Capt. Eddie Kotlarczyk, Hammy Livingston and capable Al Niemann rounded out the Green and Gold combine, and provided the fans with the best all around team play that the Catamounts have shown all season while playing at home.

Dean Takes Scoring Crown

St. Michael's was not without its share of glory however, as their star forward, Johnny Dean walked off with the state scoring title by hooping 20 points in Saturday's tussle to give him 218 in 21 games this season. Kenny Pierce and Hammy Livingston were second and third respectively, scoring 206 and 205. It might be noted, however, that Dean played in one more game than did the Catamount scoring stars. Also in this final game, Coach Evans elected to pull Pierce and Livingston out of the game after Vermont had a comfortable lead of 68 to 35 with eight minutes left in the game, while Dean played the whole game and hooped five points in the last two minutes. The St. Mike's lad is not to be denied his honor, however, as he kept his team in the ball game every time this year.

Cats Play Ball

The Catamounts were never headed throughout the ball game. "Hi Eddie" Kotlarczyk opened the scoring with a long "swish" shot and Stan Yankowski tied the game up with two foul shots. Then big Al Niemann connected with a free throw and scored on a beautiful pass from Kotlarczyk to set the Cats on fire. By virtue of neat passing and working the ball around the Cats built up a 17 to 7 lead at the eight-minute mark. Livingston, Pierce and Art Collier kept things alive in the next nine minutes as they broke the St. Michael's defense wide apart and built up a 27 to 16 lead three minutes before the half ended.

Henderson Gets Hot

In the last three minutes of this first frame and in the first three minutes of the second half George Henderson, who is the only starter to graduate this year, got red hot to toss in 15 points in that short period of six minutes. George first hit with a pop shot from the bucket, then was on the scoring end of a nice play with Kotlarczyk. Just before the half ended he got loose twice on the Catamount fast break to score on lay-ups. The half-time rest did not cool George off as he threw in a set from the corner soon after the whistle blew. Then after connecting with a free throw he took two terrific passes in a row on nice cutting to score his sixth and seventh basket. These tricky passes were thrown by Kotlarczyk and Niemann. So three minutes after the final half had started Vermont held a very commanding 43 to 23 lead.

Evans Pulls First Team

After Henderson finally cooled off, Big Al Niemann hit with six counters and the rest of the Evansmen continued to pour them in from all over. With eight minutes left in the ball game, Vermont was beginning to humiliate the Mikemen as they held a 67 to 35 lead. Coach Evans elected not to rub it in, however, and withdrew his first club at this time. The remaining eight minutes was a run and throw affair and the Mikemen succeeded in running faster and throwing more than did the Vermont second team. The final result was that the Catamounts for another year walked off with all state honors by beating St. Michael's 73 to 56.

Collier Blushes

One of the most humorous events seen for a long time at a basketball game took place in the first half as the two teams lined up on the foul line where Johnny Dean was about to take a free throw. Then the mellow voice of Vermont's M. C., Phil Robinson, brought forth the announcement that the police wished the immediate removal of a New York sedan which was parked in a driveway outside the Auditorium. As the number plate 8R 3144 was announced, Art Collier who was playing at the time grew bright red and pointed to himself. The fans all had a good laugh before one of the varsity scrubs come to Art's rescue and after getting instructions from Art went and removed the car. No ticket either.

DOUBLE EXPOSURE

by JOYCE ABERDEEN

In case you're one of the many who have been wondering if you have been seeing double for the last couple of months, we would like to clear up a few details. You don't have a thing to worry about, for there really are two sweet looking, "banged" brunettes on campus who have the same friendly smile, same color eyes, are both 5' 2 1/2" tall, nineteen, sophomores, and have lively, enthusiastic ideas on how to spend their time. Each is an only child. There are some differences, however. They don't take the same course; so will people please stop asking Betty Simms what the German assignment is, or what she thought of the zoo exam, before she begins to wonder if she is leading a double life and doesn't know it? Barbara Green does take German and zoo and will be very happy to tell anyone what the assignments are. She is also very happy that Betty is such a good kid, because it reflects so well on herself.

Here's the dope on these two classy lassies just to prove they are two different people.

Betty Simms: is a happy vivacious girl of nineteen. She was born in Metuchen, N. J., where she spent her pre-U.V.M. school years. A sophomore at U.V.M. she is very active on our campus. Betty lives at Coolidge, belongs to the Dramatic Club, is a Sophomore Aide, treasurer of the Thetas, secretary of the W.A.A. Council, belongs to the Student Conference, and is active in fencing, and Modern Dancing. She is a talent scout for the latter. She is secretary of the Marketing Club. Betty takes the business course and is extremely interested in economics.

Barbara Green: is another very happy, vivacious girl of nineteen. She is a resident of Burlington, and graduated from high school here. In her sophomore year at U.V.M. Barbara loves to dance and enjoys very warm jazz. Barbara plays the trumpet and makes her own music when it is not available otherwise. Barbara is a member of the Canterbury Club and is taking a public speaking course because she enjoys it. She likes to ski, is a language major, and intends to go to Mexico to study Spanish. Barbara is majoring in language here.

were projected on the wall, and by illustrating on the piano, Dr. Stoehr proved that agogics was one of the most used devices in any music which comes under the heading of "Romantic." Although concert pianists use it very much, there are some modern musicians who say that they hate it and find it very sentimental.

The second part of the program included a varied selection of Dr. Stoehr's own compositions. The first was a short piece called "Dedication." Then followed a selection of waltzes composed after the style of Schubert. Dr. Stoehr was inspired to write these when a few years ago he discovered and identified some manuscripts of Schubert which were in the possession of Dr. Raab. After this selection came some descriptive music such as "Summer Morning" and "Camels' Caravan." A Scherzo from a piano Suite and a Tarantella were also played. Dr. Stoehr ended the recital by playing "Tales from the Vienna Woods" as it was played fifty years ago.

Instructor Appointed By Millis To Teach Creative Criticism

Pres. John S. Millis of the University of Vermont has announced the appointment of John W. Aldridge, now of Brattleboro, as lecturer in English, effective in September, 1948. Aldridge will conduct a new course in Creative Criticism, established at the suggestion of a friend of the University, who has contributed funds to be used for an examination of the literary quality of modern fiction and critical writing and for the suggestion of possible improvement in that quality.

Aldridge, a veteran of the European theatre, is a graduate of the University of California, where he edited "The Occident," a literary magazine, conducted a writers' conference, and assisted in the English department. He has contributed to "Harper's Magazine" and other publications, and is the author of a book, tentatively entitled "The New Generation of Writers," to be published early next year.

The course in Creative Criticism will be limited to a small group of qualified upper-classmen, whose aim will be to examine the nature and causes of the present literary problem and to seek a workable solution. The course is designed to acquaint the student with the historical background of this problem, to help him develop sound standards of critical judgment by which he will be able to evaluate the literature of the present age, particularly the fiction, and to give him instruction and practice in arriving at independent critical decisions and in presenting them effectively in writing.

Art Students' Work Shown in Library

Art students at U.V.M. have found a promoter in the person of Sidney B. Smith, director of Billings Library. Mr. Smith has made a place for paintings to be exhibited in the office of the Director of Libraries.

At present two oil paintings by Nancy Tobey of Brandon, Vt., are on display. Nancy is a junior and a resident of Robinson Hall. She is active in Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, Women's Athletic Association, and Le Cercle Francais. She has done pastels and pencil drawings for a number of years, and had her first experience with oils in the art department at the University.

One picture is called "Quandary," and contains a girl and two disembodied hands above a splash of yellow whirlpool. "The girl," say the artist, "is supposed to be me, and the hands have a dual personality. One hand is 'no,' one hand is 'yes'; one hand is happiness, the other jealous of the happiness. The resulting conflicts are symbolized by the whirlpool in the picture."

The other picture is titled "Time." It tries to show that "time itself will not pass quickly no matter how much one wishes or prays. The human hand in the lower right of the picture pleads for a quicker passing but is imprisoned by eternity, symbolized by the rays which emanate from the green eye of—who knows what! Perhaps the picture tries to show the soul imprisoned by time and eternity. Even I am not always sure of what I mean when I finish a picture," reports Nancy.

These two paintings will be on exhibition for several weeks in Billings Library.

Haydn's "Creation" Well Received

Haydn's Oratorio, "The Creation" given a sterling performance at the Allen Chapel, Sunday afternoon, March 8, by the University of Vermont Chorus, an ensemble from the University of Vermont.

The oratorio, too rarely heard, because of its multitudinous difficulties, is a wonderful conception and execution. From the earliest pre-dawn imagined history, it carries one through the seven days of Creation. The music is lyrical, refreshing and triumphant in the mightiness of its praise of God.

Several very excellent soloists appeared in this oratorio, Janice Shively, soprano; Marilyn Holden, soprano; Alfred Quisenberry, tenor; Ernest Stockwell, tenor; Carl Larson, baritone; Bruce Butterfield, bass; William Lane, bass.

The orchestra played the introduction and also accompanied several of the choruses. Further accompaniments provided by Miriam Natilee Marshall on the organ and Elsa Kremers Benne on the piano.

Ippocrates Pappoutsakis conducted the orchestra and Howard Bennett, director of the music department, trained the chorus. But on account of illness turned over to Professor Pappoutsakis the responsibility of leading the chorus which he did in a very able manner.

The first meeting of the spring quarter will be held at Miss Eleanor Cummings home, Thursday evening, April 1, 1948, is an easy date to remember.

a mere mask for Russian imperialism. One of the most interesting aspects of this ideology is its religious feeling; more than a political movement in the world, it offers hope for the oppressed in the of immediate materialistic blessings. Professor Levitsky feels that the one bulwark of the West against the spreading Communist doctrine is Socialism and presents this as being the main reason why Bevin and Molotov are unable to get along in diplomatic circles.

A long and spirited question period followed the Panel Discussion. At this time the audience repeatedly presented vivid information and opinions in relation to the usual questions. The meeting was finally terminated at 10:30 p.m. interested members planned to resume discussion at a later date.

BOOZE TO FLOW FREELY

Pip, Pip, Time On Your Paws With Cuts To The Leeward

A change in the present cut and examination system has been announced by the Administration.

According to bulletins released by the means of all colleges, effective April 1, there will be no more cuts from classes. All those who cut, whether on account of illness or other reason, or excuse, will be given a zero for that day's mark. The privilege of make-ups has been definitely discarded. This new deal originated from an article in our own CYNIC, under Student Union News, to the effect that attendance at mass meetings was very gratifying. Also, that attendance was compulsory for all women students on campus except those in the Infirmary. This compulsory plan worked so well for Student Union that the administration felt it would improve the academic standard, habits and health of all students if a similar rule were adopted.

The examination system has also been changed. There will be no more finals in any course. There will be weekly quizzes, the students making up the set of questions in the class room, and the marks figured on a complete circle according to the way in which the professors can answer the questions. In this way, there will be assurance of co-operation and attention in the subject, for if the student does not know his subject, he will not be able to formulate intelligent and fair questions. The University of Vermont is a pioneer in this line of thought, and it is expected that all other universities of high standing will follow this splendid example of progress.

Hallelujah, Whose Da Biggest Lout?

Something happens to you when you enter His Presence. You are no longer you, for He is there. That unknown something emanating from Him makes you, lowly wretch that you are, aware of your humble place. One look at Him and yours is the irresistible compulsion to go down on your knees and pay homage to this Being that so marvelously commands your respect and instant obedience. You know it is He, and what's more, He knows He is He.

You feel so small and insignificant asking Him: "May our club have room and-so on Friday night?" You find yourself using a thin, plaintive voice; you wonder whether you should address him as "Your Excellency" or "M' Lord" or "Sire" or just "Guv'nor." It is only right that this Exalted Being should ignore your question for a few minutes, and give you one of His searching stares or how could you have dared to enter His Presence so audaciously?) and that you should then reluctantly and condescendingly ruffle through His almanac, as it is only right that He should give a reply in a one-word, one-syllable sentence, if at all, for after all who are compared to Him?

It would be no exaggeration to say that He is omnipresent. He is almost omnipotent, and many feel, He among them, that He is omniscient. Should a debone creature approach any of the Itin boards in a spirit not entirely agreeable with His codes, terror to him! The bulletin boards are His domain, but His sovereignty extends over everything living or dead thin miles. He is Law, He is Power, He is the Ultimate Arbiter.

Should you have a request, however humble, of Him, first reconsider. Only if you think yours or someone else's life is at stake approach Him. Be subdued, be humble, make Him feel you are nobody if He is Somebody and then, only then, er your question. You may consider yourself among the privileged few if He does not entirely ignore you, and you are fully His equal if your request is granted.

Miss Gladys Lerner formerly of Smith College has accepted the post as coordinator of U.V.M. fraternity affairs. Miss Lerner's appointment was announced early Friday morning by President Millis at a conference of unmarried faculty members and thwarted fraternity brothers.

Miss Lerner, a graduate of Rollins College, completed requirements for a Master's degree last March at Hamilton College where she was voted "most likely to instruct." Since then she has taught English literature at Smith and is famous throughout the East for her inspiring study of "The Trollopes."

She hopes to revitalize fraternity life at Vermont by enforcing several new sets of regulations. Grey flannels and white buckskin shoes will be the campus uniform and students enrolled in the school of agriculture must wipe their shoes with a shammy rag before entering a University building.

A reception will be held at the American Legion rooms for Miss Lerner and all male students are urged to attend and make this affair a "warm welcome."

TRY NEW UVM LIFT WITHOUT A SPENCER

Elevator service and escalator service are now features of the University of Vermont, in all its strategic spots.

The keys to the elevator doors in Waterman building were lost. The doors cannot be locked, and thus elevator service from the basement to the top floor is available to all students, the younger members of the faculty and the administration. Express service has been instituted to the top floor with local service between the basement and all the individual floors.

Elevator boys and girls in snappy green and gold costumes engineer the running of these labor saving devices.

Elevators have been installed in the Old Mill, in each one of the colleges, North, Middle and South. This will save much wear and tear on the steps by the students going up; and much wear and tear on the railing balustrades by the students sliding down.

A new type escalator serves the school public entering East Hall. It is a portable escalator and is swung by the new engine, invented by the Engineering Department, from the side entrances to the main front entrance and back. Miniature escalators serve the small entrances and steps at the rear of each section of the splendidly built East Hall.

Billings Library has not been neglected, a chair lift arrangement having been deemed best to serve the tired students who should not have their rest disturbed.

University of Vermont now ranks highest in the country for having put in the tallest elevator shafts and escalators.

NOTICE

A cordial invitation is extended to all university students to drop around at the Home Management House for a free steak dinner on April 6, 6.00-8.00 p.m. The dinner will be cooked strictly in accordance with food preparation principles of the Home Economics Department.

All students wishing to attend, please notify Miss Knowles, Tel. 2074, before Monday afternoon.

It is hoped that every student on campus will take advantage of this tremendous opportunity for a free steak dinner.

Whiskey and Soda Will Be Installed As Store Revamps

The Book Store Management announces the new policy of "share and share alike" with students, thus making the business a real co-operative venture.

Books, for all courses, will be placed on sale at cost prices and in quantities to amply take care of all demands for same in time to fulfill the essence of the new slogan "A book for every student in any course."

The distribution and sale of books will progress under a new arrangement. Each professor will have them in the class room so that the harassed and tired student will not have to storm the perils of the deep lines. After procuring his copy from the professor in one short easy wait, he may pay for the book, at the book store, at his own convenience.

The Book Store has established another service for students. Tooth paste, toilet soaps, washing powders, razor blades, shaving cream, frost bite lotions and mosquito bite lotions will be among the wares. The cost of these items will be half the cost at the cut rate stores, down town, because the expense has been subsidized by the administration who firmly believe that it should bend every effort to make U.V.M. a clean school, and a comfortable school.

The students will co-operate by paying for their purchases three years after they graduate thus saving bookkeeping expense which prompt payments would entail.

"I'm Flying High"—Miss Margaret M. Wing.

"We Can't Do Wrong"—Hilda W. Wright, Marjorie Wright and S. D. Wright, Jr.

More detailed information will be given to the press by the committee in charge who admit the public will hear from them from time to time, J. F. Bell, D. B. Carroll, G. V. Kidder, and H. H. Kidder.

No More Messy Doorsteps Shall Bother UVM Campus Characters

MILTON DE CLOSSEY

The Dean's Office made announcement late this morning that drinking rules as they now stand in fraternities and sororities on campus will be relaxed.

Amid the general joyous confusion meeting this announcement many individual voices were heard to ponder, "But what brought it... Why did... They never... and so on."

These serious remarks led me to sink deep into the whole alcoholic labyrinth to ascertain whether Barleycorn Distilleries Inc. have been bribing distinguished gentlemen among the administration or what. A number of theories have been put forward by the usual typically different people one finds on polls. These comments are deemed most worthy:

Miss V.A., sorority girl. "Well really after all, you know we've never let these silly drinking rules circumscribe our actions. I keep telling Freddie I can throw them down just as fast as he can, if he'll only smuggle me in by the girls. I've only been potted, that's the word we use, four times at Bov—uh, I mean the old

S.H. lately. Anyhow, this saves us from slinking down with our laundry cases, as J. Adams, your columnist quaintly put it, to the post office. He made me feel like a gutter rat, I mean a dirty R-A-T! He didn't think for a minute we were mailing clothes, did he? No! We washed our own and saved the shipping space for fifths. That's how it was. Now I'll supplement Freddie's drinking income with my laundry postage. Well, let's celebrate, toss me another, Nellie. I've shad two already and eyes don't even fe..."

Conversation ceased at this point and I went toward North College to hear a different viewpoint.

Mr. M.U.M.G., economics faculty professor. I quote: "After intensive research I've found that the world's evils are due to one thing... alcohol. So much emphasis has been placed on national identities, boundaries, oedipus and father substitution complexes that the theorists have lost touch with basic realities. How have I reached this conclusion? That's another story but here are three blackboards and thirty new pages of diagrams I've just completed which reminds me. A rather nice Alcoholic Anonymous secretly approached me the other day and explained that the organization is on the wane. With the influx of eighteen year olds to the campus no new allies are resulting. Knowing that such a splendid organization shouldn't die, I immediately prepared forty-seven new charts estimating the potential numbers of new alcoholics to be gained by suspending the rule. The Dean was crazy about it! After confiding that he was a charter mmeber, the new liberal policy was created. The bookstore was supplied with the Dean's private stock of liquor at slightly higher than normal prices. This I believe is your answer. It was his also. Excuse me, I'm working on a new book of graphs concerning the draft, 18 year olds, Russians, Freud and fraternities in relation to the present membership of Alcoholics Anonymous. I gotta make some money somewhere. Buy it. Everyone in my Theory of Political Consciousness class has to anyhow. Glad to give an interview anytime."

The last, I believe this approximates his reply. Mr. A. B., fraternity man. "Hic... a buc... Shoo cares." The only other member available for comment took me downstairs to see the new bar. All study ceased. The policy is a success.

Lower Church St. Solicits Ladies

If you girls are sick of skiing, ping-pong and playing hide and seek from your housemother why not join the merry throng on Lower Church St. This group promises relief from the cares of the campus and unbridled merriment to those who truly repent the dull activities of the past. There are no officers to be elected or constitutions to be drawn up. Simply fill out a prescribed application form and present to any member of the society. The form asks such information as "Did you suffer from overprotection in your early teens or your personality a result of atrophy through misuse?" "Do you believe everything Mother told you or do you rely on what is said at fraternity parties?"

The purpose of the Lower Church Society is to clarify popular misconceptions concerning "living" and aid the young lady in overcoming the handicaps that are printed in the Women's Handbook. More succinctly are you a "winner" or a "loser."

The society has not received the approval of the Dean of Women and never will. This undoubtedly accounts for its success up to date. Your time is short so collect your allowance for this week and send another letter to Daddy for an advance.

HOUSE DIRECTORS RIDE GRAVY TRAIN TO COED'S DELIGHT

The University of Vermont House Directors, assisted by members of the administration, are planning for a bigger, better and more profitable show this year.

This show, which will be entirely original, will be presented at Southwick, Thursday evening, April 1. It will consist of a fine variety of songs, solos, trios, quartets, and choruses. These will be sung without the benefit of accompaniment or leaders, a new innovation of considerable merit by the house directors.

The program has not been entirely planned, but to date, the following have been scheduled for presentation:

"I Just Burn For You"—Mrs. Constance Cole.

"I Never Scold"—Miss Faye Grabbe.

"A Pillar of Strength"—Miss Carrie Power.

"Home at the Range"—Ann Baker, P. S. Baker, C. D. Cook, E. Cooke, A. L. Sparks, Jennie M. Swett and G. P. Burns.

GOINGS ON ABOUT TOWN

PLAYS

Mouthwash and Agonistes—Rich Dapper is natty and dictatorial in the adaptation of this famous Etruscan comedy. Interesting to theatre goers will be his portrayal of the "bon vivant" who entertains a strange guest at his feast table and is cajoled into buying his silent visitor wine, opium for his pipe, and terminates the evening by feeding him sweetbreads and goose giblets. The comedy is Goodrich translation and the eloquent Mr. Dapper speaks academic English throughout.

Prejudice—Pfft—this is a trilogic assault against every type of prejudice including racial to mal treatment of currant pickers in the bogs near Hoboken. The actors and actresses are members of the Social Action Guild. Their wild exhortations lend terror to any social problem. An impressive spectacle. Even the ushers act subdued.

Private Life of Lena Dimpleson—an exotic expose of savagery in the not-so-far East supplemented by the sophisticated imagery of its Ivory Tower author Millon de Clossey. Many illusions to the sordid quality of life with fleeting glimpses of a woman torn between honesty and administrative duty. In a stench-packed climax the innocent all-women cast perform mayhem and pompousness reigns. Exciting, realistic.

BALLET AND DANCE RECITALS

Persephone and the Pussy Willows—a terpsichorean tirade against Bolshevism headlined by Broadway's light-foot Latin Manuel Hayes. A graceful nymphlike interpretation of a young sylph in the hands of a tyrannous nature played by Newark's Neanderthal man Charles Arliss. The finale is titled "There'll be no singin' or breathin' in this hyar dorm!" and stars those sisters of swing and mercy Mesdames Foster and Wing.

MISCELLANY

Prattle On, Kiddies—A one-man show starring Juan Millisa produced by Delayedo Adolescencia.

Ice Show—clumsy pirouettes by the Sophisticated Sorors with a huge supporting cast of underage girls.

Production Problems—open forum conducted by Sir Richard Flynn and Luigi Coddling.

NIGHT LIFE

Deep Six—select clientele may practice matutinal bird-calls here but need sunny dispositions and strong stomachs. This city's version of "Pig Alley."

Mystery Club—deep in the bowels of downtown Burlington featuring the music of Darjo Tullio and his Ginzo Five. The Breton CHORAL Society of Lower Church Street appear nightly.

Upper Chat Noire—now defunct is this once famous stamping grounds of Wee Robbie and other hunters and sometimes trappers.

Chamelon Room—newly opened neon palace in the Chat Noire. Authentic Latin atmosphere with palm trees which shed cocoanuts at twenty-minute intervals. Tonic openly sold to homesick patrons and entertainment by Euclid MacLaw and his Freudian Ballads. Out of towners will find the city's only semblance of civilization here.

Saccarine House—could be Burlington's G. A. Club but unfortunately this club is more interested in the sheks than a reputation. Pleasant for afternoon gatherings but light is poor for studying. Might as well carve your initials.

House of Hugo—no longer worth your time is this former rendezvous of the select and the discriminating. Lush and luxury has left and the stein size has been cut to five ounces. However, that old black magic of South Champlain intrigue has been held over.

MOSTLY FOR MUSIC

Wasserman Lounge—a combination of kicker, psuedo-sophisticated and abstract music added by the dithrambic overtones of righteous co-eds.

MOSTLY FOR DANCING

U.V.M. Campus—Whatever you hear you might as well waltz to it.

ART

Colburn Galleries—a large show of paintings done by University students with meanings implied. Released inhibitions presented in an unconventional manner. Many can be interpreted in the light of childhood experiences or dyspepsia. Intense, moving.

Windy Smythe—one-woman showing of non-objective art. Very tropical feeling. Cyclothymic.

MUSEUMS

Phlegming Museum—a host of exhibits ranging from our quadripedal non-capitalistic ancestors to modern sculpture particularly a statue of the beloved St. George clad in a suit of mail and carrying his instruments of war. Also a splendid show of paintings where every town, barn and outhouse in Vermont gets its chance.

MOTION PICTURES

Astor, Broadway at 45th (CI 6-4642)
"Bobbsey Twins at the Distillery Plant"
Capital, Broadway at 51st (CO 5-1250)
"14 Rue George," Bork Ryan, Fletcher Belch, Derelict Smith
Globe, Broadway at 46th (CI 6-0800)
Rivoli, Broadway at 49th

THE TALK OF THE TOWN

Notes and Comment

Odds Bodkins

Recent testimony in the case of Miss Repente Pleasure vs. Woman's Student Union has raised considerable comment in this locale. Miss Pleasure it seems made the unpardonable mistake of enjoying herself at a social gathering not long ago and was called to account by her fellow co-eds. Enjoyment in itself does not constitute a misdemeanor but to show it, tsk, tsk. The Women's Student Union upheld their accusation on the grounds that Miss Pleasure deliberately flaunted an age-old resolution that "Women attending social gatherings where the other breed (men, evidently) are present should never deviate from the norm by showing signs of enjoyment or in any way exhibiting an original or imaginative spirit." Not only did the capricious Miss Pleasure assert that the other women guests were "stinkin' deadheads" but proceeded in wanton ways to hold mirthful conversations with many of their male escorts. This whole matter was solemnly thrashed over in the sorority house with everyone concurring with his own opinion.

This case shows what horrible tragedies are being enacted by the youth of today. Miss Pleasure's downfall is an isolated one at U.V.M. but similar episodes are occurring all over the country. No longer does the 20th century maiden sit clubbily in the corner and ooze occasional accents about daddy and the summer home on Lake Bourgeois but instead she viciously laughs and smiles spontaneously. Early investigations indicated marihuana but refutations were offered last fall in a documentary report by the League of Decent Deacons who presented their findings in their annual pageant "Vestry Rides Again." The league found that the trend was caused by a curious biochemical change acting upon the cerebral cortex and producing an unalloyed sincerity and spontaneity of wit. Though this degenerative disease has swept other colleges it is pleasant to know that the University of Vermont is still adhering to strict pattern of conventional opinion, and behavior.

Mr. Allan Collins, U.V.M. sophomore, notifies us that he has sent his 1929 Essex home and is now using his father's new Buick for the remainder of the quarter. He adds that he will be parking more conspicuously around the Waterman in the future.

Our interest in revolutionary movements has led us to enquire into the significance of the many new philosophies popular in the mind of our trans-left-bankers. Existentialism, the posed extreme of atheistic pessimism long been supplanted by a host of and in our mind more fascinating of living. The latest idolatry is that of Snerdisism which assumes a complete degeneracy inherent in and sets as a goal complete depersonalization.

Miss Oyez Takme, leader of the movement and author of a book of verse Along the Thorny Trail speaks of an unusual beginning of the movement the introduction to her book. "We sitting in a little cafe in Bordeaux discussing art and its place in double bookkeeping when a member of our group dashed in without a beret. We immediately deduced that something amiss. The dasher inner was Herman Dillyrumples who you may remember patented an Aesthetic Slide-rule device to place culture at your fingertips. member? Place the X margin on the ruler and count seven over and you read Gabran, Kafka, Rilke and Lloyd Dabney. Place the X margin on Clouds and you get Nimbus, the UN and Henry Wallace and so on. Well, Herman took notice lying on a park bench requested all those interested in Nasal Yoga hasten to Cafe Seraglio with previous editions of Henry Morgan and a box of mascara. We obeyed for we felt this was The Call. When we reached the Cafe we found a wizened little European who demonstrated for seven days and seven nights calisthenics and gymnastics of the nostrils and frontal sinuses. He spent the next four days reshaping his contorted features so that he might be more attractive to us. None of us had slept the previous eleven days and lived by artistic starvation alone. The Eurasian's feats of the basics had enthralled us and five members of the group had found their meaning of life. We were ecstatically waiting for the words of this mystic above all mystics.

Miss Takme ends her discussion at this point leaving the reader with what might call the initial inspiration of the movement. From the proprietor of Cafe Seraglio we were able to gain some illuminating details. The Eurasian who had so deftly appealed to our instincts of Miss Takme's coterie was a gentleman possessed of extraordinary large nostrils and while drinking his gin and tonics would expand to accommodate more liquid. His belly not satisfied with his mouth's capacity. In the course of imbibing Absinthe and the juice of young shellac, a large horse fly flown into the nostril and spent the ensuing week exploring the catacombs of said sinuses. What Miss Takme's had witnessed was not a phenomenon of faith but a sot with a fly in his nostril.

We must remember that great artists often have curious and insignificant notions. Hitler dabbled on clapping his hands. Wallace was once interested in beet production and many an extracurricular activity was formed and joined in the glory of the yearbook and the town paper.

It is regrettable that April Fool's is not a weekly affair in our super-sophisticated world. The sanest people in our town are the ones who gather every news and periodical around their feet Saturday afternoon and enjoy a good laugh. There is nothing vicious about it. It's mere use of clear eyes in viewing the world as a ham comedian aspiring to be an actor. We're positive that there will be no war with Russia and probably won't be. We are excited about the new appointments and think of names like Taft, Dewey, Stassen, Henry, Masaryk, Tito, Schweizer, Spengler, Winchell, Pearson, Steinbeck, Stein, Stein. We halt to form the famous objective opinion with the help of Scripps-Howard, Hearst and a guy next door. We read an article by a lately returned expert on foreign affairs (autobiographical sketch says he had a private school education, three years in Bucharest, five years in Berlin, six years in Madrid, etc.) certainly must know what he is talking about. Of course, he saw with his eyes and he now offers you a chance to see what he saw with his eyes, not his ears. The most revealing approach to

Blood, Flesh and Frenzy

April, 1948. April Fool's Day. This is April Fool's month, too, and this is April Fool's year. This is the year of disillusionment. This is the turn of the tide of good will and cooperation between nations. This is the year in which young people the world over are discovering as did their parents before them that people enjoy theorizing about and praising new ideas, and that there the enjoyment of the wrong people, for those who believe in theories are seldom in power, and those in power believe only in retaining in power . . . or is it that they understand only one way of resolving any situation . . . that of physical force, of war.

Other means, peaceful means, have been tried, so we are told, and have failed. But how anxious have the participants been to have them succeed? How hard were they willing to try . . . specifically, how much money, how much equipment, how many men, how much time were they ready to give to preserve the peace, and how much confidence did they place in their agreed-upon plans for peace?

Palestine . . . the one situation in which both the United States and Russia were in agreement, and the first place where positive action in the form of a United Nations police force could have reestablished that organization's prestige and given new hope to a bitter world . . . "April Fool!", said the United States of America, and reversed its position on the Palestinian problem, extinguishing even that small hope. Yes, we need oil . . . for "defense." Doesn't it seem rather better planning to work toward a situation in which defense by individual nations will be unnecessary? We continually fail to notice that war, almost the single method of solving difficulties since the beginnings of time, has as yet failed to settle any situation satisfactorily; yet, we look to it still as the only possible answer. We have not yet given peaceful methods a fair chance.

When are we going to wake from this "cauchemar" . . . Are we going to wake up? I wonder. And if we do, will it be only to find ourselves in the more nightmare-ish reality of a third war? Perhaps it will be short—atomic and bacteriological style—with long-lasting results, the sins of the fathers being visited onto the children, even to the fourth generation. Or, feeling human compassion, the leaders may agree to outlaw such fearsome weapons and prolong the war by several years. Few of them will be the ones to die in it. Too, wars often bring prosperity if managed correctly.

(April Fool! Didn't think you'd benefit did you! Well, your salary's gone up, hasn't it? Hasn't it, now?) Yes, and their boy is gone . . . "shot up." Or was it "locked up" for refusing to fight for his country (on one side or the other) or perhaps for being unable to "take it" on an even keel and a blind course?

April, 1948, and we stand on the brink of another war . . . Three short years ago all of our hopes were wrapped in a system and idea which was to establish lasting harmony between nations, but which people were unable to accept literally enough to make work. It is April now, and the winds are blowing. The clouds may pile up here, or elsewhere. They may blow away. They may burst into rain. Your fields lie below, and your house is on the low river bank. Other fields lie beyond. And you control the airplane, and you have the dry ice. What are you trying to do? What are you about to do with your life?

Health Council News

One day one of the boys found a green feather down cellar. Surely this must indicate something. How would green feathers get down cellar? Two more were found a couple of days later. Then they started finding eggs. "I know, I know," shouted the cook, "Those blinky blank chickens are down cellar and they've eaten so much grass seed that they've turned green, and they've been stealing my oatmeal and driving my poor cat crazy to go down cellar all the time." With this, he grabbed the carving knife and a frying pan and went stamping down cellar without another word. Now, we don't know what he went down there for. But there aren't any more strange noises from the cellar and the Duke isn't having trouble sleeping nights and we could swear the aroma coming from the house that night had a tang of southern fried chicken.

But I guess in spite of the cook's good intentions, the boys like small family meals 'cause George Cunaveoutis has pinned the waitress at Bove's; Renó Cordy has pinned Lucinda Crix and Bob Abbott has pinned Bruna Denbro.

Two persons to write a bi-weekly behind the scenes column for the CYNIC on activities in the dorms. This stuff about unusual hobbies and war anecdotes is a bore. Isn't anyone providing entertainment?

QUESTION: Do you think the girls at U.V.M. have started taking advantage of their leap year liberties and what will be your reaction?

JOHN MACDUGLE '50: "I honestly don't feel there is a girl on campus who is looking for a man. No matter how much a girl is being pushed by the matrimonial urge, I can say with every bit of confidence, the Vermont co-ed is too refined and well bred a lady to ever dream of proposing to a man."

MARY LOVER '51: "If there is any co-ed on campus who hasn't already started taking advantage of her leap year liberties, she shouldn't waste another minute. I've already ventured six romantic proposals without a glimpse of success—not even a small word of encouragement. I'm sure I don't know what kind of a girl these U.V.M. men are waiting for when they turn down someone like me. I may be sensitive, to my refusals, but I'm also hard to discourage!"

JACK LONGLY '49: "I consider it only fair of me to warn every available man between the ages of six and ninety-six to give careful consideration before dating any co-ed. These scheming, bewitching beautiful co-eds do not hesitate to use their superior intelligence in psychologically wrangling the defenseless males of U.V.M. into accepting their most enterprising proposals. The most dangerous females are found in the psychology and home economics departments. My downfall occurred when I was thrown into a hypnotic trance last February by a sophomore who ended up by proving to me the home ec curricula is a diamond ring course. From there she led me to the altar. Please, beware of these calculating dames or you may end up living at the 'Fort.'"

JOAN KILBORN '48: "I have been going very steadily for ten years with one of Vermont's typically handsome men. I'm sure he is in love with me, too, because he never copies his geology notes from anyone else. I would like very much to marry him, but my extreme shyness stops me from taking advantage of my leap year liberties. I am having my proposal to Ralph Kehopper who is a Delta Psi geology student published."

"Come on, Johnny, mother promised us Dentyne Chewing Gum if we only sat through it once!"

"Not even Frankie Swoonatra could make me miss Dentyne Chewing Gum! That nifty flavor really sends me—I mean it really does. And the way Dentyne helps keep my teeth white, I wanta turn on the old smile all the time."

The College Mind

The Average College Mind is a red flannel hash! When I was young I used to help my mother grind the ingredients for red flannel hash. It is my sincerest conviction that nothing is more intriguing and mysterious as this particular brand of hash, that is, if any hash can be intriguing and mysterious! Mother and I would grind into a big, black, frypan all the left-over vegetables and meat from the last week's meals, plenty of fresh beets (to give the characteristic color), lots of carrots and, occasionally, a few more potatoes; simmer the entire mixture on the back of the stove until supper time; and then serve it with catsup and some of Grandma's homemade bread. As you can undoubtedly see, the amazing thing about this hash is its quaint and varied mixture. The only necessary ingredient was the beets. Anything else was absolutely arbitrary and went in without compunction.

The other night I was present at a meeting of a group of college highbrows. I call anyone smarter than I am, a highbrow. Has anyone else noticed the large group of high foreheads on campus this season? At any rate, I was greatly astonished by their capacious and somewhat capricious minds. It seemed impossible that "one little mind could hold so much." (Thank, Goldsmith!) This exterior view of the workings of a college mind intrigued me so much that I knew I could not be completely satisfied until I had explored the tortuous maze of some unsuspecting college student's grey matter. It was rather a shame, with the shortage of men as it is, that I made this decision. The subject of my observations had been rather good looking. You can't imagine how different he looked with his head split open. Believe me girls, if you really want to see the man of your dreams at his worst, catch him some time with his head split open. This one had clear blue eyes and blond hair, cut in a crew cut that made dissection undeniably easier. And he gave all to science. Perhaps an abridged list of the various articles and thoughts found in this brain might interest other scientifically inclined students.

After removing the skull case, I found the brain was entirely covered with a tough outer coat which was thoroughly perforated with tiny holes. Obviously these holes served as some sort of selective membrane which kept out certain thoughts as too difficult or too strenuous. I found several ideas scattered on the outside of this coating still trying to get in. The entire Greek alphabet with the notable exception of Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Kappa Alpha Theta, Pi Beta Phi, and Robinson Hall seemed to be among this group. Also found, still attempting to penetrate the brain, were Locke's "Essay on Human Understanding" and one of Professor Hartung's lectures on the sex-life of a fruit fly. After peeling off this tough outer coating, I came to the brain itself. The brain was rather overcrowded (the housing shortage, you know,) in fact, so much so that one of Professor Carpenter's German verbs, which obviously wasn't yet very deeply imbedded, flew by as I pulled up the corner flap of this coating.

I soon found that the brain itself was composed, to a large extent in this brain at least, with thoughts of women. I found a little black book, several familiar faces, a lock of pale brown hair, countless legs, and various other features in this section. Closer inspection showed that this section was closely tied in with what I call, the "economic section" of the brain, but which is known to some more literal biologists as the "pocketbook cavity"—usually empty. The reason for this close association was rather obscure to me until I remembered the inflationary prices of this year's Kake Walk dates, especially the Masquerade.

The entire surface of the brain was deeply grooved and folded like an apple which has started to dry up. In several folds I found neck-ties of various hues, preferably blue, a nice corduroy jacket, and three pairs of gabardine slacks. One groove was particularly well worn, and after pulling aside many lesser important thoughts such as the Atom Bomb, Partition of Palestine and the Economic Importance of India, I finally came upon a favorite pipe.

The Cerebellum, that section of the brain which shows direction, smelled rather strongly of alcohol and, upon opening, seemed to contain, of all things, an old wooden sap bucket labeled "S. House" and a bottle of iced Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer. By this time I was thoroughly intrigued and with cool deliberation started to delve deeper into the lesser used facts. I found the dates of the Napoleonic Wars, one of which was incorrect, the exact amount to the nearest degree of the hypertension of Brooklyn Bridge, and a speech by Professor Coburn on Modern Painting. By this time the sunlight of early dawn was stealing frostily into the laboratory where I was working. With a sigh, I dumped the brain into a bottle of formaldehyde, filed the body for future reference, and—so to bed.

UVM Will Sponsor An Intensive 'Marshall Plan In Action' Course Abroad This Summer

Radio Station WJOY Carries Student Presentation Each Sat.

Department of Economics
Pushes Radio Program

"U.V.M. Student Tour," the student participation radio program presented by the Department of Commerce and Economics over WJOY each Saturday at 7, offers an opportunity for any student group in the University to present a 15 minute program built around an actual off-campus educational trip in which the students have participated.

Several programs widely differing in character have already been aired over WJOY which plans to carry a 13-week series, ending just before spring quarter finals. The initial program was devoted to the description of a rail tour to New York City in which students from Prof. Ariel J. Hughes Chaucer class described two interesting days spent visiting and studying medieval cloisters and rare French tapestries. An informal, lively discussion was developed over the air as Alexander, Warren and Mary Caryl, Mary Melano and Jean Van Hyning described their educational tour.

The second program dealt with the industrial practices and employee relations of the manufacturing plants located in Springfield, Vt. These plants were visited recently by a party of industrial management students under the leadership of Mr. Henry Carse of the department of commerce and economics. Appearing on the program in addition to Mr. Carse were the following students: Joseph Waterman, Win Gay, Jr., Martha Buttrick and Robert Terrier.

The third program (at the close of examination week) was devoted to the U.V.M. Debaters in recognition of Vermont's national reputation in intercollegiate debating circles. A lively behind-the-scenes account of what the debaters do on their numerous trips and the personalities they meet when debating, judging debates, or leading discussion groups featured this program. Those participating

Economic Students Are Guests Of Stock Exchange And Standard Oil

Students from the department of economics at the University of Vermont who are enrolled in the courses of Money and Banking and Corporation Finance, will embark early Wednesday morning, April 7, on a field trip to New York City, where they will be guests of the New York Stock Exchange and the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey). A unique feature of the trip is that the trip will be made by plane, and that two majors in the department of economics, Andrew M. Bostock '49, Burlington, and Harold E. Burke, '49, also of Burlington, will act as pilot and co-pilot respectively.

The trip has been arranged by Dr. Philip H. Lohman, head of the economics department who with Prof. Lewis E. Knollmeyer, will accompany the group. The plans include a visit to the Stock Exchange, arriving in time to observe its morning opening, followed by lectures by officials of the Stock Exchange on subjects having to do with present day problems and a luncheon at which the group will be guests of Pres. Emil Schram.

The afternoon will be given over to a visit to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, where the group will be taken on a complete tour of the facilities, accompanied by lectures.

In the evening they will be dinner guests of the Standard Oil Company (N. J.) at the University Club. Speakers at the dinner will be Howard Page, assistant to President Holman, and other officials of Standard Oil.

On Thursday the group will be taken by bus, again as guests of Standard Oil, to the company's research laboratories in Bayway, N. J., where they will observe the research activities, listen to lectures on the development of new fuels, and be taken through the complete installations, with opportunity to meet both management and labor.

Besides Professors Lohman and Knollmeyer and the two pilots, those making the trip are Edwin H. Blakely '48, Essex Junction; Harold F. Edwards '49, Burlington; Harold R. Garinger '49, Springfield, Mass.; Glennon B. Hill, (special) Great Neck, L. I.; Mark I. Jurras, Jr., '49, Burlington; Robert F. O'Grady '48, Essex Junction; Willis H. Parks '49, Burlington; Benjamin F. Schwyer '49, Burlington; Charles F. Traverse, Jr., '50, Morristown, N. J.; and Joseph W. Waterman '49, Newton Center, Mass.

The Dawn Of A New Era

PRESIDENT JOHN S. MILLIS (pictured above) recently announced that the University of Vermont in cooperation with the State Department was sponsoring a "Marshall Plan In Action" course in Europe during the summer. The president and Prof. P. H. Lohman of the Economics Department, originators of the detailed plan, hope that this will be the first in a series of successful foreign studies in the field of economics, conducted by the University of Vermont.

DR. J. R. DUNNING OF COLUMBIA WILL BE SIGMA XI LECTURER

Dr. John Ray Dunning, professor of physics and director of war research at Columbia University and special representative at Operation Crossroads, Bikini, will be the Sigma Xi lecturer at the University of Vermont on Thursday evening, April 8, at 8 p.m. The lecture, which will be given in Room 27, Williams Science Hall, will be open to the university public.

Dr. Dunning's subject will be "Future Nuclear Research," and this will be a demonstration lecture, for which he is bringing the equipment needed to demonstrate the various processes used in nuclear physics. It is expected that he will discuss the fundamental principles of atomic and nuclear structure, with possible application in the scientific and industrial fields, and also uranium chain reaction as it takes place in the atomic bomb.

Dr. Dunning pioneered the first neutron experiments in the United States, and made the first demonstration of uranium fission with nuclear energy release. He is the scientific director for the construction of the new 400,000,000 volt cyclotron. Designated by the national Sigma Xi as National lecturer, he has visited institutions throughout the United States during the present academic year.

Select Students From Throughout the U. S. To Study Economic Conditions

ERP Background Will Be Studied In Detail In France, Belgium, Holland and Great Britain

Dr. J. S. Millis, president of the University of Vermont, announced recently that the University's department of commerce and economics in cooperation with the Board of Education of New York City, the Department of State and the Belgian, British, Dutch, and French governments, is undertaking this summer a unique program—a study of the Marshall Plan in Action.

In accordance with the attached detailed itinerary, students participating in this serious educational venture will assemble on the campus of the University of Vermont on or about July 3 and from there will proceed by bus to Montreal to board a Dutch vessel, placed at the disposal of the University through the cooperation of the Dutch government and Dutch shipping lines. While aboard the ship, classroom instruction will be given.

Upon arrival in France, the French government is making available to the University busses for the field trips. The field trips will be: 1. Belgium, Luxembourg and the Ruhr; 2. Industries and coal mines of Northern France, and reconstruction work in Normandy; 3. Sarre and Lorraine; 4. Hydro-electric power developments and industries in the French Alps and the Rhone Valley; 5. Brittany (Nantes), Limoges—steel and industrial plants in Central France. The French government has also arranged for living accommodations at the University of Paris and Lycée dormitories in Paris. Through the cooperation of the British government and the University of Birmingham, dormitory and classroom facilities will be made available in England. As stated on the itinerary, all four foreign governments will provide for the group speakers in order to give the students a clear understanding of the role their respective countries intend to play in the European Recovery Program.

Participants for the project will be chosen on the following basis. Men as well as women are eligible, but must possess either senior standing in a recognized institution of higher learning or must be able to qualify as graduate students. Applicants should have at least one basic course in economics, history and/or political science. All inquiries are to be addressed to: The Marshall Plan in Action Course, University of Vermont, Burlington, Vt. Upon receipt of inquiry, application blank and information folder will be mailed.

The program will consist of four courses—carrying twelve quarter hours academic credit or eight semester hours academic credit applicable toward an undergraduate or graduate degree. The following courses are offered:

(1) Economic, Historical and Political Geography. 3 qtr. hrs. or 2 sem. hrs.

Description and interpretation of the economic utilization of the region including location of natural resources, industry and the trade relations resulting therefrom. The interplay between geographic factors and political institutions in the formation of internal and external policies. The development of the cultural landscape including occupational and social stratification and movements.

(2) Economic History of Western Europe since 1900. 3 qtr. hrs. or 2 sem. hrs.

Economic dislocations of World War I, the depression, and World War II and proposals for reconstruction. The interplay between economic problems and political institutions in the formation of economic policies.

(3) The European Recovery Program. 3 qtr. hrs. or 2 sem. hrs.

A critical analysis of the Marshall Plan including the proposals of the Paris Conference of the sixteen nations and U. S.

UVM Medical College Receives Grant From Lamb Foundation For New Study

The College of Medicine at the University of Vermont has received a grant from the Lamb Foundation, Crichton House, Harmon-on-Hudson, N. Y., Dean W. E. Brown announced today. The purpose of the grant is to enable the university to carry on a course in doctor-patient relationship, giving serious consideration to the comfort of the patient.

The general purpose of the course, says Dean Brown, will be to promote and develop in the teaching of medical students some of the things which are essential, not only in making patients comfortable, but also in relieving their apprehensions. It is an effort to bring back into medical education certain things which older doctors have which are quite as important to the patient as drugs.

To accomplish this purpose, the College of Medicine has asked some of the doctors in the state to take part in a course of instruction, chiefly to impress upon students important facts connected with the comfort of the patient.

The course, which will be informal, is being conducted on an experimental basis for the first year. Dean Brown has invited some of the leading medical men, who have been noteworthy for their relationship with the patient to come back to the college, each to give one lecture to all three of the lower classes in the College of Medicine, to have ward rounds of the hospital during the day, and conferences with students in the afternoon. The doctors selected, he says, have always taken into account the reaction of the patient, not simply the matter of what type of drug therapy was used.

It is hoped that the course will be repeated next year, at which time the Lamb Foundation is offering prizes for the interest shown by students in the subject, the application of the subject matter by the students, and other factors which may be deemed important by the faculty. The first prize will be $75.00, second, $50.00 and third, $25.00.

The men selected for this year's program, all of them outstanding in the field of medicine, are Dr. John H. Woodruff, Barre, who opened the program during February; Dr. Clarence H. Beecher, Burlington, who will take the month of March; Dr. Frank J. Hurley, Bennington, for April; and Dr. Frank C. Angell, Randolph, for May.

For Whom The Bell Tolls

Every college campus throughout the country has a pretty fair number of hecklers whose prime collegiate aim seems to be to cause trouble for everyone concerned. Needless to say, the University of Vermont has certainly been granted their quota of the above. You can find them in all of the school organizations from the small club groups to the ranks of Student Government.

These "divinely-blessed" (if you don't believe it, ask them!) scholars profess to know everything from how to run the school administration to when the deadlines of the CYNIC should be. The world owes them everything including naturally the high offices and the gravy of every campus group.

To put it frankly, the present members of the Senior Staff are tremendously overworked. For the past quarter, the brunt of the work has fallen on their shoulders. Generally speaking, the rest of the Editorial Staff has been rather worthless. They wander aimlessly through the office and casually look on the masthead to see if their names are still shining for everyone to see. Most assignments were passed in late or not at all with the consequent result that the Senior Staff did the reporting too. To those few who conscientiously carried their share of the load, we say thank you.

Furthermore, several of the departments and social groups still do not realize when the deadlines of the CYNIC are. Stories pour in days late. Cries of "why didn't you print my notice on the front page" resound in the CYNIC office. To some people, the art of cooperating is still perplexing.

Pressure from home (among other sources) because of the low drop in marks has necessitated my removal from the CYNIC for a short while. During my absence, the position of co-editor will be filled by my friend, John D. Adams. I sincerely hope that the departments, hecklers, and the CYNIC staff will turn over a new leaf. John merits your cooperation—see that he gets it.

Letter To Editor

Letter to the CYNIC:

It was our privilege to hear Brahms' Requiem presented in Mead Chapel at Middlebury, Easter afternoon by the Middlebury College choir. The music is magnificent and the choir gave a splendid performance. We were impressed not only by merits of the concert but by the very large attendance of students. We could but reflect upon the large number of our students who fail to attend the equally meritorious concerts presented on our own campus by the U.V.M. Music Department. They are missing valuable and enjoyable artistic and cultural training.

NOTICE

Richard Evans, president of the Senior Class, announced this week that an important meeting for all seniors will be held on Thursday, April 15, at 7.15 p.m., in the student lounge, Waterman Building. Attendance is necessary in order to discuss graduation plans.

For the convenience of the student body and perhaps for a small mercenary incentive of our own, the soda fountain will be open Monday through Fridays from 7 to 9 p.m. The menu will feature the same scintillating sodas, succulent sweets, and supreme sandwiches that are available during the day. Impenunious college students will render service from behind the bar and will attempt to keep the repartee on a high academic plane as befits a college eatery. We are glad to be able to open evenings again and hope you all will drop in frequently.

Thank You,
THE MANAGEMENT.

There will be an important Dramatics Club meeting Wednesday evening, April 7, at 7.30 in 23 Middle College. Election of officers for the coming year will be the main transaction.

Eugene Kalkin has been appointed campus representative of the Philip Morris Company according to an announcement by Mr. R. W. Flynn, company manager for Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont.

Eugene is a pre-med and a member of the class of 1950. He comes from Forest Hills, N. Y., and says that he eventually hopes to get around to everyone on campus with the Philip Morris message.

I have received a letter from the Middlebury College Conference Committee stating that there will be a Conference on "Man's Quest for Freedom and Security" at Middlebury April 24 and 25. Students at the University of Vermont are cordially invited to attend.

The letter of invitation and a pamphlet describing the Conference are on file in the Office of the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and may be consulted there.

E. SWIFT,
Dean.

There will be a mass meeting of the Women's Student Union Association April 7 at 7.30 p.m. at the chapel. Attendance is required.

Letter To Editor

To the Student Body from the '49 Staff:

How about dusting off the Brownie or Kodak and producing snaps and informal shots that you like to see printed in the '49 Ariel? You might even scour out the attic, through scrap books, or reminisce over treasured photograph albums. Informal shots are an important part of a yearbook, a sine qua non, as a matter of fact. However the merit of the yearbook rests solely on the quality of the pictures. Realizing this, the staff this year is running a campaign to induce you to turn in good formal shots. The three best pictures submitted will be given special prominence in the informals section of the book. The persons who submitted them will receive recognition. This may be a game, gab fest or beer party—you have some shots of them. Or a snapshot of your professors and friends in a guarded moment. We want them to assure that you want lots of good informal shots in the '49 Ariel. If your pictures are not used it will be returned before the end of the year.

Please write the particulars: name, address, etc., on the back of the picture in soft lead pencil. For additional information contact Lynn Davis, (Informal Photography Editor) Alpha Chi Omega.

Sincerely,
DOROTHY ROSS
Editor, '49 Ariel

Business, too, must have expert navigation

IN the telephone business, much of the knowledge of "where we are" and guidance as to "where we are headed" comes from the analysis of statistics.

Telephone statisticians and engineers are constantly studying trends and figures. They assemble the facts, analyze them, correlate them, discover their significance, draw guidance from them.

The work of these men is vital to our never-ending task of improving telephone service. In such work many college-trained men have found satisfying and rewarding careers.

And this is but one of the many interesting phases of the telephone business.

There's opportunity and adventure in telephony.

Fraternity Corner

The winter quarter was an important one for Sigma Phi, highlighted by an initiation, dedication of a game room and a game, of course, by a very successful Kake Walk weekend.

The ball started rolling on the week-end of January 10, when seven men were initiated and elevated to the rank of brothers in Sigma Phi. This honor was bestowed on Stephen Gates, Wellesley Hills, Mass.; Howard L. Page, Burlington, Vt.; Robert D. Taisey, North Troy, Vt.; Robert W. Arthur, Rutland, Vt.; William R. Elgood, Island Pond, Vt.; Robert D. Nostrand, Burlington, Vt.; and Richard U. Birge, West Hartford, Conn. Later in January the game room was dedicated, complete with built-in, knotty-pine benches, tables and other necessary fixtures; the formal opening and dedication of which was held after "an evening of the slopes" on January 24. Informal was the keynote and everyone entered into the spirit of the occasion attired in ski clothes.

February was a really busy month, and Kake Walk preparations dominated most of the free time of both brothers and pledges. Early in the month work was started on the ice sculpture, which during the first three weeks of the month took on very promising features, only to be frozen down the drain by unseasonable weather a few days before Kake Walk. In spite of the hurried last minute repairs to the iced edifice, time ran out and for the second time in two years an uncomfortable mass of ice greeted the judges. Other aspects of Kake Walk, however, were much more successful for the Sigs. The walkers, Walter Brown and George Brigham, who spent many hours getting in shape and perfecting their routine, under the direction of Ronald Page, were well-rewarded for their efforts by receiving second place in the walking both Friday and Saturday nights.

The pride and joy of the inhabitants of 20 College St., however, was the skit, "All This and Hell, Too," written and very capably directed by Dave Cox and Jack White, with all brothers and pledges contributing something to the success of the skit either along the line of active participation, or in properties, lights, etc. Kake Walk week-end was formally ended by an open house from 3 to 5 on Sunday afternoon, which was preceeded by a Sig sister initiation during which two wives of Sig graduates and three fiancées of active Sig brothers were initiated. The good grad brothers Norman Tucker of Fitchburg, Mass. and Frank Hewitt of Essex Junction, Vt., presented their wives for initiation. As for the active Sigs, George Brigham presented Jean Davis, Northfield, Dave Cox presented Mary Jean Dunsmore, Swanton, Vt., and Bill Salmon presented Julia Smith, Burlington, Vt., for initiation.

The regular Monday evening meeting following this eventful weekend was devoted to a celebration of recently won glory, after which the five new trophies were put in their exalted place on the living room fireplace mantel to be displayed with pride to all Sigs and their friends.

Monday evening, March 1, the 103rd Junior's day banquet of the Alpha of Vermont was held under the chairmanship of Bill Elgood, who was instrumental in arranging a very enjoyable and successful evening. Many of the good grad brothers came back at this time to renew their acquaintances with Sigma Phi.

On March 5, six members, Dick Birge, Nick Nostrand, Doug Tudhope, Steve Gates, Bill Chapin, and Dyer Weed represented the Alpha of Vermont at the 21st national founder's day banquet held at the Hotel Warwick in New York and altogether spent a very eventful week-end. During the course of the trip, the fellows also visited the chapter of Sigma Phi at Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

During the quarter Sigma Phi was fortunate in pledging two more men, Hal Perry, Swanton, Vt., and Ed McKenna, Rattleboro, Vt.

Taken as a whole the winter quarter was really an active one and regarding in retrospect, one of the most successful in the history of the Alpha of Vermont Sigma Phi.

Military Ball Sidelights . .

Dean Hill's Annual Sugar Party Is Set For Friday Night

The annual Dean Hills Sugar Party, sponsored by the Aggie Club and Home Ec. Club, will be held Friday night, April 9, in the gymnasium. Starting at 6.30 the traditional Sugar on Snow will be served with the "fixins" which include sour pickles, doughnuts and coffee. Following the Sugar Party will be a dance with music by U.V.M. Collegians.

This is the 12th Annual Sugar Party to honor Dean Emeritus Joseph L. Hills. The proceeds from this event are used to establish a scholarship in his name for deserving students.

Dr. James W. Marvin, associate professor of botany, will be the toastmaster. Greetings will be extended by the presidents of the student organizations which sponsor the event, Dorothy M. Dexter '48, Pearl River, N. Y., for the Home Economics Club, and Kenneth J. Liggett, '49, Lyndonville for the Aggie Club.

Speakers will be Dean Joseph E. Carrigan of the College of Agriculture; Elwin L. Ingalls, State Leader of 4-H Clubs (retired); Commissioner of Agriculture Stanley G. Judd, and Warren A. Dodge, representing the Maple Sugar Producers Association.

A feature of the occasion is the presentation of the John M. Thomas trophy, awarded annually in honor of John Merritt Thomas of the class of 1942 of Rutland, who was killed in an automobile accident in 1941. The trophy goes to that senior student who most closely simulates the characteristics of the boy for whom the trophy is named.

General chairman for the party is Carroll Berry '48; programs, Raymond Tremblay; tickets, Cynthia Wriston '48; dance, Gordon Farr '50; snow, William Van Scoik '50; syrup, Alvan Lawrence '50; and refreshments, Henry Atherton '48.

Catamounts Will Provide Music For Mortar Board

The annual spring formal of Mortar Board will be held on Friday, April 16, at the Southwick ballroom. This traditional dance at Vermont is one of the highlights of the spring quarter, and is a good chance for the girls to take advantage of that date they have long wanted with their favorite male.

Southwick will be decorated with flowers and other colorful signs of spring for the occasion. The Sophomore Aides will do the checking, with Staff and Sandal assisting in other ways.

The Catamounts will provide the music for the affair, with all of Southwick thrown open for the dance. Tickets will go on sale shortly with the price to be announced. The dance will last from nine to one o'clock, with a 1.30 permission for the girls. So take advantage of it girls and start making those dates!

Student Government Notes

March 4, 1948.

The meeting opened at 4.10 with the reading and acceptance of the secretary's report.

According to President Miele, Dean Swift has given his assurance that hour exams will not be given during the two days after Kake Walk week-end next year, and probably not even within the week following that holiday. By an agreement of long standing professors are not to give hour exams or quizzes during Dead Week.

Mary Jane Farnham reported that Professor Kidder favors the founding of a system whereby a posted daily schedule of events would eliminate bulletin board confusion. The alumni and printing offices offer possible means for publishing such a memorandum. Costs would amount to a few dollars per week. Further arrangements are being made and actual publication may begin early next quarter.

By formal ballot the executive council appointed Mary Ellen Fuller '51, to the Social Committee of U.V.M. Students.

Blueprints for the renovation of the student lounge were passed among the council. Improvements as illustrated would cost approximately $4,567. Ed Costello suggested that leather couches and couch combinations similar to those in the East Hall lounge might be substituted for those of less durability included in the present plan. This change would raise expenses to a total of $5,067. Methods of meeting this difference were discussed. It was mentioned that the system of Ariel distribution might be revised so that fewer copies of the yearbook would be needed, thus causing a decrease in costs in that channel of student treasury disbursements.

Ed Costello made the motion that the council form a committee of the whole for one half hour to discuss proposals for the appointment of assistant Kake Walk directors and that following that period a committee including Mary Babbitt, Al Redway, Stanley Ursprung, Jane Smith and Harry Miele collect pertinent comments and suggestions arising from the discussion and draw up a formal plan to be presented and evaluated at the next meeting. Upon acceptance of the motion by a majority vote, the council resolved itself into a committee of the whole with Ed Costello presiding.

Bob Perkins initiated debate on the question of publicizing election results. The majority of the council seemed to doubt the value or need for such procedure. While on the subject of elections, it was suggested that the voting system might be improved by providing voting booths and by punching activity cards.

Ed Costello moved that the council create an enabling act approving the present secretary and sub-treasurer since these offices have been filled contrary to the constitution. The motion was seconded by Al Pratt and accepted. It was also moved and carried that a committee be appointed to revise the constitution and draw up a set of by-laws.

The possibility of having a barber shop in Waterman was advanced for consideration by Ed Costello. The motion was made and carried that the council go on record as favoring the establishment of a barber shop on campus and that Harry Miele negotiate with President Millis toward that end.

The next council meeting will be held on April 8 in the East Hall lounge. The meeting was adjourned at 5.30.

Respectfully submitted,
JANE SMITH,
Secretary U.V.M. Students.

Campus Highlights

GOODRICH CLASSICAL CLUB

Mathematics will be discussed in an unusual light at the first meeting of this quarter of the Goodrich Classical Club. Mr. Turner of the Classics Department will speak on "Elementary Roman Mathematics."

The meeting of the Classical Club is scheduled to take place on Thursday, April 8, at 7.45 p.m., in the North Lounge of Southwick.

Mr. Turner has been an instructor of Classical Languages and Literature at U.V.M. since 1947. He graduated from Victoria College of the University of Toronto with first class honors in classics and obtained his Ph.D. degree at the University of Cincinnati. His thesis dealt with Roman Baths.

In addition, Mr. Turner, who was born in Canada, has taught classics at Bishop's College School, Lennoxville, P. Q. and has been head of the classics department at the McCallie School in Chattanooga, Tenn.

The Classical Club members Mr. Turner is particularly memorable for the natty and chic toga he displayed during the last Roman Banquet of the Club.

HEALTH COUNCIL

An enthusiastic meeting of the Health Council was held in Waterman 234, Wednesday evening, March 31. Miss Eileen Molloy, vice-president, presided in the absence of Barbara Shen, president.

An interesting lecture and demonstration of good exercises for good health was given by Miss Eleanor S. Cummings of the Physical Education Department. Health officials were urged to start exercise groups in their dorms and houses to insure the "new look" brought about by slim, vibrant figures and good health. It was voted to send a circular letter to all women's dorms and houses giving timely hints and instructions on the importance of using the facts we know about good health.

Posters for the Health Council bulletin board in Waterman corridor were detailed as follows to volunteers: week of April 5, "Campus Safety," Gladys E. Neiburg and Jean Van Hyning of Robinson Hall; April 12, "Home Safety," Glenna M. Gee of Coolidge Hall and Marjorie A. Fullam of Redstone; April 19th, "Water Safety," Barbara L. Kilbourn of Alpha Chi Omega; April 26th, "Traffic Safety," Martha R. Samson of McCormick's; and May 3, "Recreational Safety," Marjorie F. Clark of Grassmount.

The final meeting of this year will be held Thursday evening, May 6.

V.I.P.

The Vermont Independents are holding an informal party on Saturday, April 10. Planned to greet the belated, and sometimes uncertain, arrival of spring, bright colors are to be in abundance. The get-together will feature the latest tunes by some of the best bands in the country, via the medium of records. Costing 55 cents a couple, it is to be a stag or drag affair. Refreshments will be served for a nominal sum. The dancing will be held in the soda fountain from 9 until midnight.

Although originally planned as a formal dance when the present activities calendar was made up, the nature of the party was changed after it was decided that three formals in a row would be too much, as the affair falls in the week following the Military Ball and preceding Mortar Board. This dance is in keeping with VIP's recent program of frequent informal affairs to provide pleasant and inexpensive evenings for UVM students. If these frequent parties prove successful, VIP hopes to make them part of its regularly planned schedule for next year.

MILITARY DEPT.

In a brief but impressive ceremony Monday, April 5, Capt. Earle Johnson and Master Sgt. John Collins of the University Military Department, received awards "for exemplary conduct in ground combat against the armed enemy," in Europe, presented them by Colonel Gillfillan in the presence of the staff of the department. Captain Johnson, a First Lt. when cited, received the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Bronze Star; Sergeant Collins, then a Pfc., was awarded the Bronze Star.

Both men joined the Department fairly recently: Captain Johnson, a Virginian, was stationed in Berlin previous to his appointment here in September; Sergeant Collins of Andover, Mass., was commander of the Lynn Recruiting Station prior to his coming here in December, 1946.

R.O.A.

ROA invites all former officers to its annual dinner dance to be held at Happy Acres tomorrow (Thursday, April 8) at 7 p.m. The latest movie available on submarine operations will be shown and Professor Willard will give an informative talk on Russia followed by dancing. All University girls are allowed a 12.30 night. Tickets are on sale in the Book Store.

SPANISH CLUB

The Spanish Club is continuing to familiarize its members with our good neighbors down south.

At the next meeting on April 7 movies on Argentina will be shown at the Fleming Museum at 7.30 p.m. These movies contain some beautiful scenes. The highlight of the film will be Buenos Aires, capital of Argentina.

Another movie will be shown which will visit several of the seaports of South America.

Refreshments and rhumba dancing will prevail after the movies at East Hall Lounge.

All members and guests are cordially invited.

Roses to the Home Eckers

BOB RAY

The morning of June 21, 1948 will be a joyous one for many who have labored through four years (or more) of rigorous college life. These students who will have amassed a sufficient number of credit hours will receive their sheepskins, a hasty handshake, and will be fired by the enthusiasm of the graduation speakers. They will be told their class is the best class ever graduated from the Universitas Viridi Montis. The class history will tell of the stirring events of its members on the diamond, the rink, the courts, the pool, the field, the track, the mat and the ring. Additional pages will deal with those whose golden letter bears a small green P at the vertex. These are the athletes who have trained for many long weary hours in dimly lighted parlors and stuffy bars. As the graduation speakers drone on each proud senior will perhaps mentally review his college years. As a freshman each struggled through freshman math and other subjects which are required for unknown reasons. These seniors will be well versed in mathematical formulae, sexcycle of Rana Pipiens, the history of summability, the culture of the Renaissance, the proof of structure of glucose, Goethe's Faust, Bove's Bar, Harmonic Analysis, Metaphysics, Constitutional Law, Cicero, Virgil and Money and Banking. This knowledge which has been learned by these seniors is truly a great and necessary thing, but, is it enough for the world of today? No—it is not enough for the world of today.

It is the women who must be aided in the mutation from carefree co-ed to work-worn housewife and homemaker. Many of these women will be housewives but only a few will be homemakers. The solution to this problem could be met by more courses in Home Economics and the allied homemaking sciences. It is appalling to find out that 60 percent of the senior women are unable to prepare an ordinary meal. It must be granted that a few women will never have to prepare a meal, but this will be only 2 or 3 percent of the total. Others will embark upon careers only to fall by the wayside a victim of competition or love. The modern woman must have an educational background which approaches the level of her husband's in order that their life be compatible, but, her primary duty is to her home and family. All women should take courses in dietetics, home management, family relationships, child development, child care and home care of the sick, food preparation, meal planning, housing, marketing and purchasing, applied design and clothing. Only in this manner can we be assured that the modern woman will be able to fulfill her duty as a homemaker.

Stretch Galli Paces Frosh In Impressive Hoop Record

Several Yearlings Show Great Promise As Strassburg's Charges Chalk Up 9-3 Season

by BOB HERRIOTT

The U.V.M. Kittens, keeping in step with the winning ways of Green and Gold court teams, finished their 1947-48 basketball season with an impressive record of eight victories and four defeats. The Frosh swept their home and home series with Rutland Junior College, Norwich Frosh, and Middlebury Frosh, split with Vermont Junior College and Burlington High School, but dropped both tilts with St. Michael's Frosh.

The big gun of the Kitten offensive attack was their six foot three inch center from Staten Island, N. Y., Keith Galli. "Stretch" hit for 125 points and this, along with his rebounding ability made him an important factor in the Kitten attack. Also over the century mark in scoring was Bill Grant. The Meriden, Conn., athlete was extremely deadly with his running one hand push shot and posted 102 points for the season.

Next, with 95 points, came Harry McCarthy. The former Cathedral High basketball star started the season slowly, but as time progressed he did also, and his eight or ten points a game were a great aid to many a victory.

Probably the most important factor of the Kittens winning season was the play of Capt. Bob Ratti. He always seemed to be calm, cool and collected and his brilliant floor play pulled many a game out of the fire. He also could score when necessary, for his eighteen points against V.J.C. stands as the individual game high for the season.

The other guard spot was held down alternately by "Chuck" Gouger and Kenny Terrill. Both were good defensive men and capable of dropping a needed two pointer when the chips were down.

These six men, along with Cubby Goulet, who was playing great basketball until declared scholastically ineligible, carried the bulk of the load, and all of them should be a great asset to Coach "Fuzzy" Evans' varsity squad next year.

Delts Capture Ski Meet At Underhill; Jack Bailey Stars

The Delta Psi's reign as skiing kings at the University of Vermont. They won the title in the inter-fraternity ski meet held at Underhill, scoring 184.8 points to beat the Phi Delta Theta's with 176.3, Sigma Alpha Epsilon with 148.3, and the Sigma Nu's with 55.2.

Star of the meet was Jake Bailey, former Burlington High skier and a member of the Delta Psi. Bailey, younger brother of former U.V.M. ski captain and coach, Ev Bailey, won both the downhill on the lower section of the Tear Drop Trail, and the slalom, held at Underhill. Bailey traveled the downhill in 26.8 seconds, to beat John Gallup of Phi Delta Theta by nearly two seconds. Gallup was timed in 28.5 seconds, followed by his teammates, Gordon (Mickey) Cochran in 29 seconds flat and Thomas MacMinn in 31 seconds. Bill Worthen of Delta Psi was fifth in 33.8. The Phi Deltas won the downhill, but fell far behind in the slalom, won by the Delta Psi's.

Bailey took the slalom in 44.6 seconds, with Cochran second in 45.6, Worthen third in 47 seconds, Ed Fagan of Delta Psi fourth in 51 and Dick Kendall of SAE fifth in 55.8.

Bailey won the combined with 43.1 points, Cochran second with 45.7 and Worthen third with 51.

This meet was scheduled for Kake Walk weekend, but was postponed due to poor skiing conditions at that time. It was organized by Bob Ray, with Dave Hagar and Harold Stowe of the U.V.M. Outing Club, the course setters and officials.

Successful Tennis Season Depends On New Material

Coach Carpenter Has Only Dependable Hammy Livingston and Mal Mickler For A Nucleus

by GLENN FAY

Tennis balls will begin sailing around the gym this week as Prof. Fred Carpenter calls his varsity racquet swingers together for their first organized practice of the season. The first few meetings will of necessity be held indoors so that no players will be lost in the mud at the Centennial Field courts, but as soon as weather permits the team will take to the wide open spaces.

In issuing the first call for tennis aspirants Coach Carpenter stressed the fact that anyone interested in the game, even if their experience is limited, is cordially invited to come to practice this week and whack a few balls around so any hidden talent will not go unnoticed.

When asked the possibilities of a winning team this season, Coach Carpenter said, "In 25 years of coaching this sport, the outlook has never been as bad as this year. However, in Capt. Hammy Livingston I have a player as good as any in New England—how the rest of the team will shape up is my worry."

There are but three players returning from last year's squad, Livingston, Goldstein, and Astone. Graduation claimed Millete and Gipstein while Gene York lost a match with exams and Myer, Nims, and Finckel are seeking knowledge elsewhere.

Jake and Livingston kept the Cats in the win column most of last year. They were runners-up in doubles competition at the New England Lawn Tennis Tournament a year ago, but their biggest triumph was over a pair of touring professionals down at the Centennial courts in an exhibition game. With Jake's playing days at an end at U.V.M., there will be opportunity aplenty for up-and-coming racquet wielders. Mal Mickler is the most likely prospect to take over the No. 2 spot vacated by Jake. Mickler was ineligible last season but has proved his mettle on the local courts on numerous occasions.

The schedule this year includes 12 regular matches plus the New England Lawn Tennis Championships to be held at Dartmouth College May 14, 15, 16. The schedule is as follows:

- May 6—Rensselaer at Troy
- May 7—Union at Schenectady
- May 8—Colgate at Burlington
- May 12—St. Michael's at Burlington
- May 14—N.E.L.T. Championships
- May 19—Champlain at Plattsburg
- May 21—St. Michael's at Burlington
- May 22—St. Lawrence at Burlington
- May 25—Middlebury at Burlington
- May 28—Massachusetts at Amherst
- May 29—Springfield at Springfield
- June 2—Middlebury at Middlebury
- June 5—Clarkson at Burlington

CAUSE FOR AMERICAN PRIDE...

JEFFERSON'S ROUGH DRAFT OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

A Declaration by the Representatives of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in General Congress assembled

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's god entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness; that to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, & to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles & organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall appear most likely to promote their Safety and Happiness.

Part of the original manuscript of the Declaration of Independence, written by Thomas Jefferson. It is now on display aboard the "Freedom Train." The revisions shown were included in the document finally presented to the Continental Congress.

Coach Evans Is Still Modest After Eight Successful Years

Memoirs of '42 Eleven and '46-'47 Quintet

The outstanding coach in the state of Vermont and one of the more prominent mentors in New England coaching circles for the past eight years is quiet, unassuming John Clifford Evans who the University is proud to call her own. Mr. Evans, more affectionately called "Fuzzy" by those in the know, came to Vermont in 1937 as freshman coach. He was at once hailed as the saviour of the sports program at U. V. M.

According to the CYNIC, between 1935 and 1937 the victory bell on top of the Old Mill had been alarmingly silent, so silent in fact that many people became quite terrified—some of the less rational of the scholars suggesting that a collection be taken up to hire a more expensive coach and insure a winning team.

But John Evans was the only insurance these individuals needed as he molded a formidable array of freshmen in the fall of 1937 which struck terror in the hearts of all their opponents, including the varsity. Vermont could at last boast of a winning team, even though the varsity continued in the doldrums.

"Fuzzy" stayed on as frosh coach until 1940 when the "brain trust" at U. V. M. decided he was the man most qualified to succeed former head coach John Sabo. Vermont saw some excellent football teams in the next few years and winning games became a habit.

"My best football team was in 1942," said Mr. Evans after a good deal of priming. "With boys like Ralph Lapointe and Norm Beaulieu any team could be good." The Evans-coached teams have won 16 games lost 19 and tied 3—not a too impressive record until one considers the material available and the general lack of cooperation all around.

But Mr. Evans' shining achievement as a coaching wizard is his basketball teams. Since 1940 his court teams have won 73 games while dropping but 28 in all types of competition. Besides that his teams have won six straight State Conference Championships, quite a feat itself. The remarkable thing about "Fuzzy" is his ability to come up with a winning combination from a bunch of football players and ex-high school athletes.

John C. Evans was born in Dayton, O., in 1907. In high school in Dayton he became an exceptional football player and made a good reputation for himself as a basket tosser, too. After receiving his high school diploma he matriculated at the University of Illinois and played half-back on the great teams of '30, '31, and '32 under the incomparable Bob Zupke. In 1932 he received a degree in physical education and took a job in Medina, N. Y. as high school coach coming to Vermont in 1937.

His private life is much like that of any ordinary family man. He has a charming wife, who is very active in civic organizations in Burlington, and a seven year old son, Jimmy. "Fuzzy" spends his summers as business manager of the Burlington Cardinals baseball club—a tiring and no doubt thankless job.

W.A.A. Notes

By RUTH WARRELL

Did you all get part way through registration line only to find a W.A.A. table there to help you decide what you ought to take for sports this quarter? Yes, I mean all—boys included; that is, for square dancing. I have just come from there and it certainly was encouraging to see so many there. Everyone is welcome to join every Thursday night from 7.30 to 9.00 out at Southwick.

Badminton, also at Southwick, comes on Tuesdays at 7.00 and 8.00. Equipment is furnished.

Bowling meets with Pat McGinnis in the Waterman Alleys on Fridays at 3.30 and 4.30. (Please note time.)

Instruction is also provided for those interested in Ping Pong. Classes are held each Tuesday and Thursday on the stage in the gym (women's) at 4.00.

Girls, if you are interested in sailing there will be a chance for you on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 12.00. Meet in No. 264 Waterman.

Another Tuesday-Thursday class is formation swimming. This is at the "Y" at 7.00. Swimming strokes is to be held on Friday at 2.30, also at the "Y." Beginners may join this class and there will be instruction for all.

I spoke about the W.A.A. sign-up table at registration. However, it DOES NOT matter if you didn't sign up. If you want to join a club (and you should for friends and fun) just go to the next meeting of the club as you have plenty of time in which to get your credits. Also, if you have any questions about the clubs, expense, equipment, etc., don't hesitate to ask. However most classes are free and equipment is usually provided. More W.A.A. clubs are to be organized as soon as weather permits so watch this column for latest clubs.

Trackmen Move To Centennial As Bowdoin Meet Draws Near

Scholastic Requirements Cuts Deep into Post's Lettermen; Middlebury Results Encouraging

The weather has been kind enough in the last few weeks to push old man winter quickly out of existence to make room for an early spring. In a few days Coach Archie Post hopes to send his trackmen outside to begin their work on the Centennial Field track. Work on the track has not started yet but the ground has been reported to be in good shape for rolling. This early start on the outdoor track will enable the squad to condition themselves into fine shape before the first few meets. On April 24 the University of Vermont opens its season against Bowdoin College here at Burlington. Four weeks of intensive outside training will be of great advantage to the team.

On March 13 an informal meet was held with Middlebury and U. V. M. clearly displayed its potential strength when it took seven out of the nine events held. U. V. M. scored first places in the hammer throw, 16 pound shot put, pole vault, high jump, hurdles, sprint relay, and medley relay, while Middlebury was only able to score firsts in the mile relay and the broad jump. In the 30 yard high hurdles Dick Nostrand strided his way across the finish line in :04.2 seconds to take first place. Irwin Becker outjumped Cook of the Panthers by two inches to take the high jump at 5 feet and 6 inches. Bob Perkins cleared the bar at 10 feet and 3 inches to give U. V. M. first place in the pole vault. In the weights Capt. Dick Evans heaved the hammer 41 feet and 5 inches and Stan Ursprung put the 16 pound shot 40 feet and 10 inches to give U. V. M. two more first places. On Saturday, the fourth of April, a return meet of the informal type, with non-competitive events, will be staged on the outdoor, wooden track at Middlebury. Practically the same events will be included in the second meet.

A few of the key men on the team will have to give up their track activities because of low academic standings. Philips and Ursprung are two who were lost in the weight division. Phillips also leave a gap in the broad jump and low hurdles. Barber, another low hurdler, banged up his left leg while playing basketball so that he will probably be lost for the rest of the season. One of the remaining trackmen will be eligible and able to continue the season. With little shifting here and there Archie Post will probably be able to maintain a balanced squad so that the best possible winning combination will be available to the Green and Gold in the meets to come.

Thus far four meets have been scheduled for the freshman track squad. U. V. M. will meet Burlington High School on April 24, Lyndon Academy once, and St. John's Academy once. Several freshmen have shown great promise to bring laurels to U. V. M. in the years to come. Haddigan bears watching in the sprint. His recent times indicate that he is able of breaking records. Red McCall, formerly of Lyndon Academy who was state champion both high and hurdles in 1943, will make a fine show if he can get back to his past form.

The varsity schedule for the season of 1948 is as follows:
April 24 Bowdoin (here)
May 1 Colby (here)
May 8 Champlain (here)
May 15 Eastern I.C.A.A. Worcester, Mass.
May 21, 22 N.E.I.C.A.A. Providence, R. I.

Maynardmen Complete Season With 4-6 Record Against Very Strong Opposition

Over a month ago U.V.M.'s hockey team hung up their skates to end the 1947-48 season. Although the ice is gone and the gear is stowed away for another year, memories of the past season are still fresh in the minds of the players and their followers. The season opened on an encouraging note when U. V. M. shut out a strong Norwich club by 2 to 0. A total of four wins and six losses was the final standing for the year. Vermont at Norwich, Paul Smith of Lake Placid, Middlebury, and Champlain College. The Catamounts suffered losses at the hands of Middlebury twice, Middlebury twice, Army and Hamilton. The last game of the season was a close 4 to 3 battle with Norwich. U. V. M. led up until the last minute of the third period when the Norsemen let loose with their blazing attack and scored three goals to win the game. Army and Hamilton were the two strongest teams U. V. M. met all season, with Middlebury running a close third. Despite the fact that the Green and Gold lost to these three strong sextets there were times when they showed they could catch their opponent's passing and defense with some unique skill of their own. The biggest fault the team seemed to possess was their slacking off for one period, which allowed the opposition to move in and build up a lead.

The experience gained and the knowledge obtained during the season should result in better teams in the future. More student support would help immensely to encourage the future players to play the fastest and roughest sport staged on the campus. Hockey is becoming a more popular sport in collegiate circles and U. V. M. can represent itself quite adequately if the situation is handled properly.

The final individual scoring for the season has not been tabulated as yet but the results of all the games are as follows:

U.V.M.	Opp.
2	Norwich	0
10	Paul Smith	4
5	Middlebury	11
9	Paul Smith	8
0	Army	10
10	Champlain	1
2	Hamilton	14
5	Norwich	7
1	Middlebury	5
3	Norwich	4

Vets' Corner

Veteran-students who are enrolled in American colleges during the regular school year and want to take summer courses abroad under the GI Bill must meet certain requirements to qualify for such study.

The veteran first must obtain a letter of acceptance from the VA-approved foreign school he plans to attend.

Next, he must secure a supplemental certificate of eligibility from his VA regional office.

The student then uses his letter of acceptance and his supplemental certificate as evidence in securing from the Department of State the necessary passports and visas authorizing his travel to the foreign school. The individual veteran must pay all transportation costs.

Veterans Administration recommends that the summer study be taken in an approved school in a foreign country served by an Attache of Veterans Affairs assigned by the Department of State. These countries include Great Britain, Mexico, France, Switzerland, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Belgium.

Unless veterans attending educational institutions of higher learning under the GI Bill notify the Veterans Administration within 30 days before the end of a term or semester that they do not wish to take leave, the VA will automatically place them on 15 days' leave.

A veteran who is placed on 15 days' leave will receive subsistence allowance for that period, and his period of training at government expense will be reduced by 15 consecutive calendar days.

Veterans who do not want their entitlement so reduced should notify the VA to that effect. VA forms to be used by veterans to signify whether or not they desire the 15 days' leave are available at their respective institutions.

The certificate of eligibility issued to the veteran preparing to enter training or college under the GI Bill loses its validity if he discontinues his training, Veterans Administration announced.

The trainee who has withdrawn from training and later desires to resume his studies must obtain a "supplemental certificate of eligibility" from the VA to secure GI Bill benefits.

Application for the supplemental certificate may be made to any VA office. Those electing to apply by letter are required to name the school to be attended and the courses to be taken.

Sports Parade Of Yesteryears . . .

In the fall of 1896 the sophomores ran rampant over the freshmen when they handed them a 60 to 0 trouncing in their final football game. There was only one other game that fall and that was played between the freshmen and Troop F of Fort Ethan Allen. The frosh won by 18 to 4.

Although little active participation was displayed on the field in the latter part of 1896, much was going on to foster the sports program at U.V.M. The faculty and the alumni got together to talk over the plans to build a permanent cage and to support a football team in 1897.

Dismal Southern Trip

The southern trip of the spring of 1897 lasted from March 28 to May 12. The team travelled over 2000 miles in their journey through the South. The Catamounts only won four games out of ten played. Despite the fact the new cage was utilized the team gave a rather poor showing compared to previous years. Much of the failure to produce a better showing was attributed to the lack of sufficient outdoor practice and to few good pitchers. The team was also very weak in fielding as they committed five errors or more in each game. The season opened in New York City where Vermont played and defeated Fordham 16 to 14. The second game was also of the large score variety which ended in a 11 to 10 victory for U.V.M. over Manhattan. Vermont copped its third straight victory at East Orange, N. J., where they defeated Seton Hall 9 to 3. The fourth win, which came later in the schedule, was over the Episcopal Seminary team of Virginia. Vermont smothered them 32 to 0 after pounding out 34 hits. Vermont lost two games to the University of Virginia, and one each to Georgetown, Princeton, N. Y. U., and Penn. In the first Virginia game Vermont made eleven errors and in the Georgetown game they committed thirteen mistakes. However, after the Georgetown game the Washington Post gave fine praise to the Vermont catcher Aldinger when the paper compared him to Buck Ewing, the famous catcher of the big leagues. The rest of the season ended in about a 500 per cent record. Vermont played Dartmouth four times in that year. U.V.M. was only able to win their last with the Big Green, in which Miner, the only outstanding pitcher Vermont possessed, held the opposition to two hits to enable the Catamounts to come out on top by 9 to 1. A 15-inning game was played with Harvard with the final result ending in an 8 to 6 victory for U.V.M. The score was tied five all when Harvard scored three runs in the bottom half of the ninth inning. Six extra innings went by before either team could push any more runs across the plate. Vermont scored three runs in the top half of the fifteenth and The Crimson put one run across the plate in the last half of the inning. U.V.M. had a two run advantage after a hectic three hours of some very exciting play. In the last two games of the year, Union felt the strength of Vermont's batting power when they went down to defeat twice by heavy margins. The first game was a 11 to 1 victory for U.V.M. and the second game was an overwhelming defeat for Union by a 34 to 2 score. Vermont collected a total of 30 hits to the Garnet and Gray's two in the last game.

Football Dominates Scene

The football team of 1897, as promised, was fielded with the intent of ameliorating Vermont's position as a football school. From the University of Pennsylvania the school obtained Coach Farrar to round the team into shape. A sum of 386 dollars was collected by subscription from the students—and hold your hats! You will not believe it, but it is true. They had a training table set up for the team! Manager Robbins of the team worked hard to get a commendable schedule together. Dartmouth was placed on the schedule but the game had to be cancelled. The team went, undefeated in that year with the season's record standing at three wins, two ties and no losses. Vermont and Middlebury met at Athletic Park for the first time since that unpleasant riot back in 1894. Vermont came out on top by 14 to 0. The big game, however, was the 62 to 4 lambasting Vermont gave to Norwich. Whalen, the all around athlete of '97, scored the majority of the touchdowns. One of the scores he made was on a touchdown run of 80 yards. This year was one of those rare times when the students, faculty and alumni worked together to help the school make a better showing. Maybe we should follow that example in today's activities. The efforts in 1896 and 1897 were the real beginning to more regular football activity at U.V.M. In the early 1900s U.V.M. played such teams as Columbia, N. Y. U., Syracuse and others.

legislation on the European Recovery Program. The American stake in European reconstruction and its impact on world economic and political stabilization.

(4) Seminar on the Marshall Plan. 3 qtr. hrs. or 2 sem. hrs.

This special seminar consists of ten lectures to be given at the University of Birmingham by staff members of that institution and guest lecturers (businessmen, trade-union representatives) invited by them for that specific purpose and of ten lectures to be given at the Institut des Hautes Etudes Internationales of the University of Paris by its staff members and guest lecturers. The listed field trips in France will be part of this seminar. Each one of the five field trip groups will report to the entire group its impressions gained on a particular journey.

The economic geography and history courses will commence on the outward journey, aboard ship where facilities for classrooms will be available including a small, but highly selective ship library. These courses will be continued at the University of Birmingham and the University of Paris and will be concluded on the homeward trip. The European Recovery Program course will not begin until after arrival at the University of Birmingham in order to give students prior economic, geographical and historical information. This course will also be continued at the University of Paris, to be completed on the homeward trip.

In order to have a thorough understanding of the role which the four governments in the countries to be visited intend to play in regard to the European Recovery Program an additional series of lectures has been arranged. These lectures, in contrast to the University lectures, will be given by high government officials.

First lecture: An over-all picture of the Marshall Plan by members of the committee of the sixteen Marshall Plan countries. In Paris.

Second lecture: The British role in the European Recovery Program. In London.

Third lecture: Nature and operation of the Benelux Customs Union. At The Hague.

Fourth lecture: The Dutch Role in the European Recovery Program. At The Hague.

Fifth lecture: The Belgian Role in the European Recovery Program. In Brussels.

Sixth lecture: The French Role in the European Recovery Program. In Paris.

In reality, each of these lectures will consist of a group of lectures so that as many aspects of the problem as possible can be covered in the time allotted. Field trips to industrial plants, coal mines, ship yards, etc., will round out the program in order to supplement classroom instruction.

The University of Vermont will be able to accommodate approximately 300 students on this trip. The very nature of the project, which is not a tourist excursion, but a serious education undertaking, precludes the acceptance of a larger number. Accommodation difficulties in Europe make it also inadvisable, at this time, to undertake a more ambitious project. Dr. J. S. Millis, president of the University of Vermont, however, states that such annual projects will from now on be an integral part of the course offerings of that institution.

In order to obtain full academic credits students will be asked to submit a term report and upon reaching New York City will take a final examination at one of the city high schools. These facilities will be made available through the New York City Board of Education which will have a considerable number of its own teachers enrolled in this summer work. Teachers of the New York City School System will make application for the project through the Office of the Superintendent.

Accommodations aboard ship and in British and French dormitories will be more than adequate. Students may eat in England in the government-owned restaurants where cheap and well-balanced meals are available. In France, during their three weeks at the University of Paris, American students will share university life with their French fellow-students. They may, of course, arrange for food parcels to be shipped to them while in Europe. The University of Vermont, however, intends to discourage all unnecessary lavish display. Provision has been made to assure ample time for individual sightseeing and entertainment as well as group activities of a social nature. The approximate price for the entire trip will be $535 including visas, tuition, travel, and living expenditures while abroad. Veterans should make immediate application under their GI Bill of Rights entitlements. Faculty members of the University of Vermont as well as members of several other institutions will accompany the group en route.

New Student Union Officers Installed

Annual Student Union installation was held in the chapel on Wednesday evening. The meeting was called to order by retiring president, Margaret Hoyt. After the reciting of the Vermont pledge by the large group of women students, Mrs. Hoyt introduced Rosemary Bristol, retiring chief justice, who installed the executive and the judicial committee. After this was done, she read the oath of office to Pat Malmquist, who was elected chief justice for the year 1948-49. Mrs. Hoyt then gave the oath of office to Kathy Eaton, new president of Women's Student Union.

The business meeting was conducted by the new president, who began by presenting Peggy Hoyt with a beautiful corsage for her service and loyalty to her office. The secretary's report was read by Mary Andrew and the treasurer's report by Rose Mary Traynor. After the regular business meeting, Kathy Eaton introduced the assistant dean of women, Miss Margaret Wing, who spoke briefly on the wise selection of the girls elected to fulfill the duties of their respective offices on Women's Student Union. Following Miss Wing's talk, Kathy introduced Beverly Grier, who spoke for Mortar Board, explaining the duties of girls elected to this high office. Next, a member of Staff and Sandal, Janie Smith, spoke on behalf of the Junior women's honor society. Following this talk, Kathy Grier, president of Sophomore Aides, spoke to the freshmen on the qualities necessary for a girl to be elected to this position. Then Bev Grier came out to explain the process of voting to all women students. After this explanation, voting for the honorary societies took place. The girls were excused as soon as this was finished.

Officers for the year 1948-49 are as follows:

President—Kathy Eaton
Chief Justice—Pat Malmquist
Vice-President—Jan McDonald
Second Vice-President—Barbara Larrabee
Social Chairman—Mary Jane Farnham

Assistant House Chairman—Andy Dzikielowski
Scholarship Chairman—Bev Hillman
Assistant Scholarship Chairman—Norma Hale

Student Gov't To Publish Bulletin

"Today at U. V. M.," a daily bulletin of events on campus will be published beginning next Monday, April 20. This announcement was made by Mary Jane Farnham, chairman of the Social Committee of Student Government, who is in charge of the project. The idea of publishing such a bulletin originated with Ed Costello, freshman member of the Executive Council, who proposed it prior to vacation. Funds to cover the cost were appropriated at last Thursday's meeting of the council.

Miss Farnham announced that the bulletin for each day would be posted by 8 a.m. on all of the college bulletin boards, and requests all campus organizations or individuals who are sponsoring events to notify her by leaving a note in the Student Government mail box in the information office in Waterman building before 3 p.m. on the day prior to the one on which the notice is to appear.

Another feature of the bulletin will be a "Lost and Found" department. Notices may be included in that section in the same manner as in the "Events" department.

The innovation of this bulletin is part of the Student Government plan for the elimination of confusion on the bulletin boards, and to make information accessible without requiring long perusal of the many notices not attached to the bulletin boards.

Senior Notice

Senior classmen will kickoff a busy quarter in preparation for graduation on June 21 tomorrow night when they meet in 239 Waterman to discuss graduation plans.

All fourth year students were warned today by class officers to note the change in meeting place. Originally the class was slated to gather in the student lounge, but the room will be in use by Newman Club.

Pres. Dick Evans indicated this week that many important matters would be discussed at Thursday night's meeting. The problem of class rings, invitations, class outings and other important points will be taken up in addition to the selection of class day speakers.

The meeting will start promptly at 7.15 p.m.

Mortar Board Formal Slated For Weekend

As Southwick Hall "throws open its doors on April 16 to the students of U. V. M., a new and completely redecorated Southwick will appear with spring flowers as the predominant motif. The Mortar Board Formal will be the first big dance to take place at Southwick since it was occupied as a dormitory for the girls of the campus. As such the Mortar Board Formal will be a sort of grand opening, and will provide a chance for those who have not yet ventured out to the women's camps and Southwick Hall, to see it in all its beauty.

Mortar Board has been designated as a 1.30 evening by Women's Student Union, and is a good chance for the girls to take advantage of a late evening not to mention the idea of girl asking boy.

Tickets will go on sale in Waterman on Tuesday and will be sold again on Friday. The hours of sale will be from 8.00 to 3.00. The price is $2.40 per couple. So get your tickets early, girls.

Chaperoning the affair will be Professor and Mrs. Long, Dean Simpson, and another member of the faculty.

Midd Girls Win 3 Games Against WAA

On April 3, better known as U.V.M. Play Day, President Jo Howard of our W.A.A. greeted girls from Middlebury who came to share the day in sports. At 2.30 basketball contests were underway. The four groups from Middlebury played hard against the four teams from our W.A.A. and were able to capture three of the games. At the same time modern dance groups worked up in the ballroom to play a program which was later presented to all the participants of the day. Everyone spent the remaining time, until the buffet supper, square dancing. This, like V.J.C. Day, was a day of fun rather than a day of competition. Gloria McGill, Rose-Mary Traynor and Pat Tucker were among the girls responsible for the successful day.

Announcement has come of the softball club on Mondays at 2.30 at Southwick.

Don't forget sailing at 12.15 every Tuesday and Thursday. Meet at Waterman 264. Some swimming requirements must be met by girls interested in this club.

Dean Hills Awards Trophy to Atherton At Sugar Party

Henry Atherton of Barton was awarded the John M. Thomas trophy by Dean Emeritus J. L. Hills at the 12th annual Dean Hills Sugar Party, sponsored by the Aggie and Home Ec. Departments of the University of Vermont.

The trophy is presented each year to the senior male student who most closely typifies the qualities of John M. Thomas '42 of Rutland, who was killed in an automobile accident in 1941. The proceeds of the party go to the Dean Hills scholarship fund for deserving agricultural students.

Dr. James W. Marvin of the Agricultural College was toastmaster. Speakers and honor guests included Dean Joseph E. Carrigan, who became dean when Dean Hills relinquished the post in 1942; Warren A. Dodge of the Vermont Maple Sugar Association; Kenneth J. Liggett '49, Lyndonville, president of the Aggie Club; Miss Dorothy Dexter '48, Pearl River, N. Y., president of the Home Economics Club; E. L. (Daddy) Ingalls, retired Vermont 4-H Club leader, and Commissioner of Agriculture Stanley Judd. Carroll T. Berry '48, Burlington, was chairman of the event.

The UVM male quartet provided several songs for the entertainment. The Collegians played for the dance which followed the sugar on snow party.

Vermont Male Choruses Sing to Capacity House

The first annual concert of the Green Mountain District of the Associated Male Choruses of America, brought more than a thousand persons to the Memorial Auditorium Sunday evening. The participating groups were the Brattleboro Male Chorus, which is the largest in the district numbering fifty men, the Welsh Male Chorus of Poultney, Mendelssohn Men's Choral Club of Windsor-Woodstock-Springfield, and the Champlain Choristers of Burlington.

The generous applause of the large audience was clear evidence of its enjoyment of the program, and only the "no encore" rule prevented requests for more.

All these singing groups were made up of amateurs for whom singing is an avocation and a leisure-time pursuit. The evident joy they gave to their expression contributed itself to their hearers.

The Poultney Welsh choir of twenty-six men is directed by Evan Williams and Mrs. Gladys M. Jones is accompanist. By request, the mascot of the chorus, Herbert Jones, age 8, sang an Irish lullaby.

The Mendelssohn Men's Choral Club of the three communities of Windsor, Woodstock and Springfield is under the leadership of Sherman W. Howe with Herbert Wood as accompanist. They sang difficult numbers with poetic finish.

The Brattleboro Male Chorus has Joseph P. Fagnon as director and as accompanist W. A. Johnson. This group sang two of its numbers a cappella and maintained (splendid) pitch and harmony.

The Champlain Choristers of Burlington were twenty-six in number. They had Errol C. Slack at the piano and George H. Favor as director.

The concert closed when the audience stood and joined with the men singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

Health Council News

Dr. Harriet Dustin will talk on "Emotional Health" in Room 239 Waterman, Tuesday evening, April 13 at 7.30. This lecture which is of pertinent interest to all students is sponsored by the Health Council. It is open to the student public on campus and a cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

Dean Simpson Tells Roommate Procedure

In an open discussion of the rooming policy in the Old Mill held March 4, Miss Simpson outlined the basis for assignment of roommates used by the staff of the Dean of Women. During the talk Miss Simpson stressed the need for common interests in the assignment of roommates, and if it involves placing girls of the same religious or racial backgrounds together, it cannot be construed to be segregation or prejudice. The talk was sponsored by the Social Action Committee.

After giving a brief history of the development of dormitory policies since she came to U.V.M. in 1937, Miss Simpson outlined the present procedures. If possible, the Dean has a personal interview with each applicant. She takes notes on this interview for her reference file. The applicant fills out a questionnaire on her likes and dislikes, her general personality and her predilections as to roommates if any. The high school principal sends her record. The general characteristics of the social group with which she has been identified are taken into account. Personal traits, activities in high school, and religious and racial preference are also noted. When this data has finally been compiled, the girls are grouped in the following manner:

1. If two girls are mutually agreed in a desire to room together, it stands whether the dean's office considers it advisable or not.
2. Urban and rural.
3. In state and out of state.
4. Religious background.

The second, third and fourth categories are by no means strictly adhered to, but are followed as closely as the personalities of the girls follow the pattern. Girls of the same religion, even to different Protestant denominations, are placed together whenever possible. According to Miss Simpson girls entering college have many difficult adjustments to make, and a common religion between roommates is on a solid basis for understanding.

In the case of the Old Mill, girls had already been assigned to their roommates in the new dorm, and were grouped together according to religion as a matter of convenience. The policy of placing girls of the same religion in one room was the best immediate solution where large groups of girls had to live in close quarters in good harmony.

Following Miss Simpson's talk a discussion took place in which participants made the following suggestions:

1. Upperclassmen should take the initiative to instill and open an unprejudiced viewpoint on race and religion. Possibly the "big sister" system might be an effective instrument for instilling democratic principles into incoming freshmen.
2. Students can best help combat growing racial tension by facing the problems which exist and knowing the emotions at work in themselves as well as others. A more thoughtful, reasonable approach to relations between different kinds of people without officious and often unwelcome overtures may effect better understanding on our campus.
3. Cases in which there is doubt concerning the motive behind a university policy are best solved by bringing the matter directly to authorities responsible.

ATTENTION: CLUB TREASURERS

All clubs or organizations which expect to receive an allocation from Student Government funds next year should note the financial regulations which are printed below. Budgets for the 1948-49 school year should be left in the Student Government box in the information booth by the end of the second week in May. The finance committee will not consider any budgets which are turned in later than May 15, 1948.

FLASH THAT SMILE

Peggy Fisher and Marshall Sabens, are now avid Colgate toothpaste fans. Peggy and Marsh appeared at the Kake Walk Masquerade as a toothbrush and a tube of toothpaste. The result: to each a box of merchandise from the Colgate Co. (Next year, it is reported, they plan to go dressed as Cadillacs.)

The Challenge

Since the close of World War II, American students have been witnesses to one of the allegedly greatest turnabouts ever experienced. Russia, before the war, was looked upon by many Americans as one of our greatest threats. Then suddenly, with a turn of the war, we found ourselves thrown into a great alliance with the Russians. They were our allies, hence our true friends, as interested as we ourselves in a peaceful postwar world. But with the close of the war came a reversal of American opinion quite as unpredictably as had come our great "friendship."

Why this reversal? Bruce C. Hopper, a member of the Harvard faculty made his analysis recently in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin, and made it an indictment of American education.

Said he, "Our compelling need today is a gospel outlining our faith in the survival of Western civilization . . . It is no comfort to realize that our lack of political 'know how' is largely to blame for the impasse. Never before in all history has it happened that a nation arrived at technical supremacy of the world without going through the slow and painful process of acquiring political education in the art of world leadership." His authority is Toynbee's "A Study of History." Toynbee's theme: the growth of a society comes through a successful response to a challenge—climate, war, etc. The growth afterwards (Toynbee calls it an elan) is kept going, however, by the "creative minority"—individuals of genius acting on a spiritual plane.

"The first requirement is that the creative minority see the challenge in perspective."—The Bolsheviks are comparatively primitive—they are just now catching up. They possess a primitive energy. They are physically strong. And they also bring new political techniques—appeals to the frustrated and discontented.

We must also realize our own political destiny; as a corollary we must not judge other people by our own intentions. We must not believe simply what we want to believe. Hopper cites military illusions of World War II (for example, the refusal of the Russians to aid General Bor when at the gates of Warsaw) while with the right perspective, we could have divined the real motives behind such action.

"The response of the creative minority must be directed toward correcting the illusions which come from ignorance." Professor Lohman, through his Marshall Plan in Action, has initiated a notable step in our enlightenment.

Careers at GENERAL ELECTRIC

CHEMIST...RESEARCHER...AIR CONDITIONER

For each, General Electric has assignments to his liking

General Electric is not one business, but an organization of many businesses. Graduates of American colleges and universities are finding that the 97 plants of General Electric offer opportunities to all degrees of specialists, all sorts of enthusiasms, all kinds of careers.

TRANSFORMER CHEMIST

There's plenty for the chemist to do in the building of transformers. Five of nine sections of our Pittsfield Works Laboratory deal with chemical problems relating to transformer manufacture. Add to these the company-wide opportunities in plastics and silicones, and it's clear that young men like Fred Torrisi, now working on silicon steel, are finding room for careers at General Electric.

LAMP RESEARCHER

Lighting in America has become a $200,000,000 business, but experts think it has only begun its growth. For example: 30,000,000 American homes need four times more light. At General Electric's Nela Park many returned servicemen—like Con Bechard (Union '41), doing research on new types of lamps—are shaping careers that have meaning in terms of interest, opportunity, and achievement.

AIR CONDITIONING ENGINEER

At Bloomfield, N. J., General Electric makes store coolers, automatic heating equipment, commercial refrigeration products, remote room air conditioners. With every survey showing that the vast majority of home-planners want some form of air conditioning or automatic heating, specialists like Bill Knaus (Washington U '30) are riding a mounting wave.

Kappa Sigma Fraternity Becomes Proud Parent

Every last man in the Alpha Lambda Chapter of the Kappa Sigma fraternity has become a foster parent. They have adopted (that is, they are helping to support for one year) a little Dutch girl named Johanna Cornelia Burger. "Corrie," as her family knows her, is just one of those countless war children who have never had a normal life. She is one of the many children who, in their most impressionable years, were exposed to all the shattering experiences of war—hunger, cold, constant fear, and relentless bombing. Corrie is luckier now than most children. The dire need of Mrs. Burger and her family came to the attention of the Foster Parent's Plan for War Children who are attempting to relieve Mrs. Burger of some of the economic problems which attend the raising of any family.

Before the war, Corrie, her mother and father, her small brother Jan, and her big sister Henricka, lived on a little farm on the edge of town. They lived, as many middle class Europeans always have, with comfort but strict economy. That is, they did until the enemy occupation of their country. One of the first major offensives of this war, the Arnheim von-Rundstedt, pushed by all the power of a victorious Germany, forced them to evacuate their home. For six long weary weeks the family roamed the countryside, sleeping in cellars and trying to find food and safety. In this fight for survival the family was robbed of their chief bread winner. The father, Mr. Burger, was hit and instantly killed by shellfire. By dint of personal courage and great struggle Mrs. Burger finally got her impoverished family across the Meuse River, to the evacuation camp at Someren, where they stayed until liberation.

When Mrs. Burer and her children returned to the little farm near Amsterdam they found it completely destroyed. Until they were discovered by the Foster Parent's Plan the Burgers were living in one small room. The Plan moved them into an emergency house and furnished clothing for the family. One of their dresses is on Corrie in the picture they enclosed to the Kappa Sigs. The Plan is doing a great deal for all children under its protection. Corrie, for example, receives food, clothing, medical and dental care and to supplement this her mother is given a small monthly allowance for home needs. Until Corrie's mother is financially secure the Plan will continue to care for Corrie, her brother and her sister. Corrie, according to the Brief Case History sent to her foster parents, the Kappa Sigs, "is four-going-on-to-five and is a very sweet child, active in mind and body. She is fond of dolls, though she does not have one of her own, and is especially happy when her brother, Jan, and the boys allow her to play with them. Corrie is a definite blond with high coloring to her cheeks. She is looking forward to the time she can 'go to school.'"

The Kappa Sigs are not the only college fraternity engaged in such worthy enterprises. Many other colleges have adopted one or even as many as two war children. Many famous people including Clifton Fadiman, Perry Como, Bob Hope, Hildegarde, Ginny Simms, Quentin Reynolds, Thornton Wilder and others have adopted or are sponsoring war children.

A penny-a-day per man in the Kappa Sigs, totals the $15 needed for the monthly payment on an "adoption." As you can see the amount is really very little—yet that little will mean care, security and friendship to a lonely, needy war child.

Just This and That

By GLADYS E. NEIBURG

How about a new spring look? It is easy enough to get the New Look by buying new clothes—long dresses and coats, pert bits of ribbon or flowers for a hat—gloves—exotic handbags. But this is all surface appearance. All this can be bought for money. All this is not lasting.

To get the New Spring Look—try systematic exercising. Get rid of those telltale bulges accumulated through the winter months. Do a little measuring with the tape measure, making sure you start at the end which has the figure "1."

Twenty minutes of exercise each evening will work wonders if you also remember that lemon meringue pie hides 450 calories, or that one lone little peanut bar packs a wallop to the tune of 300 calories.

The Burlington Free Press has been carrying features by Ida-Jean Kain which are excellent. Pick out the parts which tell you how to get rid of that spare tire just above the waist line, or how to trim down to make the dresses have a genuine new look.

And watch the girls at Robinson Hall who are having loads of fun each evening from 10.00 to 12.20 just exercising. Even Mrs. Cole, the house director, has succumbed to the lure of the "one-two-three-four" attempt to touch the floor with finger tips, and not bending the knees.

The girls at Robinson are very serious about this—and they are having so much fun at it that they recommend that other dorms try it.

Just to do something while resting, they also walk around with books on their heads. This is not the way to absorb knowledge, but it does help to get that New Look through good posture.

Any dorm interested in this pleasant workout for good results can ask their health official about it. She should know the answers. If not—ask the gang at Robinson Hall—or maybe better than that—call on the Physical Education Department.

Student Government Notes . . .

April 8, 1948

President Miele called the meeting to order at 4.05. The secretary's report was read and accepted.

It was reported that arrangements have been made for a barber shop in Waterman. The question of its location in the building is delaying actual operation. The price of haircuts will be not more than $60, and possibly less, depending upon the rent expense for the proprietor.

William Hogan, secretary of the senior class, expressed to the council the hope that officers for the class of '49 would be elected by May 15 of this year. This would enable a period of apprenticeship under the present senior officers and would provide adequate time to plan and prepare for next year's graduation. He proposed that the junior members of the executive council form a committee to call and conduct a junior class meeting and suggested that Junior Week directors might be elected at the same time. A motion favoring these proposals was made by Lucille Wetherby, seconded by Peter Haslam, and accepted.

Bill Hogan also explained to the council that the class of '48 has adopted a new school ring for its members, to replace the one which has been on sale and which is being discontinued by the producing company this spring. Upon his request the council favored an interview with the Balfour and the Jewel Shoppe representatives to decide upon a new standard ring for the University as of the year 1949.

John Adams asked the council to consider making an appeal to the administration for the discontinuance of final examinations. He advanced the idea that students desiring an opportunity to boost their averages might volunteer for final testing by their individual professors. Al Pratt made the motion that a committee of two be appointed to study the problem, both student and faculty aspects. The motion was seconded by Bob Perkins and accepted.

Mary Jane Farnham presented a possible outline for Junior Week and encouraged a junior class meeting in the near future. She explained that action of the former council has placed necessarily a maximum of $500 on Junior Week expenses and that a Junior Prom would be possible only if "The Catamounts" could be engaged. It is probable that the price per couple for the prom would be considerably lower than that of $5.00 last spring.

Mary Jane reported that the issuance of a daily schedule of events will begin next week. A written proposal by Ed Costello that $5.00 be allotted to cover paper, stencil, typing and distribution expenses each week was made into a motion by Bob Perkins, seconded by Peter Haslam, and carried. Further details and requirements to insure success of the bulletin will be published in the CYNIC.

The committee to devise a new method of appointment of assistant Kake Walk directors presented its plan. After considerable discussion Tom Hayes moved that the plan not be accepted. The motion was seconded by Al Pratt and passed. After further debate the motion was made by Jane Smith that a vote be taken of those council members in favor of the present plan and very unlikely to favor any other plan. The motion was seconded by Al Pratt and carried. A roll call vote resulted in: eight supporting the present procedure; six against it; three members not voting, one because of absence.

Lucille Wetherby reported that the Burlington Rapid Transit Company has not yet reached a definite decision as to special rates for college students.

Discussion of the U. V. M. athletic program was initiated by Jane Smith who asked the council to consider sending a letter to the alumni reunion in New York on April 13, stating the grievances of the student body and pertinent facts concerning the athletic program as it now stands. It was thought that a substantial number of influenced and influential alumni might help press the matter together with the student body since other approaches in the past have failed. Following discussion and comments by Sam Houston and Professor Carpenter on various views of the situation, the council agreed that its chief aim is not professionalism or large scale subsidy of players, but improved conditions and added incentive for able students with athletic spirit and ability. The motion by Tom Hayes that the council delegate a student to attend the New York meeting was seconded, amended by Lucille Wetherby to name Sam Houston as the representative, seconded, and accepted. The motion was made that a committee including Sam Houston, the captains of football, basketball and baseball, John Adams, Al Pratt, Stan Ursprung and Jane Smith, be formed to gather and organize the facts to be presented by the delegate. Sherman Sprague seconded the motion and it was accepted.

Jane Atwood moved that all balances remaining on the student government

Cynic Sports Editor Tells of N. Y. Trip Veto

Young Republicans of UVM to Sponsor Foreign Policy Forum

Prof. Nuquist, Shultz, and Long To Speak

Highlighting the April agenda of the U.V.M. campus is a "States Foreign Policy" discussion sponsored by the Young Republican Club and slated for next Tuesday evening, April 20, at the Waterman Building. The discussion will be held in Room 239 with several major speakers participating. The club has arranged with the speakers to discuss each phase of the foreign policy problem separately. Prof. Paul D. Evans is presenting the fundamental background material will be followed by Prof. Robert Long of the Political Science department who will discuss the policy's application in Europe. The far Eastern aspect will be handled by Prof. Andrew Nuquist of the Political Science department and the effects of the policy on the domestic situation will be discussed by Prof. H. S. Shultz.

The audience will be given the opportunity to participate at the close of the speeches, and, questions from the floor will be handled by the board of experts. Edward Costello '51, chairman of the campus YR pointed out that the views of the speakers do not constitute an endorsement of the Republican Party or the local YR. It is part of a series of discussions arranged by the YR to promote interest in the vital topics of the world today. A similar program is to be presented April 29 and the slate of speakers will be announced early next week.

Joyce Vivent; Warren Carryl Will Edit 1948-49 Windfall Issues

The Scribes, publishers of U. V. M.'s quarterly, Windfall, have decided upon a complete revision of the present constitution of the club. Formerly the Scribes' primary interest has been in the improvement and encouragement of writers who intend to make writing their living. This, necessarily, has always limited both the size of the group and its interest to the average amateur writer. Although this is still an aim of the Scribes, it will be secondary to the quarterly publishing of Windfall. For this reason, and to acquaint the student body with the new Windfall, the entire edition of the Spring issue for 1948 is to be distributed free of charge as introductory copies.

At a meeting held Tuesday, April 13, the reorganization became an accomplished fact. The roll of officers to be elected was organized on this new basis. According to the new plan of officer-club relations, the Scribes will be made much more controlled, but at the same time fundamentally more democratic. To aid in this centralization the staff of officers necessary for the functioning of the Scribes and the staff of officers necessary to the publishing of Windfall are being combined into one unit. With the resignation of Alexander (48), Joyce Vivent, long influential and indefatigable worker on the U. V. Cynic, has been appointed Editor. Other officers elected on the revised staff are Gladys Neuberg, as Social Secretary; Allan Luce, in charge of Public Relations; Warren Carryl, Managing Editor; and Business Editor, William Thomas. The heads of the various Windfall departments are Bill Clossy, Prose; John Adams, Poetry; and Ellie Hayslip, in charge of the Art. Previously all manuscripts presented for use in the Windfall were accepted or rejected by these heads of the departments. Under the new and

JUNIOR CLASS MEETING

The class of 1949 will elect its permanent officers and appoint the directors for Junior Week at a meeting to be held in the Student Lounge, Tuesday, April 20, at 7:30 P.M. At this time there will be discussion of plans for Junior Week.

The following officers will be elected: President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, Alumni Secretary, Senior Week Directors and Junior Week Directors.

The reason for holding elections at this time instead of next fall is that in this way, the officers will be able to work with the officers of the Class of 1948 this graduation.

DAILY BULLETIN IS PLACED IN ACTIVE OPERATION TODAY

This much needed dispenser of authentic information was suggested to Student Government by Ed Costello. It will not only relieve the congested and tacky bulletin boards but will give changes to be noted on the yellow activity calendar. The first "Daily Bulletin" as it will be called will appear on all major bulletin boards Monday, April 19.

All organizations and individuals wishing to put notices in the Daily Bulletin must leave them by 3:00 p.m. the previous day, in the Student Government box, in the Information Office, with the name "Mary Jane Farnham" on it.

The publishing of the Daily Bulletin will be financed by Student Government.

Deans, Swift and Simpson Announce Party Regulations

Inasmuch as some faculty couples have been called upon, to chaperone so frequently as to make such service a burden the Dean's Office is now compiling an alphabetical list of all those who are willing to serve and from this list chaperones will be assigned in rotation. The list will be kept in the office of the Dean of Women and the group sponsoring a dance should confer with this office beforehand to find out which faculty couples are available; should then invite them and be sure that they will accept the assignment before filing the dance petition.

The faculty who consent to serve will be furnished with an outline of the rules regarding social functions held under University auspices and will be asked to report to the University Council any deviation from these rules.

For your information the regulations are as follows:

1. Plans for dances should be made well in advance and the names of possible chaperones secured from the list in the Dean's Office. Their names should not appear on the petition until an invitation has been issued and they have agreed to serve.
  2. Petitions must be filed at least a week before the event takes place.
  3. The petition should indicate: who the chaperones are who have agreed to serve; and the name and telephone number of the social chairman or other member who is to be present and take the responsibility for receiving the chaperones, enforcing regulations as to the conduct of the dance, etc.
  4. The person so designated must be present or be sure that an officer of the fraternity is present, to assume full responsibility, and whoever is in charge must remain until the dance closes.
  5. No liquor is to be served or brought into the house by any guest at the dance or used by anyone who is in the house.
  6. No women guests are to go above the first floor for any reason during a fraternity dance unless advance permission has been obtained to use an upstairs room as a dressing room for the women guests. In that case a note should be made on the petition to that effect when the petition is filed. The same rule applies to men who are guests at a sorority dance.
  7. All women guests must leave the house promptly when the party is over so as not to delay the chaperones, and no women guests may return later.
  8. Chaperones deserve and must have courteous treatment. It is not always convenient for faculty members to serve as chaperones and many of them do it at considerable sacrifice, both of time and money, inasmuch as it often means hiring someone to stay with their children, using taxis, etc. For formal dances the fraternity or sorority should provide transportation for the chaperones to and from the dance, if desired, and every courtesy should be accorded them while they are there.
- Such courtesies include:
- a. Being welcomed by the person in charge when they arrive.
  - b. Having all guests presented to the chaperones immediately upon arrival of the guests. It is not enough to say "good night" hurriedly at the end of the evening.
  - c. Providing someone from the membership of the fraternity to receive the guests and introduce them properly to the chaperones.
  - d. Seeing that they have a comfortable place to sit and that refreshments, if such are served, are brought to them promptly. If refreshments are not served in the house but the guests go downtown at intermission, provision should be made for the chaperones to go also. In that case no guests may remain in the house.
  - e. Seeing to it that chaperones who do not dance are not left alone for long periods during the evening.
  - f. Expressing appreciation of their service by thanking them personally before they leave.
- If these courtesies are extended it will be less difficult to secure chaperones for many dances which are now on the calendar.

Sec. University Council.

UVM Administration Halts Student Government Plan

U.V.M. Athletic Faults Were To Be Presented To NY Alumni Reunion

By SAM HOUSTON

Do the students of Vermont have to wait until all their athletic teams are dropped from competition by the leading small colleges before something can be done to further the athletic program here at Vermont? The reason I ask this is the recent denial which Student Government received when they attempted to do something to help out this athletic program.

In case some of you are ignorant of what happened, Student Government attempted to send a representative to speak to an alumni body in one section of the country. There was no motive for this except to let the alumni know just what was taking place in athletics at Vermont, and thus help them to understand the situation and work with the student body through the proper representatives on the Athletic Council. But certain governing factions at the University would not allow this attempt to better athletics here. The reason was that we were working through the wrong channels. It seems that there is only one channel to work through.

Before I get too far from the point I would like to set some of the students straight on this campus. This is directed to those of the student body who would agree that "everything is all right with the athletic program." These are a few of the reasons that prove that there is a great deal wrong and something must be done immediately.

Take football for instance. The varsity team is fairly well equipped. Enough so that they do not get unduly murdered. The freshman team, however, is a bit dangerous to play with. This past season one frosh player received a slight concussion because his helmet was so old that it caved in. Another player received a serious kidney injury because of inadequate hip pads. These frosh go out and play their hearts out equipped like a bunch of skeletons. Equipment is needed badly and should be obtained before any more boys are more seriously hurt.

The next example is one I consider an absolute slam in the face to the University of Vermont. In fact I, for one, am ashamed of the fact. Vermont was dropped this past month from Class A skiing competition. What this means, in short, is that a Vermont ski team can no longer participate against Middlebury, Dartmouth, McGill, New Hampshire and other leading eastern schools in this sport. That must be quite a feather in the cap of our foes to the south, Middlebury, who are National Ski Champions. So the University of Vermont which is situated in the heart of one of the greatest skiing areas in the country will from now on only compete against B competition.

Adequate appropriations to field the teams which represent the University of Vermont are needed so that each of these teams will be well equipped. Also so that these teams will be organized and have a suitable coach. This is directed mainly to skiing and golf which every year have to fight for existence at Vermont. A trainer needs to be added to the athletic department staff so that the following example will never take place again. If you remember correctly Middlebury soundly trounced our varsity football team this last fall. During the first half one of the Vermont first team players suffered broken bones in the face which undoubtedly were

Unusual Features of Masquerade are Exclusively Revealed and Reviewed

Pardon me, but have you taken a bath lately? If not, your excuse probably doesn't hold water, but here is a story of two people who have no excuses (and don't need them), but which excuses must hold water anyway.

Kake Walk Masquerade first prize went to Peggy Fisher, of Moodus, Conn., and Marshall Sabens, of Essex Junction, Vt., for their utterly constructive impersonation of a large tube of Colgate toothpaste and a long hygienic toothbrush with formidable-looking bristles. Those who screamed at the sight of them (in horror, or course), did so with their mouths closed. A shiny cup with two handles and a beautiful green and gold cake were awarded to them, and that, it seemed, was the end. (It was "the end" idiomatically speaking.)

However, some kind soul sent the Free Press photo and a note to the Colgate-Palmolive-Peat Company down in New Jersey (Peg and Marshall swear they don't know who it was, but like all true cynics we have our doubts), and first thing they knew a whole bevy of trucks came to each of their residences loaded with gifts from said company. One of the managers in the division of toilet goods had, to quote, "got quite a kick out of it," and was "sending you and your escort Mr. Sabens a box of our products."

Marshall, with a woebegone expression, told us that he had received toothpaste, talc, shaving cream, shaving lotion, and Palmolive soap. The toothpaste is disappearing rapidly. (Explanation: I guess we just eat it up!) and the soap, too—well naturally! Whadda ya think?!; however, due to circumstances beyond our control there seems to be a little difficulty in liquidating some of the other items on the list, namely the shaving cream and lotion. If they were only more useful, somehow—say, anybody got an ol' dog throwin' around?

Peggy is here, too, with a few statements for the press, a gorgeous smile of beauty and another smile of hea—whoops! that's Ipana—well, anyway, no teeth missing—and no danger of being blinded by the glare, if you wear dark "bop" glasses (for disguise and avoidance of its owner.) With the true "Colgate Kid" personality we are informed that that fresh, clean look (oh, the wink? That's just to enhance chances) comes from having made use, in chronological order, of shampoo, bubble bath, soap, bath powder, and (harrumph) —"dental cream." Just trying to keep up that glamorous, sultry look acquired by being on the "in" side of a tube of toothpaste, is the casual remark. And, incidentally "now I can appreciate what a tube of toothpaste has to go through—but don't let anyone kid you—we both love to be squeezed."

And the moral of the story is, and I quote (myself): If you can't keep clean, be a scream, and get free cream.

P. S. Here's the straight story. Someone did send the clipping with a picture of them in costume to a New Jersey agent without their knowing it, and he did get a kick out of it and sent them packages. The boxes of the company's products were a complete surprise to both of them. And they are using up all products very rapidly. All aspersions cast above are entirely fictitious, and the author wishes to apologize. But it did make a good story, no?

There has been a considerable amount of inflammatory news lately; the sprightliest event being the recent Student Government decision to send a delegate to the UVM Alumni Reunion in New York. The delegate was commissioned to present a special report on UVM athletics as seen from the student's angle. The proposed trip received a hasty veto from the administration who evidently resented this independent move on the part of the Student Executive Council.

The council's move was quickly prepared but the facts were carefully collected, there being a great abundance on hand. Though thwarted in this attempt the council has shown enough initial enthusiasm to assure the student of conscientious effort in the near future. At the last meeting the council created an investigating committee which will make a thorough study of the athletic set-up and devote special attention to the ways in which proposed changes can be effected.

It will be this paper's duty to play the watch-dog. The investigating committee must, if their efforts are to succeed, see to it that the student body is consistently informed of the progress being made.

"THE BEST IS YET TO BE"

The telephone will be seventy-two years old this year. Its development within a single lifetime has been a modern miracle: Yet it is only the beginning.

There are any number of men in the telephone business today—some just starting out—who will see greater progress than the past has ever known.

Year by year the next half century will be increasingly theirs. New leaders will appear from among them. Step by step, rung by rung, they will mount the ladder to the top. For telephone management is employee management and comes up from the ranks.

There will be more good jobs for qualified men in the telephone business in 1958 and 1998 than now. It just can't help being that way. For of all the businesses and professions, there are few more interesting and necessary.

So the future is bright for those who make telephony their life work. For them, "The best is yet to be."

At the halftime the Vermont squad went in under the bleachers for instructions and when they took the field the injured player was left alone on the ground. Some time later a student friend assisted the player back to the gymnasium where the boy could at least be warm. With an experienced trainer things like that would not take

Starting with the 1949 football season Vermont will compete against New England Conference competition, but where is the college going to get the caliber of athletes to play against Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Hampshire? There is only one incentive to go out for sport in this college. That is pure money for the sport on the part of the individual. An athlete can compete against the best of teams, be seriously injured, lose work time, lose study time and at the end of the year he does not even get a thank-you from the students themselves. Incentives must be given to bring athletes to our school.

I do not recommend that the school allow certain other schools and give out money to any athlete. I merely recommend that students be helped to get through this University, which is one of the costliest in the country. In future years many will not be on the G. I. Bill, and many will need help to get through. Why should there not be more scholarships which do not limit themselves to be obtained by dean's list students or those who live in a certain section? Why can we not be a scholarship based upon average marks, which I would say would be around a 72 average, and all around athletic ability. These athletes are willing to help the school by playing, but is the school willing to help them?

I am aware that the Yankee Conference prohibits a training table. But does it prohibit the school allowing athletes to eat and only pay a percentage of what they would normally pay? It would be a great help to athletes if they could cut down on their board bill and would serve the double purpose of giving an incentive and adding a spirit to the teams. Otherwise, if these incentives are not given, I predict that after the next two years Vermont will not win in even state competition say nothing of Yankee Conference competition. You saw what the Middlebury frosh did to our inexperienced freshman club in football this last fall. Then remember how the Kittens came out against St. Michael's in basketball this past season? They were soundly trounced twice. The material we have now will be the best Vermont will have in the future unless things are changed. Only in basketball was this present material able to cop a state title. How much further are we going down?

We, as a college, have an athletic pro-Perelman; treasurer, Ruth Ehrlich.

gram. It is not adequate however, for a college of some 2,700 students. If athletics is not doing the University any good and if the athletes themselves are mere mummies who play without being helped out at all when they need help, why have sports at Vermont? If all this University wants is high academic standing, then they should follow the University of Chicago's action and rule out intercollegiate athletics. Personally, I believe that that action would be too big a pill for the alumni to swallow.

It is my firm hope that the student body as a whole will get behind Student Government and that by this action the student body will be able to put across their dissatisfactions and convince the right faction that everything is not all right with athletics at Vermont and that something must be done and done soon.

OUTING CLUB NOTES

Seventeen members of the University of Vermont and Outing Club slogged through a couple of miles of mud to get in a last week-end of skiing at Bryant's Upper Camp last week-end, April 10 and 11.

Under the leadership of Cliff Havens a group of Outing Clubbers and their guests gathered in front of the Waterman Building, Saturday afternoon to pile food into their packs and then to pile into the waiting cars for the ride to the end of the road at Bplton. Then came a mile or two of wading through mud and ice to the Upper Camp. Saturday afternoon several of the gang got in some skiing while others started dinner and did other odd jobs around the camp.

Sunday morning after breakfast everyone that had brought along skis went over the ridge and got in some fair skiing on "The Heavenly Highway."

Chaperones for the hike were Professor and Mrs. Sidle, their son John, and dog J. Driftwood. Outing Clubbers were: Dave Hagar, Harold Stowe Everett Havens, Nancy Stell, Jacob Bailey, Joanne Howard, Connie Stone, Toni Peloquin, Clifton Havens, Elbert Isham, Lou Dean Jacobs, Hester Burroughs, and J. David Sullivan. Olive Pratt was a guest of the Outing Club.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Last Monday night the brothers and pledges of Sigma Alpha Epsilon serenaded Sylvia Reynolds of Pi Phi and Beverly Hall of the Tri Deltis, who recently became pinned to Bill Hill and Babe Post respectively, with heart warming renditions of "The Sweetest Girl" and "Violets."

Manager Alfred Susslin of the softball team has been rounding his men into shape during the past week and a half and from all indications SAE will have a well rounded squad for the coming season. A practice game was held Tuesday in which two full teams were used. Several of the men from last year's team are back and the large group of pledges will fill in gaps here and there. The first game is to be played on Thursday, April 15.

Plans are now being formulated by Chuck Costantino for the forthcoming spring dances which will be held during May. The SAE formal will be held on the 7th of May.

During the holidays the house acquired a large new stove and a mammoth new refrigerator for the kitchen. Several other improvements were completed over the spring vacation in the form of a general spring house cleaning so that the house has taken on a refreshing new appearance.

INTERFRAT VOLLEYBALL

Ten teams, one representing each fraternity on the hill, are battling for the volleyball championship of the University of Vermont now held by Delta Psi. The matches which consist of two out of three games are played on the gymnasium surface and are part of the invigorated interfraternity sport schedule.

At present there are three leagues—two frat and one independent. However, the usual lack of interest on the part of the independent forces may necessitate their removal from any possible playoff for the school championship which has been scheduled to take place April 26. To date no team representing any of the five dorms has made an appearance.

In the interfrat circle the Sigma Phis got off to a fast start, taking three straight matches and establishing themselves as the team to beat. This team is tall and well organized and it appears that the members of it have been practicing strenuously in their spacious cellar all winter and have reached the peak of rugged physical condition. The Kappa Sigma entry has shown plenty of savvy also, winning two of three contests to date and generally impressing the huge gallery with their spectacular play.

The remaining teams are of about average calibre, but the season is still young and with improvement in some squads it will be a wide open race. The standings to date follow:

The YR has set up a booth in Waterman for those students who wish to have their names placed on the YR's rolls and will continue this membership drive throughout this week and next week. The YR urges all its members as well as other students to participate in their hometown caucus which will be held statewide on April 22 for the purpose of selecting delegates to attend the Vermont Republican Convention.

Freshman Baseball

Now that the snow has left the ground the freshman athletic picture has switched to Centennial Field where the crack of bats and the snap of leather tell you that a new baseball season is underway. Fifty-two men responded to Coach Don Maynard's call, but the Deans quickly slashed this down to forty-one by declaring eleven ineligible scholastically. Many good prospects were lost here, but the overall picture is by no means dark. Late in the week the squad will be cut to twenty men, and, outside of a few minor changes, they will probably be the ones to wear the freshman Green and Gold this year.

On Tuesday Coach Maynard called an intra-squad scrimmage in an effort to get a better look at his prospects. Up until then all practice had been essentially limbering up and conditioning work in the cage, and this offered the players their first real chance to show their stuff.

Some of the better prospects seem to be: Cubby Goulet of Brighton Academy Island Pond for second; Doug Knab of Ellenville (N. Y.) High School for third; Leo Johnson of Hartford High, White River Junction for short stop; and Bob Twiss of Craftsbury (Vt.) Academy for first. Dom Cote of Cushing Academy and Doc McBride of Brighton Academy look good on the hill, while Stan Fitts of Spaulding High School, Barre and Andy Smith of Hackettstown (N. J.) High stand out among the receivers.

At present there seems to be a decided need for outfielders. However, some of the better prospects seem to be: George Schofield of Colombia High, Easton; N. J., Rocky Rothchild of Burlington High and Billy Webster.

As yet the dates of the games have not been decided, but Coach Maynard is expecting to play home and home games with Norwich frosh, St. Michael's Vermont Junior College, and Rutland Junior College. It is too early to make any definite predictions on the season, but from all indications there seems to be a winning season in the ## Optimism Over Italian Election Prevails At IRC Meeting Sun.

Prof's Long, Lohman Disagree On Effects

by ALLAN LUCE

A sense of extreme optimism seemed to prevail at an International Relations Club meeting on the Italian elections held Sunday night in the East Hall Student Lounge. The discussion was under the direction of Prof. Robert Long (English) and Prof. Philip Lohman (economics) of the University.

Professor Long started the discussion with a glib comparison of the strengths of both anti- and pro-Communist parties and the suggestion that the Italian election is not the toss-up between Democracy and Communism, as is popularly believed, but between pro- and anti-Communism. He seemed to consider that the criticalness of the Italian election is more or less due to an "uncalled for sense of fatalism" on the part of the American people; a sense which is more characteristic of a post-war leveling off than a pre-war jockeying for position.

The sole note of pessimism was voiced by Professor Lohman who expressed a sincere concern about the resulting economic problems of both the United States and Europe, regardless of which way the political pendulum swings. The question of whether these troubles would be related to, or merely incident with, the result of the election, was one question which remained happily unanswered.

For Italy, however, the election results will undoubtedly prove a turning point. The Italian army, which has made great boasts of its strength in the near past is probably relatively unprepared for the supposed outbreak of partisan guerrilla warfare, trouble from trigger-happy Communist Yugoslavia and the inevitable municipal rioting. If the anti-Communist bloc triumphs, as it probably shall, Italy will need and deserve industrial and military assistance as well as the proposed financial assistance under the ERP. As Lohman put it, "Money is nothing. It is the industrial equipment and supplies that will decide the future economic security of Italy." Professor Long pointed out that, contrary to contemporary opinion, Italy would never be more than a second-rate power and that her influence on the rest of Europe either politically or economically will always be negligible.

Both Professor Lohman and Professor Long seemed to consider the Italian election as particularly well conducted. As Professor Long put it, "On the basis of American politics, the Italian election was a fair square." The meeting closed with the serving of coffee and cakes.

Control of Impulses Fine Says Dustan

Dr. Harriet Dustan, Health Service physician, was guest speaker at a special evening sponsored by the Health Council, Tuesday evening, April 13, Waterman 239.

Dr. Dustan, who was introduced by Helen Mulloy, acting president of the council, spoke on emotional health, how sympathetic with the abnormal person, and how to recognize emotional maturity. Dr. Dustan listed the following as criteria of adult emotional maturity: 1. Ability to plan for future and to follow through to conclusion for own good. 2. Ability to control impulses. 3. Ability to postpone gratification of desire. 4. Independence in making and making decisions. 5. Capacity to assume responsibility of home, family and community without undue anxiety. 6. Mature psycho-sexual development. The talk was well illustrated with interesting examples and cases.

Donald B. Johnstone to Tell of the Role of Bikini Biologist

"The Role of the Biologist at Operations Crossroads" will be the subject of an address by Mr. Donald B. Johnstone at an open meeting of the University of Vermont Graduate Club on Wednesday evening, April 21, in the Waterman Building.

Mr. Johnstone, now completing work for his doctor's degree from Rutgers University, was in charge of bacteriological investigations at Bikini. Through this position he obtained a great deal of interesting information of first hand quality on Operations Crossroads and the effects of the atom bomb.

As the topic is such tremendous significance in present world affairs the Graduate Club is opening the meeting to all who are interested.

Mr. Johnstone is now working with Doctor Little at the University of Vermont. He previously worked under the discoverer of Streptomycin, Dr. Selman A. Waksman.

54 Received Axe After Winter Quarter

The number of students dropped at the end of the winter quarter was approximately 54. Of this number approximately 18 were re-admitted. This is about 2% of the total college enrollment and is about the average dropped each winter quarter by the University.

No student is dropped until the Studies Committee has looked over his record and then only if his record shows that he cannot carry college work.

The President of the University sometimes gives the student another chance even after he has been turned down by the Studies Committee.

Nuquist Calls For Community Interest

Prof. "Andy" Nuquist stressed the importance of community participation in a talk at Chapel service Friday entitled "Where to Begin." Local church and political activities present the most effective means for exercising the privileges of democracy. In the political field particularly, according to Mr. Nuquist, there lies a challenge to the college youth of today. Only by the active participation of educated and honest men raised in the Christian tradition can the term "politics" lose its connotation of dark corruption, and the influence of practical democracy be felt in the world. The beginning of international peace and unity lies in our own back yards if we are willing to put a little time and elbow grease into cleaning them up.

President Millis led the service as usual, and the University Choir directed by Professor Bennett did an inspiring job on the Anthem for the day.

Next week Professor Pooley will give "A Word to the Doubting" and also to the non-doubters who attend Chapel Service at 1.00 in Ira Allen Chapel.

Senior Class Announces 'Weeks' Preliminary Plans, Committees

Nichols Tells Early Trials of Club to New University Players

When I was invited to become a member of University Players during my freshman year, there were all of four people in the group, and about fifteen members in the Dramatics Club. We had no faculty director. We put on plays down at the city hall, and if you haven't done that, you don't know what you've missed. Now, we have thirteen active players and over fifty full-fledged members in the Dramatics Club. We have a faculty director and we have Southwick to present our plays. We also have our own meeting place in the Old Mill Chapel. We have a make-up room, place for a wardrobe room, and a place where we can work on publicity posters or have committee meetings. And as for Mr. Humphrey's office, we seem to have taken that over for conferences. Aileen Nichols, outgoing president of the Dramatics Club and University Players, thus spoke to the initiation meeting of the University Players in the Old Mill Chapel, Sunday afternoon, April 11 when four new members were welcomed into the ranks of the honorary society, the University Players. Before concluding her talk, Miss Nichols challenged the group to carry on to the point that there would be a real little theater on campus within the next few years.

The impressive initiation ceremony which admitted Ronald H. Humphrey, Mary D. Henderson, Arline C. Brush and Charles W. Parker into the University Players was enhanced by the colorful memorial windows in the old chapel, and also by tall green candles on the table. Those taking part in the ceremony were Aileen Nichols, Gladys E. Neiburg, Harry Miele, Beverly Grier and Joan Barrett.

Beverly Grier, chairman in charge of procedure, assisted Keith Calkins in charge of refreshments served during the social hour which followed the initiation.

CAA HAS OPENING

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—The Civil Aeronautics Administration has openings for a number of qualified single men as aircraft communicators in Alaska, at starting salaries of $3,306 a year.

Successful applicants will be assigned to the 45 airways communications stations operated by the C.A.A. along Alaskan airways.

The men selected will be in line for eventual promotion to higher grade jobs paying up to $5,656 a year.

Basic qualifications for the jobs are the ability to transmit and receive International Morse Code at minimum speed of 30 words a minute; to touch type at 35 words a minute; and 18 months of aeronautical communications experience or an acceptable equivalent in education and experience.

Applicants other than veterans must be between 18 and 40 and in good health, particularly with regard to hearing, vision, and speech.

Applicants should send Form 57, which is the standard application for Federal employment obtainable at most post offices, to the C.A.A. Aeronautical Center, P.O. Box 1082, Oklahoma City 1, Okla.

Several weeks of orientation training will be given to the appointees at the C.A.A. Aeronautical Center in Oklahoma City before they travel to point of assignment in Alaska. They will be expected to remain in government service in Alaska for at least 12 months following their

NOTICE TO HYGIENE CLASS

Hygiene class will continue to meet on Fridays at 4.30 p.m. Those who are having Political Science exam will be dismissed at 5.15 p.m.

SAC To Sell Half Dollars For $1.00; Richards, Vice-Pres.

Vincent Richards, class of '50, was appointed to fill the vice-presidency of the Social Actions Committee at the meeting held April 14. At the president's suggestion, the members will divide into special interest groups for the remainder of the term, each concentrating on a particular activity. These groups will meet every two weeks to report on the progress of each respective committee to the entire group.

One such project, Booker T. Washington Memorial Fund, which raises money for establishment of industrial schools for negroes, was discussed. This project would involve a drive on this campus or in Burlington to raise money by selling silver half dollars. These coins would be sold at one dollar each and will give great value to collectors in later years. Vincent Richards and Sylvia Heininger were appointed to investigate this campaign further.

Another suggestion was that the Students Activities Committee, International Relations Club and the Student Christians Association work on a forum presenting facts about the possible presidential candidates. This forum would be non-partisan, presenting the background, platform and other affiliations of each candidate. Another such forum, presenting candidates actually chosen at conventions, would take place in the fall. Virgil McCarty and Jean Van Hynning were appointed to represent the S.A.C. at the meeting with the I.R.C. and the S.C.A. The tentative date set for this forum is May 28.

D'Agostino of St. Mikes Speaks to Newman Club

Father D'Agostino, of St. Michael's College, will speak on Social Work at Newman Club's monthly meeting Thursday, April 22, at 7.45 in the Student Lounge. Father D'Agostino is a teacher of sociology at St. Michael's and has worked with alcoholics in a prison in Washington. He is now writing a book on "Social Conditions in Vermont."

Mrs. Zita Taylor of the Vermont Catholic Charities will speak to the group on "Opportunities in Social Welfare." She will be glad to talk to any individuals, both men and women, after the meeting and will make appointments with those who are interested in Social Welfare work.

Among the items on the business meeting agenda will be reports by the delegates who attended the Provincial Convention in Boston last weekend. The nominating committee for next year's officers will be appointed. A social hour will follow the meeting.

Newman Club members will receive communion in a body at the 9 o'clock mass at the Cathedral, Sunday, April 25. The monthly Communion Breakfast will be held at the Cathedral High School

We have had pre-war committees, defense committees, war committees, post-war committees, peace committees and now it is appropriate to have post-peace committees.

Most committees guessed wrong on pre-war, defense, war, post-war and peace matters so it is probable that the post-peace committee will sweat, weep and toil with results unpredictable. It is likely that post-peace committees will vote, say, "I move" and listen to minutes with all the enthusiasm expected and wind up in the same ash-can the others found waiting for them.

Appointing a committee is one of the slick ways of passing the buck. Any club or organization with members too lazy to act can do a land-office business for any twelve month period without undue effort by appointing committees. If the temperature needs changing, appoint a committee! If the wind blows in the wrong direction, appoint a committee! If it rains when it shouldn't and doesn't when it should, appoint a committee! Easy, when you know how!

So, now we are preparing for the future and what easier, simpler, workless method than to appoint a committee. Who serves on a committee? Why, those same lazy dubs who moved and seconded to appoint a committee! What do committee members do? They wait for the chairman to call a meeting. What does the chairman do? He waits for the committee members to ask for a meeting! It's a nice little circle.

In case you are a bit worried over your own future a good tip is to forget the committees and chart your own course. College terms slip by rapidly and graduation dates come up over the horizon before we realize that time has passed. Do a little of the old horse-sense planning for the days ahead. Whatever the politicians cook up and whatever the predictors predict you may be sure of three excellent helpers in your bid for success—character—preparation—personality.

Sorority Notes

DELTA PHI EPSILON

Much news is left over from last term about which the girls of Delta Phi Epsilon are quite elated. They've moved into their new department at 89 N. Prospect St., and are planning a number of events for the near future. Housewarming will be held from 5.30 until 8.00 p.m. on Saturday May 15. All are cordially invited to come over.

The proceeds from the raffle held by Delta Phi Epsilon last quarter for W.S.S.F. net a sum of $45.00. The prize was a set of Porgy and Bess records, taken by Bailey Goldberg.

The pledge class of 1948 will give their tea on Sunday afternoon at 3.30 at the apartment. The sorority is also planning to hold a dance in conjunction with Phi Sigma Delta for the benefit of Irvington House, a home for needy rheumatic children.

The girls of Delta Phi Epsilon are making progress along lines of personal interest: Ruth Levine '50, became pinned to Bob Boyarsky at Kake Walk, and Lenore Eichel '47 is engaged to Bill Meyer. Pearl Weissbard will be married next week. Rose Eisman Boyarsky '44, is the proud mama of William Meyer as of last month. Delta Alpha is proud too.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

The Tri-Delts gave their annual Butterfly Breakfast, Sunday, April 11. A large crowd enjoyed golden "butterfly" waffles with maple syrup, fruit juice and coffee. "Matty" Matthews and "Betsy" Cayey presided at the coffee urn, while Marie Gerdon, Patty Tucker, Millie Joslyn, Mary Morrill, Gerry Balich and Helen Farrington took over the waffle irons. The rest of the Tri-Delts helped out serving. All Gerdon had to say as the last guest left was "Am I tired!"

The new officers of Tri-Delta were installed Monday night before the meeting. President, Gerry Balich; vice-president, Janie Smith; corresponding secretary, Helen Farrington; recording secretary, Dee Cureau; treasurer, "Inky" St. Mary; chaplain, Mary Morrill; historian, Beth Mack; librarian, Norma Stephenson; marshal, Doris Hoffnagle.

Last Wednesday night the Tri-Delts pledged three new members. They were: Janice Hallock '51, Richmond; Dorothy Rice '51, Derby; and Janet Williams '51, Brandon.

Hospital Admission Rules For Veterans

For the information of World War II veterans studying in colleges and universities, Veterans Administration lists the three rules which govern admission to VA hospitals.

They are:

1. Priority is given to those veterans who require immediate hospital attention because of an emergency condition. They are entitled to a bed at once.

2. Those veterans who have a service-connected disability also are entitled to prompt admission to a VA hospital.

3. Veterans who have non-service-connected injuries or ailments are entitled to hospital care if they state that they are unable to pay for private medical care, and if a bed is available in a VA hospital to take care of them.

Requests for admission should be made to the nearest VA office or hospital.

JUST THIS AND THAT

by GLADYS E. NEIBURG

Spring is here—almost. New steps are being discovered by students who like to sit down in front of Waterman instead of in Waterman. Gum is chewed lustily. Chocolate bars disappear. But the paper wrappers remain on forever until the clean-up crew gets to work. Campus lawns get the same bedraggled look. The waterless fountain is not neglected when it comes to dropping bits of paper all around. The campus is a beautiful setting—but not so when students stop their "setting" and leave the debris scattered. How about locating a waste container instead of using the steps and lawns as a garbage can?

This is not Fire Prevention week, but one is reminded of it by the smell of smoke in Waterman corridor when students flick their lighted cigarettes into the waste container there. Of course the cafeteria personnel come dashing out with a tumbler full of water—or a pitcher full to put out the fire inside the container. One bright student tried to smother the fire out by putting a tray over the top. It all looks funny. I admit, I too, grinned. But it could be serious. Douse out that cigarette before you try to prove you "can make a basket." The best method is not to crush it under your heel (although it is an effective method), because cigarette strewn on the floor are not a pretty sight. But even that method is better than the danger of a big fire resulting from the little fire.

How about it, kids?

There's a good reason why
WESTERN ELECTRIC is in this

Western Electric is a member of the Bell System family circle for exactly the same reason that your local Bell Telephone company is a member—to assure the close teamwork that is essential for efficient, economical, nation-wide telephone service for you.

As the supply member of the family, Western Electric makes telephone equipment, buys all kinds of supplies, keeps these things in stock at 29 distributing houses for delivery to the telephone companies, and installs central office equipment.

This unified service of supply results in many economies to the Bell Telephone companies and, in turn, to you who use the telephone.

the close of the 19th century U. V. M. was fast becoming more sports conscious. Baseball continued to dominate the scene, but football activity was too far behind. A tennis team came into being and there was even a small amount of informal basketball activity among the students. Hockey was not yet organized, but several editorials were appearing urging the athletic department to organize a program for making it a winter sport on campus.

For the third time a New York State football trip was substituted for the annual southern trip. On April 26, 1898, Vermont opened its season when they played a strong Syracuse team. Miner, captain of the '97 squad, was chosen to pitch against the renowned "Cy" Vohees of the Syracuse team. The score was all in favor of the Syracuse team. The game ended in a 5 to 5 tie. In those days of play, however neither team scored after four extra innings and the game ended in a 5 to 5 tie.

opened at Rutland where U. V. M. and Rutland Institute played to a 5 to 5 tie. Two weeks in a row after that Vermont shut out the Montpelier Seminary team twice by scores of 23 to 0 and 11 to 0. Dartmouth handed U. V. M. a stinging 45 to 6 defeat, but the Big Green had been playing regularly for a number of years so that the defeat was no more than expected. The next game was somewhat of a history making event. U. V. M. played Ogdensburg of New York State in Montreal which was the first time in history that American teams met on Canadian grounds while using the American style of play. U. V. M. won by a score of 10 to 0. The last game of the year was the best that U. V. M. played in that season. They played a strong Holy Cross team, who was in the same class as Dartmouth, and lost by a score of 17 to 5. The Crusaders had a big heavy team, but U. V. M. made a fine showing against them.

In the spring of 1899 the first Inter-Collegiate Tennis Tournament was staged from May 31 through June 3 here at Burlington with Bowdoin College. It was somewhat of an experiment which was, however, quite successful. Out of the 750 games played Vermont won 400, but the scoring was counted on the double and single matches that were won. Both teams compiled 10 points from the matches to end the tournament in a tie.

The spring baseball season of 1899 was opened with Union College at Schenectady, N. Y. Vermont routed the Dutchman by 14 to 1. U. V. M. went on to win from Hobart by 17 to 2, University of Pennsylvania 6 to 3, and Seton Hall 20 to 9. The Catamounts lost to Syracuse 5 to 4, Fordham 6 to 2, and Manhattan 15 to 1. In the New England trip Vermont was only able to win two games, which they played with Tufts. They lost two to Dartmouth, and one to Holy Cross. Vermont split their home double header with Dartmouth. The Indians took the first game by 16 to 0, but U. V. M. bounced back to take the second game by 8 to 6. In the last game of the year Vermont defeated the University of Toronto by a score of 9 to 8. In 23 games Aldinger, the Vermont catcher, compiled the highest batting and fielding averages for the season. He ended up with a .449 batting average and a .957 average in fielding for the year.

In the fall of 1899 U. V. M. fielded the best football team to that date. They played a total of eight games, winning five and losing only three. The most outstanding victories were the 6 to 0 defeat of Colgate, which was by far the best game of the year, the 49 to 0 trouncing they handed Middlebury, and the 13 to 0 defeat of Norwich. They lost close games to Amherst and New Hampshire State College and a rather one-sided affair with Holy Cross.

opened with Union College at Schenectady, N. Y. Vermont routed the Dutchman by 14 to 1. U. V. M. went on to win from Hobart by 17 to 2, University of Pennsylvania 6 to 3, and Seton Hall 20 to 9. The Catamounts lost to Syracuse 5 to 4, Fordham 6 to 2, and Manhattan 15 to 1. In the New England trip Vermont was only able to win two games, which they played with Tufts. They lost two to Dartmouth, and one to Holy Cross. Vermont split their home double header with Dartmouth. The Indians took the first game by 16 to 0, but U. V. M. bounced back to take the second game by 8 to 6. In the last game of the year Vermont defeated the University of Toronto by a score of 9 to 8. In 23 games Aldinger, the Vermont catcher, compiled the highest batting and fielding averages for the season. He ended up with a .449 batting average and a .957 average in fielding for the year.

Kotlarczyk Pitches Well In Losing Opener to R. I.

Connecticut Shuts Out Local Club 5 to 0
Vermont Gets Only Two Hits In Second Loss

by GLENN M. FAYE

Vermont's 1948 baseball team opened the season at Kingston, R. I., last Friday, April 16 by dropping a 4 to 1 decision to submariner Johnny Smith and his Rhode Island Rams. The game was a pitchers' duel to the end with Ed Kotlarczyk allowing but six hits while Smith, who twists himself all out of shape to deliver his underhand pitch, rationed out five.

The deciding factor in this well played ball game was the four bases which the Rams pilfered. Had the Catamounts been able to find themselves in scoring position more often no doubt the results would have been different. Some consolation may be had by the Vermont fans, who are still shuddering and shaking with the nightmares caused by last year's putrid aggregation, in the fact that nary an error was registered by the U.V.M.'ers.

Johnny Smith, who will pilot St. Albans in the Northern League this summer, had fashioned himself a two hit shutout going into the ninth inning. With one out, Cal Parrow singled to left and Bill Dempsey did likewise to center. Flanders forced Parrow at third, but John Ballard drove Dempsey home. Turnbull then nearly tied up the ball game with a terrific clout far over the left field barrier, but the umpire ruled it a foul ball and Turnbull went down swinging on the next pitch.

The Vermont team looked good even in defeat and with any kind of luck the rest of the season should have a very successful year.

Student Government Notes

April 15, 1948

The meeting was called to order at 4.05. The secretary's report was read and accepted with corrections.

Douglas Liston appeared before the council to relate the activities of the pep committee during the past year. He explained that in the future the cheerleaders would like to organize each game audience into cheering and non-cheering sections and asked the council to support this plan in presenting it to the Athletic Council. Doug also relayed the hope that pep rallies on Friday nights next fall will be bigger and better and that the practice of having a "send-off" rally as the team leaves for out-of-town games will be revived. Al Pratt made the motion that the Athletic Council be approached and that the council go on record as favoring the plans of the pep committee. The motion was seconded by Bob Perkins, amended by Ed Costello to name Al Pratt and Stan Ursprung as council representatives on the matter, seconded by Lucille Wetherby and accepted.

Robert Ray, drum major of the band, appealed to the council for an appropriation for at least six twirler uniforms. Thirty dollars would cover the cost of a jacket and a hat; each girl would furnish her own skirt and baton. Bob explained that the former R.O.T.C. band is now a University band, not supported financially by the Military Department. Tom Hayes moved that the council appropriate money for six uniforms, the motion was amended by Ed Costello specifying the amount to be $250 to cover the expense of eight uniforms, the amended motion was seconded by Peter Haslam and accepted. It was felt within the council that band concerts next year might enable the group to be self-sufficient.

Al Pratt presented the report of the committee appointed to organize facts concerning the athletic program to be presented to alumni of the New York region. He explained that the right of the council to send a delegate to New York to speak on the subject had been vetoed by President Millis on the grounds that proper channels should be used, namely the Athletic Council made up of student, faculty, and alumni representatives and that the question of finances could only be settled by appeal to him. After much discussion on the action and resulting alternatives, Ed Costello moved that the same committee be reinstated to gather detailed information regarding the athletic program, to report on its findings, and to present recommendations for attaining improvement of the situation. The motion was seconded by Dan Burke and accepted.

After reading minutes dated last October, Tom Hayes informed the council that a plan to award three $100 scholarships on Founder's Day had not been acted upon by the former council. Ed Costello made the motion that Tom Hayes be chairman of a scholarship committee and that he appoint two other people to help him select and confer with a faculty member from each of the four academic colleges who would judge competitors. The motion was seconded by Curtis Mosher and accepted. Students competing for the scholarships will be considered on the basis of need, academic standing (average 80 or above necessary), and participation in campus activities. A motion was made by Ed Costello that students already receiving $100 or more in scholarships, except those dependent upon Wilbur Fund Aid, be ineligible for these awards. The motion was seconded by Al Pratt but rejected by the council, Ed Costello and Norman Dennis offering the only affirmative votes.

Tom Hayes pointed out that the Kingsley prize for public speaking is now defunct. Members of the council suggested that it might be replaced next year by appropriation of the balance of Cultural Committee funds and by enlargement of the Debating Club treasury thereafter. Final decision awaits a report of the Cultural Committee.

President Miele informed the council that a branch post office on campus, conducted by regular officials, is out of the question but that Miss Barney is willing to include a postal unit in the bookstore. Mr. Kehoe must secure approval from government representatives before actual installation of such a unit.

Considerable discussion ensued concerning lack of periodical reports from the Finance Committee. Jane Atwood explained that budgets have been turned in so haphazardly that despite the efforts of the responsible persons it has been difficult to issue an up-to-date statement. Upon Jane's assurance that a report could be given in two weeks, Tom Hayes made the motion that the treasurer be allowed two weeks to compile a report and that failure to present such be cause for action by the council. The motion was seconded and accepted.

Doug Liston recommended to the council that the Freshman Orientation Committee and Freshman Handbook Committee exist as two separate groups, that the editor of the Handbook be appointed by the council, and that the members of the Freshman Orientation Committee be selected on the basis of availability to work in Burlington on the program during the summer.

Robert Condon asked the council to explain the absence of a cup award for track this year. Stan Ursprung volunteered that since no V.I.P. track team had been organized, an "all-campus" cup could not be given in that sport as in others. The motion was made by Bob Perkins that the council secretary present minutes of past action on the matter at the next meeting. Peter Haslam seconded the motion, and it was accepted.

The meeting was adjourned at 5.40.

Respectfully submitted,
JANE SMITH,
Secretary
U.V.M. Students

Harry Miele Announces Recent Changes Made By UVM Council

Plans For Barber Shop,
Post Office Underway

The University Barber Shop will make its debut within three weeks as a full-time establishment has been secured. This plan was endorsed by last year's Student Government but the arrangements were not completed. Edward Costello '51 reviewed the matter for the present Executive Council and it was unanimously received. In the Administration agreed with the plan and proceeded immediately to put it into effect.

The Barber Shop is calculated to combat the excessive rates charged downtown Burlington as well as introducing a necessary facility to a more convenient facility. The planned price for a haircut will be sixty cents or below with substantial reductions for other tonsorial services.

Student Government President, Harry Miele has expedited the matter for the Council and states that the shop will open soon as a suitable room in Waterman Hall. There is a possibility that the former Ariel office in the basement of Waterman may hold the new venture.

University Post Office

Carrying out last year's original mission of establishing a University Post Office, Student President Harry Miele is able to report to the April 15 meeting of the Executive Council that all college arrangements were complete and that the plan was now being negotiated with the United States Postal Service. This new installation will be of great value to students living on campus; adding all their mail and providing a convenient location for the campus youngsters to mail their laundry cases.

Wallace Campus Clubs Part National Plans Chicago U. Meeting

Delegates from 108 colleges and universities in twenty-six states and the District of Columbia met at the University of Chicago April 9 and 10 in the first annual meeting of Students for Wallace Clubs. The delegates planned student action for Save the Peace Week, district student participation in the Wallace campaign, and elected a National Students for Wallace Committee.

The conference heard more than 50 reports from local chapters. All reports emphasized Save the Peace Week, April 16 to 18, in which Students for Wallace groups have joined many other local groups voicing student opposition to the proposed Draft, and to UMT measures leading to World War III. The University of Florida reported on its campaign to expose the meeting of Southern Governors which planned Southern negro colleges. They showed how regional college plan is merely an attempt to continue discrimination and segregation. Columbia University chaplains reported on their efforts to prevent unnecessary rise in tuition.

A plan for students campaign work for summer was adopted. The chapters are doing full time volunteer campaign work with an additional 2000 students taking part of the summer. A National Students for Wallace Committee was elected, who will head the student campaign. Co-chairmen are Wyman Hicks, University of California; Joseph Cronin, University of Denver; Richard Raimey, University of Texas; George Antonofsky, University of Michigan and Walter Wallace, Columbia University. The sixth chairman will be elected later from one of the leading Negro schools of the

Cynic Bares Student Government Sports Letter Intended For New York 1948 Alumni Reunion

CYNIC Publishes Copy of the Introduction To Sam Houston's "Report on the Athletic Scene"

The recent Student Government plan to send a representative of the student body to the Alumni Reunion in New York City included a special letter from the Student Athletic Committee. The letter is published for the first time.

To the Alumni of the University of Vermont:

We have sensed the urgency of sending a representative to your annual reunion in order to present a special report on the U.V.M. athletic situation as seen by the student.

We believe the sports situation is serious enough to warrant the attention if not the action of all the friends of Vermont. Facilities that were once able to handle the athletic aspirations of U.V.M. are now outmoded and are proceeding in such a lethargic and unsuccessful manner that the criticism of the entire student body has been excited. The wholesale inadequacy of the present arrangements to match the potentialities of a school swelled to an unprecedented number has forced U.V.M. to take a back seat in Intercollegiate competition. Vermont in its major and minor sports is engaged in competition with schools that have refurbished their athletic policy to meet the growing demands while the University has remained with an antiquated, outdated set-up that at its best can only be called a partial expedient.

The U.V.M. student does not desire a highly professional arrangement but does want an athletic policy which will provide opportunity and guidance for its athletes.

We have chosen Sam Houston of the class of 1949 to present our case. He is a varsity letterman, Sports Editor of the CYNIC and well acquainted with the athletic maladjustments here at the University.

Wishing you all a very pleasant reunion, we remain

Yours sincerely,
U.V.M. Student Government

The above letter was prepared by John D. Adams acting as a member of the Student Athletic Committee.

Harold Collins Cites Hard and Fast Rules For Autumn Freshmen

In view of the rapidly approaching graduation day of the 1948 seniors, Harold C. Collins, Director of Admissions, is busily deciding upon the prospective freshman class to enter our college doors this coming fall.

It is a standard rule not only for Vermont but for other universities as well to admit the majority of students from its own state, therefore, the majority of the present enrollment will be from the state of Vermont. The total number of Vermont applicants is 519. Of this number 404 were accepted and the remaining 115 are under further consideration, meaning further tests and interviews. As for the outside applicants 1135 were received, 757 men and 378 women. The exact number to be admitted as yet is not known but all of the outside students will be notified of their acceptance by May 1, 1948.

There are three hard and fast limitations to the enrollment for U.V.M.:

1. The shortage of housing for women; male students must secure living quarters in town.
2. The College of Arts and Science cannot be comprised of more than 1,000 students at a time.
3. A hundred and twenty students are the limit for Freshman Engineering.

UVM Redstone Grounds To Have Face Lifting With New Landscaping

Redstone Campus is soon to be beautified by an extensive landscaping project which has been under consideration for several years. Under the sponsorship of Miss Simpson and the girls of Mortar Board, the grounds are to be replanted and decorated in connection with Mortar Board's annual Lilac Day, not only to beautify, but to add a degree of unity to the women's campus.

The project for balanced landscaping was started in 1939 when Mortar Board desired a set plan for its annual planting of lilacs. Previously the plants had been set in a more or less aimless fashion. Miss Simpson was authorized in 1940 to have a landscape architect survey the situation and plan the grounds. A ten-year plan was instituted so that the work could be done and paid for gradually. The original layout called for the planting of native shrubs which would thrive in this type of soil, and included in addition to lilacs, dogwood and similar plants. Two or three plantings were made according to schedule, when the advent of the war ended the immediate work. During the years that the Air Corps was stationed on Redstone Campus it was considered inadvisable to continue the landscaping, and instead Mortar Board contributed to a fund for later use toward this end. Last year, despite the return of University women to the campus, no work was started because of the plans to build Coolidge Hall. Now with the return of normal conditions, the plans are being revised to include Coolidge and work will begin as soon as possible.

The emphasis upon lilacs in the landscape plan dates back to Redstone's early history. It originally belonged to the Buell family, who specialized in growing lilacs. A hedge of them extended from the back of the House (Redstone) to the stable (Robinson Hall), with rock gardens on the ledge. When the University assumed control of the grounds and further building was to be done, Miss Marion Patterson, then Dean of Women, had many of the lilacs moved to the back of Robinson Hall. Lilac Day, itself, with the annual planting of lilac bushes on the grounds, was started by Mortar Board as a tribute to Mrs. Pearl Randall Wasson, the Dean of Women who had originally acquired Redstone.

UVM Accident Victim On Road to Recovery

John Powell '49, accident victim of several weeks ago, is reported to be progressing well. He is still a patient at the Neurological Institute in Montreal where he was removed after being treated at the hospital in St. Johns, P. Q. It is expected that he will be sent to the Veterans Hospital at White River Junction in the very near future.

Powell was the most seriously injured of a group of four U.V.M. men-students when their car went off the road last March near the city of St. Johns, P. Q. Powell transferred to U. V. M. last fall from Norwich University and entered the junior class. His home is in Montpelier.

Foreign Schools Bid For American Summer Student Attendance

Reprinted from Mademoiselle with permission

A quest for knowledge, the Esperanto of students all over the world, will lead many American co-eds to Europe this summer. An estimated forty-six colleges and universities, from Perugia in the boot of Italy to Oslo in the fjords of Norway, are offering special courses for foreigners. If you act quickly, choose wisely (keep in mind your language background), you still have time to enroll in all the summer sessions on which we offer specific information.

Most schools are open to all students of college age. The length of the courses varies from a few weeks to three months. Generally they are not residential; often the school will find you accommodations. In most cases you'll find the topic is the culture of the country in which the course is given. The Institute of International Education, 2 West 45th Street, New York 19, can give you complete information.

Tuition costs vary from $10 to $80, room and board from $15 to $35 a week. The present minimum cost of round-trip transportation is $300. In addition you must buy passports, visas and allow for personal travel expenses abroad. The Institute of International Education advises students to allow a minimum of about $750 to cover their entire costs for the summer.

Transportation is still an indefinite factor. Last summer, two ships were set aside by the Maritime Commission at the request of the Department of State for the transportation of students and academic personnel to and from Europe. It is hoped even better arrangements will be made this year.

Race Prejudice Forum To Be Held Next Week At City's Civic Hall

The final meeting of the year, sponsored by Vermont Forums, Inc., will take place at the City Hall, Wednesday evening, April 28. The subject of this forum discussion will be "Race Minority Prejudice: The International Results of our Domestic Behavior."

Race prejudice has become a pertinent topic in newspapers, magazines, novels and radio programs. The questions arise as to why race has become so important a topic. What is race? What are America's race problems? How does our behavior look to the 'colored' races overseas? Is there race prejudice in Vermont? and, how does our domestic behavior affect international relations?

Men and women of Jewish, Negro and Oriental paternity will be among the speakers at the meeting April 28. Rev. Ritchie Low will act as the chairman for the evening.

The Vermont Forums, Inc., is a non-partisan and non-profit organization for education and discussion. The meeting of April 28 will complete a second year of informal discussion on significant subjects such as "Does Vermont Want the St. Lawrence Seaway," "The New Imperialism," "Can Private Enterprise Bring World Prosperity?" and "The Threat and Promise of Atomic Energy."

Plans are now being made for next year to continue the discussions, bringing out conflicting viewpoints in such a way that the forums will have the fun, spark and surprise of a good town meeting. The topics will again be presented by experts of national and international reputation, with plenty of opportunity for the audience to question, challenge or contradict speakers. Students will have the opportunity to buy season tickets at the reduced rate.

RUSSIAN NOVEL CLASS STRIKES FAST STRIDE

The class in Russian Novel innovated and directed by Prof. Robert F. Stoel has completed its first reading of the quarter "Fathers and Sons" by Ivan Turgenev. The class consisting of eight women and five men prepared short informal papers dealing with their reactions to Turgenev's story of a Nihilist's life in the nineteenth century is now engaged in analyzing and synthesizing the content, style and structure of the novel.

There are four readings required for the course, all are famous in world literature and drawn from 19th and 20th century Russian writers. They are: Fathers and Sons, Ivan Turgenev; Crime and Punishment, Teodor Dostevsky, and Anna Karenina by Leo Tolstoy. In addition each student is reading an extra novel of his choice which he introduces and describes to the class.

Professor Stoel runs the class on an informal basis so that the major part of the hour can be devoted to discussion. The meetings are held in the Art Library at the Fleming Museum Mondays and Fridays with a two hour evening session every fortnight.

Abolish Final Exams!!

At a recent Student Government meeting this editor proposed that steps be taken to abolish Final Examinations. It was not mere dislike of this nerve-racking quarterly fiasco that prompted such a proposal. The system of quizzes and hour tests are an adequate enough measurement of what a student has learned without resorting to a collective huddle in the gymnasium.

Last fall, the University, bowing to the pressure of a late start, eliminated December Finals, and no appreciable losses of intelligence were reported.

The conditions under which these exams are given are quaint. The gym is as conducive to clear thinking as Madison Square Garden is for quadratic equations. To prepare mentally and factually for a lumped week of frustrating two-hour tests is like trying to carry seven suitcases at once. If there is a justification for such a system we would like to hear it.

U.V.M. like practically every college and school in the country has no unified educational philosophy. Tests are still the empty expedient of a poorly-knit educational scheme.

What Has Been Done

Student Government replied to our proposal by creating a committee of investigation. Several members of the council wanted to know what other schools have done along the same line, and the committee will collect these facts, and fast. What good this will do or what difference it will make is questionable. To this editor it seems like looking into your neighbor's dining room to see how you are going to set your own table.

My request is that you bombard the CYNIC with messages of support, denial or allegiance. A student body totally in favor of the project will be its passport to success.

Fable 'n Folly

By John D. Adams

Certain labels, phrases and particles of patios appear in this column regularly. Sometimes in connection with strange societies and other times as sobriquets of human types familiar to all of us but called by different names. For the benefit of those the unacquainted we shall include a glossary of terms.

Breton Choral Society—a non-profit organization which meets casually in the local bistros to discuss "living" and "you."

"Kicker"—a bucolic; a person who grips his fork near its ankles, still wears a Windsor knot and ties a squirrel tail to the radio antenna on his car.

Lower Church Street—focal region of amusement in Burlington. The "hill" being barren of anything except mortgages.

Loving Cup With the Red-Hot Handles—appellation given to anything which appears pretty on the outside and proves to be dynamite on inspection.

14 Rue George—former residents of six U.V.M. desperados whose colorful antics during the summer session of 1947 brought joy to lower Pearl Street and insomnia to the local constabulary.

Haphazard Communiques

The Vermont chapter of Kappa Sigma has recently adopted a war orphan. A lot of Burlington girls are sure to be disappointed when they hear this news.

The Protestant Episcopal Church, a near relative of the English Church, has gone to considerable trouble lately in their pamphleteering to dispel the ignoble idea that Henry VIII founded said church. As a member of this denomination I have long been reconciled to this fallacy and now do not know whether to be disappointed or feel respectable.

Cecil J. Shapland, Jr. '48 was found bearing a green notebook with the inscription "Intellectual Background" written on the cover.

The Young Republican Club of U.V.M. is the most magnanimous group on campus. They are sponsoring a series of discussions and allowing politicians and supporters of both sides of the fence to participate. Edward Costello '51, Student Government parliamentarian is chairman of the YR and it may be remembered won last year's Pillsbury Award at the Tunbridge Fair.

Greek Fables and Follies

In this 20th century the writer is taking it on the chin or better (if you read the glossary of terms) he is receiving the Loving Cup with the Red-Hot Handles. His success is measured in how many copies of his work are sold not by the actual quality of the book. What's this you say "isn't popularity the best judge of what is good and what is bad." It certainly is, but the book which might have a decent chance with the reading public too often is stifled in the embryonic stage. The publisher senses that he can divine the pulse of reader's interest and then try to cater to the various selection groups that plan the American citizen's reading diet. These groups are comprised of outfits like the Book of the Month Club, Novel of the Week Club and Culture for Peons Living in Three-Room Apartment Club.

They seek books of an unusual nature and instead choose literature which can only be called intensified burlesque. It took but one grating Anglo-Saxon monosyllabic to make the poorly written "Strange Fruit" to become a hit, and a dash of the standard American comic book qualities of sex and a strong back to put the "Foxes of Harrow" on the Best Sellers List. Even Tom Wolfe lost his punch when the Book of the Month Club took up his option.

Now this writer does not plan a crusade. We think the drive to exterminate rats is vastly more important, and besides we have found a quaint lovable character who has dispelled any nasty thoughts we might have about the cruelties of the writing world. He is the anthologist, or in private life the fellow who can't write a decent letter, possibly has difficulty in spelling his name, but is able to collect a half dozen articles or stories by others and put them all in one basket. Oftentimes the anthologist has to hire a ghost writer to compose a preface, but this need not discourage you.

The other day we checked over our talents and decided that with effort and some under-paid professor we could invent a preface or introduction if needed and have now launched a unofficial career of anthologizing.

Our first volume will be a collection of selling stories used by fraternities and sororities to persuade the prospective pledge. These yarns inevitably illustrate the fact that your "brother in the bond" is always your strongest friend, and that he will work with you through bloodshed, thunder, disease and house hunting.

We have collected several already and shall pick two at random to print here. The first is study in higher romance and is utilized by a well-known national fraternity during rushing. To avoid casting aspersions on any caste we shall choose a name at random: Phi Delt.

"Several years ago a Phi Delt was attending a well-known English university. (At random we shall call it Oxford.) This young man was a student botanist and one day drove to South Sussex to hunt for a rare species of the Mossy-Back Coleopteron. After a day's skulking in the underbrush and finding but a copy of a banned French novel, and flushing out a flock of stubborn quail, he raised his hands skyward and recited the fraternity creed. Relieved and sentimental he headed back towards a famous English city. (We, at random, shall call it London.) While he was driving homeward his fraternity pin was d from his lapel and was propelled downward into his knee. The quent pain was so harsh that the man lost his grip on the wheel and off the road. Many minutes later he discovered himself in a barberry hedgerow. A passed but they did not hear his cries for help. Unnerved and sourceful he resorted to the moose call which resounded so during the ensuing minutes all the fauna left South Sussex for new ters in East Essex. The nearby flora remained having their in the place.

To return to our narrative the call succeeded in halting a passing mobile and you can imagine the of our hero when he discovered the driver was also a Phi Delt and a at a well-known English university shall, at random, call it Oxford.)

Happy at the prospect of leaving Sussex for West Wessex the botanist engaged in a prized ritual before starting their journey. First they clasped their little fingers and moved their arms, shouting oaths to the sky. The botanist's signet ring was dislodged his finger and fell into the brother's palm. The latter pocketed the ring not wishing to fervor of the moment. Next the bonded brothers made a half performed a rite comparable "booms a daisy" repeating the "23 skiddoo" at three second During this ceremony the hand rescuing Phi Delt slipped into the ist's back pocket and extracted a wallet. Again the article was the rescuer's pocket. After four contortions for the glory of the home and the loss of his gold travelers checks, mother's picture, Little Orphan Annie de-coder the Phi Delt student entered the rescuing Phi Delt. As he did the face received the imprint of a shoe and he fell backwards onto that lined the highway. The quickly away and shortly faded sight. The prostrate Phi Delt surveyed his dilemma and then quietly away. An impressive has since been erected to his name bears the inscription. "The Phi Delt here was the pride of his fraternity overstepped the bounds of tact by a Rhodes scholarship. Let it be that he who smacks of scholarship spurned the honor of Phi Delta."

They arrive here included in a large document called the Intercollegiate Press Bulletin. Owing to the wish of many students to compare their schools with others, this paper has decided to distill much of this voluminous material for the U.V.M. student's appraisal. The after-comments notated by an asterisk are the editor's.

Dr. Beecher Urges Aid For Athletes at Annual "Block V" Dinner; Athletes Feted

The annual Block V dinner was held Wednesday evening, April 14, in the dining hall on the third floor of the Waterman Building. A total of 96 Block V letters were awarded to the athletes who participated in nine different sports. These sports included football, cross-country, basketball, skiing, hockey, baseball, tennis, track, and rifle.

Dr. Peter Lawlor acted as master of ceremonies for the banquet and after all had finished eating a hearty meal, he introduced the captains of the various teams. Doctor Lawlor called upon President Mills who congratulated the athletes on attaining their letters and spoke of the "school spirit" shown by these boys.

The main speaker of the evening, Dr. Clarence H. Beecher was then introduced. Doctor Beecher amused the large gathering with various athletic stories and then turned to the more serious and timely topic.

He admitted that he had very little advice to give to the athletes except for one thing. He had noticed where a person had received a debating scholarship to Vermont, so he advised the athletes to turn to debating if they wanted help at this college. Doctor Beecher went on to point out that many colleges are very willing to take in the proceeds of good turnouts at athletic contests, but were unwilling to part with some of this money to help these athletes get through college. The great approval of the majority of those present was shown at the end of Doctor Beecher's talk by tremendous applause.

The coaches of the various teams were then presented and as they were named, they in turn read off the names of those receiving letters in the respective sports. It was noted by Director of Athletics, Larry Gardner, that four men received three letters. These four men were Art Collier, Bill Dempsey, Jack Hurley, and Bob St. Gelais.

The following men received their letters in the following sports:

Rasines, Dominic Rosa, Leo Spear, James Turnbull, Charles Traverse, Stanley Ursprung, Joseph Waterman and Alan Weess.

Basketball: Richard Conrad, Harris Drury, John Durkin, William Elgood, Patrick Farma, George Henderson, Edward Kotlarczyk, Hammond Livingston, Stuart Moffitt, Alfred Niemann, Kenneth Pierce and Eugene York.

Hockey: John Adams, Wendell Barwood, Robert Ferriter, Daniel Lareau, Stewart McCracken, Malcolm Mickler, Dan Monison, Albert Perreault, William Plankey, Burdett Stearns, Karl Switzer, Charles Warner and William Wood.

Cross-country: Howard Lyon and Earle Randall.

Tennis: William Eddy, Steven Finckel, Melvin Gipstein, Robert Jake, Hammond Livingston, Peter Mallett, William Meyers, Steward Nims and Joseph Waterman.

Rifle: Dwight Burritt, Douglas Corron, Andrew Davis, Winston Jacobs, Bernard Leavitt, Leonard Mercia and Donald Steenburn.

Track: Dale Barber, Irwin Becker, John Bellows, Stan Bryden, Malcolm

Eddy, Richard Evans, David Harlow, William Long, Howard Lyon, Jr., William McIntyre, Duncan McLaren, Elbert Nostrand, Earle Randall and Stanley Ursprung.

Skiing: Kenneth Belding, Elbert Isham, William Knight, John Perry, Duane Pierce, Neil Ralph and David Sylvester.

COLLINS CITES

Harold Collins, Director of Admissions, is an alumnus of U.V.M. After completing two years in the service, Mr. Collins took a position with the Admissions Office. Having had a great deal of experience with students, being principal of the various Vermont high schools, it is felt he is well qualified for such a position. More definite statistics will be available at a later date.

Sports Slants

By SAM HOUSTON

Spring has finally arrived on the University of Vermont campus and with it the various sports are off with a bang—well, they are being played anyway. After three weeks of dicking and getting involved in trouble, it is my hope that the sports page will be back to normal again.

Reviewing past events, we see that the Vermont baseball nine took it on the chin twice last week-end against Rhode Island State and Connecticut, both of whom are in the Yankee Conference. However, there were bright spots to these defeats. Eddie Kotlarczyk turned in a remarkable pitching performance in the first game. Eddie allowed but six hits, struck out eight, and walked only one for a good day's work. Johnny Hoskiewicz also showed promises of future good chucking as he twirled a good game against the Uconnns. As soon as Vermont starts hitting they should have little trouble in turning in a few victories.

Both the tennis and track teams have been working out vigorously in the past few weeks, awaiting their opening dates which come soon. The track team should retain its state conference title again this year.

Speaking of track, it has been called to our attention that Bill McIntyre, one of last year's track stars, is doing quite well for himself. Bill is now in Washington, D. C., studying for duty with the Foreign Service. He is competing in track for the Baltimore Olympic Club and recently took a first in the discus, second in the shot put, and third in the 100-yard dash at a meet with Loyola College. Nice going, Bill.

Spring football started last Monday and Coach Fuzzy Evans had the terrific turnout of twenty-five men. Norwich had about one hundred last week. Don't tell me even Norwich is getting ready to take over our local lads. Is it the spirit here or is it some fault with the athletic setup that out of approximately 1,600 boys in the University, twenty-five turn out for spring training? You take a guess—I know what my answer is.

Doctor Beecher, who was guest speaker at the Block V dinner, advised the athletes at Vermont to turn to debating in order that they might get scholarships. That, in my estimation, was the best spoken phrase of the year.

In case you are still wondering whether your sports editor is biased, he is! In predictions he picks his favorite New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals to win the pennant races. Did you ask about the Vermont State Conference? He's not that biased.

SHORTY COTE

It has been brought to my attention that my recent article on athletics at Vermont showed disrespect to one of Vermont's hardest workers, namely "Shorty" Cote. The facts about the football player hurt in the Middlebury game and the request for a full-time trainer were in no way meant to take honor from "Shorty." He already does the work of five men as he handles all equipment, takes care of it all, tends the whole of Centennial Field by himself, takes care of the tennis courts, and is then called on to do odd jobs. His work with the boys on the athletic clubs at Vermont has always been conscientious and he is one of the most respected employees at the University, as any athlete will tell you. We are not slamming "Shorty" but would like instead to take our hats off to a hard worker and a swell guy. However, this writer still demands a full-time trainer for Vermont athletics.

PHI SIGMA DELTA

An "April Flowers Dance" under the sponsorship of the Phi Sigma Delta pledges was held at the Phi Sig house on April 17, 1948. The dance was very successful, and the low lights and large crepe-paper flower decorations lent an air of spring to the entire affair. Professor Baker of the chemistry department and his wife chaperoned with Professor Webster as an invited guest. The pledges put a great deal of work into the decorations and general administration of the dance under the able supervision of Frater Mickey Wiedman and Pledge Mel Lazar. The dance was one of the first major social activities planned by Phi Sig for the spring quarter. A charity dance, to be held in conjunction with Delta Phi Epsilon sorority at the Phi Sig house is being scheduled for May 8. The dance proceeds will go to the Irvington House in New York which cares for the treatment and maintenance of children suffering from rheumatic fever.

The cultural committee of Phi Sigma Delta has also been active in presenting various programs to the group. On Sunday, April 18, Professor Chaplin of the psychology department spoke to the fraternity on the electroencephalogram and the use of brain wave measurements in the detection and cure of epilepsy and brain tumors. The cultural committee has already had various programs in the past, the last one being a discussion with Dr. Lohman of the economics department on economic problems of the day. The talks are generally informal and are punctuated with questions from the floor. Professor Chaplin highlighted his talks with a series of sketches showing the function of the electroencephalogram. A refreshment hour followed. Future cultural committee functions are being planned.

The fraternity recently installed its newly elected officers. The group was fortunate in having at the installation ceremonies its National Executive Secretary, Alexander Lewin who helped the fraternity in thrashing out various local and national questions pertaining to Phi Sigma Delta. The officers of the fraternity are as follows: Master Frater, Malcolm Mickler; Vice Master Frater, Edward Struhl; Secretary, Joseph Levin; Treasurer, George Borofsky; Historian, Norman Fieber; Alumni Secretary, Wallace Lash; Corresponding Sec'y, Reginald Sawyer; and Member-at-Large of the Executive Committee, Marvin Saltzman.

The Phi Sigs have planned an extensive program for fixing up the house. To date, new furniture has been bought and installed and new linoleum and wallpaper for the first and second floors have been put on. Many other improvements such as a lounge and ping-pong room in the cellar have been planned.

Norman Fieber and Bailey Goldberg won the doubles championship, and the tournament to decide the winner of the singles championship will be played off between Norman Fieber and Sidney Levine. Phi Sig handball demons have extended an open hand to any one who wishes to learn the finer points of handball, apply for lessons, now!!

MIELE REPORTS

The University authorities have enthusiastically favored a campus post office; there being a slight revenue involved. The choice of location has not been made yet but it is hoped that the Book Store will be able to handle this innovation. F. W. Kehoe, U.V.M. Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, is conducting the final conferences with the Postal Service.

Coffee Lounge—Waterman

Student President Harry Miele in an interview Wednesday stated that the Waterman Coffee Lounge and Soda Fountain were operating in the evening Monday through Friday and that continuance of the service was dependent upon student response.

The lounge and fountain open shortly after the close of the cafeteria and close at nine o'clock. Students wishing to dance are allowed the privilege but studying is not recommended. Last year the same evening plan was tried with little or no response, and a proposal to the 1948 Executive Council from a group of interested students reinstituted the plan on a tryout basis.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

On the garden roof of the Hotel Vermont, the A E Phi pledges and the new officers were installed. The new sorors are Sarah Cohen, Sarita Goodman, Lorraine Grody, Suzette Levine, Claire Orson, Edith Schaffer, Jimmy Schenkman, and Esther Thomas. The officers who were installed are as follows: Dean—Adele Kaye, Sub-Dean—Phyllis Barron, Scribe—Ruth Ehrlich, Treasurer—Phyllis Perelman.

Following the installation was an elaborate dinner, in the dining room of the Hotel Vermont, of fruit cup, lamp chops with all the accessories, and topped off by cake and coffee. The patroness of A E Phi, Mrs. Machanic and their sponsor, Mrs. Abraham were seated at the head of the table with the former Dean, Claire Glass and the new Dean. A meeting was then held on the garden roof with Adele Kaye presiding and the new sorors attending for the first time.

On Sunday, April 11, the former pledges of A E Phi held a tea at the home of Mrs. Abraham. Sandwiches made on green bread with colored cream cheese, tuna fish and egg salad were served with cupcakes and cookies. Miss Shively honored the A E Phi pledges with her presence.

The A. E. Phi girls are busy building up their baseball team. Practices are held on Sundays, and the spirit shown is great. Adele Kaye, Esther Thomas, and Helaine Berenson seem to be the DiMaggio's on the team!

Plans are being formulated for a party and fashion show to be held in near future. The proceeds of this will go into a fund for an A E house.

The Billings and East Hall House will be open the following week-end:

Mahoney were appointed as co-chairmen of the arrangements and moderator committees. Professor R. S. Babcock was appointed to membership in the program committee. Miss Gladys E. Neiburg '49 will serve on the publicity committee, and Sydney Smith and Miss Gladys Flint are appointed to serve as members of the forum library committee.

The Vermont Forums, Inc., which is entering its third year, is a non-partisan and non-profit organization for education and discussion. Pertinent and important subjects are discussed in the belief that Vermonters, who have always cherished the right of free speech and independent action, want to be well informed in order to play their part in a world where democracy can only survive through intelligent participation of all members.

Johnstone Relates Bikini ExperiencesLarge Group Hears
Constructive Talk

More than 150 people listened to Dr. Johnstone's talk about his experiences at Bikini. He demonstrated by showing parts of the Pacific area in which the bomb was tested during the summer of '46.

No Equipment

Dr. Johnstone formerly worked at the Oceanographic Institute in Woods Hole, Mass. He suddenly received a request from the Navy Department for a completely new kind of mission. They deemed it wise to obtain information from a bacteriologist, and the department asked him to go to Bikini. Dr. Johnstone left immediately by plane, and within three days, twelve days before the first atomic bomb was dropped there, he arrived without any equipment. The Navy Department supplied the equipment from a hospital ship already there, and he worked with the information necessary to correlate the bomb data.

Dr. Johnstone's talk didn't center around his scientific work for two main reasons. One was that the audience did not consist primarily of biologists, and, so, he retained some data not yet released by the government. During his talk, numerous witty remarks were said, and, also, he told interesting facts about the habits and customs of the natives inhabiting Bikini.

"Streptomyces Bickineensis"

Near the end of his lecture, one of the most essential facts was described. Dr. Johnstone told how he discovered a microorganism called "streptomyces bickineensis" by isolating it from the soil of Bikini atoll. This microorganism fights against the tuberculosis germ, and is an odorless and colorless solution which can be used in hotels, sleeping cars and hospitals.

Some space will be available in the balcony for others who wish to be present. Seniors will wear their caps and gowns for the first time, as they begin the series of programs that leads to graduation. Weather permitting, both juniors and seniors will participate in an academic procession under the direction of the chief marshal, Professor Long, and march into the chapel.

Program

First on the program, Elias Lyman of the class of 1911 will deliver the Founder's Day address. After the address, President Millis will announce the new members of the men's and women's honorary societies. Dean Swift will initiate the new members of Boulder, and Miss Simpson, assisted by Mary Lib Young, president of Mortar Board, will initiate the new members of Mortar Board. Presentation of special awards will follow the Boulder and Mortar Board initiations.

VOL. 66                      APRIL 30, 1948                      NO. 16

It is generally supposed that when one reaches the age when he can enter college and live pretty much on his own hook that he is sufficiently mature to behave as a civilized being; that coke bottles are not to be used as bowling balls in the corridor "alleys," that windows are not snowball targets. With the recent row over damage in the men's dorms and the $2.00 fee imposed on those men, the opposite would appear true.

What is the cause? In the first place, it must be accepted that in any group, there are the "passionate few," yours not to question, but yours to endure. They must be put in line; but there is a deeper reason. There is no dorm spirit. Witness the dorm rivalry in sports, one of the greatest strongholds of school spirit, or the attendance at a "dorm party." Why? What happened this year? The dorm men had a strike against them when the dorms were as yet uncompleted when they arrived, i.e., they were unable to orient themselves properly and naturally. What happened next? Men's rushing. The dorms naturally split into the fraternity men and the non-fraternity men. (After all, what is a good dorm other than a fraternity?)

The University has had a year's experience.

The dorm councils have had experience.

They must utilize it to the fullest next year and catch the Frosh on the first bounce. After the first they're lost. School spirit starts with a Freshman class!

Letter To Editor

(ED. NOTE: Contrary to our usual practice, we are presenting this anonymous letter in order to cast, perhaps, the students' point of view on the dorm "breakage fee.")

April 19, 1948.

Dear Sir:

Since the ordained objective of the free press of our glorious nation is to relate to the public all information of general interest, I have undertaken, with the utmost reluctance, to explain the situation extant at the University of Vermont.

I refer to the recently announced assessment of two (2) dollars per person from the inhabitants of the newly constructed men's dorms. The assessments are for "extraordinary damages" which take the form of ten or fifteen windows, broken, not in spite, but in a moment of youthful exuberance. The dormitories, as is generally known, are situated in the middle of a morass, jestingly referred to as "East Campus." As there are approximately one hundred forty (140) students in each of the three dorms, this assessment should not only amply cover the damages, but provide red ink for the bookkeepers for several years to come.

The consensus of opinion here is that the University, by heating the dorms only on alternating Wednesdays, have saved at least eight hundred forty dollars ($840) and that our obligation should be considered fulfilled. In addition, an impartial board of statisticians has calculated that the residents of these dorms have spent three dollars and fifty cents ($3.50) apiece having the mud scraped from their

Read: The Administration On The Dormitory Tax

Of late, the men's dorms have been full of talk, righteous anger, "they can't do this to me" over the University's levying a $2.00 breakage fee on all members of two of the dorms. In an attempt to clarify the situation the CYNIC recently interviewed Mr. Lynn Grow, Director of Housing at U. V. M.

Said Grow: "The whole plan of this bureau of the administration has been one of 'hands off' in regard to the men's dorms, supposing, of course, that men in college are capable of managing their own affairs. We have seen the conditions which the men underwent—moving in late, faulty beds, and we realize the unavoidability of ordinary wear and tear where they reside. But there has been, this winter and spring more than the ordinary 'wear and tear.' Malicious damage has been done. Snowball damage is not unavoidable. Therefore, to protect itself, the University levied the fee."

"I dislike mass punishment as much as anyone; but the assessment was not the amount involved, it was the 'principle' of the thing. (As for the $2.00, it actually costs the University a good portion of this just to bill it from each student by billing them and afterwards processing it.)"

"The whole thing we're driving towards is an integration of these dorms. They receive the proceeds from the coke machines for the enjoyment of the men; they throw dorm parties. The whole dorm must be a responsible body. Everyone doesn't break the rules; there seems to be a 'select few' As for myself, I might pay a fine once, but never twice if I know the fender! I don't care how the money is gotten—if the council can find a means by which it could be collected without University handling, it's better."

"This department does not want to delve into the men's affairs. We want no names—we want responsible action through the dorm council."

shoes and having the new look restored to them, placing the U. of V. M. below becks to the tune of six hundred thirty. (630) buffoes of the realm.

We students, being mortals, are in a quandary. Surely we cannot emulate our sturdy forefathers and throw the dormitories into Boston Harbor. We pray some reader will be able to advise us of a solution to our dilemma.

See you,
ANON, J., 51.

"My future's in the telephone business"

"I've been in the telephone business a little more than two years.

"And what busy years they've been!

"The Bell System has added more than 6,000,000 new telephones, erected some 1200 buildings, buried thousands of miles of cable and made great strides in extending and improving telephone service in rural areas.

"Telephone service has been extended to automobiles, trucks and trains, and a new system for transmitting telephone conversations and television programs by microwaves put in operation.

"At Bell Telephone Laboratories they're working on new electronic devices which will bring still wider horizons of electrical communications within view.

"I've had a part in this post-war progress."

Ingram, Bolwell Head Junior Class Officers

Scotty Ingram was elected President of the Junior class last week at a meeting of the class. Harry Bolwell was elected Vice-president; Jane Smith, Secretary; and Warren Jones, Treasurer.

The only question to come to the fore at the meeting was that of "Junior Week." Due to a $1,225 deficit last year, the last year's Junior Week had been canceled. However, the present class quickly reversed the decision with a vote of "Peetade," to precede the annual play and a Junior Prom.

In keeping with Student Government's present policy of allowing no more than $500 to be spent in connection with the Junior Week discussion. The following also received official positions: Mitch Hunt, Alumni Council Representative; George Brigham, Class Marshal; Frank Krug and Frank Zwick, Senior Week Chairmen; Malcolm Severance and Ray Combs, Junior Week Chairmen.

Nomination was made from the floor, resulting in large slates. The following are the names of the nominees for each position: President, Mitch Hunt, Harry Miele, Al Redway (withdrew), Frank Krug, Bob Harrington, Scotty Ingram; Vice-President, Harry Bolwell, John Howard, Ronald d'Elia, Harry Miele, Walt Mazan; Secretary, Jane Smith, Bob Harrington, Lucille Wetherby, Katherine Crocker, Duncan McLaren, Margarida LeSueur, Mary McBratney, June O'Connell; Treasurer, Charles Constantine, Warren Jones, John Howard, Beverly Hillman; Louise Carroll, Joe Waterman, Gladys Neiburg, Sherman Sprague; Alumni Council Representative, Louise Carroll, Mary Jane Farnham, Bob Morgan, Janet Killary, Mitch Hunt, H. ## WSSF—Sponsored Dutch Trip Is Open To All Five study tours in Europe and two in Asia will be sponsored by the World Student Service Fund this summer. Albert Redway, WSSF Committee Chairman, announced here Tuesday.

Two of the European tours will go into the "Iron Curtain" countries of Eastern Europe Redway said, while the other three will cover France, Italy and the Netherlands respectively. The East European trips will include one group trip through Hungary and Rumania, and one through Rumania and Bulgaria. All the European trips will be preceded by optional travel in England or Germany.

The study tours in Asia will be open to American delegates to the annual International Student Service Conference, which will be held in Rangoon, Burma, from July 15-July 25, Redway continued. One tour will cover Burma and parts of India; the other will include Burma, Malaya, and Ceylon.

The WSSF, in cooperation with the National Student Association and the Dutch Office for Foreign Students, is also sponsoring several inexpensive projects for American students who would like to spend their summer vacations in the Netherlands the chairman said. These plans include summer work camps for men and women, a combination work camp and study tour, and a combined international farm camp and discussion group. Overall expenses for any of the Dutch projects would be $364.00, which would include transportation costs, it was said.

Student ships will be available for all trips to Europe sponsored by the Fund, Redway went on. The number of students selected for all trips except the Netherlands tour and work camps will be limited, and students will be chosen on a basis of WSSF background and interest. The Dutch projects are open to all students.

Further information on any of the trips may be obtained at local WSSF Headquarters, University of Vermont, or from Miss Diana Tead, World Student Service Fund, 20 West 40th Street, New York 18, N. Y.

ABC MYSTERY MAN TO HIT CAMPUS

Ed. Note: This piece of Free advertising slipped in accidentally. Nevertheless we expect a few Free cartons.

Sometime during the next two weeks you may be stopped on the campus by one of your fellow students and asked to produce your pack of cigarettes.

The man is Mr. ABC, not a moocher. If the pack you produce is Chesterfield, he'll give you a pack to match it—if you are actually smoking a Chesterfield when stopped. Mr. ABC will award you two packs.

Who Mr. ABC is and the days he'll be here are top secret, but it is no secret that you can avoid being disappointed by always carrying a pack of Chesterfields.

'Ruddigore' To Be Presented by UVM Choir June 2, 3

"Ruddigore," an operetta by Gilbert and Sullivan, will be presented at Southwick June 2 and 3, by the University Choir under the direction of Professor H. G. Bennett. In the production of its annual operetta, the Choir will be assisted by the University Orchestra conducted by Ipocrates Pappoutsakis.

The Choir began rehearsals of the operetta soon after the cast was assigned early in the quarter. The members of the cast are as follows:

The remainder of the Choir will sing in the men's and women's choruses.

In 1927 the University Choir presented its first operetta and followed it with numerous successful productions. Many will remember last year's operetta, the thoroughly enjoyable "Iolanthe."

Freshman Debaters Compete Today In N. E. Tourney

The U. V. M. freshman debate team will reach the climax of its efforts this season when it travels to Dartmouth on April 30 to take part in the New England Freshman Debate Tournament. Other schools that will participate in this event are Amherst, Bates, Boston University, M. I. T., Wesleyan, Williams, and Dartmouth.

The question that will be torn apart is "Resolved, that the federal government should enact legislation requiring arbitration of labor disputes in basic industries." Upholding the affirmative for Vermont will be Mary Fuller and Ed Costello. On the negative side will be Lindley Hartwell and Jean True.

From a squad of twelve who have been active this year, these four have been picked as showing the greatest promise by Dr. Robert Huber, coach of debating. The whole group has gained considerable experience in debates with freshmen from Dartmouth, Middlebury, and St. Michael's and with Vermont high schools. They should be well prepared for their eight debates at Dartmouth this weekend, according to Dr. Huber.

Another chapter was added to the University of Vermont's outstanding record in the field of debating when Guy Page and John Harrington won top honors in the Northeastern Regional Debate Tournament at Connecticut Wesleyan, April 9 and 10. This pair have won for themselves a place among the top thirty-two colleges from all over the nation who will compete in the Second National West Point Invitational Tournament on April 29-May 2.

From New England, New York, and Pennsylvania, twenty-five colleges sent representatives to the campus of Connecticut Wesleyan in Middletown, Connecticut, to contend for the honor of being one of the top six teams in this part of the country to take part in the National Tournament. The question debated is the national intercollegiate debate question for this year, "Resolved, that a Federal World Government should be established." Each team had to be prepared to uphold both sides of the argument. Incidentally, this tournament was under the direction of Dr. Robert Huber, head of the U. V. M. speech department and debate coach.

Five straight victories over Washington and Jefferson, Wagner, LaSalle, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and Rutgers gave Vermont an undefeated record which could be matched only by Bates College of Maine. However, Vermont shaded Bates in the final point scoring. The other four teams which earned the right to enter the National Tournament are Dartmouth, Holy Cross, M.I.T., and Swarthmore.

PEARL BUCK, NOTED AUTHOR, TO SPEAK TUESDAY, MAY 4

Pearl S. Buck, noted author and Nobel prize winner, will speak at the Ira Allen Chapel on Tuesday evening, May 4 at 8:00 p.m.

Miss Buck was born in West Virginia, and at the age of five months, was taken to China where her parents were missionaries. Among her most popular books are "The Good Earth," "Dragon Seed," "The Promise"; many of her books have been translated into other languages.

The topic of discussion will be "Where Does America Stand," after which a question period will follow. Tickets must be purchased beforehand as they will not be sold at the chapel. They are now on sale at the U. V. M. book store, and at Dr. Hall's office. The noted novelist is being presented by the "Vermont Plan for Action" and sponsored by Green Mt. Post No. 175, Jewish War Veterans of the United States.

The culmination of this year's debating endeavors will be reached when the West Point Tournament commences. Each team will be faced with five seeding rounds on Thursday and Friday. Then the top sixteen will square off against one another on Saturday and Sunday in successive elimination rounds which will finally determine the national champion.

Vermont is no stranger to this tournament. Last year Leona Felix and Norm Vercoe comprised one of only three teams in the nation that succeeded in coming through the five seeding rounds undefeated. However in the first round of eliminations they lost to the University of Southern California which was in turn defeated by Southwestern State Teacher's College of Durant, Oklahoma, the ultimate national champions.

The pride and joy of U. V. M.'s forensic efforts, Guy Page and John Harrington have received practically all of their speaking training at Vermont. Guy is a senior political science major and a member of Delta Psi fraternity. John is a junior pre-law student.

CONDON HEADS NEW VIP SLATE

At the Vermont Independents meeting of April 19, officers for the coming year were elected. Acting president Robert Condon was chosen to fill that position permanently, while Vincent Richards was elected vice-president, Joan Ediff, secretary, and Robert Perkins, treasurer. The council members elected were: Ralph Preston and Louis Lane, freshmen, Ian MacNeil and Doris Jones, sophomores, and Eunice Anderson and Marie Powers, juniors. Butch Bingham was elected to serve VIP as Student Government Athletic representative.

To take office immediately, these officers replace the temporary slate elected three months ago when former president Bob Ehrenbard was graduated. They will remain in their positions for a full year, as called for in the VIP constitution.

Letters to Editor

28 April 1948

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

Student applications for admission to the Advanced Military Science Courses are now being considered by the PMS & T. of UVM's ROTC Unit.

The two-year course is designed to qualify students for either a Reserve Commission or for a direct Commission into the Regular Army upon graduation.

Commissions may be obtained in the Infantry, Engineer Corps, Signal Corps, Quartermaster Corps, Ordnance, or the Chemical Corps depending upon the type of course the student is taking.

Advanced Course students are provided with uniforms and are paid a monthly subsistence allowance of $23.70 per month.

In general the course is limited to academic juniors who have had two years of Basic ROTC between the ages of 19 and 27 and to college students with previous military training.

Students who are interested may obtain complete details by calling at the offices of the PMS & T which are located in the Men's Gymnasium. (Hours 7.30-5.00.)

MAJ. EVANS-SMITH.

In a simple program in the Billings Library, the speaker was introduced by President Buckham. He talked on ideals of education and those of Ira Allen in founding the University of Vermont. Then the whole college sang.

Vermont Trackmen Lose to Bowdoin, 95-40

Catamounts Seek Win In Home Meet With Colby

Earl Randall Paces Vermont Point Getters With Win In Mile And Second In Two Mile

by BOB HERRIOTT

The University of Vermont opened its spring track season Saturday by playing host to Bowdoin College of Brunswick, Me., at the Centennial Field cinder path. The day was warm and sunny and the track dry and fast, ideal for racing and Vermont went into the meet with high hopes, but the visitors, with their tremendous strength in the dashes and weight events, were too much for the badly lamed V. M. squad and won 95-40.

With Capt. Dick Evans and Charlie Traverse aching from pulled muscles and unable to give their best showings Bowdoin completely swept the hammer, taking all three places, with Parsons getting the best distance of 154'. Captain Matt Branche of Bowdoin was the meet's outstanding athlete as he placed first in the 100 yd. high hurdles, 220 yd. low hurdles, and the high jump. Branch, who was also captain of the Bowdoin tennis team, was with that team in Massachusetts Friday and had to come into Burlington by sleeper for the meet—a truly time competitor.

Bowdoin's other negro athlete, Bob Swann was second high man as he won both the 100 yd. and 220 yd. dashes and finished third in the broad jump. Bob Perkins tied his last year's best in the pole vault, but this was only good enough to tie him for first as Holmes of Bowdoin also cleared 10'6".

The leading point getter for Vermont was Earl Randall who, after he had won the mile in the good time of 4:47, entered the much more gruelling two mile and was able to finish second behind his teammate Johnny Bellows, who set the pace and led all the way. Jim Rooney was leading for the first 420 yds. of the quarter mile run, but was nosed out by both Earl Briggs and Brown of Bowdoin in the last twenty yards. However, in the 880 yd. run was exactly opposite as Dunc McLaren came from behind in the last twenty yards to win in 2:06.

Bowdoin dominated the other field events as Al Nicholson took the discus and shot put, Holmes the broad jump and Al Smethurst the javelin.

The summary:

Delta Psis Upset By Phi Sigs in Volleyball Finals

Latter Wins Championship After Hot League Race

Interfrat Volleyball is now a thing of the past, as far as the league is concerned, for another year. Delta Psi still has the edge, it seems as their powerful juggernaut rolled over all opposition, without so much as working up a noticeable sweat. In order to retain the school championship, however, the Delts must overpower the powerful and ever-threatening Phi Sigma Delta aggregation.

The Independant league failed to materialize, due to the lack of interest shown by the Dorms in the Sport. It was hoped that some of the energy stored up by the boys all winter would find a suitable outlet on the volleyball court, but it seems that breaking windows is more fun.

Early season indications pointed to Sigma Phi to take over League A, but when the chips were down they dropped their marbles to the Delta Psi combine. In League B where the teams are more evenly matched the Phi Sigs had no easy time of it, but did manage to squeak a win over Phi Delta Theta and take the title. The playoffs between these two teams will be held later in the week. The final standings:

Palmist Reveals Secrets of Trade . . .

By CHRIS LATHAM

If you don't want the world to know your secrets, keep your hands covered. Your political future might be ruined if your murderers thumb were revealed or that forked head-line that runs down onto the mount of the moon, or that over-sized mount of mars combined with a too-short, red, flat heart-line. But if you have a conical hand (with strong head-line, heart-line, and life-line), you're all set for the future. Moliere and Rousseau had this type of shaped hand. This hand is shaped with a rounding palm, medium-length fingers which slant inward and rounded at the top and a long, quite flexible thumb. Shakespeare and Milton had the long, pointed hand with the philosophical knots in it. (Or so they say.)

Palmistry is supposed to have begun in Egypt years and years B. C. What I have been talking about is chiromnomy, which is morphological physiognomy (outward shape to you, my friend), and chiromancy, the study of the bumps in your palm which is descended from astronomy, each one of the mounts being named after the gods with their corresponding attributes, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn (woe is the person with this mount well-developed), Mars, Mercury (the mount of business, I wonder how large this is on the Hand of the U. V. M. head of the money appropriations?). Now you combine all this and you have palmistry. But you must remember the exceptions to each dominating influence of these three, brooding guardians of your life. If you have a well-developed mount, say mercury for instance, and didn't have any lines on it, and it wasn't too large, then you have the best qualities of the sign but then, if you have lines that changes everything. Now a har on it might mean, if thick, that you had kleptomaniac tendencies, and a lot of small criss-cross lines might mean that you were a natural diplomat and should therefore go into the oil business in Palestine. Now an overly-developed mount of Venus (that large protrusion that moves back and forth with your thumb, with a girdle of Venus (a half circle line that starts between your little finger and your fourth finger and runs up between your first and second finger) that is broken and criss-crossed with other little lines combined with a broken heart-line—well with this combination you're sunk and the only thing that will save you is to go quick to the North Woods and found a hermitage. And if you're a girl don't ever look at another man, or you'll be in a worse mixup than Cleopatra ever dreamed about. Don't give up though, because if your fate line is long and clear with few breaks and you have a well-defined cross under your first finger in the middle of the mount of Jupiter (which means luck in love with a fairly famous person) why you will make a success in love after a long, hard struggle, and in spite of all your fickleness and other weaknesses, but wait a minute, do I see a large cross connecting the head-line and the heart-line and a lot of little criss-cross lines on the mount of Venus—I'm afraid it isn't in your nature to be lucky in love with any one person very long and you deserve the awful fate you're going to get. Oh and you have crosses on the mount of the moon—suicide by water, friend, I fear. You have a nice long life line though so maybe you'll die in your bathtub at eighty. You see every line cancels out every other line and if you're nature is bad, all the lucky signs in the world won't help you, although maybe you have enough lucky signs combined with some lines crossing your fate line from the base of your palm with line islands around them, which means good friends are going to help you, so you may end up well in spite of all your tendencies and bad disposition. And if you have the right shaped hand that may save you from the lines so don't give up hope. I'm not, and I'm a thief (just tendencies of course). I'm going to land in prison, I'm inconstant, ruthless and everything that shouldn't happen to anyone happens to me!

STUDENT ARTISTS PAINTINGS SHOWN

Bertrand P. Bisson and Miriam Peterson are the artists whose work is at present on exhibition in the office of the Director of Libraries in Billings Library.

Bisson, a member of the class of 1949, and a resident of Montpelier, is represented by a landscape which is suggested by a scene in nearby Mallets Bay. The rugged rocks and the stark green mountain are not realistic but show an imaginative arrangement of landscape elements. The artist is a newcomer to the painting course and has been painting since last fall.

Miss Peterson was called upon to do a landscape and decided that the usual tree-road-house-mountain type was not interesting enough. Looking out the studio window she noticed the pattern the branches make against the sky and used that pattern as the basis for a painting. This is Miss Peterson's third painting and this is her first work in oils. She is a member of the class of 1950 and lives in Northfield.

FFA NOTES

The collegiate chapter of FFA opened its meeting with the new officers officiating on the evening of April 15. Many new candidates for membership to the organization were present. The new chapter plans to initiate the new members at the next meeting on May 13.

The program of work for the remainder of the year was submitted by the committee and approved by the club. This consists of the following items of work:

1. Demonstration teams for dairy diseases and soil conservation to be given at local high school vocational agriculture students.
2. Assist with the State Judging contest at the University Farm on May 14. And also sell refreshments at the farm on this occasion.
3. A "Big Brother" program by which upperclassmen will assist in every way possible to help out freshmen enrolled in the Agricultural Education curriculum.

After a profitable meeting, which prepared much ground for the future progress of the FFA, an interesting film was presented by Mr. Woodhull, the club's executive secretary.

Support The Frosh

The statement has been made that U.V.M., with its myriad of organizations, is over-organized. Editorials have been written deploring the general lack of knowledge, whatsoever, concerning U.V.M.'s clubs and social activities, until much too late. Recognizing as this paper's greatest duty that of disseminating as much information, pertinent to the students as a whole, as is possible, the CYNIC, indeed, finds some need of self-criticism. Amidst the present woes of our varsity baseball team, it is well to note the successes of our freshman baseball and track teams. The track team has turned in two impressive wins over B.H.S. and Lyndonville High Schools, while the baseball team has been over-impressive: its winning scores against Rutland Junior College and Vermont Junior College were 19-2 and 5-0, respectively. And yet, sadly enough, the support of these "home" contests has been practically nil. Attendance and spirit is almost completely lacking. With the thought foremost that this year's freshman teams are next year's varsity, the CYNIC is publishing today the hitherto unpublished freshman track and baseball schedules.

One Issue A Week

Yes, one issue a week. The staff, having considered the change for some time, has finally concluded that, with one issue a week, it can better serve the students and the school and fulfill the purposes of the paper. There will be, of necessity, a change in deadlines. The final deadline for all material to appear Wednesday must be in by Monday, at eight o'clock sharp. There will be no reprieves after that! The CYNIC will continue to remain open to your suggestions through your letters. Please, let us have you ideas!

Gnirps

Spring's the sort of thing they're nuts about.

Monkeys fickle, swinging like trapezists, Magpies gossip 'bout their latest love, While June bugs tease some unsuspecting she.

The guppy fishes play wet games of tag. The strongest bulls break through to court the cows, Silk worms busy with spring dresses And conceited peacocks strut for anyone who'll watch.

Birds spend time scheming for a worm, Porkies sharpen up their long, spring quills Leaves come out to watch the crazy fun Everyone enjoys the spring but one!

He sits with windows tight as J. L.'s picket line— Surrounds himself with kleenex white and pure.

He hardly sees the spring from out his bloodshot eyes And everytime a flower makes her debut, He dies a sweet, unwilling death of sneezes And curses raving gods who thought up spring!

Open Letter From Dramatic Club

It is the aim of the U. V. M. Dramatics Club to produce plays that are both interesting and educational: educational on the viewpoint of dramatic value and literary value.

We wish also to please our audiences and to give them what they want whenever possible. During the next year, it is our tentative plan to produce a three-act play in November, the Variety Show in December, three one-acts or a faculty acted show around April 1, a three-act in May, campus interpretation contest in March, a possible inter-collegiate interpretation contest in May, and monthly one-acts in Dramatics Club meetings.

You can see that our schedule is getting quite heavy; and as our wish is to please our audiences, we would appreciate, very much, if you would fill out the following questionnaire and drop it into the Dramatics Club Suggestion Box which will be left in the lower corridor in Waterman. Your suggestions must be in the box by May 15, so that your wishes may be known and given careful consideration.

Museum Note

by ALLAN LUCE

Those of you who are familiar with the Fleming Museum probably know the location of the Chinese Room. This room, with its lovely silks, ivories, jade, carved teakwood has at last met its demise temporarily. Its exotic splendor is to be replaced by the more practical one of Early American glass. The exhibit, arranged by the museum in the direction of Mrs. Gladys G. K. includes only the very earliest pieces of pressed glass with just a few specimens of American pottery and glass.

A list of the types of pressed-glass signs reads like a catalogue of the gracious era they represent. There are, for example, shell-and-tassel, daisy-chain, old-man-on-the-mountain, the inverted thumb print, diamond-point, ten, deer-and-pine, and many other designs which delighted our great-grandmothers in the early nineteenth century. One little Sandwich glass plate, three inches across and with the name of cup plate, has an interesting history. It made its appearance back in the late afternoon tea was not only a social occasion but a social necessity. When tea was poured, and if it was too hot to drink, it usually was, the ladies in their long crinolines would fastidiously sugar cream their tea, pour it into the cup, and then place the cup on the cup which avoided soiling their hostess's cloth. Then with graceful motion would raise the saucer to her uncorrupted lips and "slurp" the tea. This custom had obviously died out before Emily wrote her "Blue Book of Social Usage" which definitely frowns on any slurping, no matter how delicately accomplished.

The majority of the pressed glassware were the gift of Miss Frances St. Hollywood, Calif. This is a new collection for the Fleming and is the primary reason for the American Glass Exhibit. Included among this collection is a glass syrup jug with a pewter stopper, a stemmed compot plate, two cruetes, one crystal-like condiment dish and a massive salt cellar with two spoons of the same design. Other contributors to the exhibit are Mrs. H. Balch of Burlington, Mrs. G. S. B. of Underhill, and Mrs. Guy Richardson. She has a large collection of the individual salt cellars which were so popular in the Victorian era. The exhibit will be open to the public within the next two weeks.

OPPORTUNITY FOR VERMONT DEMOCRATS

Although the deadline is drawing near in the national Young Democratic Membership Contest, there is still time for Vermont YD organizers to win expensive trips to the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia.

Roy G. Baker, president of the Vermont Democratic Clubs of America, made clear today as he urged college students to push their efforts to enroll new members in Young Democratic Clubs.

The Young Democrat in each state leads in new memberships will be honored guest at the July convention. Youth delegation will have seats on convention floor, and a special program of entertainment is planned for the delegates. Deadline in the membership drive is May 31.

Contest rules require that each member be certified by the state Young Democratic Club. Only members of state clubs which are chartered by the national organization, which have a minimum of 100 members, and which have paid dues in full, will be eligible.

"Here's a chance of a lifetime for young college men or women," Baker said. "Few Americans have the opportunity to see a national political convention, and we're offering that opportunity with expenses paid—to an outstanding Young Democrat in each state. Every college student to take advantage of this offer, and participate in our membership drive."

"I suggest that those interested in the contest write to their county or state Democratic chairmen for information about the Young Democratic Clubs. Additional details of the contest may be secured from state Young Democratic Clubs' officers, or from national headquarters in Washington, D. C., if added."

Turban-Bedecked I R C Club Members Feast In Indian Style

Old and new members of the International Relations Club swathed themselves in sheets, wound turbans around their heads and partook of an Indian dinner cooked by Jane Atwood and Dave Jareckie on Friday, April 23. In true Indian fashion they sat and lounged on the dining room floor at Southwick. One returning diner remarked that the only thing missing was a slave to bring him wine, whereupon water was immediately brought him. When the last cocoa had been munched, the swathed company tripped downstairs to the lounge to hold a business meeting.

First of all Martha Atwood, who had attended the National Conference of I.R.C.s in St. Louis, gave a report on the speakers at the conference and also a list of some helpful suggestions she had picked up. Next the new members who were present (there are also some who could not be there) were welcomed. They were: Joanne Howard, Joan Ganow, Mildred Goss, Jean Ritchie, Sylvia Heininger, Dorothy Elmer and Dick O'Connell. It was decided that there would be three more programs this quarter. The first of them will be on the Reciprocal Trade agreements and their relation to U. S. foreign policy. The next program is being planned together with the S. C. A. and the S. A. C., and will be a program presenting the platforms of the various presidential candidates. The third and last program of the quarter will be a picnic. The I.R.C.s of other Vermont colleges will be invited to come in order to form a Vermont Council of I.R.C.s. The immediate function of this council will be to plan the regional I.R.C. conference which is being held at U.V.M. next fall. The picnic is to be held at Malletts Bay on Saturday, May 22. All I.R.C. members should keep the date free, not only so that U.V.M. may be well represented, but also because the picnic promises to be a very good one. There will be international music and dance around the campfire, and after the picnic supper there

UVM Student To Be Given Scholarship To Swedish Univ.

Under the auspices of the Sweden-America Foundation of Uppsala, Sweden, and the American-Scandinavian Foundation of New York, arrangements have been made whereby the University of Uppsala and the University of Vermont, as one of the several participating universities, will be enabled to exchange students during the academic year of 1948-49, beginning in September. Under the plan approved by the Trustees of the University the scholarships will cover all expenses of room, board and tuition, everything except traveling expenses and those strictly personal.

Each university will send one student. Uppsala has already nominated a candidate who is to study here James Fenimore Cooper's use of natural scenery. He comes more specifically as a member of the American Institute of Uppsala established by Prof. S. B. Liljegren, a distinguished scholar well-known for his research in the field of English and American romanticism. Professor Liljegren, who spent a few days at Burlington in the spring of 1946, was formerly at the University of Greifswald, Germany, and as Professor of English there had charge of the graduate studies of Miss Borgwardt, at one time, 1936, a German exchange student at the University of Vermont.

A committee of the faculty made up of Professors Dykhuizen, Evans, Moody, and Lindsay are in charge of appointing a student of the University of Vermont as exchange scholar. The committee will be glad to receive written applications from members of the senior class and recent graduates of the University who

Pan-Hell Discusses New Sorority on University Hill

The formation of a new sorority at the University of Vermont was the main topic of the Pan Hellenic meeting on Tuesday, April 20. There has been considerable talk of instituting another Greek letter sorority this year by various independents and the sororities already on the hill. Discussions have taken place in regular Monday night meetings in most of the sororities, and each group has expressed its desire to see a new sorority set up. A couple of national organizations have already sent letters to this Pan Hellenic group, asking for admittance to this campus. Pan Hellenic has requested information from National Pan Hellenic on the choice of sorority admitted, although any final decision rests in the University Council which will consider any recommendations that Pan Hellenic might make.

New Officers

New Pan Hellenic officers will be installed next month. Betty Whitney, retiring president, announced that the annual Pan Hellenic banquet will be held on Monday, May 10. All sorority girls should make an effort to attend.

Wallace's Party Organizes At UVM

The Students for Wallace group on the U.V.M. campus held its first meeting on April 28, in the Waterman Building. Its main function is to bring forth on the University campus information about Henry Wallace and his platform and to work for the ideals for which he stands. Marshall London is the temporary chairman.

This group is representative of the many Wallace organizations which have sprung up on the University campuses all over the country. It reflects a political trend that is growing in America. Some of the places where the Wallace group has grown to prominence have been Harvard and Yale.

The group feels that it is essential that students throughout America take an active interest in the political affairs of the world. It feels that one of the causes of war has been apathy. That the people should take part in what's going on locally, nationally and on the international scene. It wishes to make clear the full implication of the Truman doctrine, the effect that armaments and universal military training will have on the home front, and the immediate problems of inflation and housing.

TWO FLYING CLUB MEMBERS SOLO

Two members of the U.V.M. Flying Club made the first solo flights in the Club's plan on Sunday, April 26, under Instructor Al Hurley. The two who soloed at Champlain Airport are Dave Partridge and Bob Astone.

The Flying Club was organized at the University of Vermont last fall for two purposes, first, to provide flying for members at exceptionally low rates, and second, to increase interest in private flying and all other phases of flying. The Club, which is working toward incorporation, is designed to include student flyers and beginners as well as those who already have a ticket. Courses are planned in air navigation, meteorology, and air safety.

As the University of Vermont Flying Club is set up, each of the twenty members has a part interest in the Club's plane, thus limiting the membership to twenty per plane. However, due to several members leaving school, a few openings are available. Further information can be acquired from Karl S. Webster, secretary-treasurer of the Club, at the Delta Psi House.

Baseball Nine Loses Two More to Bates and Bowdoin

Catamounts Lose Thriller To Bates Then Bow to Bowdoin 6 to 2; Lack Hitting Power

By GLENN FAYE

Vermont's third attempt to break into the win column was as fruitless as the other two as the Cats dropped a heart-breaker to the Bates team at Lewiston, Me., last Thursday afternoon. It was a thrilling mound dual all the way, with big "Jawn" Hoskiewicz and Don Sunderland both pitching magnificently. But Vermont's inability to score, which has kept the team from winning in each of their previous outings also kept them from thrashing Bates.

The Cats loaded the bases twice and both times nothing more happened. In the fifth, with two men away, Ballard and Turnbull singled and Art Collier got a free pass, only to have "Hosky" ground out. In the eighth, also with two away, Collier and "Hosky" singled and Parrow walked only to have the inning end as Battlin' Bill Dempsey fanned. On the other hand, until the eleventh inning nary a Bates man went farther than second base. Again in the tenth Vermont had a man on third but Jack "Bull" Hurley popped up and St. Gelais grounded out to end the game.

The game was won in the eleventh when Hoskiewicz walked Abair and was replaced by Ed. Kotlarczyk. The next Bates man to bat sacrificed Abair to second. After Cunnane popped out to Turnbull, Al Parent, who was batting for Ed. Record, lined a single into the outfield and Abair scored easily from second with the winning tally.

Hoskiewicz gave but four hits in the ten innings he worked, walking four and striking out eight. Sutherland, who went the entire distance for Bates, walked five and struck out five.

Earle Randall again took the mile event with his running mate, John Bellows, capturing the two-mile race. Dick Nostrand scored two firsts, one in the low hurdles and the other in the high hurdles. Dunc McLaren repeated his previous win in the half mile and Irv Becker took a first in the high jump to salt away the win. For Colby Aaron Sandler was the leading competitor as he took two firsts and a second.

Frosh Sweep Baseball and Track Events

Frosh Trackmen Win Over Yearlings Smother R. J. C. Lyndon And Burlington Then Blank V. J. C., 5 to 0

by BOB HERRIOTT

By BOB HERRIOTT

Until the last event (the 220-yd. dash) that Saturday's Frosh meet at Lyndon Institute was decided, but "The Flash" Haddigan took the 100-yd. dash, Art "The Rocket" Leavitt second, Al "The Jet" Tavares third, victory was assured and another win went into the record book, this time 64-53. It wasn't the 220 that everyone was running about, but Russ Mahoney's record time of 4:40.8. This was the old mark of 4:42 set by Webster back in 1939 and is quite an accomplishment for the pre-med student, since the weather was very damp and quite unfavorable for fast running. However, this is the warm weather will bring forth. The field by 20 yards after the first quarter, which was run in 63 seconds. The announcement of the second quarter time drew many exclamations from the crowd as he had negotiated the first half mile in 2:14. The third quarter was comparatively slow, taking 1:10.6, but with a good kick at the end came flying across the finish first with a new record time of 4:40.8. Russ' time in the mile overshadowed the half mile victory, but the latter cannot be mentioned as he won in the time of 2:06.

"The Flash" Haddigan again took the leading frosh point maker as he won the 100 in 10.6, the 220 in 24.8, and the second in the broad jump with a jump of 20' 3". Only Fred Allard's wind distance of 20' 5" (a new Lyndon record) surpassed Howie's best and for the first time was more than a foot beyond his previous best.

There has been a new addition to the winners club of Mahoney, Haddigan and Co. as Dave Hinkley took first in the shot with 44' 2 1/2", and the discus 110' 5/8", both marks bettering his previous bests.

Other frosh firsts were registered by Arms with his 56.4 in the 440 and Fink with his 13.4 in the 120 yard hurdles, an event which he had never before.

The outstanding athlete of the meet was Fred Allard. The Lyndon school took firsts in the pole vault and broad jump, tied for first in the high jump, and placed second in the 100 yard dash. Fred was good in all events and should make a good college prospect for next year, especially in the pole vault and broad jump.

The summary:

100 yd. Dash—1. Haddigan (V), time 10.6; 2. F. Allard (L), 3. Hughes (L).

220 yd. Dash—1. Haddigan (V), time 24.8; 2. Leavitt (V), 3. Tavares (V).

440 yd. Dash—1. Arms (V), time 56.4; 2. Porter (V), 3. Tavares (V).

880 yd. Run—1. Mahoney (V), time 4:40.8; 2. Porter (V), 3. Hughes (L).

1 Mile Run—1. Mahoney (V), time 4:40.8; 2. Porter (V), 3. Wolcott (V).

There is a new freshman record beating the old record of 4:42 set by Webster.

120 yd. High Hurdles—1. Fink (V), time 13.4; 2. Gaffney (L), 3. Munger (L).

400 yd. Low Hurdles—1. Gaffney (L), time 27.8; 2. Lavelly (L), 3. Arms (V).

High Jump—1. F. Allard (L), height 5' 3"; 2. Hughes (L), 3. Fink (V).

Broad Jump—1. F. Allard (L), distance 20' 5"; 2. Haddigan (V), 3. Tavares (V).

Pole Vault—1. F. Allard (L), height 18' 6"; 2. R. Allard (L), 3. Herriott (V).

Shot Put—1. Hinkley (V), distance 44' 2 1/2"; 2. Hitchcock (V), 3. Levine (V).

Discus—1. Hinkley (V), distance 110' 5/8"; 2. Handy (L), 3. Prinn (L).

Javelin—1. Wheeler (L), distance 142'; 2. Hanodan (L), 3. Hitchcock (V).

Led by Howie "The Flash" Haddigan who streaked to victories in the 100- and 220-yd. dashes and topped first place in the broad jump, the Vermont Frosh outclassed Burlington High School by winning nine of the thirteen events to win their initial meet of the season 67-50. The meet was carried out over two days, the first one, Tuesday, being warm and sunny, while the second, Wednesday, was damp and cold. Despite the adverse weather conditions the times and distances were very good for so early in the season and by the middle of the season some records should begin to fall.

Probably the most outstanding runner of the meet was Russ Mahoney who picked up firsts in the mile and 880. His winning time of 5:44.9 for the mile is less than three seconds off the Freshman record while his 2:06 for the half is less than three off the record. Had Russ been pushed he might have turned the trick in this meet, but as it was he had to set his own pace all the way, having only the clock to race against.

By winning both the discus and the 440, taking second in the 200 and tying for second in the high jump, Bob Caswell took individuals honors for Burlington with fifteen points, and showed up as one of the best all-round athletes of the meet. Also registering firsts for Burlington were Lambert who took the 70-yd. high hurdles and Austin who topped the javelin.

For the Kittens, the remaining first places were taken by Glenn Wheelock with a 15.1 for the 120-yd. low hurdles, Dave Hinkley with a good heave of 43' 4" in the 12-lb. shot, Dick Fink with a jump of 5' 3" in the high jump, and Bob Herriott who struggled for every inch of his 9' 3" win in the pole vault.

The summary:

Pole Vault—1. Herriott (VF), Ht. 9' 3". 2. Millington (B). 3. Miller (B).

High Jump—Ht. 5' 3". 1. Fink (VF). 2. Caswell (B). 3. Quinn (B).

The UVM frosh, behind the beautiful two-hit pitching of southpaw Don McCuin, defeated Vermont Junior College 5-0 at Centennial Field Saturday. McCuin, in going the full nine innings, faced only 31 batters, while striking out 12, walking none and giving up only two singles. The day was damp and rainy, but the adverse weather conditions didn't seem to bother the big left hander a bit as he stood out on the mound and literally mowed the opposition down with his fast ball. Only five men reached base and only one of them ever got as far as third.

While Don was shutting out the opposition his mates were picking up five runs for him, three of them coming in the first inning. After McCuin has set the side down in order in the first of the first, by striking out all three men, the frosh came up to bat, raring to go, and before the shaky "Red" Atkins could retire the side, they had exploded for four hits and the three runs. Leo Johnson, first up, promptly singled to open the inning. Ed Guiliani then singled him to second. Cubby Goulet then hit one on the ground to the third baseman who chose to make the play at second, nipping Guiliani, but enabling Johnson to go to third and Goulet to first on a fielder's choice. Cubby then stole second and when Bob Twiss drew a pass the sacks were F. O. F. (Full Of Frosh, that is). Andy Smith then picked out a nice fat pitch and sent it flying into the outfield for a hit, scoring both Johnson and Goulet, and putting the frosh out in front 2-0. Dom Cote (last game's pitching star, who this time decided to turn slugger) hit the first of his three singles and drove in Twiss with the third run. Atkins then settled down by striking out Fitts and Jengo and getting McCuin on a soft pop to the mound.

No further damage occurred until the last of the seventh when the frosh scored twice on an error, a single by Cote, a double by Stan Fitts and a single by McCuin.

This was the extent of the action for the day as Atkins then shut the door to the Kittens and McCuin kept on with his brilliant showing on the mound. Up to now McCuin has been one of the question marks of Coach Don Maynard's squad, but this certainly erased any doubt in the frosh's mentor's mind about the big fellow's ability under pressure. In both games so far the Kittens have shown both hitting and pitching prowess and should now be well tuned up for their game with Clarkson frosh at Potsdam this Wednesday. Here's luck to 'em.

In what appeared more like a three-ring circus than a ball game the Vermont Kittens slaughtered Rutland Junior College 19-2. The Frosh, behind the skillful twirling of Dom Cote took a 2-0 lead at the end of the second inning, and after that it was no longer a ball game, but a farce, as R. J. C. kept continually stalling for time, hoping that the game would be called because of rain, before the required four and a half innings, to make the game official, could be played. Their pitching and catching was terrible, and even the sportsmanship of their coach is to be questioned, as they put on one of the poorest exhibitions of baseball seen around here in a long time. No credit is meant to be taken from the Frosh, they played a beautiful, errorless ball game, but the attempt at baseball put on by the visitors seemed to take all the thrill out of the victory.

Up until the farce began Dom Cote of the Kittens had set the visitors down in order, retiring nine batters in a row, while striking out five, with his hopping fast ball and sweeping curve; but what followed in the last half of the third took all the joy out of the game for both the players and the spectators, for no one learns or benefits from a slaughter, especially when the other team just gives up.

Here's how it all happened. With the Frosh Leading 2-0 Cubby Goulet led off in the last of the third inning and was hit by the pitcher. Andy Smith then beat out a slow roller to the pitcher and when the throw went wildly over first he romped to second and Cubby to third. Rider then drew a base on balls. Pandolf, the next batter laid down a sacrifice bunt, but the pitcher's throw was again wild, this time rolling out into deep right field, clearing the bases, for a four base error and putting the Kittens out in front 6-0. Stan Fitts, the Kittens backstop, then singled, and was promptly sent scurrying around the base paths as Dom Cote stroked a triple to deep left field. Next came walks to Leo Johnson and Billy Webster, followed by Ed. Guiliani's scoring single. This made it 9-0, and as yet no had been retired. Cubby Goulet, now up for the second time in the inning drew a base on balls. Next in the parade came Andy Smith who with his second hit of the inning, a drive to right field, drove in two more runs, making it 11-0. A walk, a wild pitch and two pass balls brought in two more runs and when the side had finally been retired 12 runs had been contributed by 15 batters, 4 hits, 4 walks, 4 errors, 2 wild pitches, 4 passed balls, 1 hit batsman and 1 stolen base, making the score 14-0.

Rutland then rallied to score in the first of the fourth on a single by Maker and a double by Juckett, but that was the extent of their damage to Cote.

The Kittens scored again in the fourth as four walks, a single by Cubby Goulet, and a triple by Bob Twiss sent five more players across the plate. Rutland again scored in the first of the fifth off Dudley Johnson, who relieved Cote, but that was all they could do, and after four and a half innings, which took two hours to play, the game was finally called because of rain.

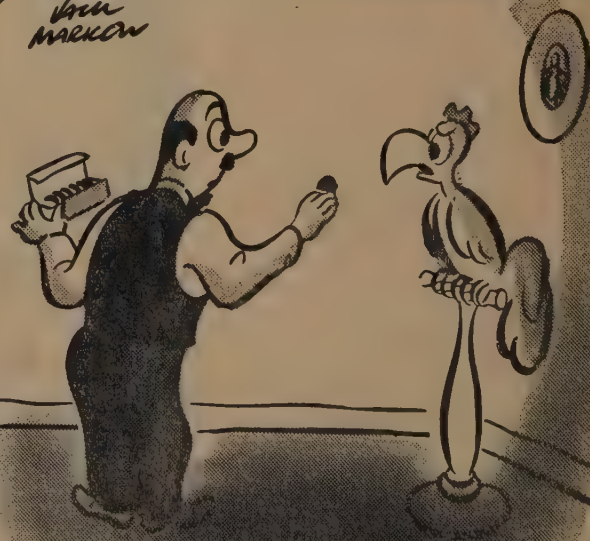

In all R. J. C. picked up two runs on three hits and two walks, while the Kittens scored 19 times on ten hits and 14 walks. Ed. Guiliani and Andy Smith shared hitting honors for the Kittens with two singles apiece, while the big blow of the visitors' attack was Juckett's run scoring double.

wish to be considered as candidates. Such applications should be in writing, should indicate the candidate's qualifications and interests, and include a summary of his academic record, subjects studied, and a statement as to his plans for future employment. The application must be submitted by June 1 at the latest.

Owing to language difficulties, a thorough knowledge of Swedish being essential to the study of the humanities, probably only candidates in the field of science will be able to qualify. In the latter field, although a knowledge of Swedish would certainly be a great convenience and aid at a Swedish university, it is not essential. At least a reading knowledge of German would, however, be necessary. The fields of architecture (advanced students only eligible), medicine, and natural science are the obvious choices.

Aside from strictly utilitarian benefits to the exchange scholar there are others of a cultural sort. The Swedish authorities express the hope that the American student will wish to study in all four of the university towns in Sweden. Such a provision offers unusual advantages to both parties and adds to the attractiveness of the opportunity afforded.

Applications may be addressed to Professor J. I. Lindsay, chairman of the committee, 3A East Hall, The University of Vermont.

Professor Long, himself, considered the trip very successful, despite inconveniences caused when his letter, making arrangements, failed to surmount the red tape in time. This trouble has been eliminated for the subsequent trips by personal arrangements. In the future, with larger groups, a chartered bus will be the means of transportation. The cost for a round trip has now been reduced to $8.90, as the fare is to be tax free. While primarily for International Relations students, empty seats on the bus may be taken by any who are interested.

Many will have noticed that the I.R.C. reading room at East Hall is flourishing. Every day a conscientious member posts the current news on one section of the bulletin board. Another section is changed every week. This week the display is on Latin America. Future displays will be on Russia, Greece, Scandinavia and Palestine. The table in the reading room is furnished with magazines such as Newsweek, Atlantic Monthly, Time, and U. S. News and World Affairs. Everyone who is interested in international affairs will gratify those who have worked hard to make the room a success, if they will spend some time in this room every day.

Anyone who wishes to join I.R.C. should speak to one of the officers. Officers for the coming year are:

Social Spotlight Illuminates Prom Tonight; "My Sister Eileen" To Climax Festivities

Famed Barbary Coast Orchestra Highlights Annual Dance In Gym

UVM Dramatic Club Presents Smash Hit Both Friday and Saturday at Southwick

Tickets On Sale At Bookstore For Only $2.00

For "the music you like to hear" during Junior Week this year, it's the Barbary Coast Orchestra of Dartmouth College. So make that date to come to the Junior Prom!

This year's Barbary Coast is considered another of the fine orchestras in the succession of Barbary Coast Orchestras at Dartmouth College. These orchestras, in the past 25 years, have been widely acclaimed as the finest college dance orchestras in the nation. Reorganized in late 1946 by Ed Curtis, leader, after three years of inactivity due to the war, the 1948 Barbary Coast hopes to maintain this tradition of high quality musicianship and favorable music.

The Barbary Coast is a medium sized orchestra composed of fifteen Dartmouth students. This includes a staff of soloists representing the various sections who are featured in the many special arrangements which the orchestra plays, and a male and female vocalist. The personnel of the orchestra are musicians of ability, many of whom have had years of playing experience both in and out of the armed forces while others are younger men with exceptional talent.

As a student orchestra, the Barbary Coast feels that it can fulfill the desires of other students better than most orchestras, and can offer its services at more reasonable rates than other name bands.

In an effort to keep the cost reasonable, the price of $2.00 per couple was placed in the Junior Prom tickets by the co-directors. Tickets are on sale opposite the Book Store. Every ticket is numbered and midway through the dance, a drawing will be made from these numbers to determine the winners of the door prizes.

The band will be at the east end of the hall, which will be brightly decorated under the direction of Lucille Wetherby and Joan Gearhart. Joan Meyn is in charge of refreshments.

Norm Dennis is in charge of finance, and a complete financial report will be published in the CYNIC. Louise Carroll is secretary for this year's Junior Week.

... The Best College Band in the East ...

Tonight in the college gymnasium, the popular Barbary Coast Orchestra from Dartmouth College (pictured above) will provide the music for the annual Junior Prom. The fifteen-piece band, under the capable direction of Ed Curtis, is well-known for their prom renditions throughout the East. All of the members are students who are managing through their exceptional musical talent to work their way to a college degree. So, for an evening of exceptional enjoyment, drop in to the gym tonight.

MODERN DANCE CLUB WILL PRESENT PROGRAM

The Southwick Ballroom is the scene of much activity this week as the University Modern Dance Club puts the finishing touches on its program, which is to be presented Friday night, May 21, at Southwick.

This year, instead of the usual Lilac Day Program with its queen and her court, Staff and Sandal is devoting the entire evening to the sponsorship of the Modern Dance groups. The proceeds will go to the beautifying of Redstone Campus.

The Modern Dance Club Chairman, Joyce Viventi, is heading the program with the adviser, Miss Hoffman, training the groups. They expect to present an interesting and polished program.

For an evening of cultural entertainment, plan to attend the Modern Dance Club Recital. Upon the support of the various University factions rests the future of this opus. The dainty-toed participants have worked mighty hard to prepare an interesting and polished program so your time will be well spent.

South American Is Guest Speaker At Discussion Meeting

The United States neighbors to the South was the topic for discussion at the May meeting of the Faculty Women's Club. Prof. Muriel Hughes, club president, has announced. The meeting was held at 8 o'clock Monday evening, May 3, in the faculty lounge, Waterman Building, with Rafael Segovia of San Jose, Costa Rica, as featured speaker; and with Miss Alicia Salas of Quito, Ecuador, present to take part in the discussion.

The meeting, one in the series which the faculty women have been holding this year on "America's Pacific Neighbors," emphasized the western, or Pacific, countries of South and Central America.

Segovia, who came to Vermont this year to begin his University work as a student of economics at St. Michael's College, is a native of San Jose and received his early education in his homeland. He came to the United States to enter preparatory school at Cascadilla, in Ithaca, N. Y., and is now securing University training in economics preparatory to returning to Costa Rica.

Miss Salas, who is in the Burlington area for a two-month study of home demonstration and 4-H Club work here, received her bachelor of science degree from a university in Ecuador and was later employed by the Ministry of Economics in Ecuador. Last August she came to this country on a fellowship granted by the U. S. Departments of State and Agriculture to study our home demonstration and 4-H Club activities. She has been studying and observing in Washington, New York, Georgia, and Massachusetts, and she attended the national 4-H Club Congress in Chicago in December. She is spending much of her time while she is in Vermont in Franklin County with Miss Rhoda Hyde, home demonstration agent, and Miss Lillian Andrews, 4-H Club agent, there. Miss Hyde attended the meeting with Miss Salas, and took part in the informal discussion which the South American visitor held with the local faculty women.

UVM DEBATERS COP MIDDLEBURY PRIZE

The Annual Prize Debate between Vermont and Middlebury was won for the third straight year by UVM's masters of the forensic art, on May 6, down in Middlebury. Vermont's Leona Felix won first prize of $25, repeating her accomplishment of last year, while Barbara Clark was awarded $10. Philip Hull of Middlebury collected $15. UVM upheld the negative of the topic discussed, "Resolved, that Henry Wallace is deserving of widespread popular support."

To promote interest in debating, Edwin Winship Lawrence, of the class of 1901, provided an endowment to furnish prizes for this contest. The endowment was established in memory of his brother, Robert Ashton Lawrence, '99, and his father, George Edwin Lawrence.

The victory of the two shrewd U.V.M. seniors climaxes a very successful year for the Green and Gold debating teams. The Vermont showings at the Second Annual Vermont Invitational Debating Tournament, the New England Debating Tournament (U.V.M. and Bates were co-winners), and the National Invitational Debate Tournament (U.V.M. was eliminated in the quarter finals) were excellent.

Esther Thomas and Tom Hayes Star in Production

Can you imagine the humorous predicaments in which two naive small town girls, with a joint determination to conquer New York, might find themselves? The Dramatic Club production of "My Sister Eileen" is a hilarious comedy based on this theme. It first appeared as a book of sketches in the New Yorker Magazine written by Ruth McKenny inspired by her early experiences in New York with her sister Eileen.

Ruth McKenny obtained her humor largely from pretending she had none. In the play Ruth is a good-natured girl with a frank, intelligent face. When she and her sister are fighting off a variety of pests her penetrating, dry humor intensifies the already mirthful comedy. Eileen seems to have no trouble at all in attracting the men and naturally accepts the leadership of Ruth in worldly matters. Their landlord, Mr. Appopolous is a complete bully whenever he feels he is safe. He has an indefinite but very pronounced foreign accent, possibly East side or possibly Greek. The Wreck is the boisterous tenant who lives above the sisters. He is a rather husky fellow who may have made All-American if it weren't for his almost steady diet of gin.

Mr. Appopolous is played by Tom Hayes, class of '50 from Bellows Falls. While Tom was in the service he traveled in Asia for six months with "My Sister Eileen."

Esther Thomas, a freshman who lives in Burlington, plays Ruth Sherwood. She is making her "debut" on the stage in "My Sister Eileen."

Lynn Davis, '49 of Bridgewater, plays Eileen Sherwood. She is very active in W. A. A. and last year was a member of the council-at-large.

The remainder of the cast is as follows: Maynard North '50 of Port Huron, Mich., as The Wreck; Katie Crocker '49 of Ashfield, Mass., as Helen Loomis; Stanley Golden '51 of Montreal, as Mr. Baker; Bob Condon '50 of Rutland as Mr. Fletcher; Parker Ladd '51 of Norwich as Mr. Lippincott; Beverly Grier '48 of Birmingham, Mich., as Violet; Judith Rabinowitz '51 of Brooklyn, N. Y., as a tenant, and Mr. and Mrs. Cummings as Sherwood and Mrs. Wade.

Gov. Gibson, Primary Aspirant, Will Address UVM Young Republican Club

Edward Costello, chairman of the U.V.M. Young Republican Club, today announced a special discussion feature. The topic of the evening will be Progress and Old-Line Ethics in Government and students attending will have the opportunity to speak with Vermont's governor at the termination of the meeting.

Ernest Gibson entered Vermont's political scene in 1939 when he was appointed to the United States Senate to complete the term of his late father. While a member of this body Gibson made an excellent showing. This was a period of vacillation in U. S. history and Gibson was one of the few who consistently urged and fought for national preparedness. In the latter part of 1939 the present governor, Charles F. Brannan, was censured for the laxity and indifference of his administration. Brannan, who would avert their eyes from the trouble abroad, made a stirring speech in the Senate in the face of impending war. This speech received the acclaim of the nation and the grudging admiration of the avid isolationists in Congress. Senator Barkley, Senate majority leader, labeled Gibson's straightforward appeal as "the greatest speech ever heard in this house."

Governor Gibson this year finished a successful first term, and is once again faced with a fight from Vermont's Old Guard in the approaching primaries. The governor instituted a great deal of progressive legislation during his past term, regardless of strong Old Guard opposition. His lieutenant-governor, Lee Emerson of Barton, is the other contender for the U.V.M. Young Republicans will be the Republican nomination.

Young Republicans in charge of arrangements for Governor Gibson's appearance and future speakers are Dorothy Elmer, Bob Morgan, Bert Sisco, Dean Moore and Publicity Director J. D. Adams.

Boulder Society Holds Banquet For Vermont College Representatives

Tuesday evening May 6 U.V.M.'s senior honorary group, Boulder Society, held an unique banquet. Representatives of the honor societies, student councils and school press from Middlebury, Norwich, and St. Michael's gathered with the U.V.M. group for an informal dinner.

Bob Smith '48 of the '47-'48 Boulder group welcomed the visitors and expressed the hope that the colleges would continue to get together throughout the year. Smith explained that the idea of an intercollegiate banquet originated from a successful gathering tendered to Boulder Society by Middlebury's senior honorary society last year. The latter meeting was called in order to try to spot the vandalism between the two schools and in addition inaugurate an era of good feeling and good sportsmanship. The members of Boulder were impressed by the meeting and made plans to repay Middlebury's hospitality.

Following the dinner Walter M. Bronson, editor-in-chief of the Norwich Guidon proposed that an award be established for the four colleges and that it be awarded every year for the school winning the state football crown. Mr. Bronson added that the trophy need not apply necessarily to football but to any major sport or activity that the schools vie in. Boulder President Bob Hunziker and John Durgin endorsed the plan but pointed out that the present athletic schedules would have to be revised as the four colleges do not compete with one another in all of the major sports. It was, however, Hunziker who added a concrete way of expressing the rivalry between the schools and would serve to increase the already lively interest in state competition. Students from Middlebury and St. Michael's made additional suggestions and promised action on the Norwich proposal at their respective schools.

The remainder of the evening was given over to informal discussion.

Did Justice Triumph?

The settlement of the recent rumpus on the East Campus left much to be desired in the way of just treatment for the innocent. The blanket assessment of a fine, even though the sum was trivial, actually was a back door route to the solution. The property destroyers fared no worse than the young men, who at the time of the feud, were miles away at the home of their parents. The administration definitely did not treat these individuals with the respect they deserved.

If the present dormitory system was anywhere near efficient, the culprits would have been apprehended. Whether the administration or the dorm Einsteins made any halfway effort at all, to meter out the fines to the guilty is debatable. From all indications, the administration cared little as long as the money was collected.

The administration has definitely set a bad precedent. Destructive practices in the dorms are bound to reoccur . . . possibly again before the present quarter draws to a close. If the administration continues to turn their backs on the situation at hand, the new dorms will be in shambles within a decade.

There undoubtedly are at least three flaws in the present system of handling the dorms which should be corrected as soon as possible. First of all, the dorm tutors should be older than the occupants themselves. Taking orders from someone your own age or even younger, is one setup that most people have a rough time getting accustomed to—particularly if the individuals concerned are in their late teens.

Secondly, the dorms should not be only for incoming freshmen. The lack of the influence in the new buildings is very noticeable. Youngsters, fresh out of secondary school, have a tendency to align themselves with the pseudosophisticated, "know-nothing, fear nothing," blowhards with the purpose in mind that only through this friendship will great honors be bestowed upon them.

Finally, the administration and the dorm tutors must bear down upon the property-destroyers. In the future, the changing viewpoint of the innocent bystanders toward the administration will far outweigh the loss of three or four of the ringleaders through expulsion.

Letter To Editor

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

A few weeks ago, John Adams wrote an editorial advocating the abolition of final exams. He offered as reasons the propositions that quizzes and hour tests are measurement enough of the student's knowledge of the subject, and that finals have become a fruitless week of misery. Since I am only a freshman I have a rather limited outlook, but the following considerations have given me the opposite belief.

1. The much-publicized weeping and wailing which accompanied the overdose of hour exams last fall, when there were no finals.

2. The fact that I have a better grasp of the material presented last winter than that of last fall, since the final exam made me review all the quarter's materials.

3. I have found that it is harder to prepare for an hour test than for a final. This is because there is no period like Dead Week, where there are no tests and there should be no advance assignments, before the hour test.

A student's knowledge of his subject depends on his ability to gather in all the material presented, put it together, and apply it. If the material has no application it is useless and soon forgotten. This ability to integrate and apply the material can be tested only by a final exam tests the ability to apply the material, and quizzes check up on the assigned work, I can see no logical reason for hour tests.

Visit To New York Nets Dividends To Economic Seniors

Textile and clothing seniors in the Home Economics Department returned Sunday from a field trip to New York City.

Among the many places there which they visited were the Butterick Co. to view especially the Sales and Promotion, The United States Testing Co. for their consumer service division, and the Brooklyn Museum for a Costume exhibit. This completed their schedule for the first day, Wednesday.

On Thursday they went to New York University, to the School of Retailing. At the School of Retailing the group had lunch with the dean of the school, Charles Edwards. On Thursday they also took in the Bureau of Standards at Lord and Taylors.

Friday's visits included The Parsons School of Design, W. and J. Sloan, and the publication Mademoiselle.

Miss Maryalice Kelly of the Home Ec. Dept. was in charge of the students.

The purpose of this trip is to acquaint the seniors with those different parts of the Textile and Clothing Industries which may possibly help them to get positions after they graduate.

Those who took the trip were interested in the following phases: Florence Davis, Textiles; Dorothy Dexter, Fashion Display; Ruth Erwin, Interior; Mary Hageman, Design; Barbara Hutchins, Design; Barbara Newlander, Textiles; Ann Tuttle, Design; and Catherine Wells.

Preliminary Examination Schedule

Check the following schedule very carefully. Report to the Registrar's Office in person immediately—

1. If you have two examinations scheduled for the same block.
2. If you have four examinations scheduled for the same day.

By vote of the class, an instructor may request the Registrar to change the time of the examination in a given course within the schedule providing such a change does not result in a conflict for any student or providing such a change does not give any student four examinations on one day. The deadline for such requests is Monday, May 17.

Military Science 3 and Military Science 6 will be examined in the Gymnasium on Thursday, June 10, at 4 o'clock.

No academic examinations may be scheduled previous to 8 o'clock, Friday, June 11.

UVM "Wallace For Prexy" Group Formulates Policy

Applied Psychology Class Interviews Intracity Populace

Nearly four out of ten Burlingtonians are of French-Canadian origin and almost as many are of old American, Yankee or Anglo-Saxon stock. This was found in a survey conducted by a class in Applied Psychology at the University of Vermont under the direction of Prof. H. L. Ans-all, 551 individuals were interviewed in their homes between April 12 and 15; thirty students acted as interviewers. The people to be interviewed were selected as a representative sample of the population of Burlington by taking every twentieth name from the street section of Manning's 1948 Directory of the City of Burlington. Some of the results which are of general interest are as follows:

The national or ethnic origins of all Burlingtonians show this composition: French-Canadians, that is people who consider themselves primarily of French-Canadian, French, or Franco-American origin, 38 percent; Yankees, that is those who consider themselves primarily of English, Scotch, or English-Canadian origin, 37 percent; Irish 17 percent; Jewish 3 percent; Italian 2 percent; German 1 percent; others, including Greek, Lebanese, Syrian, Swiss 2 percent.

To some, large percentage of French-Canadians found in the present survey may seem surprising. After all, the city and its life do not seem to reflect this situation. The answer is that the Burlingtonians of French-Canadian origin are as much American as the rest of the population. For example, the present survey shows that only one out of ten French-Canadians prefers the French-Canadian radio stations, while all the rest like the American stations the best.

The survey also gives some information regarding the economic status of Burlingtonians. Two percent were classified by the students as wealthy, living in the very best sections of the city in houses of nine rooms or larger, with servant quarters, etc. Twenty-two percent were considered prosperous, living very well, but not in luxury, in houses of eight rooms or less. The middle class includes 63 percent, primarily mechanics, factory workers, and white-collar employees. Only 13 percent were designated as poor, living in the worst sections of the town, in tenements or sub-standard houses.

Only 3 percent of the people are without radio, practically all of whom are over fifty years of age. As to telephone, 16 percent stated that there was no telephone where they lived.

Finally, Burlingtonians are friendly people. Only three out of 100 apparently denied being interviewed, while the remaining 97 percent told the students that they could call on them again some time they wanted to do another survey.

Tom Viertel Submits Editorial On Wallace

The recently organized U.V.M. Wallace for President Club has formulated their operative policy for the coming year and is now recruiting active members for the group. On May 14 and 15 representatives from the Wallace Club will present their candidate's policies and stand on present day issues at a joint-sponsored discussion by IRC, SCA, and SAC to be held in the East Hall Lounge at 8 p.m. The discussion will also include student speakers for Stassen, Dewey and Taft.

The Wallace-for-President group last week issued for publication an editorial, concerned with the life and political evolution of Henry Wallace. The editorial was submitted by Thomas Viertel and is published in its entirety.

Wallace the Man

The interesting thing to note about most progressive movements is the way they blend in with their environment. This is certainly true of the third party and Henry Wallace. Especially if we take this new party candidate and subject him to closer examination. In studying him we will find that he represents a definite trend in America. The trend from provincialism to internationalism. Today we find him as an advocate of better understanding between nations, a man who feels that democracy should be the all-embracing thing that Walt Whitman had sung of so often in his poetry.

If we look into his past we find that he was born a minister's son in the rural surroundings of Iowa. This environment is very significant because in some ways it was conservative and in some ways quite revolutionary. Conservative because the people in that area clung to the old Adam Smith idea of free enterprise. Yet this same idea had also some revolutionary implications. It gave rise to the Populist movement whose sole aim was to break up the big monopolies, to protect small businesses, and to check the railroads, whose exorbitant rates were one of the main grievances of the farmer.

Added to that was the religious aspect which dominated the Wallace family and which still influences the thinking of Henry Wallace today. Both those elements, the religious gospel of the "brotherhood of man" and the rebellious nature were the generating factors in the political evolution of Henry Wallace. His insistence that there should be "a quart of milk for every child" clearly explains his Christianity. His opposition to the vested interests of his country indicates a rebellious nature which grew out of the Populist movement.

Certainly there were to be changes in his philosophy. History clearly shows that large monopolies could not be broken. The Sherman Anti-Trust Act was an inadequate device as large corporations could find devious means of escaping punishment. Both Theodore and Franklin Delano Roosevelt found that the most effective way of checking big business was by means of government regulation. And Henry Wallace was one who subscribed to this idea readily.

Burlington Overseas Wives' Club Plans State Get-Together

All servicemen and overseas wives of the state have been invited by the Burlington Overseas Wives' Club to a state get-together to be held in Burlington, Tuesday, May 18, for the purpose of getting acquainted and establishing state-wide fellowship. The hosts of the occasion will be the husbands of the Burlington group of overseas wives. Fun, fellowship, and a good time are assured.

An enjoyable day has been planned. The afternoon program includes a tour of Burlington at 1.30 p.m. a state-wide meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Building at 3.30, and a get-acquainted tea at the home of Mrs. Benton Holm at 4.00 o'clock. The evening event will be a banquet and program at the Hotel Vermont at 7.00 o'clock. Governor Gibson and Mrs. Gibson will be guests of honor and will officially welcome overseas brides to the State of Vermont. Mayor Burns and Mrs. Burns will welcome the guests to Burlington.

The committee on arrangements are Mrs. Joy Major, from New Zealand; Mrs. Sarah Hanbridge, Scotland; Mrs. Mary Burns, Belgium; Mrs. Doris Flemming, England; Mrs. Lucien Thompson, France; and Mrs. Evelyn Duprat, Ireland. Warren Major of Burlington will be master of ceremonies for the evening program.

The day is planned to include all overseas brides who have come to Vermont to live and husbands, or any other members of the family. The Committee on Registration—Mrs. Elsie Dinwiddie, Belgium; Mrs. Grace Bray, Java; and Mrs. Kay Leary, England—are endeavoring to get word to every overseas wife. The cooperation of everyone is asked that none be missed. Names and addresses of overseas wives can be sent to the Overseas Wives Committee, in care of the State Y. W. C. A. Office, 138 Church St., Burlington, Vt.

The purpose of the gathering is to give veterans and overseas wives an opportunity to know each other and each other's family; to bring together overseas wives from the same home country for exchange of information from home and to meet visiting relatives from home; for an official welcome to the State of Vermont; to help Vermonters and these new Vermonters to know each other better; to make plans for a summer weekend outing when all members of the families can get together to really get acquainted with each other and with Vermont and Vermonters.

Dr. Kohler Gives Lecture On Perceptual Processes

Dewey Club Presents Famous Psychologist

Under the auspices of the John Dewey Club, Prof. Wolfgang Kohler presented a lecture on "The Nature of Perceptual Processes," Wednesday, May 5, at Southwick.

One of the world's foremost psychologists, Doctor Kohler is one of the founders of the Gestalt School of Psychology. During the years between 1922 and 1935, when he was doing his experimental work while professor of psychology and director of the Psychological Institute at the University of Berlin, Doctor Kohler made frequent visits to the United States and served as a visiting professor in a number of American universities. A member of the American Philosophical Society, the National Academy of Science, and a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, he has been a member of the faculty at Swarthmore College since 1935.

The Gestalt theory of psychology is widely accepted in scientific circles. The main thesis of the theory is that physical, psychological, and biological events occur through formed patterns and are all inter-related, rather than separate elements responding in a specific way to a specific stimulus.

In his lecture at Southwick on Wednesday night, Professor Kohler spoke on one phase of psychology—the perceptual processes. Stating that the mind-body problem (does the brain control the body or is the opposite relationship true?) has been discussed abstractly because of lack of knowledge regarding the processes of the brain. He called the argument useless until such evidence is found. One method employed in the psychological, as opposed to physiological, approach is the study of perception. New discoveries in figural after-effects have proved especially important. As illustration of an after-effect, Professor Kohler used a straight line which appears to curve in a direction opposite from the curve shown previously for a fixed period of time. This he demonstrated by way of a mass experiment, using slides.

Then Doctor Kohler proceeded to give some general information which would aid in understanding the problem. Among these points, he explained satiation, or the technical name for figural after-effects, which occur in patterns, provided that the object is detached from its background and stands as a separate entity.

Employment Service Formulates Program For Graduates' Jobs

A conference of college officials with representatives of the Veterans Employment Service and the Vermont State Employment Service was held recently at the Waterman Building, University of Vermont, to formulate plans to provide the graduates of Vermont colleges with a maximum of job finding assistance upon their entry into the labor market. Four colleges and universities in Vermont, Middlebury, St. Michael's, U. V. M. and Norwich, were represented at this conference.

Realizing the need for an expanded service to graduates because of the unprecedented number of students now enrolled in colleges and universities, it was felt advisable to coordinate the work of college placement boards with the services of these agencies to insure that every effort is made to develop, among business and industry, the types of jobs which will utilize the knowledge acquired by college graduates.

Under this expanded program the efforts of the college placement boards will be supplemented by the services of these agencies which will canvass all Vermont employers, by mail and by personal contact, in an effort to stimulate interest in the employment of college trained people and to develop suitable employment opportunities for them.

Complete information regarding this program and directions for registering can be obtained from Office of Placement at Room 104, Waterman.

Careers at GENERAL ELECTRIC

'PILE' ENGINEER...ACCOUNTANT...SILICONES SPECIALIST

for each, General Electric has assignments to his liking

General Electric is not one business, but an organization of many businesses. Graduates of American colleges and universities are finding that the 125 plants of General Electric offer opportunities to all degrees of specialists, all sorts of enthusiasms, all kinds of careers.

'PILE' ENGINEER

Quoting Dr. W. I. Patnode (Cornell '27) of the General Electric Nucleonics Project: "Seldom has the engineer been offered the opportunity to achieve greatness that is contained in the development of atomic power . . . The pile engineer must know radiation as the aeronautical engineer knows air flow, as the electrical engineer knows electromagnetism . . . There is work for more pile engineers."

UP FROM BTC

Donald L. Millham (Union '27), today the G-E Comptroller, is one of the many top officials of General Electric who got their start in the company's Business Training Course. BTC trains nontechnical college graduates for managerial accounting positions such as department comptrollers, division accountants, district auditors, operating managers, and treasurers of affiliated companies.

SILICONES SPECIALIST

"The field of silicon chemistry has only been touched"—that is the opinion of Jerry Coe (M.I.T. '42), now helping start up the new G-E silicones plant at Waterford, N. Y. Oils, resins, greases, "bouncing putty," and rubber having silicon as a basis of the molecule are now being marketed in increasing quantities, as they gain recognition for their striking temperature stability and other unusual properties.

Shakespearean Class Stages Three Renown Plays at Fleming Museum

Shakespearean Class presented excerpts from three plays Sunday evening. The scene above from Macbeth shows Calkins as MacBeth, Paul Kimball as Banquo, and Eschal Pixley and Helen Farrington as the servants.

It seems to be a justifiable axiom among college professors that a student would rather do anything else than write a term paper. Prof. W. B. Pope of the English Department is no exception to this unwritten rule. A final term paper was in order to complete the work for his Shakespeare English class but Professor Pope magnanimously promised complete exemption from this disagreeable task for those students brave enough to produce sections from various Shakespeare's plays. The plays chosen and presented Sunday, May 9, at the Fleming Museum, were the two comedies, "Twelfth Night" and "The Taming of the Shrew" and the tragedy, "Macbeth." Mr. J. R. Rooney of the Speech Department as well as Keith Calkins and Barbara Clark, both members of the Shakespeare class provided the capable direction for these selections. Inexpensive but completely adequate costumes were scoured up by Merle Moulton and Angeline Scutakes, also members of this talented class.

The first sections were Scenes 3 and 5 of "Twelfth Night or What You Will." As David Cox, able master of ceremonies, pointed out, Shakespeare was rather shaky on choosing titles and the "What You Will" referred to this infirmity. In Scene 3, the swashbuckling roles of the boisterous Sir Toby Belch and his drinking crony, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, were played by two girls, Barbara Clark and Martha Shaw, respectively. In Scene 5, which started with a hilarious "Lost Week-end" scene by Sir Toby, the heroine role of Viola was played by Dorothy Scott and the role of the beautiful, rich, but scornful Olivia, by Eschal Pixley; her handmaiden, Maria, by Rita Gilman; her man servant, Malvolio, by John Gilmore, and her court jester gayly portrayed by inie-like Marie Powers.

The second group of selections were taken from Act 4, Scenes 3 and 5 of "The Taming of the Shrew." A capable and properly shrewish Katherine was admirably handled by Margaret Rowell and the role of her handsome, clever husband, Petruchio, by Daniel Lareau. Scene 3 was the rollicking dining room scene where Petruchio is attempting, and succeeding, to starve the fish-wifely Katherine into submission.

The final selections were chosen, fittingly enough, from Scenes 2 and 3, Act II of Shakespeare's tragedy, "Macbeth." The lighting effects for this scene, arranged by John Gilmore, were particularly good with blood red footlighting and a single baby spot on the principal character of Macbeth, a role magnificently handled by Keith Calkins. One of the most vicious and unprincipled Lady Macbeths ever portrayed, was the final result of a grand performance turned in by Lorraine Lanouette. Banquo's role was played by Paul Kimball and the two servants by Helen Farrington and Eschal Pixley. Make-up for his and the other scenes was handled by Pamela Crandall, Peggy Harris, and Gladys Neiburg.

Behind The Scenes Of My Sister Eileen

By ALLAN LUCE

The Dramatic Club is presenting the 1947 Broadway hit, "My Sister Eileen," Friday and Saturday evenings at 8.00 p.m. May 14-15. I know "My Sister" quite well. It was just last summer that Eileen and I assumed rather intimate relations. I was a student at one of those Cape Cod Dramatic Schools. It was a good dramatic school with a maximum of expense and labor and a minimum of training. We got lots of experience though. The company was divided roughly into three main groups, each of which produced a play a week for the six weeks training period. Due to the fact that assistant directors, of which I was one, were at a premium, at one time I found myself deeply involved in three plays to be presented the same night!

Finally, after the directors had tried my group for three weeks "on the road," which means playing in barns and two-car garages to an audience of 50, they decided to try my dubious talents on a play for the home theatre. The play chosen for this august event was none other than "My Sister Eileen." I was very grateful for what I thought would be a restful respite from the noisy mystery thrillers I had been doing. At last I would be doing a play where only laughter would break the silence of the spoken line. That's what I thought. Within three days I found myself in charge of a thunder and wind machine, several lengths of rusty chain to be rattled, a sheet of galvanized iron, and a miniature cannon, all to be a part of that resounding explosion which forms so integral a part of "My Sister."

Everyone enjoyed working in "My Sister Eileen." It's one of those plays where lots of things can go wrong, and usually do, without detracting from the play one bit. As a matter of fact, several of our opening night mistakes were enjoyed so much by the audience that we left them in for future performances. For example, there was the hilarious scene where Ruth was supposed to leap out of bed. The bed had been made by an ex-naval officer who made it in his usual neat and trim manner.

As you can see, "My Sister Eileen" is one of the most hilarious of all comedies. It has a cast of 50 or more depending on the ambition of the director. It has a plot that would invoke a smile from the Sphinx and laughs enough to shake the theatre. "My Sister Eileen."

Entertainment Reaches High Peak As Owls Presents Spring Formal

Scores of College students spent a most enjoyable evening at the annual Owl formal on Friday night. The above picture shows several engrossed couples dancing to the strains of music furnished by the UVM Kittens.

The nest of the merry old owl really rocked last Friday night when the owlets held their spring formal dance. The spring motif was carried by the decorations. A rock garden was built complete with May flowers, mosses, miniature trees, and a dark, deep pool with glittering goldfish. A flagstone walk sauntered through the glade. This pastoral masterpiece was engineered by Dick Bohlen.

Windy Parker was the wheel behind the whole affair and is to be congratulated. Schuyler Burton was in charge of decorations and succeeded very well. Somehow he persuaded the brethren to scrub off all the layers of floor wax and lo and behold wood was found. Music was furnished by The UVM Kittens. Refreshments were served to hold body and soul together. Bill Plankey poured. Ken Piefee endeavored to teach the noble art of cube rolling and succeeded in losing 90 cents.

Stan King took posed and candid snapshots of the affair and rumor has it that he is planning to make his first fortune through blackmail.

Many celebrities were present. Donald Brothers and Donald Perkins both used the dance as their debut into society. Both came flawlessly attired in Tux coats, flowered vests, alabaster linen shirts, fetching bow ties, and black patent leather shoes.

Most of the men had the new cuff line two inches longer than the trouser crease to break at the line and lend a bold look to the ensemble. Style editors also noticed a trend toward more exposure at the neckline with turned-down collar style.

George Corsonnes was visiting house from Rutland. He brought brother Stradi as his guest.

Many of UVM's most gorgeous graced the ball with their presence. Your reporter met and was immediately dazzled by Nan Nelson, Pat T. Debbie, Cobb, Norma Carmichael, Stein, Joanne L'Hommedieu, Robbins, Barbara Ryan and many others.

"Major" Bronk represented the tary and lent discipline and dignity to the gathering. And speaking of the Professor Rowell and his wife with Burgess and his wife, kept watchful surveillance over the proceedings.

Bea Bombard came escorted by Morrison and his new Buick. The looked handsome and Miss Bombard stunning.

To wind up the affair the gold fish be sold and the money given to a cause, namely, the Lambda Iota Fraternity. The fish are genuine 14 karat guaranteed house-broken. Highest brings home the fillet.

And Bob has another good word for smokers. As Bob sings it, "I've tried a lot of different brands of cigarettes—but Camels suit me best."

Try Camels on your "T-Zone"—T for Taste... T for Throat. See for yourself why, with Bob Eberly and countless other smokers who have tried and compared, Camels are the "choice of experience."

And here's another GREAT RECORD!

Fraternity-Sorority Initiations and Formals Dominate Social Scene

ALPHA CHI OMEGA
Thanks to Jane Robbins, and all the pledges, the pledge tea was a huge success Saturday, April 10. Mrs. Sanford, Marjorie Nelson, and Mary Lib Young poured tea.

Charlotte Raymond, who recently received an open bid, was formally pledged Monday night. Following the ceremony Dr. Stoehr of St. Michael's College was the guest of the Alpha Chi monthly cultural meeting. After Dr. Stoehr's departure, Stan King took photos of the group and an informal dessert hour was enjoyed by all.

The initiation banquet at Happy Acres, April 26 was a big success. Jay Brackenridge was chairman of the committee in charge, and Elizabeth Buzzell acted as toastmistress. The following girls were initiated: Lynn Shea, Jean Austin, Betty Division, Shirley Dennis, Elouise Farnsworth, Peggy Fisher, Joan Ganou, Beverly Heald, Elaine Schmidt, Charlotte Smith, Elizabeth Whaley, and Dorothy Yalmer. Lynn Davis, Shirley Dennis, Mary Lib Young, Marge Nelson, and alumnae advisor, Marge Perrin were the speakers for the evening.

Kathy Eaton and Jay Brackenridge attended the Student Union Conference at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst last week-end.

Boston has been playing host to Alpha Chi lately. Irene Socinski attended the Newman Club Conference there April 10-12. Debbie Cobb was in the city for a job interview last week-end.

Betty Whitney has secured the position of County Club Agent in Pittsfield, Mass., for the coming year.

Kay Carter is the new Home Economics Club president succeeding Dottie Dexter. Congratulations to all our new Honor Society members.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

The past week has found the A E Phi hard at work on their Peerade float. A mass of gals, cloth and numerous other materials gave the back of soror Sarah Cohen's house the semblance of a mad house! With all good intentions, the float at last was finished!

The University Intersorority sing finds the sorors practicing their best sopranos and baritone in an effort to place each member in the part she is most adapted to. A combination of fun and effort make sorority singing a source of enjoyment to all.

The news of our sorors' outside activities brings word that Leona Felix, one of the outstanding orators on this campus won first prize in the annual U.V.M.-Middlebury prize speaking contest. Leona has won first prize for the past two years and in her sophomore year, she took second place. Last year our soror was acclaimed the best woman speaker on the U.V.M. campus.

Added to the list of sorors is the name of Lois Rutstein '51, of Burlington. Lois was inducted in an impressive ceremony on Saturday, May 8, at the home of Mrs. Cohen.

Our Dean for the coming year, Adele

Kaye, has been elected Dean of the Pan-Hellenic Society for the same time. Congratulations!

The baseball team which beat D Phi E in last week's competition is scheduled to play Allen House next.

Soror Claire Orson has been chosen Publicity Chairman of the Dramatic Club for the year 48-49. She also will serve on the executive body of that organization.

Plans for the raffle will be formulated in the near future.

At this point, we extend our best wishes for a successful performance to the cast of "My Sister Eileen" and to our soror Esther Thomas who acts the part of Ruth, Eileen's talented sister!

DELTA PHI EPSILON

Delta Phi Epsilon is proud to announce the initiation of three new sorors, as of last Wednesday. They are Janet Hofstadter '51, of New Rochelle, N. Y., Ruth Kenner '51, of Burlington, and Pauline Klein '50, of Newton, Mass. Following the ceremony at the D Phi E apartment at 89 N. Prospect St., the new initiates were feted at the Above Par Restaurant.

Monday night Helene Shapiro '51, of Newark, N. J., became a pledge of D Phi E.

Elections were held at the last meeting and the following are the results: President, Carol Handel; vice-president, Marcia Osher; treasurer, Rita Fienberg, house and social chairman, Ricky Levine; secretary, Janet Hofstadter; and Pan Hellenic representative, Pauline Klein; and Good and Welfare, Ruth Kenner.

The Delta Phi Epsilon sorority was hostess to the members of Tau Epsilon Phi and Phi Sigma Delta fraternities on Sunday, April 18, at 4.30 p.m. The affair, a buffet supper was held at the sorority apartment at 89 North Prospect St.

Twenty guests were present, including Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Perelman, chaperones. Food committee consisted of Carol Handel, Marcia Osher, Ruth Kenner, Sylvia Morrison, and Rita Fienberg. Many thanks also go to Newman Rome for his photographic assistance.

The D. Phi E's are also planning a dance for the benefit of "Irvington House," a home run for the purposes of supplying medical aid to children having rheumatic fever.

DELTA PSI

Another trophy stands on the mantel at Delta Psi. The basketball team brought it back from a National Guard sponsored tournament in Barre. In the semi-finals the Delts were beaten by the Hilltoppers, tournament champs, 44-40, but came back to take a 47-37 win from the All-Stars in the consolation tilt. In the loss to the Hilltoppers, Scotty Ingram was high scorer for the Delts with 13, followed by Ralph Kehoe with 10. Ken Pierce paced the Delta Psi consolation win with 14 points, while Kehoe had 12. The Delta Psi basketball team had already won two cups this year, one for trimming the Kappa Sigs in the final interfraternity competition, and one for the school championship after walking over the winners in the independent league. The basketball trophies will be flanked by the interfrat skiing and relay trophies won by Delta Psi late last quarter.

This Monday the volleyball team emerged victorious in its league and the only unbeaten team in either league. However, the party Monday night was really in honor of Mert Ricker who is leaving to join the Air Corps in the near future. Another Delt has become a father. Warren Collins has a baby girl.

Bob Smith's return to campus is welcomed at Delta Psi. Bob has been out of school on account of illness since Kake Walk time, when he directed the successful "Riddell for King" campaign.

Not long ago the Delts had to content themselves with a second place in interfrat volleyball, a strong Phi Sig team took the cup which the Delts won last year.

Congratulations are in order for the boys from 61 Summit Street who received honors on Founder's Day. They are: Boulder Society, Scotty Ingram and Ken Pierce; Key and Serpent, John Ballard, Bill Dingerson, and John Phillips; Gold Key, Jake Bailey and Bob Herriott; Kappa Phi Kappa, Ernie Stockwell; Alpha Zeta, Lou Resi.

Among other honors for Delts, Scotty Ingram and Warren Jones were elected president and treasurer, respectively, of next year's senior class, and Guy Page has displayed outstanding forensic ability in his recent successes on the varsity debating team.

Spring cleaning is a rather prevalent custom in New England, but the Delts are doing more than just cleaning. Some of the boys have been busy with brushes and paint on the upstairs hall and the music room ceiling.

PHI DELTA THETA

New officers elected for the spring quarter are Howard "Duke" Reid as president, Bill Clossey as recording secretary, and George Ballou assuming the office of Scholastic Chairman.

Mickey Cochran and White Switzer have been welcome guests at the house recently. Mickey is now a testing engineer in Hartford, Conn., and Whit is working for a wool corporation in Needham, Mass.

This past Sunday saw the initiation of 11 men into the active chapter. The new brothers are Dave Banta, Greenwich, Conn.; Max Bliss, Bellows Falls; Donald Duclos, Burlington; Bill Dempsey, Dorchester, Mass.; Walt Fimian, Brattleboro; Dick Fink, Hasbrouck, N. J.; Bud Gleim, Glen Rock, N. J.; Sam Pierce, Pittsfield, Mass.; William Spreen, Hawthorne, N. J.; Harold Parker, Springfield; and Bob Sumner, White River Jct., Vt. A banquet followed the initiation ceremony to welcome the new brothers. Harry R. Gallup made a fine toastmaster, other speakers being "Duke" Reid, Dan Burke, and Walt Fimian. There were also many good impromptus from the seventeen alumni present who reminisced about former college days. The fraternity gives its thanks to the girls who so ably served the banquet dinner.

Founder's Day served to remind us that six men will graduate this year. They are Don Marburg, Torrey Carpenter, "Duke" Reid, "Chief" Flynn, Chuck Arliss, and Al Weess. Awards received at the exercises were: Sunderland Trophy to Mickey Cochran; Boulder Society, Bill Clossey; Key and Serpent, Dan Burke; and Gold Key, Dave Banta.

The Spring Formal, one of the most enjoyable of our annual functions, will be held this Friday. Plans for decorations are taking rapid shape under the able direction of Ray Comolli, George Ballou, and Ed Comolli.

Last but not least comes the "Peerade." The float, a pledge project, is under the direction of Frank Eklund and Ben Schwyer.

PI BETA PHI

Among the "newly-pinned" on campus are Sylvia Reynolds and Bill Hill. The SAEs came to the house and sang "Violets" Monday evening and after an exchange of sorority and fraternity songs the meetings were reluctantly resumed.

Our monthly "Open Houses" have been resumed, watch for notices of them on the bulletin board and in the "Daily Bulletin," and come from 4 to 6 on Friday afternoons.

The pledges, under the leadership of Jean Hard and Mary Ellen Fuller, gave the actives a picnic at Oakledge Manor where everything from hot dogs to ice cream cones were served. A baseball game helped to relieve that "weighted down" feeling that comes from eating too much.

Margarida LeSueur and Jane Atwood were chosen to represent the Beta chapter at the Pi Phi National Convention in French Lick, Ind. The convention will be held from June 27 to July 3.

Dean Simpson came to the Pi Phi house to speak to all the actives and pledges. Everyone was so engrossed in the discussion that two and half hours flew by before they realized how late they had kept Miss Simpson.

Old clothes have been collected and sent to Holland where the last packages were so well received.

Ann Stanger and Al Hruby announced their engagement on April 23.

Plans are being made for a car full of Pi Phis to attend Cap White and Hal Mayforth's wedding in Brattleboro on May 29.

SIGMA NU

Friday May 7, was the day of the Spring Formal and of much activity for Sigma Nu. All through Thursday and Friday, Social Chairman Russ French and his cohorts worked over the two large rooms and the hallway downstairs and came up with a true May motif, including two Maypoles. The hallway sported an arch which set off a part of the hall for dancing and another for coats and wraps.

In the evening, music and gaiety held sway to the tunes of Wayne Barrows and his fellow musicians. Each lady guest recieved a corsage of white roses, the flower of Sigma Nu, and a favor in the form of two Scottie dogs connected by a chain. Thanks go to Mr. and Mrs. Ruth and Captain Johnson, the chaperones, for helping to make Sigma Nu's Spring Formal the success that it was.

B. C. W. Reports . . .

By DICK CLOUTIER

My most sincere apologies for having neglected this column for so long. With the rush and excitement of being allowed to return to U.V.M. for another quarter, I have had time for little else. Then, of course, there is the inevitable homework which must be completed. However, I shall attempt to make up for lost time in this issue.

The new dorms have progressed amazingly, you can now ride by them and tell at a glance which dorm is which. For over each door is printed in black-edged gilt letters, the name of the respective dormitory—a great asset to the visitors and students who were forever being asked "Which dorm is Buckham, Chittenden, Wills?"

Of late we have been troubled with chronic inebriety in Buckham and Chittenden with the rather unexpected result being a small feud between the two dormitories. It all started one evening after midnight. I was abruptly awakened by the sound of breaking window panes and crashing glass. This continued for some time and then finally abated. Inspection of the corridor the next morning revealed a rather unusual sight—approximately an inch layer of combination broken window and coke bottle glass covered the floor. Actually the damage to the windows was slight but the dorms took a considerable loss in coke bottles. This rather useless sport occurred at least twice more and then ceased. Whether the individuals involved ran out of coke bottles or the fuel which powered them, I do not know. Eventually news of this episode reached authoritative ears, and investigating forces swung into action. Soon we were notified of the assessment of a two dollar fine upon each dorm for damage committed upon University property. The majority of the men became indignant for this seemed a rather exorbitant price to charge 260 people for damage amounting to a fraction of that total amount and when not more than twenty were involved. So dorm councils also became active and the result was that if the dormitories would be responsible for the collection of the fine, it would be reduced to seventy-five cents. The moral of the story: "Students who live in University buildings should not indulge in intoxicating beverages and give vent to their energy by the throwing of coke bottles through dorm windows!"

The members of the Buckham Hall dorm council were again changed this quarter. Replacing Coolidge, Burchstead, Herriott, Knab, Lawrence, Lehnert, Levine and McCuin were Cram, Bryant, Crowe, Titcomb, Becker, Metraux, Snelson and Johnson. As usual Rich Harper presides over the meetings with Carl Puechl and Al Lowenfels in attendance. This council has done a good job during the year and is to be commended. At one of their recent meetings tentative plans were discussed for an outing to be sponsored by the dorm for members of the dorm. There will be inter-floor competition in various sports, and anyone desiring to challenge anyone else to wrestling, boxing or what have you, has only to announce his intentions. With good weather this function will come off Saturday, May 22. Refreshments of broiled steaks and the fixings will be served, the expenses of which are to be met by the dormitory fund.

As soon as more results are in from the softball games between the dorms, they will appear in this column. At present the only score available is between Buckham and Converse in which the latter was victor by a score of 9 to 8.

Now and Then . . .

By BOB RAY

Do you remember the gay nineties or the roaring twenties? If you don't remember those days just browse through a stack of dust-covered books at the library. In these books you will see many illustrations depicting the life of the time. One of these old books pictures the fashions which were popular about 1912. A copy of this same book was found in Normandy recently by a French fashion designer with the resulting regression of contemporary fashion. Other pages in this book show young ladies engaged in varied athletic activities. One of the more rigorous games which they enjoyed was called croquet. While playing croquet, some of the more daring young ladies turned up the sleeves of their blouses and exposed a portion of their forearm. They were the forerunners of that small band of suffragettes who fought long and hard to obtain the same rights for women as were enjoyed by men. Another sport which was quite popular was riding. Special dresses and skirts were used in this sport; some of these dresses and skirts were made with a small slit to allow more leg action. It appears that women had suffered long enough and were out to find clothing which was comfortable and useful. As new sports came into existence, new clothing was designed to better meet the needs of the participants.

The so-called "new look" of 1920 was not universally adopted, but it was quite acceptable for wear while partaking in games and athletic events. Women were beginning to obtain a new outlook on life due to this shift from pure fashion to comfort. This shift from more clothes to less clothes has continued down to the present, but appears to have met with resistance. Fashion has reached its peak and has now started to return to its former state. What will be its effect upon women's athletic activities at U.V.M.? At the present time there is a well-organized intersorority softball league, in full swing. On sunny days you will see these teams dressed in their "T shirts" and "shorts" playing ball on the lawn in front of Redstone. This sport provides much-needed physical exercise which is usually lacking in the academic atmosphere. What will be the picture in ten years if sports turn backward as have fashions?

The future of girls' softball is not particularly bright, but let us hope for the best. If you girls like your softball and other sports you must organize and defeat the Petrillos and Lewises of the fashion world. The only people who gain under the present conditions are the designers and the clothing manufacturers. Let's show the world that we like our sports more than the "new look"!

Notice

All organizations which expect to receive an allocation from Student Government for the year 1948-49 must leave their budgets in the Student Government box in the information booth at Waterman by Saturday, May 15. The finance committee will not consider any budget received later than this date. Extra budget blanks can be obtained at the information booth or from Jane Atwood.

Sig Phi's Holds Annual Formal

Sig brothers and guests prematurely ushered in the balmy season with their annual Spring Formal held Saturday evening, May 8 at Sigma Phi Place. Music for this eventful affair was furnished by the Catamount Sextet and arrangements for the dance were in the capable hands of Social Chairman John Goulet and his assistant, Bob Taisey who did a superb job of providing entertainment, favors, decorations, and refreshments.

Candlelight, spring flowers, and a huge lighted sign bearing the Greek letter of the fraternity and constructed by brothers in the Engineering Department provided a glowing atmosphere for sixty or more couples who attended. Pendant bracelets bearing the Sigma emblem were presented as favors to guests of brothers, grads, and plebs. Guests, Prof. and Mrs. F. D. Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Evans as chaperones for the evening.

Earle Randall Establishes New Mile Record at Champlain Meet

By BOB HERRIOTT

Anybody want to break the school mile record? Try running two miles back and forth to work every day. That's what Earle Randall did last summer.

Chunky Earle Randall, who Saturday set a new U.V.M. record for the one mile run by negotiating the distance in 4 min. 35.3 sec., is this week one of the main topics of discussion around campus, and so this reporter will endeavor to better acquaint you with him.

Randy, as he is known to his friends, grew up on a farm in Barton. He attended high school there and played both baseball and basketball, but never ran competitively—before coming to college. However, those many hours on the cow-paths didn't do his legs any harm and his rugged stamina in the homestretch may be attributed to just that.

Randy came to U.V.M. as a freshman in the fall of 1946, and was first noticed by Coach Archie Post while playing basketball. When spring came, he was out for track, and since the freshman rule was not yet in effect, he started running as a varsity miler.

His first race was against Bowdoin. Although he didn't win, he showed great promise by placing second. He ran his best race last year when he won against Middlebury in the time of 4:42.1.

Randy really began to hit his stride last fall as he led the field for the Green and Gold harriers in three of their four meets, and garnered his first record by breaking the Middlebury course cross-country record in the last meet of the season.

In the opening engagement of the current season against Bowdoin he lowered his own early spring time by taking the mile in 4:47, and then went on to lower it further by hitting the tape in 4:44.3 against Colby. In both races he was setting his own pace and was literally running his own race, but Saturday he matched Bob Frynre of Champlain, step for step, for the first three and one-half laps and then cut him down with his driving sprint in the homestretch to establish the new school record.

In the eyes of his coach, Archie Post, Randy is a game competitor and possesses those characteristics necessary for a good runner. Coach Post says, "Earle is a good worker, has no bad habits, trains very carefully, and thinks enough of the sport and his team to hurt himself for this benefit. He has the fundamental physical make-up for a runner, plus a great desire to really accomplish something. I never have to worry about him not being eligible, for he knows what he is in college for."

These are the words of his coach, the man who has worked with him these two years, and knows him best, yet oddly enough, they are also the words of the man who twenty-three years ago, while also a sophomore at U.V.M. set the old record. For it was Coach Archie Post who held the old mark set back in 1925. No one's opinion of an athlete counts more than that of his coach and Randy certainly rates high in this department.

Randall is now a sophomore and has two more years of eligibility. He is studying Agricultural Education and plans to teach after graduation. In the meantime, he has many more races to run before he hangs up his spikes, and no matter what the field is like, or where he is running, you can always count on him to give his best. He's not the type to rest on his laurels—he's always in there striving to do better, for himself and for the team.

From a snack to a meal with a home appeal.

Don McCuin Leads Frosh To 2-0 Win As Clarkson Falls

It took two unearned runs in the first inning to do it, but nevertheless when the Frosh left New York State last week they had handed a Clarkson Frosh baseball nine its first defeat in two seasons and had stretched their own victory list to three straight. It was Lefty Don McCuin on the mound for the Kittens, making his second consecutive start and turning in his second consecutive shut, as the Kittens won 2-0. Big Bill McGinty, another southpaw, hurled for the home forces and outside of that fateful first inning he had everything well under control.

McCuin gave up eight hits in going the route and at times it looked as though he might not make it all the way, but three snappy infield double plays, and some heads-up playing by the outfield kept the shutout intact.

Dick Webster, leading off in the first inning, started things rolling with a sharp single to right field. Ed Guiliani followed with a sizzler down to third and when the third baseman muffed the play both men were safe, Webster on second and Guiliani on first. Cubby Goulet then singled to right and the sacks were loaded. Dom Cote, the clean-up man, struck out. Andy Smith hit a sharp grounder to the short-stop who made the play at second, cutting down Goulet, but the first baseman dropped the relay on the attempted double play, allowing Webster to score from third and putting Guiliani on third. On the first pitch to Jengo, the next batter, Smith broke for second in an attempted steal. The ball arrived in plenty of time to nip him, but again an error aided the Kittens as the second baseman let the throw go through into centerfield, making Smith safe and letting Guiliani score. Jengo then grounded out to the first baseman unassisted ending the inning, but the damage had already been done.

Sports Slants

By SAM HOUSTON

Congratulations to the Athletic Council in making their first move to bring the Vermont athletic program back upon its feet. This writer a few weeks ago lambasted the athletic situation here on the Green and Gold campus, and one of the strongest weapons of the attack was the skiing situation. The Council this last week gave out the news that the University is now in the market for an all-time ski coach.

This step will undoubtedly raise Vermont's ski team out of the hole which it fell into this last winter when it failed to qualify for A competition and was reduced to B standing in this up and coming winter sport. It is good for the morale here at Vermont to see something happening and, if this policy which the Council has shown in their latest action continues, I am sure everyone will be much the happier.

Randall Looks Good

This last Saturday a short, well-built lad wearing the colors of the Green and Gold sped around Centennial Field track four times to set a new field record at Centennial in the mile run. The boy was Earle Randall, Vermont's ace miler, and his time was 4:35.3. This writer was puffing from watching the young speedster, but "Randy" only kept running after the record mile and shortly afterwards sped in behind his teammate, John Bellows, to take a second in the two mile. Congratulations to Earle Randall as well as the rest of the track team.

Speaking of that record, we notice that the old mark was set by Archie Post, who now coaches Randall. We are wondering whether or not Archie might not put on the spikes again and try to better the new mark—just out of curiosity.

Diamond Woes

At the time of this writing, the Catamount baseball team faces a poor season record, having only one game out of six. It would seem that the Cats were not too impressive, but the won and lost record is not the whole story, however.

Coach Larry Gardner has been getting pitching which is just short of superb from his two ace hurlers, Eddie Kotlarczyk and Johnnie Hoskiewicz. In the six games to date the opponents have yet to slug either of these boys. In fact no team has got more than seven hits from a Vermont pitcher. As to Vermont's hitting, it could be a more potent factor than it stands at present. It should be noted that the boys are hitting the ball, but as evidenced by three potential home runs which were stymied by spectacular catches, the opponents always seem to be there.

It should be a different story in state competition. Middlebury is out for its third straight state title, but with a short prayer this writer predicts Vermont to upset the straight dope and walk off with the state championship.

Weather Man Acts Up

This past week Vermont sport teams took a beating from ole man weather himself. The varsity baseball game with A. I. C. was cancelled, as were two tennis matches and one frosh baseball game which gave in to the rain, and muscles of athletes tightened up with the damp weather.

The tennis team seems to lack depth as Captain Hammy Livingston was the only one to win a single match in their recent tangle with R. P. I. The golf team, which is playing on an informal basis, took a match over Norwich this past week. Let us watch to see whether this sport is made formal next year as it should be.

Fraternities Take Field

Interfraternity softball is now underway with ten "out of condition" teams vying for top honors. Rain has cancelled many games, but many that have been played have not been recorded with Director Archie Post. Until these results are turned in, no standing can be published and adequate publicity can not be given by this paper.

It seems too bad that there were only a handful of followers to see Randall set that new mile record last Saturday. It would also seem that the student body should wake up and support their teams by attending home events if they expect the administration to cooperate in bettering the sports program. It is hoped that the new sports schedule which is being published in this paper from now on will remind you "sport fans" to attend a few games.

"I merely stepped out for some Dentyne Chewing Gum!"

"It wasn't the confinement that was getting me down, Guard—it was doing without Dentyne Chewing Gum. Boy, how I missed Dentyne's keen, long-lasting flavor. Helped keep my teeth nice and white, too!"

Student Government Notes

April 22, 1948

In the absence of Pres. Harry Miele and Vice-Pres. Thomas Hayes, the meeting was called to order at 4.15 by the secretary. The minutes for April 15 were read and accepted. Ed Costello's motion that Norman Dennis preside over the meeting was seconded by Al Pratt and accepted.

Al Pratt presented to the council the report of the CYNIC investigating committee. He reviewed the former staff set-up and the present streamlined system, indicated the need for a managing editor who would be trained for the editorial position, and offered the following four recommendations of the committee for acceptance or rejection by the council:

1. The executive council shall direct the Publications Board to approve no system other than the single editor type. The present CYNIC staff shall be unaffected by this regulation.
2. The editor-elect shall be a member of the junior class at the time of his appointment.
3. No publication of names of staff appointees shall be made until the Publications Board has approved the names and notified the council of its action.
4. The first issue of the CYNIC by the new staff shall appear during the first week of the second semester of the academic year.

The first two recommendations were discussed at some length by the council. Charles Carlton and Arthur Heald, co-editors of the CYNIC, John Adams, acting co-editor, and Joyce Viventi, a former member of the staff, contributed varied opinions on the adequacy of the present system and on the binding effect of council action. The motion was made by Bob Perkins that the recommendations be voted upon by the council. Bob moved that the first proposal be accepted; his motion was seconded by Al Pratt and carried by eleven affirmative votes. The motion that the second proposal be accepted was made by Lucille Wetherby, seconded by Peter Palmisano, and carried. Bob Perkins made the motion that the third and fourth recommendations be accepted; it was seconded by Karl Webster and carried.

Mary Jane Farnham reported on the publication of the daily bulletin. It was suggested that bulletin board confusion might be reduced even farther by limiting the size of posters and by having notices placed in accordance with the relationship of their content. Mary Jane agreed to ask Mr. Kingsley about poster regulations and to have them published in the CYNIC.

A complete financial report was presented by the treasurer, Jane Atwood. Upon consideration of the allocations to the various campus groups, Ed Costello moved that the athletic investigating committee look into the Outing Club's financial responsibility of providing for ski meets. The council agreed that no organization's program should necessitate payment of dues by students who have already paid an activity fee. The motion was seconded by Peter Haslam and accepted. Jane Atwood observed that Clause F of Section II of the Financial Regulations of Student Government is confusing and unnecessary. The motion that this section be deleted from the regulations was made by Lucille Wetherby, seconded by Dan Burke, and accepted.

It was brought to the attention of the council that each resident of Buckham Hall and Chittenden Hall is to be fined $2.00 for damage to the dormitories or property therein caused by a small faction. The motion was made by Peter Palmisano that the council be represented at a meeting of the dormitory residents and representatives of the administration. Dan Burke seconded the motion and it was carried.

Ed Costello moved that the secretary of the council be required to type an extra copy of the minutes each week and to organize a file of cut sections to enable a speedy review of past council action concerning any group or activity under its jurisdiction. The council approved the secretary's request for an assistant to help with this project.

April 29, 1948

Pres. Harry Miele called the meeting to order at 4.05. The secretary's report was read and accepted.

Concerning the attempt to secure a campus post office, President Miele reported that government officials have informed Mr. Kehoe of their willingness to establish a postal unit in the Waterman Building to be apart from the Book Store and operated by postal officials. Both the post office and the barber shop planned by the council are being held up by the lack of space in Waterman.

The motion was made by Ed Costello that appointments to Student Government sub-committees be postponed for one week. Al Pratt seconded the motion, and it was accepted.

Peter Haslam stated that the outcome of a meeting of the students of Buckham Hall and Chittenden Hall was an agreement to assess each resident seventy-five cents, payable until May 10; after that date, each student shall be required to pay two dollars. The original fee of two dollars was justified by Mr. Grow by reference to the total damages incurred to University property since last fall and on the theoretical grounds that such a sum might alter the attitudes of those assessed. Mr. Grow has accepted the decision of the students that the fee should be seventy-five cents with the feeling that by naming such an amount they have indicated a realization of their obligation to the University.

The misuse of the Student Government office was discussed at length. It was decided that before restricting the use of the room the present system should be supported by a rigid check on persons signing out for the office key. The secretary was instructed to secure locks for the files.

David Hagar, president of the Outing Club, explained to the council that the responsibility of that club to sponsor meets necessitates greater financial responsibility than if that responsibility were assumed by the athletic department. He stated that Outing Club dues enabled it to reduce prices on the ski bus and transportation for hiking groups. Al Pratt's athletic investigating committee agreed to confer with Outing Club representatives on the matter.

The meeting was adjourned at 4.30.

38 UVM Students Accepted For 'Marshall Plan In Action Course' This Summer

With the recent announcement of the complete list of students accepted for the Marshall Plan in Action course in Europe this summer, hopes and expectations are running high among the 38 U.V.M. students who will be able to take advantage of this unique educational opportunity. The chance to study at first hand the confused European situation as proved to be a big inducement in the desire of these students to study in Europe this summer.

To learn the viewpoint of the people themselves, to be able to judge for one's self the daily headlines, to get a picture of world events as they appear across the sea are of course goals of the plan. In addition, the opportunity to visit the famous places and to enjoy a vacation of travel while accomplishing a worthwhile project, are the expectations that will be fulfilled.

A total of 293 men and women have been accepted for the course. They represent a geographical distribution covering the entire nation, reflecting the nationwide interest shown in the advantages offered in this undertaking. The largest single group is made up of teachers under the New York Board of Education but the most part only a few have been chosen from any one source.

The fortunate U.V.M. students who will be making the trip are the following: Edward Aaron, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Martha Attridge, Burlington; Arthur Camire, Barre; Helen Cayce, St. Paul, Minn.; Daniel Doheny, St. Albans; Mary Downey, Nashua, N. H.; Harold Fitts, Burlington; Joanne Goulart, New Bedford, Mass.; Joanne Howard, Williamsburg, N. Y.; Wallace Johnson, Worcester, Mass.; Stanley Kaufman, Burlington; Jacob Krulfeld, Morrisville; Christa Latham, Milton; Betty-Rose Levy, New York; Bernard Lippman, Plainfield, N. J.; Burton MacDougall, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Norman J. McGeogh, Brighton, Mass.; Russell Martin, Springfield; Harry Miele, Randolph; Ellen Page, Burlington; David Partridge, Proctor; James Petersen, Salisbury; Carl Proper, Pittsfield, Mass.; Barbara Purdy, Washington, D. C.; George Pynn, Eau Claire, Wis.; Edward Reid, Barre; Dorothy Ross, Barre; Malcolm Severance, Colchester; Arthur Sikora, Burlington; Loretta Sims, Fords, N. J.; Mary Smith, Cockettsville, N. J.; Robert Taisey, North Troy; Lillian Tucker, Alexandria, Va.; Wilfred Vercoe, Barre; William Washington, Rock Tavern, N. Y.; Rodman Whitman, Richford; William Wright, Burlington; Mary Young, Rutland.

Lutheran Students To Join National Group

The Lutheran students on campus met at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Holm on North Willard Street to discuss plans for organization during the coming year. The group decided to become a definite part of the Lutheran Students of America Association, and join in the activities of other Lutheran students all over the country. It would include having some of the national speakers and attending national conferences throughout the United States. Edward Menkens, Audrey Barnard and William Korpi comprise a committee of the group, who are taking an active interest in the work of the LSA, and who have information on it.

After a brief devotional service and a mission period, Mrs. Holm served refreshments of ice cream, cookies and coffee which were enjoyed to the accompaniment of recorded music.

WJOY To Present Last In 'UVM Student Tour' Series On May 29

Such diverse activities as land classification in Vermont and the deliberations of the United Nations at Lake Success will be the subjects of the final presentations on the weekly radio program U.V.M. Student Tour heard over WJOY Saturdays at 7 p.m.

The land classification program on May 22 will present a discussion by Dr. R. M. Carter of the College of Agriculture and students of his Public Problems course. Part of the course involves evaluating and determining best uses of various selected parcels of land which are inspected by the students on a field trip over a 30-mile area. The radio broadcast will be a round-table discussion of this trip in terms which will be understood by the general audience.

The final broadcast in the series on May 29 will be devoted to the United Nations with emphasis on what political science students observed at Lake Success on the weekly trips organized by Prof. Robert E. Long, Professor Long will lead the student discussion.

The May 29 broadcast will complete a 13-week series over WJOY during which U.V.M. Student Tour has emphasized student participation in various off-campus trips of educational significance. The series originated within the Department of Commerce and Economics and has continued as a presentation of that department, although the majority of the programs have been devoted to trips conducted by other departments of the University.

Each week the program presents a new group of students, so that by the end of the series between 40 and 50 different students will have participated. In many cases the faculty member who conducted the field trip appears on the program, but the emphasis is given to student participation. The only person appearing regularly on the program is Mr. Robert Wentworth of the Department of Commerce and Economics, the originator of the series.

Last Saturday's program (May 15) was a discussion by home economics seniors of trips to various agencies in Burlington having to do with child care and development. Places visited (as a part of Dr. Viola Russell's course in Child Care and Development) were St. Joseph's Orphanage, the Elizabeth Lund Home, the Burlington Community Center, the Well Baby Conference of the Visiting Nurse Association and the Tom Thumb Nursery School. Mrs. Allan Kirkness, who is in charge of laboratory work in Child Care and Development, and the following seniors were the discussion participants: Barbara Hutchins, Gwendolyn Richardson, Mrs. Florence Howes.

A summary of the entire program series follows:

Mar. 6—Prof. Muriel J. Hughes and the modern Canterbury Pilgrims on pilgrimage to New York City to inspect medieval tapestries, cloisters, etc.

Mar. 13—Mr. Henry Carse and industrial management students. Program described the men and machines of industrial Springfield, Vt.

Mar. 20—The University of Vermont varsity debaters. Description of debating trips, methods of handling opponents, etc.

Mar. 27—Delegates to Conference on (Continued on page 8)

Bolognani Elected Health Council Pres.

Rita Bolognani '49 was elected president of the Women's Health Council with the following as her corps of officers for 1948-49: Vice-President, Eileen T. Molloy '50; secretary, Martha R. Samson '51; treasurer, Ruth R. Coburn '51; publicity chairman, Gladys E. Neiburg '49.

The meeting, which was held in Waterman 238, Thursday evening, May 6, voted to designate the first Thursday evening of the month as the meeting date. Many constructive suggestions were submitted by the members present, among them the idea of organizing consultation groups among the Freshmen to help them allocate their time as to study, rest and extra-curricular activities. The possibility and advisability of advocating the formation of a Health Council for the men on U.V.M. campus was also discussed. This matter will be given more thought at the beginning of the school year next Fall. Tentative plans were formulated in regard to a Sadie Hawkins day, early next Fall; and also the annual tag day to raise money to carry on the work of the Council which includes loans to women on campus for dental work, care of eyes, metabolism tests, x-rays, and such other emergency expenditures. These loans, applications for which are made through Dean Mary Jean Simpson or Miss Eleanor Cummings of the Physical Education Department, are granted without interest charge and are payable within three years after graduation.

Election of Health Officials and alternates representing each girls' dormitory will take place next Fall at the house meetings.

Several pertinent pamphlets and booklets were distributed among the members at the meeting for the dormitory bulletin boards. These covered such topics as "Heat Exhaustion and Sun Stroke," "Overweight and Underweight," "First Aid," "Be Ready to Save a Life," "What's Ahead on the Highway," and "Keep Accidents Out of Your Home."

NOTICE

To the Students in the College of Arts and Sciences who plan to attend during the coming year:

On or before Saturday, May 22, students who expect to attend during the academic year 1948-49 must file preliminary enrollment cards showing the courses they plan to take. They must consult the appropriate Faculty Advisor (see below) during the week of May 17-22.

While it is important for the administration to know the approximate enrollment in the various courses for next year, the principal reason for this preliminary enrollment is that it gives students the opportunity to consult with their advisors or the chairmen of the department in which they plan to concentrate, and thus to give more thought to their programs and to discuss them more leisurely than would be the case if they waited until enrollment day. Accordingly all students will be expected to think over carefully the courses they plan to take to be sure that courses required are taken and all distribution and concentration requirements met. Please notice carefully the following instructions.

1. Students will obtain blank enrollment cards at the Dean's office (the Pre-Medical Advisory Board will have such cards ready for the interview and Pre-Medical students do not need to obtain them in advance).

2. Those who are now sophomores and juniors in the Liberal Arts curriculum consult the chairman of the department in which they plan to do the major part of the concentration and the program must have his approval. Note carefully the requirements for distribution and concentration as outlined in the catalogue.

3. Freshmen consult their advisor or some other member of the faculty.

4. Pre-Medical students will consult their Pre-Medical Advisor; those in Medical Technology, Professor Crooks.

5. Please attend to this matter at your earliest convenience in order to avoid a last minute rush. It will be of assistance to the member of the faculty whom you (Continued on page 5)

Floats Promoting "Eileen" Attract Large Crowds

Kappa Sigs, AE Phis Win Second Places

Climaxing another highly successful Junior Week, Phi Delta Theta and Kappa Alpha Theta were named first prize winners of the "Peerade" of the fraternities, sororities, and the independents. Kappa Sigma and Alpha Epsilon Phi captured second places of the fraternities and sororities, respectively. A total of 13 floats started and every one finished. Seven fraternities, five sororities and the Independents were represented. A brief résumé of the floats follows in the order of the "Peerade": Phi Delta Theta's float consisted of a float adorned with foliage and a Middlebury Coed. Its slogan was: "If you think I'm cute, come see 'My Sister Eileen'."

The Tri Delts portrayed two girls with theatrical aspirations arriving in the big city with their suit cases, their eyes glued on Broadway.

Delta Psi presented a life-like replica of the famous "Humphrey" and his traveling contraption, who had come all the way to see "Eileen."

Kappa Alpha Theta showed young ladies attired in evening gowns and being attended by girls in tuxedos.

All of Kappa Sigma was under a gigantic, serpentine, monster, "worming his way" to see "Eileen."

Alpha Chi presented two elves waiting on a dummy king and very much amused by the abundance of laughs in the play.

Sigma Nu's offering was a huge mermaid, complete with upturned tail who proclaimed to all that "there was one better than our Mermaid Queen, come see 'My Sister Eileen'."

Pi Phi presented two girls who had gone to see "Eileen" and were now "painting the town red."

SAE presented a mechanically-turning platform on which two balloon-headed figures were revolving.

Alpha Epsilon Phi presented a "typewriter" which, at the touch of the operator and in conjunction with the "space bar," spelled out "My Sister Eileen."

The Independents showed a conglomeration of typical scenes in New York, including a rowboat scene, the sister's arrival, etc.

Sigma Phi presented a billboard, extolling "Eileen," while in the process of being set up.

The Owls presented a take-off with the lines "Come up and see me Friday and Saturday night" on the well-known theme. A rather loose female adorned the back of the float, while her "manager" sold tickets. This float even had police protection.

Alpha Zeta Initiates Fourteen At Banquet

The Alpha Zeta honorary fraternity held its annual initiation banquet at the Lincoln Inn in Essex on Wednesday evening, May 5. The banquet was held in honor of the 14 new brothers. Sherm Sprague was master of ceremonies.

The speakers were Deans Carrigan and Miller of the College of Agriculture, Dr. Robert M. Carter and Chancellor Kenneth Liggett. Dr. Carter became an honorary member. It was attended by approximately 40 brothers. The 14 new brothers are: Dr. Robert M. Carter, Jr., William Reid, William Van Scoik, Joe Metz, Gordon Farr, Alvan Lawrence, Allan Lawrence, John Page, Ronald Aines, William Farrar, Nelson Taylor, James Sykes, Albert Plante, Louis Resi.

"My Sister Eileen"

A scene from the dress rehearsal of "My Sister Eileen," showing the three leading actors (l. to r.) Lyn Davis as Eileen, Tom Hayes as Mr. Appopolous, and Esther Thomas as Ruth. Presented last Friday and Saturday nights at Southwick, many people were turned away the second night.

Congratulations are in order to Combs and Severance, who directed last week's very successful Junior Week. Kudos to those in charge of the three components of Junior Week: the Prom, "Peerade," and, especially, the play. Judging from those turned away the second night, never could a college play have been more warmly received. The cooperation and the work of the Dramatic Club and its director and the skill of the entire cast were apparent at every moment. But there was a blot—a genuine one—to the utter consternation of everyone involved: the judging of the "Peerade" winners. Indeed it is a minor point—but how could five judges have reached their conclusions? The winners, no less, were properly stunned.

What is the "Peerade" primarily? It is a procession of floats to advertise the spring play. A float is "a flat-topped vehicle for mounting a display in procession." How, oh how, was a procession of barelegged men even considered—much less, given a prize? Or, if by some stretching of the connotation of terms, how did a worm become good advertising for a play? What is the judge's standard: "Floats . . . are to be judged on the following basis: Advertising value—35, Originality—30, Workmanship—20, General Appearance—15." Admittedly, a Middlebury coed has a very nice "general appearance," but where is the "originality," the "workmanship," "the advertising value?" Our U.V.M. girls, attired in their evening gowns, indeed, are worth all 15 points, but as far as "originality," etc. . . .

There were other floats. There were some that fulfilled all the qualifications. The hush that greeted the announcements would indicate the choice had not been popular. Notice might be taken of the fact that two of the judges are, coincidentally, members of one of the winning fraternities.

We cannot doubt the integrity of the judges—who certainly acted according to their consciences—but to prevent any grounds whatsoever of "bias," let there be in the future judges, who, of necessity, are completely disinterested. At any rate, the CYNIC does admire the temerity shown.

Letters to Editor

Dear Editor:

I have talked about Wallace the man and the various philosophies which embody his thinking. Many people have looked upon him as a man of lofty ideals but feel that he was impractical and unable to cope with pressing problems.

If one would look at the work he did as Secretary of Agriculture, one would see that he was confronted with difficulties of the greatest magnitude.

Chaos had reigned in the rural communities of the nation during the early thirties. Mortgages were being foreclosed, and farmers were not getting adequate prices for their commodities. A vicious struggle had broken out in rural sectors where the farmer was using whatever means available to hold his land.

Wallace, realizing the gravity of this problem, set out to limit the agricultural output by paying the farmers to produce less and to store up the surplus goods in granaries to use some of it for relief. His much criticized action of killing pigs was actually designed to provide meat for the unemployed and at the same time to provide financial means to the farmer so that he would buy industrial goods and thus provide jobs for city workers.

This way of trying to remedy the economic problem perhaps had many loopholes but this was the only effective action Wallace could take without injuring the capitalist system and I doubt if the American people would take any other type of solution.

THOMAS VIETTEL.

Dear Editor:

The proposed Selective Service Bill now before the Congress of the United States, at this date, contains no provision for educational benefits to men who will be drafted.

Many of us in the 18-20 age group affected will have our college training interrupted for such service. We feel that we should receive government aid to complete the interrupted education and further that such aid should be extended to qualified men who, at present, are unable to afford the cost of higher education.

Our case is based on the fact that similar benefits were given to men enlisting or drafted into the Armed Forces up to 15 months after the cessation of hostilities. Money spent for legitimate education is a sound investment in the future of our country.

We urge all interested students and citizens to contact their congressmen at once. We also request interested students or student committees to contact us to assist in a nation-wide publicity program.

Yours very truly,
WILLIAM M. PORTER, Chairman,
The Students Committee for Educational Benefits.

Dear Editor:

In this quiet campus of ours we vaguely hear the distant rumblings of the outside world; especially the incident that is going on in Washington.

Representative Carl Mundt has introduced a bill which threatens our civil liberties, a bill which is supposed to force members of the Communist Party to register with the F. B. I., a bill directed against so-called "Communist front" organizations, against any group or person which "knowingly" or "unknowingly" aids the Communist Party, against any interference with the "trade and security" of the nation.

In short, this is a bill directed against any person or group which is critical of the policies of our government, anybody who is concerned with the rights of minorities and aid to Palestine, and workingmen who sincerely wish to redress their grievances. It is a bill which would hamper our academic freedom and block our normal intellectual pursuits. As the paper goes to press, the bill will be on the Congressional floor. If the students and professors on this campus value their civil liberties, they should write to their Congressman, protesting against the Mundt bill.

Sincerely yours,
THOMAS VIETTEL.

Annual ROTC Review To Be Held May 20

The Witch's Curse' to be Given University Choir June 2, 3

Have you heard of "The Witch's Curse"? It all came about because Sir Murgatroyd, Baronet of Ruddigore, spent most of his time witch-hunting. The approved method for disposing of a witch once it was discovered, was to burn it at the stake, which wasn't very nice, but how else could one be sure of getting rid of a witch? Sir Rupert, a bit of bad luck with one particular witch, however, for in mortal agony at the thought of her, he screamed at him "Each Lord of the House, despite his best endeavor, shall do one crime, or more, once every year. This doom he can't defy, however he may try, for should he stay his hand, that day in torture he shall die!" and so it was; a long succession of Murgatroyds had each died in agony.

This is the background for the opening of Gilbert and Sullivan's operetta, "Ruddigore." The little Cornish village of Ruddigore possesses an endowed corps of professional bridesmaids who are required to remain idle, as there have been no weddings for at least six months. However, the arrival of a group of young officers, a welcome contrast to the village girls, delights the girls.

Sir Ruthven Murgatroyd, the true Baronet of Ruddigore, horrified by the responsibilities of his title, has disguised himself as a young farmer, Robin Oakapple, and his brother, Sir Despard Murgatroyd, believing him dead, has accepted the title. Robin is fond of the village beauty, Rose Maybud, but he is too afraid to court her, while she, a fortune teller, governs her life by a book of omens. Robin's foster-brother, Richard Dauntless who is just home from the sea, decides to win Rose for Robin, but she is more beautiful than he had suspected. When Richard fails to win Rose for himself, he goes to Sir Despard, the "Bad Baronet," and reveals Robin's true identity. At the wedding procession for Rose, Robin is about to start for the church, but Despard enters and claims his older brother as the Baronet of Ruddigore. Robin cannot deny his title. Sir Despard is free to love Margaret, whose wits have been crazed by his cruel treatment of her.

The second act opens in the Picture Gallery of Ruddigore Castle with the melodramatic entry of Sir Ruthven and his servant, Adam Goodheart, who obviously hate the life they lead, as they live to think of new crimes to commit. The pictures are full length portraits of ancient Baronets of Ruddigore. As the scene darkens and lightens again, the portraits of Sir Ruthven's ancestors step forth to demand a real crime; he must try off a lady at once. A complication arises when Adam returns with Dame Hannah, a former lover of the most recent of the ancestors, Sir Roderic, and the two recognize each other.

The solution to the witch's curse will be given on June 2 and 3, when the University Choir, under the direction of Prof. H. G. Bennett presents "Ruddigore" at Southwick Memorial. The cast for the operetta is as follows:

Sir Ruthven Murgatroyd (disguised as Robin Oakapple, a young farmer)	Morris Pike
Richard Dauntless (his foster-brother, a man-o-war's-man)	Ernie Stockwell

July 31 Deadline For Vets To Reinstate NSLI

Veterans have until July 31 to reinstate lapsed term National Service Life Insurance, in most cases, without taking a physical examination, Olney W. Hill, Insurance Officer of the Vermont Veterans Administration Center, stated today.

VA forms necessary for reinstatements are available at all Veterans Administration offices, and also are carried by VA contact representatives who visit itinerant points throughout the state.

Veterans have the privilege of reinstating lapsed term NSLI policies until July 31 by (1) certifying their health is as good as when the policy lapsed; (2) paying only two months premiums. If the lapsed policy is converted insurance, it may be reinstated until July 31 by (1) certifying the veteran's health is as good as when the policy lapsed and (2) paying all premiums, with interest.

After July 31, veterans must pass a physical examination before lapsed term or converted insurance can be reinstated, except in cases where insurance has been lapsed for less than three months.

Annual Mountain Day Trip To Mt. Mansfield Open To All UVM's

Plans for the annual Mountain Day trip to Mount Mansfield are well under way according to members of the Outing Club Council. This trip, like other Outing Club hikes, will be open to everyone at U.V.M. and the Council hopes that many students will attend.

President Cliff Havens disclosed that buses will be provided which will leave the Waterman Building at 9.30 a.m. and 12.00 noon so that those who wish to see the parade may do so and still go to the mountain. The buses will go to the Half-Way House parking area. From there the group will hike to the Outing Club Cabin. From this point they may take one of several trails: The Sunset Ridge Trail, Cowles Cut-off, The Old Hotel Trail, or either the Half-Way or Teardrop Ski runs. Members of the Council and other students familiar with these trails will be available to go with any group who so desires.

This hike will provide an opportunity for U.V.M. students to go to the highest point in the State, which is the Chin of Mt. Mansfield (elevation 4,393 ft.) and such other interesting points as the Hotel, the Forehead, the Nose, the Cave of the Winds, and Taft Lodge.

The Outing Club will furnish cokes to go with lunches which each student must bring himself.

Posters will be up this week and the Council would greatly appreciate it if interested students and faculty would sign up and indicate which time they would like to go so that arrangements for buses can be made more accurately. Further details will be in next week's CYNIC.

The annual public review of the University's ROTC battalion has been set for 4.30 p.m. May 20, at Centennial Field, as one of the first events in a two-day federal inspection.

Ranking among the oldest in the nation, this 81-year-old military training unit was founded in 1867 under the Land Grant Act fathered by Vermont Senator Justin S. Morrill.

Presentation of warrants and awards will feature the review, for which music will be provided by the ROTC band, directed by Dr. Joseph Lechnyr. Reserve commissions will be awarded at the June 21 University commencement.

Major W. O. Witherspoon, assistant professor of military science and tactics, has announced that award winners will be chosen on the basis of a series of competitive tests conducted Monday through Wednesday.

Reviewing officers for the battalion parade will be Col. Arthur S. Champeny and Lt. Col. Frank M. Foley of the First Service Command Headquarters, Boston, who comprise this year's inspection team. President John S. Millis of the University will attend.

Commanding the battalion is Cadet Lt. Col. Winston R. Jacobs, aided by a staff consisting of Cadet Major David B. Wheeler, executive officer, and Cadet Capt. John G. Gilmore, Jr., adjutant. Student company commanders are Capt. Robert B. Condon, "A"; Luton R. Reed, "B"; Robert I. Neiburg, "C" and Harold L. Loney, "D."

At the review on the first day of inspection, proficiency of cadets in military ceremony will be judged. Earlier, the inspection team will observe military science classes in progress.

Demonstrations on Friday morning, May 21, from 8 until noon, covering both theoretical and practical subjects studied during the academic year, will precede inspection on Friday afternoon of equipment and records.

During the demonstration period student lecturers will discuss a phase of the evolution of warfare dealing with the German attack on France in World War II, range firing, marksmanship training, sanitation, first aid, orientation and interpretation of aerial photographs, physical

Modern Dance To Present Recital May 21 At Southwick

Program Will Replace Lilac Day Exercises

The Modern Dance Workshop is presenting its annual dance recital on Friday, May 21. To be held in the Southwick Auditorium at 8.15, the program will follow the spirit of the traditional Lilac Day, which, this year has been discontinued.

The program is to take the form of a newspaper commenting on diversified problems through the medium of the dance. The first half of the evening will follow the general theme as to both subject matter and titles. Those taking part will be members of the Master Dance Group, the Dance Workshop and the Apprentice Group. The members of the latter group will become eligible for membership in the Dance Workshop as a result of this performance.

Conceived so as to have a true unification of all the branches of art, this program has used the resources of all of the artistic branches of the University. The idea was developed through discussions between Miss Ethel Hoffman, director of the group, Mr. Ippocrates Pappoutsakis, Mr. Francis Colburn, Mr. William Lane, Mr. Walter Hayes, and the Misses Lynn Derrick, Theresa Gay, and Joyce Viventi, with each making contributions in his own field. In the actual production, Mr. Colburn has arranged for the newspaper flashes, Mr. Hayes has composed the music for five of the numbers, and the dance groups have originated their own choreography in composing the dances.

The topic headings are to be "Depression Likely; Market Fluctuates" with Joyce Aberdeen, Shirley Dennis, Mary McBratney, Janice Rose, Betty Simms, and Joyce Viventi; "Local Socialite Trips on Her Own Ambition" with Martha Atwood, Beverly Barker, Suzette Levine, Nan Nelson, Suzanne Pooley, and Barbara Spaulding; "Billions Asked to Rebuild War Machine" with Julia Hurley, Miriam Peterson, Beatrice Moskowitz, and Valery Worth; "Mutual Accord Between Races a Possibility" with Barbara Jensen, Katherine Kidder, Barbara Larabee, Wendy Millington, Jean Ritchie, and Jane Smith; "Religious Thought of Many in Confused State" with Norma Colby, Theresa Gay and Nancy Tobey; and "Editorial" with Theresa Gay and Julia Hurley.

Following the intermission there is to be a program of general commentary on general themes, not intended to be a part of the main theme. These will include "Theatre News and Gossip" with Norma Colby and Theresa Gay, Mary McBratney, Betty Simms, and Joyce Viventi; "Girl Claims She Saw Vision by Lake" with Beverly Barker and Barbara Spaulding; and in conclusion, "Dances Done to Folk Songs" by Joyce Viventi. The dancers will be accompanied by Walter Hayes, Kenneth Belding, and Marvin Briggs.

Tickets for the Modern Dance Recital are now on sale in the Waterman Building and at Bailey's Music Store. Reserved seats will be 60 cents and rush seats 40 cents.

Prof. Says College Instructors Meet Astonishing People

Greencastle, Ind.—(ACP)—"After 15 years of lecturing in a typical small liberal arts college, one collects an astonishing array of interesting types. Several weeks ago, after a delightful dinner of crab-meat and pickles they all returned to haunt me.

"1. The athletic type—The academic processes hold no terrors for the hero of the gridiron. His fraternity brothers have a complete file of my lecture notes and examinations. It's a rare treat to find him in class. So nice of him to come.

"2. The playboy type—The morning after finds him in class in his roommate's shoes on the wrong feet. He drops his pipe but never quite recovers it. I hand it to him after class.

"3. The academic type—Probably the most objectional of all. The head is attached to the spine on a hinge and nods back and forth during the entire lecture and the mouth and eyes utter continually, 'Yes, professor, Yes, professor.'

"4. The negative type—All right brother, you put me in this class, now just try to teach me something. You would put me in the front row. I can hear him uttering under his breath, 'For gosh sakes let's get this over.'

"5. The lovey dovey type—Must be taken together for they are inseparable as two Siamese twins. Hearts and music, violets and poetry, these two love birds are majoring in Marriage and the Family.

"6. Camouflage—He always brings an armload of books to class to impress me, I guess. The boys are on to him, and someone is always picking on him. At the moment he's sitting on a tack and trying to get someone's feet off his back.

"7. The popular type—She had four fraternity pins this semester, three last, and spends her class hour twisting the ends of her beautiful hair. This little stunt is sure to drive any instructor insane.

"8. The wholesome type—Wears what every college girl should wear, acts like every college girl should act and talks like every college girl should talk—constantly. She's at it now.

"9. The clock watcher—I suppose she has wound her watch three times already. She always starts shuffling her feet and putting on her coat about 15 minutes before the end of the class.

"10. The sexy type—This would-be campus queen just loves the boys, all the boys, all the time. She doesn't care what the other girls think of her clothes, they're just jealous.

"11. The tardy type—Always bursts into the room in the middle of your most important statement. Of course, her seat is taken and the battle begins in earnest!"

DYKHUIZEN SPEAKS ON QUEST FOR GOOD

Professor G. Dykhuizen, Professor of Philosophy, was speaker at Chapel Friday. His address was on the subject, "Life is a Quest for the Good."

In giving some famous men's theories on the definition of what life is, he said, life is a quest for a maximum of pleasure and a minimum of pain, life is a quest for wisdom, and the definition most accepted, given by Jesus is that the abundant life is good.

He pointed out that experience shows frequently that the objects which we think good really aren't good. If our life is to have a maximum of abundance, we must discriminate between inferior and superior.

The truly educated person is one who is able to discriminate these points. As we look at the graduates from colleges, we wonder if they read only superior material, if they listen only to superior music.

Professor Dykhuizen compared the situation to our own campus. He said that in our Book Store there was not only classical books and reading materials for sale, but an abundance of inferior reading such as "Comic Books."

Also, in the soda fountain we find songs such as "Paper Doll" and "Baby Face" and not the music which is educational and classical.

Dykhuizen did not put all of the blame on the educational system, but said that a good deal of it rested on the individual student. The student must make himself enjoy the superior things and deny himself the lesser pleasures in life. It is the moral duty of each and every student.

Ritchie '50 To Visit Denmark This Summer

Jean Ritchie, a sophomore at U.V.M. and political science major, plans to spend the summer in Denmark.

The Experiment in International Living, Inc., whose headquarters is in Putnam, Conn., has made it possible since 1932 to send a small group of carefully selected students to spend a summer in another country. Each student lives in a different home with a family. Besides trying to make friends with the people, he is given the opportunity to learn the language, customs, and culture of the country. The organization's policy is "to create understanding where misunderstanding exists." A non-profit educational organization, its aim is to further the understanding between the students of this country and another. The belief of the organization being, that the best way for people to learn to live together successfully in "one world" is to let them go abroad and do it.

Groups going to France, Germany, Russia, or a Spanish speaking country are required at least two years of successful study in that language or the equivalent in coaching conversation. There are no requirements for the Scandinavian countries or Holland.

Jean plans to leave New York on June 17, and to spend approximately eight weeks abroad. She believes that she will live in or near Copenhagen with a family of the "upper economic bracket," which will afford her the opportunity to travel about the country.

She feels that it will play a valuable part in furthering her knowledge in her major field of study. She will not be an ordinary tourist, but by living with the people she will be able to get under the surface of their lives to see what goes on there.

Jean says that she is allowed to carry only what clothes and other essentials that she can put in an ordinary week-end suitcase and a knapsack. One of the requirements for the trip being, "experience in simple outdoor living." She expects to have to rough it.

This trip is without doubt an excellent opportunity and carries with it a store of invaluable experiences. Jean will surely be envied by many students when she leaves for Denmark in June. Best of luck, Jean.

Luce Views "My Sister Eileen" From Backstage

Recent assignments I have encountered in my post as CYNIC reporter all indicate a definite Napoleonic complex on the part of my boss. Instead of being content with the simple garden variety of reporting she has been going all out for the "exotic" and "different" approaches. One of her recent brain waves (or mental relapses, depending on how you look at it), was that I should cover the recent Dramatic Club production, "My Sister Eileen," from the wrong side of the curtain, a sort of a stagehand's view, so to speak. For this reason, a new face was added to the crowd of various kinds of humans and one or two animals which milled around backstage at Southwick last Friday night.

The most unusual thing about this unusual arrangement was the striking disparity between people's voices before and after their entrance onto the sacred precincts of the stage. For example, the marvel of Maynard North's usual Oxfordian tones managing to sound like those of the perpetually inebriated full-back he represented. Tom Hayes' usually suave, diplomatic voice took on beautifully the insinuating over-tones of the super-sneering Mr. Appopolous. The voice of Ruth Sherwood, played by Esther Thomas, took on the "caustic comment" tone used by actresses of the Rosalind Russell, Katharine Hepburn type. Marilyn Davis, playing her sister, Eileen, stood up under this onslaught with the soft, dulcet tones of the dumb, but beautiful, family beauty.

Backstage was the perfect picture of bedlam between each act. What with Russian Cossacks, six Brazilian sailors, various fruit and flower vendors, two pugilistic dogs, many glamorous stagehands such as Broadway never saw (including one leg-make-up artist) and Keith Calkins, stage manager, who was continually looking up stray actors, it had every right to be as bedlam as it chose.

Of course, all did not go absolutely well. Opening night without slip-ups would have been as mundane as a melo-

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Theta "little sisters" treated their "big sisters" to a picnic at Jo Buck's camp on the lake on Friday night, April 30. After a very delicious supper several Thetas decided to explore the rocks along the beach—with rather damp results. Ginger Hageman and Mary Babbitt were the major "casualties" who spent the remainder of the evening in front of the fire. All in all, however, everyone had lots of fun.

The next day, May 1, initiation was held for 11 girls. The initiation ceremony took place at the chapter house and was followed by a banquet in the Apple Orchard room of the Hotel Vermont. Toastmistress at the banquet was Mrs. Paul French. Those girls initiated were Joan Banghart, Douglaston, L. I.; Jeanne Farr, Westminster Station; Janet McDondrama without the villain's mustache. First of all, there was that demoralizing late curtain while the audience, bless their souls, settled down until intermission. Then there was that interlude where Ruth went to turn on the lights. When she was within about 10 feet of the switch and just beginning to lift her arm to flick it, the lights came on. It seems that the electrician had turned the switch on a second too early and the resulting scene was one that should have been accompanied by an oboe playing "Orientale." Ruth looked quite naturally astounded, swallowed her giggle, and went on with the scene. All in all, however, "My Sister Eileen" was the most hilarious Dramatic Club selection of recent years and great praise should go to its director, Ronald H. Humphrey, and the actors and staff that made it a success.

Speaker for the alums was Mrs. Virginia Coffman Allen.

Men Be Popular Read These Rules

Bowling Green, Ky.—(ACP)—“There’s a few important rules about the cutting-in-system that everyone should know. Never cut in again the minute the girl has been snatched from you. Dance with someone else first.

“Don’t argue if someone cuts in on you. Let the girl go for the minute. You can cut back later.

“Don’t push, shove, grab, or deliver a knockout blow when cutting in. A tap on the shoulder, a smile, or ‘please, may I,’ is enough of a signal.

“At a public dance or one where girls may be unescorted, there are also several rules to remember. Be careful to see if a girl came with an escort before asking her to dance. If she didn’t it is perfectly proper to introduce yourself and ask for a dance. But if she did, you should ask the escort to introduce you to her. After you’ve danced with an unescorted girl, you may take her back to the place you found her, thank her for the dance, and excuse yourself. Don’t ever leave her standing in the middle of the floor.

“Don’t try to force a name or address out of a girl. If she is unescorted and you’d like to take her home, you can tell her so, but chances are you won’t make first base by trying to command the situation.

“Here’s one sure tip. Don’t try to keep up a steady stream of conversation while you dance. You don’t have to talk at all. Act as though you were so entranced with the girl, the music and the movement that words fail you. Your dancing will be better, too.

“Never carry a lighted cigarette on the dance floor and don’t smoke in the dance hall unless it seems to be the general practice, and even then, it’s a questionable social practice.

“Loud talking, boisterous laughter and kiddish cutting-up are out of place at any dance. Very frequently rowdy actions reflect on all of your associates, your family and your organization. Make a good impression on people—don’t be a roughneck.”

Commander Fletcher emphasized the necessity for making immediate application as the initial class opens July 1, 1948, at Pensacola, Fla.

Student Government Notes

May 6, 1948

The meeting opened at 4:07 with the secretary’s report accepted as read.

Al Pratt reported that the Outing Club will not include the expenses of a ski meet in its budget for next year. The ski meet will be held during Kake Walk week-end and therefore will be financed as are other Kake Walk activities.

President Miele announced the following as the winners of the Student Government scholarships: Kenneth Pierce ’49, Dorothy Ross ’49, Robert Burns ’50. The secretary relayed to the Council an expression of appreciation from Dorothy Ross.

The Council next considered appointments to its various subcommittees.

Mary Jane Farnham, chairman of the Social Committee, explained that since that committee performs the duties of the former Cultural Committee as well as its own, at least five members are needed. Ed Costello made the motion that the three present members, Mary Jane Farnham ’49, Mary Ellen Fuller ’51, and Frank Peabody ’50 (council member), remain on the Social Committee for the coming year. The motion was seconded by Norman Dennis and accepted. In addition, the following students were appointed: Robert Taisey ’50, William Towne ’50, Jean Van Hynning ’49.

Appointments to the Freshman Orientation Committee are as follows: Shirley Dennis ’51, Dona Donelan ’49, Jean Hard ’51, Robert Ray ’50, Leonard Tomat ’50. This committee is to be divided into two groups, one to organize Freshman Orientation Week and one to publish the Freshman Handbook. Karl Webster’s motion that two council members be named to this committee was seconded by Dan Burke and accepted. Lucille Wetherby ’49 and Karl Webster ’49 were selected.

Vincent Richards ’50 and Nancy Stell ’52 were appointed to the Pep Committee. Al Pratt ’50 represents the Council on this committee.

Peter Haslam ’51 was elected from the Council to serve on the Religious Life Committee. The other appointees are: Mary Ellen Fuller ’51, Bailey Goldberg ’50, William Gould ’49, Wallace Lash ’50, Marshall Sabens ’50.

Bob Smith explained that the Athletic Board of Control plans and conducts a program of intramural sports. Patrick Farma ’50 and Robert Herriot ’51 were elected to serve on this board with Stan Ursprung ’50 of the Council. The apparent non-existence of the Athletic Council composed of students, faculty, and alumni, was referred to the Athletic Investigating Committee.

Discussion of the Finance Committee opened with a motion by Ed Costello that the sub-treasurer be insured voting power both as a member of the committee and as a member of the Council. The motion was seconded by Dan Burke and accepted.

Tom Hayes moved that the Finance Committee be composed of the president of Student Government, the treasurer, the sub-treasurer, and two members of the student body. The motion was seconded by Ed Costello and carried. Martha Atwood ’51 and Joseph Waterman ’49 were appointed to the committee.

The secretary informed the Council that the National Student Association has requested information concerning the curriculum guidance program at the University. Al Pratt moved that the student questionnaires sent by NSA be given to the Social Committee for distribution and collection. The motion was seconded by Tom Hayes and accepted.

Ed Costello made the motion that Student Government appropriate $600 from next year’s treasury for six equal scholarships similar to the three awarded this year on the basis of need, scholarship, and extra-curricular activities, in that order of importance. Stressing the lack of scholarships, especially for students maintaining an average between eighty and eighty-five percent. Tom Hayes seconded the motion, and it was accepted unanimously.

The meeting was adjourned at 5:55.

Respectfully submitted,
JANE SMITH,
Secretary, U.V.M. Students.

PROGRAM TO AID DISABLED VETERANS

G. I. readjustment allowances are not intended as summer vacation pay, according to a recent announcement of the Vermont Unemployment Compensation Commission. Student veterans must be actually in the labor market—able and willing to take suitable work—it was pointed out, in order to qualify for these allowances.

“Between school terms and during vacation periods, veterans may be eligible,” William L. McKee, Division Director for the Commission, said. “But these unemployment allowances are not available to finance summer vacations. The veteran must be actively seeking work and registered with a public Employment Office.”

The Commission, which supervises the readjustment allowance program for the Veterans Administration, also must prevent concurrent payment of subsistence and readjustment allowances, McKee emphasized. Veterans cannot draw both types of payments at the same time. Since readjustment allowances are paid on a weekly basis, he explained, this means that if subsistence is paid for even one day during any week, no readjustment allowance for that week is valid.

Full information on readjustment allowances may be obtained from any of its local offices, the Commission stated.

Cats Lose Heartbreaker in 13th to Mass. 3-2

Cats Blow Lead In Eighth To Horsemen Hoskiewicz Injured; Out Rest of Season

The University of Vermont Catamounts blew a two-run lead in the eighth inning and then fell apart altogether in the ninth to hand Norwich University a 5 to 2 victory last Thursday at Centennial Field. The Cats took a two-run lead in the sixth inning as Kotlarczyk singled and Jack Hurley sent him to third with the second straight single. Hurley then stole second and Bob St. Gelais singled both runs home with a hit to center with what should have been the two winning runs. Eddie Kotlarczyk was going well until the eighth inning when Murphy and Woodward opened the inning with straight singles. The Vermont pitcher here complained of a bad back and was relieved by big John Hoskiewicz. (It was later learned that Kotlarczyk had been pitching with a broken rib and as a result the Vermont ace will be lost for the rest of the season.) "Hosky" succeeded in retiring the next two batters and with two down there were men on second and third. Merritt then hit a ground ball down third base line which Flanders fielded flawlessly but his routine throw to first was far over Jim Turnbull's head and both runners scored to tie the game up.

Left Side Weak

In the first of the ninth the left side of the Vermont infield fell wide apart. Bob St. Gelais made two errors on ground balls and uncorked a wild heave which went to the screen on a throw to home plate. Flanders contributed two more errors in this frame as Norwich men were running wild on the base paths. Before "Hard Luck" Hoskiewicz could retire the side three runs had crossed the plate to send Norwich out in front 5 to 2.

In the last half of the ninth Vermont loaded the bases but Bill Dempsey popped out to end the rally. For the losers St. Gelais was the leading sticker as he banded out five hits for a perfect day at the plate. Vermont had a total of 14 men left on the base paths.

Winn Homers As UVM Loses 7th; Stimets Strikes Out 7, Walks 3

No Clutch Hitters Vermont's Downfall

A great mound duel was broken up in the thirteenth inning as Bill Winn hit a terrific clout 400 feet into right field for a home run to break up a long struggle and hand the University of Massachusetts a 3 to 2 win over the University of Vermont last Saturday at Centennial field.

This was Vermont's seventh loss in eight starts and was a tough one to lose. Each team spaced ten hits over the 13 innings and each had made only one error. Vermont's fielding was at its best and "Wendy" Stimets pitched well enough to win many a game as he struck out seven and walked only three over the 13-inning stretch.

Game Starts Slowly

Massachusetts got off to an early lead as they scored one run in the first inning. "Wendy" looked wild in this first inning and a bit weak in the third as he gave up two solid blows for the second run for the visitors. From the third on however, Stimets grew stronger and had the "Bay Staters" baffled.

Collier Leads Attack

The Catamounts started to retaliate in the fifth inning as Captain Art Collier singled to right, went to second on a fielder's choice, took third on an error and scored as Bill Flanders banded a single to right.

In the seventh Collier singled again to right. Stimets then attempted to sacrifice Art to second but missed the bunt. Collier was clearly caught between first and second but as the throw went to first Collier headed for second, stubbed his toe, and much to the delight of the home crowd went into second on his stomach safely. Jack Hurley was then robbed of a base hit as he lined one right into the hands of the second baseman. Bob St. Gelais singled to center however, and Collier sped home with the tying run.

Winn Shifted to Right

From the seventh on the game developed into an airtight pitching duel. Stimets seemed to look better as the innings wore on. Winn ran into trouble in the twelfth and was relieved after Flanders singled to load the bases. Winn who bats clean-up was shifted to right because of his hitting power.

Tom Winton came in to relieve Winn and with two out and the bases full he faced Collier who had already collected three hits. With the count of two and two Winton broke a nice curve ball over the plate and Collier went down swinging to end Vermont's last threat.

In the thirteenth with one away Winn came to bat and walloped Stimet's third pitch to the scoreboard to score the winning run. Winn was without a doubt the hero of the game. For the losing Vermont team Collier and Flanders collected three hits apiece. On the defense Ray Heath handled nine chances flawlessly and Captain Collier was outstanding behind the plate.

To say the least it was a tough one to lose.

Kittens Roll Over RJC 14-0 For 3rd Shutout; McBride Credited

By BOB HERRIOTT

The U.V.M. Kittens journeyed to Rutland Saturday for what was scheduled to be a baseball game, but what amounted to nine innings of batting practice and base running as they again slaughtered the hapless Rutland Junior College nine, this time 14-0. It was their fourth straight win and third consecutive shutout. Coach Don Maynard used two full teams for the game and between them they collected 12 hits. The first one, with "Doc" McBride on the mound, in his first starting assignment of the season, stayed in for the first five innings and then gave way to the reserves and Don McCuin, holder of the Kittens' two previous shutouts, in the sixth who finished the game. In all both pitchers gave up only three hits, all singles, as they showed complete mastery over the opponents. McBride was given the credit for the victory as the Kittens were leading 12-0 when he retired in the sixth.

The Kittens took advantage of two R. J. C. misplays and struck fast after Webster had opened the first inning with a strike out. Both Guiliani and Goulet were safe on errors and when Twiss walked the bases were loaded. Andy Smith then singled, driving in Guiliani and Goulet and the Frosh were out in front 2-0 on two unearned runs.

Five more runs came across in the second, two of them riding home on Cubby Goulet's double, as the Kittens made good use of three hits, a walk, and two more errors.

Another five runs were scored in the fifth on only one hit as Salebra, the R. J. C. hurler, became extremely wild, giving up five bases on balls.

In all R. J. C. gave up 14 runs on 12 hits, 10 walks, 7 errors, 3 wild pitches, 3 passed balls and 2 hit batsmen. The heavy sticks were wielded by Andy Smith, George Schofield, and Stan Fitts, as they collected two bingles apiece, while Smith, Goulet, Knab, and Fitts all hit for extra bases.

Student Government Notes

The meeting was called to order at 4.10. The secretary's report was read and accepted.

Harry Miele announced that President Millis would like to meet with the executive council and the honorary societies to examine the financial structure of the University. It was decided that Tuesday evening, May 18, would be the most convenient time for this meeting.

The problem of space in Waterman for a postoffice and a barber shop was reviewed once more. It was suggested that room 36 might be partitioned to provide for both establishments, that room 36 might be used for the postoffice and the Ariel office for the barber shop (moving Ariel work into the Student Government office), or that room 36 or the Ariel office might be used for the postoffice and a room in East Hall for the barber shop. Harry Miele will present these recommendations to President Millis immediately.

Tom Hayes initiated discussions of the CYNIC, the unfixed time of publication, the quality of material, and the general organization. He moved that the senior staff of the paper be asked to attend the next meeting of the executive council for the purpose of considering CYNIC policies. The motion was seconded by Sherman Sprague and accepted.

The meeting was adjourned at 5.00.

frank and honest, and aware of what is going on.

Senator Vandenberg, although not a candidate for the nomination, was presented as a man with the trust of his party, who is definite on his stand on foreign policy, experienced in legislative and executive affairs. It was stated that if Vandenberg were elected president, he would have the backing of Congress during his administration.

Henry Wallace, as the third party candidate, was described as a man who favors price control, wants taxes based on the ability of the individual or concern to pay, favors a long range housing program, considers the United Nations the only hope of international interaction, and is satisfied with President Truman's recognition of the new Palestine state. He favors federal aid to education and higher salaries for teachers. Public ownership of utilities and such industries as steel, aircraft, and coal mines are also a plank in his platform.

Following these introductory addresses, the discussion was opened to the audience, and questions arising from the preceding material were aired.

Talented UVM Choir To Present 'Ruddigore'

Five Vermont Colleges Organize Plans For State IRC Federation

Group Formulates Plans For Coming Conference

Representatives from five Vermont Colleges formed a state organization of International Relations Clubs at a conference sponsored by the University of Vermont IRC and held on this campus on Saturday, May 22. The purposes of the organization are fourfold: (1) to coordinate IRC activities on the individual campuses, (2) to unite in a bond of fellowship those students on Vermont campuses who are interested in international relations, (3) to provide a means of constructive thinking and action concerning world affairs, as well as an opportunity for practical experience with the problems and procedure of government, (4) to prove to the world and to ourselves that our ideal of coordinating and cooperation can be carried out in larger and larger groups. The formal organization consists of an executive council and a state assembly, the executive council to plan the assemblies and to be responsible for successful coordination of statewide activities. The first assembly will be held next October to draw up a formal constitution and to make plans for cooperating with the Vermont IRC in organizing and conducting the New England Regional Conference, which is to be held at U. V. M. next fall.

State officers elected were:
President—Russell Todd, Norwich University.
Secretary-treasurer—Margaret Fisher, U. V. M.
Corresponding secretary—Mary Cole, Middlebury.

Colleges represented were Johnson State Teachers College, Middlebury, Norwich, St. Michael's, and U. V. M.

Highlights of the conference included a welcome by Prof. Robert Long, brief descriptions of IRC activities on each campus during this last year, a visit to the UVM IRC office, a picnic supper at Northwick, and a forum-debate by UVM's John Harrington and Guy Page on North Government.

Selected Group Share Vocal Honors In Gilbert and Sullivan Masterpiece

Tickets Are On Sale At Bookstore and Bailey's

"Ruddigore," or "The Witch's Curse," will be presented June 2 and 3 as the annual operetta by the University Choir under the direction of Professor H. G. Bennett, assisted by the University Orchestra conducted by Ippocrates Pappoutsakis. Curtain time is 8.15 p.m. in Southwick Memorial Auditorium. The cast for the production of this Gilbert and Sullivan operetta consists of ten students from the choir, while the other members of the choir sing in the chorus of bridesmaids, the chorus of "bucks and blades," and the chorus of ghosts.

All members of the cast, although possessing varying degrees of experience in music and theatrics, show considerable ability in handling their parts.

Rose Maybud, a village maiden, is played by Deborah Cobb, a senior in the musical education course. In her home town of Newbury, Vt., Debbie had a role in a high school play and sang four years in the high school Glee Club. This is Debbie's fourth year in the UVM Choir where she has been in two operettas, "Utopia Limited," and the part of Celia in last year's production, "Iolanthe."

In the role of Mad Margaret, Phyllis Page '48, completes her fourth year in the choir and gives her third operetta performance, the two previous ones being in "Utopia Limited" and "Iolanthe." A liberal arts student from Burlington, Phyllis has also sung in two summer concerts.

Dame Hannah, played by Jean MacLaughlin, a musical education student in the class of 1950, is Rose Maybud's aunt. In Burlington High School, Jean received a great deal of musical and dramatic experience. Besides band and orchestra work, Jean was in the Glee Club, an operetta, a Christmas pageant, the junior play, and was quite successful in some one-act play competition. At UVM she has participated in the choir, the Dramatic Club, and last year's operetta.

MORTAR BOARD SOCIETY DECORATES EAST HALL

As their parting gift to the University of Vermont, the girls of Mortar Board recently decorated the lounges of the Ladies' Rooms at East Hall.

Using the money raised from its formal dances, Mortar Board's plan to furnish the lounges follows in its tradition of leaving at least one tangible gift a year to the University. Under the chairmanship of Doris Holmberg, the girls obtained the furniture and did most of the decorating themselves.

The money which remains after this work will be contributed to the Redstone

World Federalists Hear Paul Tector At County Meeting

Attorney Paul Tector of Middlebury, state chairman of the United World Federalists, was guest speaker at the meeting in Waterman 364, Tuesday evening, at which time a Chittenden County Chapter was inaugurated with the following acting as temporary officers: General chairman, Prof. George Dykhuizen, of Burlington; temporary secretary and treasurer, Mrs. R. B. Thurber of Charlotte. Mrs. John S. Millis of Burlington and Mrs. W. Douglas Burden of Charlotte were elected as members of the committee.

The statement of purposes, further clarifying above, states "Therefore, while endorsing the efforts of the United Nations to bring about a world community favorable to peace, we will work to create a world federal government with authority to enact, interpret and enforce world law to maintain peace: (1) by making use of the amendment processes of the United Nations to transform it into such a world federal government; (2) by participating in world constituent assemblies, whether of private individuals, parliamentary or other groups seeking to produce draft constitutions for consideration and possible adoption by the United Nations or by national governments in accordance with their respective constitutional processes; (3) by pursuing any other reasonable and lawful means to achieve world federation."

The tentative plan of the Chittenden County group is to hold regular meetings which will include so-called orientation meetings.

Membership dues which may be remitted to Mrs. Millis or to Mrs. Thurber are $3.00 for adults and $1.50 for students. A portion of the membership dues remain in the local chapter and in the state organization to carry out the program. Adult members will receive monthly the World Government News. Students will receive Student Federalist.

CLIFFORD HAVENS WILL HEAD '48 OUTING CLUB

Elections for the Outing Club officers were held last week. The following students were chosen: President—Clifton Havens, vice-president—Elbert Eisher, secretary—Robert Perkins, treasurer—Harold Stowe.

An exciting trip was taken last Sunday by the members of the Outing Club.

The next big event for the members is the annual mountain day trip to be held on Memorial Day.

These "Vermont Pioneers" really have been, and will be, braving it!

Modern Dance Workshop Delights Huge Gathering At Its Annual Exhibition

On Friday, May 21, the Modern Dance Workshop presented its annual program in the Southwick gymnasium. It was ably directed by Miss Ethel Hoffman. The first part of the program was devoted to a representation of present-day problems, interposed with a lively piece entitled, "Local Socialite Trips on her own Ambition." The latter was made utterly delightful by the gay interpretation of Nan Nelson as Mrs. Smythe. Her society included Martha Atwood, Beverly Barker, Suzette Levine, Suzanne Pooley and Barbara Spaulding. The more serious dances represented depression, the war machine, race riots and religious thought. The first showed the stocks falling and indicated general panic. The dancers were Joyce Aberdeen, Shirley Dennis, Mary McBratney, Janice Rose and Joyce Viventi. The second dance showed the dancers pleading for money to rebuild the war machine. One girl represented protesting minority groups. Participants were Julia Hurley, Miriam Peterson, Beatrice Moskowitz, and Valery Worth. The piece on race riots showed that group prejudice prevents mutual accord between individuals of different races. Dancers were Barbara Jensen, Katherine Kidder, Barbara Larrabee, Wendy Millington, Jean Ritchie and Jane Smith. Religious thought characterized organized religion endeavoring to disillusion individual searchers for truth. Masks represented the darkness they moved in. Dancers were Norma Colby, Theresa Gay and Nancy Tobey.

The second part of the program was made up of dances composed by individual members who wanted to do them separately. They were not connected with the first part of the program. Joyce Viventi danced beautifully to Old Devil Moon. Behind a lighted screen, the shadowed figure of Mary McBratney was seen in a lively interlude. Norma Colby and Theresa Gay followed with their interpretation of the song "Ballerina."

The last dance showed Theresa Gay and Jane Smith in a scene depicting a little girl's make believe playmate, a doll. The doll was taught to jump rope by her new companion and although already sold, presented herself to the little girl with a sign, "For You." At the end of the program Miss Hoffman was presented with a bouquet of flowers by the members of the group as a token of appreciation. The accompanists were Kenneth Belding, Walter Hayes and Marvin Briggs. Original music for "Local Socialite Trips on her own Ambition" was composed by Mr. Hayes.

Chaucerian Class Dines In Medieval Splendor At Tabard Inn Festivities

The spirit of the Middle Ages reigned at Tabard Inn on Pearl Street last Thursday night when members of the Chaucer class and their guests dined in the best medieval style. Hostesses Harryette Bayley Hughes received the weary pilgrims while Mary Lou Delano alias Canacee directed preparations for the thoroughly refreshing meal.

One Canterbury pilgrims and characters from their tales were invited, and a truly amazing assortment of travellers appeared. Doris McDonald made an impressive person in long black cloak, white beard and even an erring black lamb to eat back into the fold! The hardy Brian Base Ferber, was striking to behold in a bright red "gown of abstinence to the knee," black hose, and a vicious dagger hanging on a string about his neck. Mrs. Allen came as the paragon with a bag of holy relics, prepared to do a good job on the motley crew.

Not one, but two jolly millers appeared, each with his own interpretation of how that wart on the nose looked, with a tuft of hairs red as the bristles of a porcupine. A great deal of creative inventiveness was evident in both cases! Millers Alex Page and Dee Caryl quarrelled throughout the meal in true churlish fashion. The poverty-stricken clerk, however, but cheerful, was represented by Warren Caryl, who brought his pen along to record witty conversation for posterity.

Due to a modern inconvenience, the small oven, it was necessary to substitute a baked ham for the traditional roast pig, but an apple was appropriately placed where a mouth might have been! Other items on the menu were strictly medieval, including a delectable meat sauce and an interesting concoction known simply as "pattie of egge" involving eggs, cheese and cinnamon.

Dinner was served with suitable clatter and ceremony, including tossing of scraps to the dogs under the table. Having been borrowed from boudoirs at Robinson Hall, these animals were somewhat inactive, except for Jareckie, who was ravenous. Due to his fine behavior he was allowed to sit at the table. Patient Griselda passed the medieval equivalent of a finger bowl between courses, really necessary since hunting knives and soup ladles were the only utensils available.

Letters to the Editor . . .

FINAL EXAMS!

May 18, 1948

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

In the issue of Thursday, May 13, you published a letter advocating final exams. We grant John Moore's arguments that final exams help the student to review the material of the quarter, and that in the exact sciences they are a good judge of his ability because it is a matter of applying the precise principles he has learned.

However, in other subjects, although the review is good, finals do not require the application of knowledge. This is true especially in courses in which objective questions are used. The use of objective questions is poor in that they test only partially what the student has acquired. A student may easily have learned little points for the test, concentrating on what he thinks the professor wants, and forget to grasp the whole field of the subject. Tricky questions test the student's ability to memorize and to read, but what good is a scholastic aptitude if the student doesn't know how to think?

It is our belief that term papers should be substituted for final exams. To write a paper not only helps in reviewing the work but forces the student to think. The task of organizing the paper makes the student unite the material in his mind. When a student has compiled the information for a paper, it has made him feel a part of the subject, whereas methodical memorizing makes him feel apart from it. Research stimulates active interest and a desire to go deeper into the subject, for it shows how much greater is the field than the actual facts taught in class. The student has an opportunity to go deeper into his particular phase of interest, and he will therefore remember far more and for a longer time than if he had learned it merely to pass an exam.

We have spoken with students of other colleges where this system is in effect who have found that it had developed them in thought and interest, and has helped them see the material more clearly. There is a great need for the desire to go on with learning. College should be only the beginning of learning, but a student is not going to be interested in going on after college with a subject he has seen through inadequate testing.

May 16, 1948

Dear Sir:

So the argument goes! Those in favor of final exams, and those who are not in favor of them. The logical educational viewpoint put forth by those who direct the three R's of learning is that exams are the only way of testing the student's knowledge of the subject.

The problem does not lie in the matter of having exams, whether they be final or hour exams. It can be traced to a more underlying problem. One that is very outstanding and uncannily accurate. A well-known figure in our administration once told me that professors themselves are at fault in cases. Why? Simply because they have been giving exams since they began teaching and no one has ever questioned their ability. That allows them to think that their styles are unchangeable. Naturally anyone thinking these lines without taking into consideration, exam results from session to session is merely rationalizing his position as author of the exams. With percentages of classes failing exams, points being added to grades to make marks up to somewhere within the student has begun to satisfy with any numerical total better than the actual. If you should doubt this, merely open your ears open around campus as are taken and results are received.

But, it is said that exams allow to apply the material. To the contrary, I believe that in the majority of cases the only practical application that is made in the university is in the classroom. In this manner a student can operate on his own ideas and thoughts. Although the instructor is supposed to know his subject, it doesn't follow that he is using the very same ideas that former instructors gave him. He has evolved his own ideas, and so must the student. College presumably teaches to use his mind and not the mind of another.

It is often noted that nothing is done about such evaluation of methods and the institution of new, better ones. In the event that no better questions present methods will be done. However, if such questions are made constructively, logically, practically, bring them out in the where all may see. Thus, I say to each professor will stop rationalizing his own position and take into consideration the results of his teachings and consider whether his students are getting his subject, and if not, why not, attempt to correct it; then we will be on the way to a progressive, comprehensive education. An education that will not be gotten the day after an exam, but the nite previous was spent in cramming merely for that day. If this is done, one need not fear the threat of any Exams will be fairly and justly created.

I have successfully taught subjects in a boys' camp in the past, as well as in the Navy. I would certainly have been mighty dubious of my methods had those boys failed to learn the things I taught. That is the way I feel about education and someday I may be able to test thoroughly my ideas. When that comes, should I find a great percentage of my students failing exams or my own?—I will certainly feel that I am at fault if I am honest with myself.

Shame Comes To Vermont

This past Sunday, while the University Band was entertaining a large segment of the city populace during the "I Am An American" day services at Battery Park, a small vociferous group of approximately 300 Burlingtonians mobbed the local chapter of the Jehovah Witnesses outside the State Armory. This action constituted an abridgment not only of the freedom of peaceful assembly but also the freedom of religion clause guaranteed in the American Bill of Rights.

The most startling point of the incident seems to rest on the fact that the local law enforcing body made no attempt to arrest a single rioter. Someone slipped on the job—it is possible that Mayor Burns and Police Chief Frank Raymond are chuckling over the affair even now.

The State of Vermont has never in recent years been the scene of any such violation of civil liberties. Every Vermonter is very proud of the Green Mountain State, especially the returned servicemen who have had the opportunity to visit some of the other territorial possessions of this and other countries of the world. But Sunday's outbreak really doesn't give a single one of us anything to brag about. To say that the whole affair is most shameful is a gross understatement.

It is the duty of each and every Vermonter to see that this outbreak does not happen again. The Burlingtonians have an even better chance to preserve law and order in this state. In the very near future, a new mayor will be appointed—see that this man not only stands for "law and order" but will fight to preserve it.

We are not fighting for the Jehovah Witnesses, we are merely standing firm for the liberties granted every American. Before we criticize others, let's take a good look in our own back yard.

Fraternity-Sorority Activities Reach Zenith As Exams Loom Ahead

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

The second Alpha Chi Coffee Hour will be held on Sunday, May 23 from 5.00 to 7.00 p.m. This early hour will give everybody a chance to drop in before the movies. Sandwiches, chocolate cake a la mode and coffee will be served. About eighty-five people enjoyed the friendly atmosphere of the house at 384 Main Street last February 8 when the girls held their first coffee hour. Due to the success of the evening for W. S. S. F., energetic Alpha Chis have decided to try again—this time for Alpha Chi.

Joan Meyn and Jane Gates are in charge of details. They promise to see that everyone is made very comfortable. So—fellows, bring your gals or your cigarettes and come on down. A slight fee of thirty-five cents will be charged for the lunch.

P.S.—Girls are welcome too!

Did you ever try going 48 hours without sleep? If you ask Debbie Cobb, Irene Socinski, Peg Hoyt, Hedi Stoehr, or Elizabeth Buzzell how it feels, they will probably end up by telling you all about their exciting trip to Lake Success and Flushing. Don't be surprised if they try to nominate themselves as official delegates to the U. N.!

Peg Hoyt spent the week-end moving into her new apartment in New Britain, Conn.

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

An anxious group of girls were gathered at the premiere performance of "My Sister Eileen," Friday night. There were two causes for concern—one, the awarding of the prizes for floats, the other, the hope that Sister Esther Thomas would render the performance we all knew she was capable of. The announcement that AEPHI took second place in the competition fulfilled our first hope, and the remarks made during and after the play proved that Esther did a wonderful job in handling the role of Ruth. Now the typewriter remains a wonderful memory of Junior Week, and still sore knees and aching backs are physical memories!

Monday night, the chapter held a surprise shower for ex-Dean Claire Glass, in honor of her forthcoming marriage to Manny Schindler. All sorors were present at the short meeting and gaiety that followed! Ice cream and cake were served.

The raffle in behalf of the house fund will be in full swing by the latter part of the week.

Although the softball team bowed in defeat to the powerful Allen House nine last Thursday night, the sorors all enjoyed the game. Mud puddles and slippery ground included!

The sorority has entered several sets of girls for doubles in the intersorority tennis league, and a number of sorors have signed up for the single matches.

The Sorors are also deep in the throes of rehearsal for the annual U. V. M. inter-sorority sing. Voices of hidden talent are being directed under the leadership of Soror Lois Rutstein in preparation for the forthcoming event!

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

Eight new brothers were initiated into the fold last month—Albie Ketcham, Walt Johnson, Paul Kelly, Mickey McMahon, Dick Brashear, Bob Fordham, George Sumner, and Jack Wisner.

Come summer, Brother Bob Chittick, newly elected prexy, goes to Sun Valley for the ATO National Convention, and in case Li'l Bob should happen to bump his head against the ceiling, Brother "Wee Willie" Emerson will take the trip in his place.

Art Camire, Glen Hill, and Art Sikora will graduate in June. All Alpha Tau brothers wish them the very best of luck in the future.

Constant rain for the past few weeks has kept Alpha Tau softball sluggers on the sidelines. The troops are still looking for a good day to play game number one!

Jerry "He Who" Wood drives that blue (bright) car (old) with red wheels and white sidewalls. "He Who" has new ideas for a paint job next year. Maybe yellow and black stripes—and why? Why certainly—danger!

On May 28 the spring formal will be held at Oakledge Manor. Brothers and their dates will get some real casual tunes from some fine local beboppers.

The local chapter of Alpha Tau Omega should turn out a top-notch choral group for the Interfraternity Sing, Brother Kenneth "Max" Belding conducting. All Worthy Mouths will be choraling for the first place cup.

A new office has recently been promoted. And Brothers George Sumner holds the job—he's the new Worthy Date-Sponsor. Any campus cutie needing a date should phone in to Brother Sumner for info. Many dateless "rah-rah" Alpha Tau's are hoping for some real hot sponsoring—but quick! (Results found in this column next week.)

Brother Dick Pervier is bumming cigarettes this week.

DELTA PHI EPSILON

The new officers of Delta Phi Epsilon were installed on Saturday, May 15, at the new apartment. They are Carol Handel, president; Marcia Osher, vice-president; Rita Fienberg, treasurer; Janet Hofstadter, secretary; Ruth Kenner, food and welfare chairman; Ruth Levine, house chairman; and Pauline Klein, Pan-Hellenic Representative. After the installation the sorority had their official housewarming. The rooms recently have been completely furnished by the girls and now have the new look.

The dance for the benefit of Irvington House, given on May 8 was a great success and a large sum was netted. The sum was gratefully accepted by the Irvington House, the rheumatic fever home in New York.

KAPPA SIGMA

On May 13 the Kappa Sigs were scrubbing and polishing and decorating in a flurry of energetic activity in preparation for the annual spring formal. Window dressings borrowed from Abernethy's were used to transform the front room into a miniature ballroom. Pine trees cut out of the virgin forests of Vermont formed the background for the Queen's throne. The remainder of the decorating job was completed with red and green crepe paper adroitly hung from the ceilings. The Mikemen furnished the music, and when it got hot, so did Jack Hurley. Near the middle of the evening the Queen, formally known as the Kappa Sigma Sweetheart, was announced. Miss Catherine Wells received that coveted honor with Doris French and Jean Van Hynning as runners-up and attendants. Our chaperones, Prof. and Mrs. M. D. Daggett and Prof. and Mrs. F. M. Ricciardi were important factors in making our formal a very successful one indeed.

"Stu" Moffitt is our newest addition to the house of Alpha Lambda. We are very proud to announce that "Stu" was formally pledged Monday night, May 24. "Stu" was a "regular" on the varsity basketball squad last fall, after putting in a successful year as a frosh hoopster. He is well known and well liked on campus and is a top-notch all-around guy. Congratulations, "Stu!"

PHI SIGMA DELTA

A regal country club house was the scene, as amid soft lights, sweet music, and colorful decorations the members of Phi Sigma Delta held their Annual Spring Formal on Saturday evening, May 15. The house was decorated in true club house splendor with walls of knotty pine concealing indirect lighting, animal trophies and an open fireplace, and an immense pair of maroon drapes completing the scene.

Phi Sigma Delta was fortunate in enjoying the company of Dr. and Mrs. Hartung and Dr. and Mrs. Kroepsch as chaperones. The house was honored by the presence of many visitors including alumni and guests from other fraternities.

The dance was arranged by the hard-working Social Committee. Murph Aaron, Mickey Weidman, and Paul Chusid directed the planning while every frater contributed to the tedious work of putting up the intricate decorations and attending to the many details that made the affair a grand success.

SIGMA NU

In response to public demand, let it now be known just where all the Sigma Nu's were on the weekend of May 15. Certainly they weren't at the old Lodge, for we had an open house then.

First and foremost, Big Bill Reid went down to Smith College, for some reason or other, and without telling the rest of us first. Now, what did he see in Smith?

The Poultny contingent consisted of Bob Wood and Bill Van Scoik, who took their position by dint of application to the work. Van can say that it's his house, but as for Woodie—well, someone has to live in the Van Scoiks lives in Poultny, seems.

Then we had representatives at the open house. George Bowman and Bob K made it down and back easily enough. It took them all weekend. Probably sipped some of the joys of Dartmouth and were detained.

The Sigma Nu track team went to Worcester for the EICAA meet, placed Vermont in seventh place. D. McLaren, Earle Randall, and Jack Schmetz carried the colors well for U. V. Sigma Nu is proud of its tracksters, especially Randie, who should lower the latest record by many seconds if it were only someone to push him.

Then there was our open house. Never a fraternity held a record for attended open houses, it is Sigma Nu. In attendance, in addition to the chaperones, there were four or five couples, not a large turnout, it's true, the usual. Mr. and Mrs. Knollner showed marvelous fortitude in the advantageous roles of chaperones at Sigma Nu open house. Ah, somehow, we shall have a great time and enjoy a true open house, with all the things.

Cynic Feature Writer Flails UVM Students As School Spirit Lags

I suppose I should address this to "Dear Editor," but it seems more fitting that I should address it to "Dear Everybody on UVM Campus"—and hope that discussion and action will follow, so that something constructive will be done.

School spirit. Where is it? Why isn't it? Every now and then, a small cyclonic upheaval is felt because there is such a huge lack of school spirit. But nothing much has been done about it. Perhaps something can be done, but I believe a lot of something can be done.

I am a junior, yes, a full-fledged junior. I read notices on the bulletin boards that the juniors were to meet to elect class officers and make plans for Junior Week. Junior Week—the high-light week of the class of 1949. I went to the meeting. Nominations were made for the various officers. I gazed around and every once in a while my jaw would drop in amazement and I would mutter to myself "Is he—or is she—a junior—a member of my class?" I knew so few as '49-ers and I do think I know a great many students on campus. There was no class comradeship—no class cohesion—no good-natured rivalry of students who know each other.

Later, I, too, read the names of our new officers in the CYNIC—and the descriptive data of what they had done on campus during the past three years to warrant their election to executive offices. But be that as it may—it is past and under or over the dam—whichever way you look at it.

So far, this letter may come under the caption of "Gripe." It would not be good if I stopped here. I do have a thought which may formulate a plan which will make a start to bettering conditions.

I propose that class officers be elected each year, beginning with the freshman class, and regular meetings be held once a month by the freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes as a class group. You may gasp in dismay "But we have so many meetings of all kinds now. When could we have a class meeting?" Here I may invoke the wrath of many on campus, but I propose that the class meetings be held the first Monday night of each month, if the organized groups meeting on that night can agree that it is vitally important to have well integrated, well-conducted class meetings to inculcate and foster school spirit which is the overall means of representing our school at games, pep rallies, and such other "doings" as need a lusty, healthy, well-natured school spirit to keep things a-humping.

If there are not enough large quarters to hold four class meetings the same evening, then I suggest that the freshman meet the first Monday night, the sophomores meet the second Monday night, the juniors meet the third Monday night, and the seniors meet the fourth Monday night; and further, that the organized groups suspend all penalties for non-attendance at their own meetings, provided their members are attending the class meetings on the nights specified.

Class meetings for the incoming freshman can be started shortly after their arrival here. The information bulletin sent to each freshman need carry only an announcement such as this "All incoming freshmen will hold their first class meeting on (whatever date is convenient during orientation week), for the purpose of electing class officers for the ensuing year." I grant you that the incoming freshman do not know each other, unless they come from the same school, but I'll bet a cookie against a doughnut that they'll very shortly know each other well enough to elect representative class officers. They will elect freshman as freshman, and not as members of any organized group because election will be before the organized groups have gathered them into their various folds.

Now, frankly, how do you feel about this? Let's have opinions, lots of them. Perhaps you know a better plan. Let's have it.

Address your letters or notes to Gig Moodie, Robinson Hall, or to the undersigned, or—if you prefer—to the editor of the CYNIC.

When we get the pulse of thought on this campus, we will go further by presenting the opinion of the campus to the proper authorities who can get the meetings started by inserting the notice in the circular to the incoming freshman.

The other classes could follow suit and elect officers at the beginning of each year and not at the end of their junior year. And I firmly believe that some real class spirit, some real school spirit would result.

GLADYS E. NEIBURG

A Freshman's Viewpoint

By CAROL GREENWOOD

Wanted—Desperately: One large sunny room, conveniently located. Preferably a two-seconds' walk from Waterman. Anyone hearing of such a room, kindly advise us at once.

MARY AND BETTY CO-ED,
University of Vermont.

Such was the cry of harassed U. V. M. co-eds as they frantically scurried around for the days preceding the annual room-choosing, looking over the women's dorms with a critical eye, and thoughtfully considered the various rooms, comparing their advantages and disadvantages. The girls go around knocking on every door, being extra careful not to miss a single one—for who knows but what it might be the very one they're looking for. Naturally they receive a very cordial (?) welcome. After all this traipsing around, our two young ladies go into deep consultation in order to discuss the pros and cons of each dorm. Occasionally a brief argument ensues, as one girl wishes to go to the Old Mill because of its convenient location, while the other prefers Coolidge. In the end, however, a decision is made very agreeable to both.

With their minds in a great turmoil, they timidly approach the office of the Dean of Women, and sit down cautiously on the edge of their chairs, awaiting the appointed hour with a few misgivings. Finally the hands of the clock slowly move around to four. The first two names—those lucky, lucky people who drew number 1—are called, and they enter the "inner-sanctum." The rest of the girls, sitting on chairs which line both sides of the corridor, talk over matters with their neighbors trying to find out what their chances are. A hush falls over the group as another set of names is read. Then, finally, the first group comes out, clutching their green room contracts in their hands. From all sides comes the cry, "Where are you going to live?" "Did you get what you wanted?" "Is there any room left at Grassmount?" The girls patiently answer each question, and the same process is repeated each time someone comes out.

Then, at last—gee, but it's seemed like hours—you hear your own name called off, and you enter, not knowing quite what to expect (if you're a freshman, that is). What a surprise to find the very room you wanted, offered to you on a silver platter. But, maybe you weren't so lucky and had to do a little arguing to get it. Or you might even be one of those people, who, after leaving the office queries, "I'm at Elmwood, wherever that is." And that poor girl just ahead of you! She got everything taken care of, only to get to the table where the $15 room deposit has to be paid, and after fishing around in her purse and pockets in vain, exclaims, "I'm sure I brought it with me." What about the girl behind you, who borrowed your pen. It seems she remembered to bring her pen, but forgot to fill it. Gosh, but I'm glad I looked over the rooms before going to room-choosing. Those poor kids who got that small dark room—only because they'd never seen it—else they'd never have taken it. Then you're through! You either stride out triumphantly, or with a rather dejected air, depending on your luck.

Hearty Outing Clubbers Make Scenic Hike To Smugglers Notch

"We should have brought our skis" was the general consensus of opinion of the Outing Clubbers that hiked to Sterling Pond Lodge last weekend, when they saw the two and a half inches of new snow that had fallen during the night.

Saturday afternoon, despite the rainy skies, fifteen Outing Clubbers gathered in front of Waterman, jammed food into their already overflowing packs, piled into four waiting cars, and headed for the top of Smugglers Notch at the north end of Mt. Mansfield. At the top of the Notch they willingly slung their packs on their backs and headed up the trail, which started out more like a cliff, for the mile and a half hike into Sterling Pond and the cozy lodge where they were to spend another weekend in the mountains.

Once at the lodge three tents were pitched, six of the hikers were going to have to sleep out, the lodge would only sleep about ten people. In between pitching tents, a couple of the girls drying out the seats of their pants after sitting rather abruptly in a snowbank, someone managed to heat up the beans and hot-dogs that were to be eaten for supper. After supper the gang managed to fit most of their arms and legs in with the others that were on the two lower bunks and join in to the song fest, led by whomever happened to be turning the pages of the song books. And so to bed.

Sunday morning the sleepers in the tents were roused out by being pelted with snowballs. Breakfast was gotten after everyone had thrown all the May snowballs they wanted to and then all headed for Madonna Peak one mile north of Sterling Pond. On top most of the gang enjoyed some impromptu skiing on their feet and all enjoyed the view.

Back to the lodge for lunch, followed by everyone searching for his eating utensils at the same time, and a slippery hike back to the bus that had brought the day hikers up.

Mr. H. G. Storrs of the Medical College was chaperon for the hike.

Frosh Nine Loses First; Harriers Down BHS

Kitten Defense Collapses; Mikemen Annex 7-2 Win

By R. E. HERRIOTT

The "Law of Averages" finally caught up with the UVM frosh. What goes up must come down, and so it is in baseball that whoever wins one day is bound to lose some other day. Up until now the Kittens had been winning their ball games through big first innings, but Wednesday the tables were turned as the St. Michael's frosh pounced on Dom Cote for three big runs in the first inning, and then went on to win 7-2.

Previously, over a period of two years, the Kittens had won ten straight baseball games and were currently riding on the wake of a string of twenty-seven unscoring upon innings, but that wild first inning snuffed out everything.

It was evident from the start that Cote was nervous and didn't have his best stuff. He was in trouble in all but two innings and was scored upon in four of the nine. For Galarneau, the St. Mike's hurler, it was almost the opposite. He scattered six hits over the nine innings, and although he too was in trouble, he always had that added something to pull himself out without harm. What hurt the Kittens most was their failure to hit in the clutches, for they left eleven men stranded on bases, at least one in each inning.

Fitzgerald of the Mikemen opened the game by slashing a grounder past the pitcher and when Pandolfi booted the ball, he was safe at first on the error. Little Willie Hart then singled, Fitzgerald going to second. Naples then hit one back to Cote who made the play at third, getting Fitzgerald, but missing on the double play. Zucknieovich reached on a fielder's choice when Cote's attempt to get Hart off third failed. McCarthy then walked, forcing in the first run. Markey fled to short left field for the second out, but Flering singled to deep right, driving in the other two runs.

The Kittens pounced back in the third. Fitts opened the inning and was safe when the third baseman threw wildly to first. Webster hit a hard line drive past the pitcher and was robbed of a sure base hit when the second baseman made a spectacular stab at the ball for the out.

Ed Guiliani then walked, putting men on first and second. Cubby Goulet fled to right, but not deep enough to allow any base advance.

Bob Twiss, the cleanup hitter, then really cleaned up as he hit a terrific drive between the left and center fielders for two bases, scoring both Fitts and Guiliani. That was the extent of the damage though, as Galarneau then retired the side by getting Andy Smith on a pop fly.

Willie Hart's three singles, and Fleming's single and triple made them the hitting leaders for the victors, while Cubby Goulet with two hits and Bob Twiss with a two-run scoring double led the Kittens at the plate.

Catamount Miscues Enables Clarkson To Post 6-2 Victory

Although the visiting Vermont baseball team outthit the Clarkson Engineers 8-7, the Cats were in a generous mood as they allowed five unearned runs to hand the grateful engineers a 6 to 2 victory. Manuel Setien, the Barre flash, allowed but seven hits all of the scratchy variety, but his teammates couldn't hold onto the ball when the chips were down.

Two walks, two hits, two errors and an outfield fly permitted four unearned runs to score for Clarkson in the third inning, thus allowing Bob Rothermal a comfortable margin to work with. Vermont held a 2-0 lead going into the third frame, and after Clarkson's outburst of runs in that inning the only Vermont man to get as far as third base was Bill Flanders, who happened to be playing there.

Ray Heath got three hits in four trips to the plate to lead the Vermont hitting. Ray has done very well since his injection in the lineup a few days ago.

Haddigan Paces Yearlings As Burlington Falls 75-42

By PETE J. PALMISANO

The freshman fleetfooted donned their spikes last Saturday to run rampage over Burlington High School's trackmen. Amid icicles and the conglomeration of half-frozen athletes and non-athletes alike a new freshman track record was set by Rus Mahoney. Although the Burlington boys were a game bunch, they could not withstand the onslaught of the UVM squad and lost 75 to 42.

Haddigan Stars

The Kittens' leading point-getter, Howie Haddigan, took first in four events: the broad jump, the 100, 220, and the 440 yd. dashes giving him a total of twenty points. Howie ran the dashes in 10.4 sec., 23.5 sec., and 52.8 sec., respectively and copped the broad jump with a 19' 7" leap. Hitchcock, an up and coming trackman, acquired firsts in the discus with a 114' 7" throw, and the javelin in which he tossed the shaft 144'. He was also right on the heels of Dick Hinkley who tossed the shot-put 43' 4". Speedy, Rus Mahoney not content with breaking the freshman mile record several weeks ago proceeded to break his own record. Suffering from a bad ankle he "limped" around the cinder path to lower his mark from a 4:40.8 to a 4:40.5. Shortly afterwards, he won the 880 in a thrilling finale. Bob Herriott took the pole vault with a 9' 6" leap and just flicked the cane to miss a 9' 9" jump, while Fink secured the high jump with a 5' 3" hop.

Small and speedy Lambert of the Seahorses was the sparkplug of his team, taking first in the 120-yd. high hurdles and 220 yd. low hurdles. Chalmers and Quinn of Burlington looked very well in some of the other events.

Close Race

The best race of the afternoon was the 880 which resulted in a duel between Mahoney and Caswell. The race started slowly as neither Mahoney or Caswell vied for the lead. As the race ensued, however, Caswell took over the lead and proceeded to build up a considerable distance between himself and Mahoney. As they approached the final bend it looked as if Mahoney were spent, but just as he came to life and sped around the track not only to beat Caswell, but to better his own best efforts in the 880 for the year.

Summary:

Pole vault: 1, Herriott (V) 9' 6"; 2, Miller (B); 3, Graves (B). Shotput: 1, Hinkley (V) 43' 4"; 2, Hitchcock (V); 3, Heins (B). High jump: 1, Fink (V) 5' 3"; 2, Quinn (B); 3, Caswell (B). # W.A.A. Water Circus Delights College Throng at Y.M.C.A. Pool

By J. CAROL DAVIS

We wonder if Ringling Brothers had a talent scout in the audience at Marty Wood's W. A. A. Water Circus, Tuesday, May 18. At 7.30 p.m. all the spectators on the bleachers waited patiently to see the first U. V. M. co-ed make her entrance into the cold Y. M. C. A. pool. George Ruble's voice came out of the effective darkness to announce each event, and then the spotlight played on the swimmers as they entered the pool. Marty stood in one corner of the blackness, chewing what was left of her fingernails, and saying little incoherent prayers under her breath.

Act one was a waltz in which the swimmers wore dark suits with red and yellow flowers in their hair. They swam with good coordination and rhythm. One rather elderly man kept leaning over the edge of the pool to see if the girls' feet were doing the step he had danced (or still was dancing) with grandma. At the end, the eight girls lined up on their backs and kicked, making a sparkling row of spray as they went.

The next three acts brought in a snake, Polly McMurdo, and snake charmer, Gig Moodie; then trained seals, and monkeys, Gig Moodie and Elaine Schmidt. The trained seals had an amusing jumpy stroke that made the otherwise charming girls have that—well, slimy isn't the word that I want but you get the dribble. We might add the monkeys were perfect. The snake charmer did a good job on the snake who disappeared under water at the end of the act and forgot to return for her diving number. Anyone seen the bottom of the Y. M. C. A. pool lately? We haven't seen it or our snake.

"I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles" suddenly tilted out and echoed on the brick walls. The spotlight moved to the circus quartet, wearing slickers and carrying umbrellas (much to the surprise of some of the superstitious onlookers). We hear the quartet had trouble finding four slickers. As I walked in I saw one of them grab an unsuspecting innocent who had one on—not: had.

Tess Gay, one of the clowns, who inevitably popped up to tease poor George, finally landed fully clothed in the water. After soaking thoroughly in her chlorine bath she got out, stood on the side of the pool and dripped little lakes of water from her long, dark hair. She declared that she refused to go back in until she had a bathing cap because she'd get her hair wet. At which some spectator produced a powder blue shower cap. This Tess tried faithfully to wear throughout the show.

In the swimming and life saving demonstration, George explained strokes while Polly McMurdo and Barbara Spaulding swam. Polly did the stomach strokes while Barbara did the back strokes. Barbara knew when to stop swimming when her head came to rest gently on the opposite end of the pool. There ought to be a particular moral aspect to the above—something about hitting your head against a stonewall, perhaps.

In the life saving demonstration George saved Tess's life. The prominent question of the day is not where is the Marshall Plan taking us, or who will be our next White House occupant, but, why did George save Tess? (Maybe I could sell that to the same people who write "John's Other Wife.")

Act eight was the fancy divers who did very well. We certainly should hand it to Diane Pike who gave a good demonstration, to Ruth Hill for her smooth swan dive and to Tess for her summer-saults.

The circus ended in a grand candle parade which included all the cast. In the center of the black pool was a star floating with unlit candles on its points. If you had come a few minutes early for the show you would have heard hammering noises back stage—the cast just putting together the last act. The swimmers eased themselves into the water and to the star, holding high in their hands lighted candles. They then lit the candles on the center star.

Other participants in the circus were: Sue Cook, Jean Hard, Jo Howard, Peggy O'Day, Putsy Wood, Janice Baird, Peter Mason, Lillian Tucker, Babs Lambert.

UVM Tennis Team Behind Livingston Downs St. Michael's

Last Friday the UVM tennis team, after losing two previous matches to RPI and Champlain and having to postpone one with Union, finally came through to take their first win of the year when they defeated St. Michael's 6 to 3 on the Centennial courts.

It was definitely no day for tennis. The rain of last week threatened to prevent the match, but the court, on Friday, was hard enough to be used. The cold, damp air slowed down the teams somewhat and very few people braved the weather to watch the contest.

Livingston and Mickler, No. 1 and 2 men for UVM, set the pace for the Vermont victory when they won their single matches and then paired together to take the No. 1 doubles match. Astone and Green won their singles matches to give UVM four out of the six singles played. Hill and Fimian of UVM lost their singles' games to Warzocha and Zacharer of St. Mike's.

Two out of the three doubles matches were won by UVM. Besides the No. 1 doubles victory, Green and Bloomberg came through from behind to win the No. 3 doubles for UVM. Astone and Fimian lost the No. 2 doubles to Warzocha and Zacharer.

The St. Lawrence-UVM match which was scheduled for Saturday had to be called off because of the rain and extremely cold weather.

Singles: Livingston (V) def. H. Scully (SM) 6-1, 7-5; Mickler (V) def. Plezarczyk (SM) 6-0, 6-1; Zacharer (SM) def. Fimian (V) 6-4, 2-6, 6-2; Astone (V) def. Martel (SM) 6-1, 6-2; Warzocha (SM) def. Hill (V) 6-4, 2-6, 7-5; Green (V) def. Gibbons (SM) 6-0, 6-0.

Doubles: Livingston and Mickler (V) def. H. Scully and Plezarczyk (SM) 6-2, 6-2; Gibbons and Zacharer (SM) def. Astone and Fimian (V) 6-4, 7-5; Green and Bloomberg (V) def. Martel and J. Scully (SM) 5-7, 6-1, 6-4.

By SAM HOUSTON

Old man weather continues to hamper the University of Vermont from keeping their befuddled schedule up to date. Two more baseball games were postponed this past week and a home tennis match gave way to the inclement weather.

However at this time Vermont followers are asking themselves if it isn't a good thing that the teams are being rained out. Looking at the records of the teams to date we all might be tempted to agree with that question. The Catamount baseball team did get to play one game this last week and it went down in the records as another loss for Larry Gardner's men: That makes the team record to date, one win against Norwich while losing eight games to more formidable opposition.

Vermont, not so many years ago, used to play some pretty good teams in college baseball world. In fact Vermont used to beat a good share of these good ball clubs. Now we find the University twice as before and compiling an unimpressive record of one win and eight defeats against not half so good teams. These facts do not go together somehow.

The tennis team likewise is having what might be called a "rough" season. Only one member of the tennis squad has been able to win consistently and as you all know a tennis team is not made up of one player. The track team has not racked up any impressive wins either, although they do have some good individual trackmen on the club. Here again though, it takes more than certain individuals to win meets. It might as well be admitted right now that Vermont does not have the material needed to produce winning teams. Unless of course this material is hiding out in the undercroft of the library.

Alumni and Administration Take Heed

The University alumni and the administration should be taking notice of the plight of the Green and Gold teams. How much lower can U. V. M. go in the world of sports? Do you still think that we can produce winning ball teams with the athletic set-up which this school so proudly hails or is it time to admit to yourselves that at last something has got to be done for the athletes here at Vermont. We hope that something will come of all this and that something will have to be done. In the very near future I hope to be able to tell you that the alumni are in back of athletics all the way and also that the administration has agreed to act upon the now degenerated athletic set-up on the shores of Lake Champlain. Work is still going forward on the student part and around Commencement time the fireworks should start.

Talented UVM Choir Will Present 'Ruddigore' Opera

Richard Dauntless, the Man-o'-war's man, is played by Ernest Stockwell who is a senior in secondary education. Ernie comes from Hartford, Vt., where he went to high school. He did very well in the tenor part of "Iothanthe" last year and has done solo work in the choir.

As Robin Oakapple, the true Baronet of Ruddigore, Morris Pike, a student in the Liberal Arts College, class of '49, adds to an impressive list of musical and theatrical achievements. In his home town, Stowe, Vt., Morris was in the high school Glee Club, Dramatic Club, and class plays, and worked with the junior high school Glee Club. He has sung with church choirs in Stowe and Burlington and has done summer camp and conference solo and choir work. At UVM Morris is in the Dramatic Club and Choir. Many have pleasant recollections of his performance as Strephon in "Iothanthe" last spring.

Sir Despard is the "Bad Baronet" in the operetta, who has been committing a crime a day for ten years. A pre-med student, Carmer Van Buren '50, plays this part. At Burlington High School he was in two class plays, the Vermont All-State Chorus, an operetta, and Christmas pageants. During ten years in church choirs, Carmer changed from a soprano to a bass. He sang in the University Choir while still a junior and senior in high school and had parts in the operettas both years.

Sir Roderic Murgatroyd, dead for ten years, and played by Bill Salmon, comes to life in the second act to sing the eerie ghost's song. Bill is a junior business student from North Bennington where he had parts in the senior play and an operetta in high school. He sang in the University Choir for a year before the war and a concert last summer.

Zorah is played by Barbara Whitney from Williamstown, Vt. Although a freshman, Barbara has had previous experience in music and theatrics. While in high school she sang in the Glee Club and church choir, directed a children's choir, and took part in several three-act plays. She is studying music education at UVM.

To the role of Ruth, Jean Preston '50, of Salisbury, Vt., brings a great deal of musical experience. She has sung six years in a church choir, four years in a high school Glee Club, two years in the University Choir, and played two years in the Middlebury High School orchestra. Jean has done extensive solo work even from before she entered graded school.

As Old Adam, Bill Lane can be counted on for a good performance. Although from Hardwick, Vt., where he gained some dramatic and musical experience in high school, Bill now lives in Burlington with his wife. During his four years in music education, Bill, who graduated last year, sang in the Choir and of course had parts in the operettas. At present he is a graduate student in the music department.

The ticket sale for "Ruddigore" opened Monday, May 24, at the UVM Book Store and Bailey's Music Rooms. All seats are reserved in two sections. Tickets are priced at $.75 and $1.00 plus tax.

Student Government Notes

May 20, 1948

President Miele called the meeting to order at 4.15. The secretary's report was accepted as read.

Norman Vercoe, Chief Justice of Student Court, presented to the council the revised constitution of Student Court. The new form, although not allowing complete appellate jurisdiction by the student organ, does provide for the establishment of an appeal body made up of four members of Student Court and four members of the University Council, with President Millis acting as chairman. Any student, if unsatisfied by a student trial before Student Court, Student Union Judiciary, Panhellenic Council, Interfraternity Council, or any dormitory council, may appeal to this group. The structure of Student Court was considered briefly, and the advantages and disadvantages of securing a random jury for each student trial were indicated. Lucille Wetherby moved that the council postpone further discussion of Norman's report until the next meeting because of the absence of several council members. The motion was seconded by Bob Perkins but rejected on the grounds that acceptance of the revised constitution by the student body before the end of the quarter necessitates immediate publication and publicity. A motion made by Tom Hayes that the report be approved was seconded by Karl Webster and accepted.

President Miele presented to the council a request by a small group of students for permission to have a picnic during deadweek. Tom Hayes moved that permission be granted; Al Pratt seconded the motion, and it was accepted.

MEMORIAL DAY SEES SECOND POST WAR MT. DAY; STUDENT GOVT. CALLS MASS MEETING THURSDAY

$1 INCREASE IN ACTIVITY FEE ON AGENDA; ALL TO ATTEND

At last Thursday's meeting of the Executive Council of Student Government it was decided that a mass meeting for all undergraduate students be held on Thursday, June 3rd, in the University Chapel. In order that all students may be seated there will be two meetings, the first at 4:00 p. m. and the second at 7:00 p. m. Members of the Sophomore and Junior classes will attend the 4 o'clock meeting and Freshmen and Seniors will attend the 7 o'clock session. A student of any class whose schedule conflicts with his appointed time may attend the other meeting. The purpose of the mass meeting is to determine the student opinion on the following four points: (1) Future Athletic Policy. (2) A TEMPORARY $1.00 increase in the Student Government Activity Fee. (3) A proposed revision of the Student Government Constitution pertaining to the Student Court's jurisdiction. (4) The United Nations' International Children's Emergency Fund drive, with the aim of arriving at a policy for Student Government action on future drives of similar character.

In order to avoid the complaints that followed the mass meeting last fall, the Executive Council voted last Thursday that attendance at the mass meeting of June 3 should not be compulsory. However, the members of the Council sincerely hope that interest in the items on the agenda will bring the student to one of the two sessions. Athletics at U. V. M. have been discussed and berated for some time, but groups from which help might be forthcoming have been reticent, because they have not felt that they had complete student opinion. Here is the chance for every student to express his opinions where they can do some good.

A temporary increase in the activity fee for next year is needed to set up a new accounting system for the Student Government treasury. However, the Executive Council feels that an increase in the Student Government allotment should be voted on by all the U. V. M. students.

After a great deal of work, a revision in the constitution for the Student Court, concerning jurisdiction, has been formulated. Although President Millis has approved the proposed revision, which will be of considerable benefit to all students, it must be ratified by the students.

The problem of charity on campus and donations to these drives by Student Government will come up at this meeting. All students would be included in any donation from the Student Government treasury and therefore should be interested.

There is a full agenda awaiting action. Consequently, for purposes of expediency, if anyone wishes to put forth a motion, he is urged to contact a member of the Executive Council immediately, so that this motion may be included on the written ballot.

Because the Chapel will not seat the entire student body at one time, the Executive Council is forced to call two separate sessions. It is therefore impossible to act upon any motion received from the floor during the second meeting. Anyone who urgently desires to put forth a motion from the floor during the mass meeting should attend the 4:00 o'clock session.

ACTIVITY FEE

A change in the collection of fees by the University starting next year will increase the tuition, but decrease the activity fee. Under the plan for collection used this year ('47-'48), the total activity fee for the year amounted to $38.

$12 for the fall quarter, and $13 for each of the other two. Of this $38, $10 was for infirmity fees, $8 was for physical education fees, $5 went to the athletic department, and $15 went into the Student Government treasury to finance campus activities supported by Student Government. The funds in its own treasury were the only ones Student Government actually administered, and temporarily the accounts were handled through the U. V. M. accounting office.

Next year ('48-'49), the costs formerly covered by the physical education, infirmity, and athletic fees will become a part of an increased tuition.

The Finance Committee of Student Government along with the Executive Council has agreed that a temporary $1.00 increase in the Student Government Activity Fee is necessary in order to meet the cost of setting up an independent accounting system. The present system is explained in the above paragraph. Of this approximately $2700 increase in Student Government income $1200 or more will go to establish eight bank accounts which each call for a minimum balance of $150. The remaining $1500 will go toward the purchase of new office equipment which is necessary for any accounting system. Items such as ledgers, a typewriter, and an adding-machine are examples of initial expenditures which will be incurred. The remaining funds will be put in a contingent fund to meet any unexpected expenses which might arise.

The change will result in an increase of $.50 per semester, raising the Student Government Activity Fee from $7.50 per semester to $8.00 per semester. It is emphasized that this is a temporary increase.

CONSTITUTION CHANGE

A proposed revision of the Student Government Constitution pertaining to the jurisdiction of the Student Court will be offered to the students for ratification. The purpose of the division is first, that the present provisions concerning the authority of the Student Court, provided to it by the Constitution, are inadequate. They do not cover all the possible situations which might arise. Because of this lack of authority in the Court's Constitutional provisions, many of the cases which could come before this body are passed on to the University Council, where a student is tried without student representation.

A committee formed of members of the Executive Council met and drew up the necessary revision. It was the purpose of this committee to secure the maximum justice for the students by making the Court provisions adequate. There are two principal changes: (1) "The Student Court shall have sole jurisdiction in all cases concerning the interpretation on

Outing Club Invites All to Mt. Mansfield Transportation Supplied

All out for the second post-war annual Mountain Day. The UVM Outing Club invites everyone in the University—faculty and students—to enjoy a day's outing on Mt. Mansfield, on Memorial Day, Monday, May 31.

HOW TO GO

Desirous of a large attendance on this truly only "all-university" hike, the Club will supply free bus transportation to all. Regular buses will leave the Waterman at 9:30, while other buses will leave at 12:30, in order to give ROTC and band members, who are to march in a Memorial Day parade, the opportunity for the trip.

WHERE TO GO

All will meet at the Waterman building. The buses will transport everyone to the Underhill side of the Mountain, up the state road, beyond the state picnic grounds, when hikers will be able to reach any part of the mountain.

WHAT TO BRING

The Club will supply free 'cokes' to hikers. However each must bring his own lunch, preferably a cold one. There is a wealth of photographic subjects on the mountain—alpine plants, panoramic views, glacial rock formations. And old clothes are always the most practical.

The Constitution of the UVM Students.

Due to an oversight in the original drafting of the Constitution the above power was not delegated to any specific judicial body.

(2) "Appellate Jurisdiction"

In the event of an appeal from a student judicial body that has original jurisdiction in its respective sphere, the case shall be heard by a joint court consisting of 4 members of the University Council appointed by the President of the University, 4 members of the Student Court elected by the Court, and the President of the University, as Chairman.

"The term 'student judicial body' employed in the last section above shall be construed as covering the Student Union, Pan-Hellenic Council, Student Court, Interfraternity Council, any existing dormitory council, and all other similar bodies which may be organized in the future." This power of appeal means that if any student feels that he has been given an unfair trial by any of the above named "student judicial bodies", he may call on this appellate court for a review of his case. Under the former system the only body to which a convicted student could appeal his case was the University Council. There is no student representation on this body.

Both the President and the University Council have approved of this revision and are definitely in favor of its being adopted by the students.

The United Nations' International Children's Emergency Fund drive will be explained to the student body. The purpose of placing this matter on the agenda is the desire on the part of Executive Council to determine the attitude of the student body towards drives of a charitable character. Information on this drive has just arrived and has not yet been assimilated to a proper degree to be presented at the present time.

HERE'S THE SCHEDULE FOR MT. DAY

9:30 a. m. Buses leave Waterman for Underhill Upper Parking Area. Bring your lunch!

12:30 Buses for R. O. T. C. members leave Waterman for Underhill.

4:30 Every one back at the buses for the return trip.

5:30 Back on the campus in time for supper and a evening of study.

VERMONT POSSESSES UNIQUE HERITAGE....

MOUNTAIN DAY OLD UVM CUSTOM-Say old issues of Cynic.....

Calling up ghosts of the past and delving into the history of the Annual University of Vermont Mountain Day it was found the annual trek to Mt. Mansfield was formally held in the fall on Columbus Day, October tenth, rather than on Memorial Day last year and on May 31 this year.

The October seventh 1938 issue of the Vermont Cynic says this about Mountain Day: "Legend and fable have it that many years ago it was the custom of college men and women to celebrate Columbus Day by packing their lunches on their backs, tossing their 'calc.' physics and what-not to the winds, and with a care-free air set out towards the top of Mt. Mansfield. At that time, the University administration made no provision for these hikers, and so it was that the hikes were held either during the afternoon or those students who wished to hike (and at that happy period in U. V. M. history, a great many students were hiking conscious) merely cut classes. After a time the administration deemed it advisable to legalize the wholesale 'cutting' and Mountain Day was made an official University holiday. Since its formal birth, the custom of the Mountain Day hike has alternately flourished and deteriorated until the University Outing Club offered a stearying hand and wholeheartedly worked to preserve this tradition."

Last year, the Outing Club revived Mountain Day as a University holiday, changing it from the fall to the spring and holding it on Memorial Day, instead of on Columbus Day in the Fall. This was done so that the students might be on their "Back Campus" (Mt. Mansfield) during the spring when the mountain side is in bloom with hundreds of varieties of spring flowers, and students want one brief "breather" out-of-doors before buckling down to the final spurge of study before final exams.

Mountain Day is the culmination of the Outing Club's activities of the year. Several day hikes have been held this quarter which have been well attended by various members of the University. Mountain Day, this coming Monday, will be the final day of the year on which all members of the Outing Club and of the University can get together for a hike.

Last year Mountain Day saw nearly one hundred students and faculty of the University climbing, crawling, and jumping over the rock strewn summit of the Mountain. Last year also saw the institution of having late buses go to the mountain Vermonters are unique in more ways than one. It is the fortune of the people of Vermont, the city of Burlington, and, more especially the UVM students that they possess one of the finest natural surroundings to be found anywhere. It is UVM's heritage to possess, in its own backyard, Mount Mansfield, whose natural assets, in any season, are scarcely rivalled in the East and yet how few UVM students know its splendors!

At a distance of some 18 miles from the campus, the mountain rises.

So striking is the similarity of its profile to that of a human face, its various parts are named by the features. Thus, there are the Chin, the highest point in Vermont (4393), the Nose (4065), the Forehead, the Lips, and the Adam's Apple. The Indian name for the mountain is Moze-o-de-be Wadso, or Moosehead Mountain; its present name is derived from the town of Mansfield in which it stood, but which was annexed to Stowe and Underhill many years ago.

Through the years there have grown a number of legends concerning the mountain, one of the most interesting of which is the tale of Frenchman's Pile. Many years ago a traveler was struck and killed by lightning at the spot. In later years, according to reliable reports from local climbers, the custom has been to add a stone to the pile. And many a hiker has lugged a small rock from the bottom to fulfill his part of the ritual!

The major trails and side trails on the mountain are extremely numerous, there being no less than 18 side and approach trails, in addition to the state-long Long Trail which traverses Mansfield's entire length. (Since the busses for Mountain Day will approach Mansfield from the West or Underhill side; the most convenient trails will be the Sunset Ridge, which leads from the bus parking lot to the Chin; and the Halfway House Trail, which one May follow to the Mount Mansfield Hotel and the Nose.)

Of great interest to many and within easy accessibility are the Cave of the Winds, which lies on the east side of the mountain and is approached by a short side trail; the Lake of the Clouds, a tiny pool north of the Chin and the highest body of water in the state; and, of course, many examples of glacial boulders and alpine plants.

And from any number of vantage points on the mountain are the magnificent views of the countryside. Spread below to the West, the Adirondacks with such peaks as White Face. To the North, and South are the easily recognizable peaks, Killington, Lincoln, Camel's Hump, and Jay; and, on a clear day, can one see the Presidential Range of the White Mountains, and Mount Royal in Montreal.

Student Athletic Com. Meets Alumni To Report On Findings

Al Pratt, '50 Moderates Parley on U. V. M. Sports

At a special dinner Wednesday, May 19 the Student Athletic Investigating committee met with the U. V. M. Alumni Council for an informative airing of their committee findings. The athletic investigating committee was appointed last April after an administration veto prevented a student representative from attending the Alumni Reunion in New York city. Sam Houston, CYNIC Sports Editor, appointed by the executive council to urge the New York alumni to bolster the U. V. M. sports set-up was later placed on the investigating committee under the chairmanship of Alan Pratt. The committee has been investigating the various phases of the sports situation since April, and by the arrangement with undergraduate co-ordinator Prof. Lyman S. Rowell the committee was able to meet the members of the Alumni Council last Wednesday. Alan Pratt chairman of the Student Committee conducted the meeting at which the various members of the committee read their reports to the Alumni.

Ursprung Speaks For Athletes

Sam Ursprung, committee member and varsity letterman in football and track cited the lack of administrative and faculty aid to U. V. M. athletes. Late afternoon tests and vacillating makeup rules on the part of the faculty, he said, have contributed to the difficulty of the athlete to engage in sports and keep up marks at the same time. Ursprung asked for a more equitable policy on the part of faculty in their treatment of athletes. The administration, he continued, has forgotten that the man participating in intercollegiate athletics needs a planned food program to insure good health and energy for sports. Ursprung climaxed his report by saying that there was no inducement for the U. V. M. athlete to play sports as long as discrimination continued. He suggested that a new scholarship plan be made available for men outstanding in athletics and showing a satisfactory scholastic record.

Houston Calls For Action

Sam Houston, CYNIC Sports Editor gave a comprehensive report on athletic equipment now on hand and on order. In many of the sports the present equipment seemed adequate, he said but in football and baseball he cited a lack of supplies, uniforms, for the freshman program especially. He urged the alumni to open all potential avenues for financial aid for the athletic department, and in addition demanded the laxity of the school in encouraging athletes of high caliber to enter the University. Houston also condemned Vermont's failure to build a class A ski team and suggested that skiing receive a top financial allotment.

Students Are Dissatisfied

J. D. Adams, CYNIC columnist, expressed his regret that the administration was not leading the present campaign or the betterment of sports at the University. It would seem, he said, that when the problem as great as the athletic situation captures the interest of the student body the press and many of the alumni that the administration must indifferently turn its back over to the students.

Adams issued the results of a sample poll conducted by committee member, Sam Smith. The poll indicated that the students were not satisfied with the present arrangement and believed that an alumni-student and faculty committee should control the sports program. Adams asked the alumni either assume complete control of athletics or banish administration.

Marker, Deforest To Tour Hostels In U. S. and Canada

Joan Marker and Mary DeForest, both students at U. V. M., are among a group of twenty students from eastern colleges who are going on a two months' tour of the United States and Canada. This trip is sponsored by the American Youth Hostel, and will cover about 10,000 miles, 1,000 miles of which is on bicycle.

The purpose of AYH is to help build a more peaceful world through the wide and happy comradeship of youth by providing youth hostel trips here and abroad, and making the educational benefits of travel youth's common heritage. Sponsored trips are open to any AYH passholder, regardless of age, race, religion or nationality.

The group is a co-educational unit of twenty people with a trained leader. It is made up of those who have expressed a sincere desire to share on a co-operative basis for compatibility, and at the same time, different enough to provide never-ending stimulation.

While traveling in the United States and Canada, the group goes from place to place by day coach, stopping at hostels and Y's during the night, or if weather permits, sleeping under the stars at national park camp grounds.

The Rolling Youth Hostel itself is a railroad car equipped with bunks, and cooking and sanitary facilities—a hostel which can be set down anywhere on the hostel trail to serve as a home base for side trips. Bikes travel in a baggage car nearby so they are ready for sightseeing tours of such places as Montreal, Banff, Lake Louise, Jasper, Vancouver Island, Mt. Ranier, Crater Lake, Yosemite, Grand Canyon and Washington, D. C.

Groups leave Northfield, Mass., national headquarters of AYH, between June 24 and June 30, and return about two months later.

John W. Aldrich, U. V. M. Professor-Elect, Speaks At English Dept. Tea

"Ivory tower criticism indicates decadence of modern writing," said John W. Aldridge, U. V. M. professor-elect for year 1948-49, at a recent English Department tea. Professor Aldridge is to direct a course in Creative Criticism next year at U. V. M. which, according to Professor Pope of the English Department, "will present the problems of present day criticism from the point of view of the critic, poet and novelist." It is especially important that this last word, "novelist," be included in definition. Professor Aldridge's biggest criticism of the modern day "scholar critic," (to be definitely separated from the book reviewer and literary journalist,) is that he is too removed from life, too concerned with criticism for the critic, and too adept at averting his face from the problems confronting the modern novelist and the discriminating reader. It is Professor Aldridge's opinion that if more of the scholar critics would turn their attention to the moral decadence of the novel, its literary value might be improved. It is obvious, however, that modern day criticism is too selective. Instead of constructively critizing all varieties of modern creativeness they are turning all their attention to modern symbolist poetry or back to literature of another age. "A member of our time can best understand the literature of our time," said Professor Aldridge in explaining why the emphasis, in his course, will be placed largely on modern literary criticism and critics such as T. S. Elliot, R. T. Blackmore, J. C. Ransome, Brooks and others.

John W. Aldridge is a graduate of the Universities of Chattanooga and California. He is now living in Vermont. The November Harper's carried an article of his entitled, "The New Generation of Writers," and he is now awaiting the publication of his new book on literary criticism.

DEAN'S OFFICE

Miss Kay Fayette of Burlington is offering a ride to California to any woman student or veteran and wife, to act as her companion. All expenses will be paid except the passenger's board and room. Applicant must be willing to travel all the way to California. She is willing to wait until the student's exams are over and expects to return sometime in August or September. There may be a chance that the student can secure a ride back with her at that time. For further information call 1093.

SIGMA PHI FRATERNITY

"Sigma Phi Sweetheart" and "After Dark" were the selections of the first prize winners in the Interfraternity Sing, the Sigma Phis. Last year they were also winners of first prize. Jack White was the leader, Mitch Carey, the accompanist, and Phil Robinson, the soloist.

Phi Delts and Tri Delts Gain Honorable Mention

Annual Event Marked By Keen Competition

The annual Interfraternity Sing, held Wednesday, May 26, in the Chapel, culminated in the awarding of first position to Sigma Phi fraternity, with honorable mention going to Phi Delta Theta. In the sorority battle, the decision was so close that a tie was finally declared between Pi Beta Phi and Kappa Alpha Theta, with congratulations going to Delta Delta Delta for a fine job.

Each group entering sang two numbers, which included at least one belonging to that particular organization. Introduced by Master of Ceremonies Frank Krug, Alpha Tau Omega was the opening group. Led by Ken Belding, they sang "Winter Song" and "Our Jewels." Sigma Nu, led by Danny Monieson, followed with "White Star of Sigma Nu" and "Water Boy," in which Monieson soloed. They were accompanied by Bill Knight. "Sigma Phi Sweetheart" and "After Dark" were the selections of the prize-winning Sigma Phi, who were also last year's winners. Jack White was the leader, Mitch Carey, the accompanist, and Phil Robinson, the soloist.

The first sorority to be heard was Pi Beta Phi, which, under the leadership of Mickey Mills, sang "Pi Phi Symphony" and "Pi Phi Sweetheart." Bobbie Hale sang the solo part. "Ciribiribin" was the lead off number for Kappa Alpha Theta and was followed by "Theta Lips." Mary Jane Farnham was the leader and Norma Carmichael the accompanist.

This was followed by "A Toast to Phi Delta Theta" and "Phi Delta Song" done, of course, by the Phi Delts, with Rod Smith on the podium and Norma Carmichael again at the piano. Lou Coddington did the solo. Delta Psi's "Song of Peace" and "Viva la Delta Psi" followed, under Ernie Stockwell's direction, and this in turn was succeeded by Sigma Alpha Epsilon. Bob Astone led SAE through "Violet" and "Hail to the Purple" with Armand Premo taking the solo part.

A group of seven girls, Mary Farrell, Joan Ganow, Janice Baird, Millicent James, Betty Davison, Shirley Dennis and Charlotte Smith sang the solo portion for Alpha Chi Omega. Debby Cobb led the entire sorority through "Alpha Chi Girls" and "Song of the Lyre." The spiritual, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" with solos by Sidney Levine and Billy Marsa was the opener for the Phi Sigs, followed by "Phi Sigma Delta Friendship," both led by Ben Bursten and accompanied by Wallace Lash.

Two sororities closed the competition. Delta Delta Delta, under the leadership of Jane Smith and accompanied by Jane O'Brien sang a medley of sorority songs and "Because." The final contestant was Alpha Epsilon Phi, who, directed by Lorraine Grody, sang two sorority variations of a Viennese Waltz and a group of Gilbert and Sullivan airs.

The judges, Prof. Robert E. Long and Prof. I. A. Pappoutsakis had such a difficult time in deciding the sorority contest that Pres. John Millis helped make the final decision.

While the judges were deliberating, the large audience was entertained by the Sigma Phi Four with some close barbershop harmony. The quartet, which consists of Phil Robinson, Stan Carey, Bob Ker, and Bill Chapin, is a member of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Singing in America, Inc., and has sung for this group, as well as others such as the Dean Hill Sugar Party, several times. The group was organized about three months ago and has since made itself available for professional engagements.

Daniels Describes Operation Crossroads To ROTC Cadet Corps

The story of the Bikini atom bomb tests was related by Col. Robert W. Daniels to an audience which packed the Fleming Museum Auditorium Tuesday evening, May 25. The entire Corps of Cadets of the U. V. M. ROTC was among those who were present to hear this program which was arranged by the University Research Club and the Military Department.

Colonel Daniels personally witnessed the two atom bomb explosions at Bikini atoll. He formerly lived in Burlington and was a member of the Vermont class of '15. He also attended M. I. T., The Field Artillery School and the Army War College.

Briefly sketching the plans and purposes of Operation Crossroads, Colonel Daniels related some of his own observations and experiences. He described the appearance of the actual explosion as "a flash, brilliant as a piece of the sun." He explained the complex preparations for the test to determine the effect of the bomb on weapons and ammunition, food and clothing, and even on live animals. "It was certainly the most completely instrumented test the United States has ever held."

Considering the military applications of the atomic bomb, Colonel Daniels reported that it was found that damage is inflicted in three ways. Flash burns are caused the instant of the explosion. A blast effect follows but this effect has been over-rated. Dangerous radioactivity lingers long after the explosion. However he remarked that the atom bomb has failed to bring an actual new concept of war and that "in the military we are inclined to look upon this new weapon not as one to take the place of everything that has gone before, but just as one more."

Unfortunately, the movies of the test that were supposed to be shown did not arrive. However, those who are interested in this subject should visit the atomic energy display by Life Magazine that is now on the second floor balcony of the museum.

Brackenridge To Head WAA Council Next Year

Over sixty girls belonging to the Women's Athletic Association went to the picnic at Rock Point on Thursday, May 26. Immediately upon arrival a huge campfire was built for the cooking of frankfurters, and supper followed. A few girls went swimming in the lake before supper.

The girls were then taken to the Outdoor Chapel for W.A.A. exercises. The awarding of cups for the year went as follows: The smallest house with most participation, Coughlin's House; for the largest house with most participation, Allen House. The basketball cup went to Team 5, and is in the keeping of Roberta Bicknell. The badminton cup was won by Mary Andrews and Jane Hooper.

Thirty-one girls received the WAA emblem for participation according to credits received and class rank. Members of the All Sports Club then were honored by being presented a yellow rose. The jackets are to be received later.

The new WAA Council members were announced as follows: President, Janet

Each year, a new class enters the University, full of great expectations and hopes for his first year in the realms of higher education. Like as not, he has heard great things about the location of the University and its fine natural surroundings. At any rate, few can deny the qualities of such natural attributes when they first arrive.

The college year generally starts with its best foot forward. There are get-acquainted dances, a Freshman camp for the girls, and, generally, an extremely successful Pep Rally. The Freshmen, at any rate have the spirit; and many a "bitter" upperclassman is forced to admit that this year, it may be different.

What happens? When does the wide-spread apathy invade the entire campus? How can it be that upwards of 2000 people can crowd one pep rally, to the wide-eyed amazement of the townspeople and older residents of the University, and that 300 students can show enough interest for a second rally? How can it be possible that, when the Outing Club, potentially the greatest organization on campus, tries to revive the pre-war custom of Mountain Day and is willing to supply the beverage and transportation, that the total of 60 students ventures to make the trip?

Contrary to many opinions, the CYNIC does not feel that U. V. M. students are "different;" that they "don't seem to have the pep other schools do." Students are students the world over; and human nature is a universal factor. The trouble does not lie with the students, there can be no doubt as to their potential heights of greatness. The trouble seems to lie rather in the leadership. Movements can not be started and left with the hope that "someone else" will carry on. One pep rally may be a fine success; but one must work just as hard to make the next a success, also.

A fine thing was instituted a short time ago—and we hope it will not be left to die—when President Millis spoke to the combined membership of the Honor Societies and Student Government. For the first time, perhaps not all the students, but at least a representative portion of them, heard the story of the finances of this University, and "the story behind the scenes" of the forthcoming raise in tuition. For the first time to our knowledge, everyone present had the opportunity to know the real reasons for the change. There was no opportunity for misconstruing the motives of the President and the Trustees, because the facts were there.

What will be the outcome of such a meeting. From past experience, perhaps, nothing will come of it; but it is the CYNIC's sincere wish, for the good of the school and all involved, that from this meeting something might spring forth into something greater. Gatherings in which differences could at least be aired, could be the greatest basis for unity on this campus. Call it the personal touch, or what you will, such a thing is invaluable. The logical proponents of such meetings are the President and the Student Government.

THE LIFE OF A ZOO STUDENT'S ROOMMATE

"Look! I found the most interesting thing inside my cat today!"

Federal Convention Of World Democra. Asked By O. Roberts

To The Editor

May 17, 1948

I was quite impressed by the caliber of the debate on the campuses of our nation while the Marshall Plan was in the course of enactment. Most of us agree that Congress could not wisely have done otherwise; but I should like to pose two further questions for consideration: Is it enough? Is it of the right sort?

Is there not a better way than the Marshall Plan for restoring peace and plenty among free men? This experiment, like all others directed to the solution of internal and international economic problems by dealings between sovereign nations, can at best be only a palliative. For the answer to these problems must be not economic, but political.

Suppose this country had continued as it was under the Articles of Confederation. The States, confronted by the same problems that nations face today in a world divided by national sovereignty, would have ended in disaster. Our United States now stand as proof that a common economy is built most successfully upon a common federal citizenship.

The time has come now for the United States to face these facts by:

1. Immediately convoking a federal convention of the democracies to work out a plan to achieve recovery and peace by federating them in a Trans-Atlantic Union.

2. Extending aid to Western Europe for the coming fiscal year as provided in present plans, while making it clear that this is aimed at gaining the time needed to achieve Union.

Such a union would federate the democracies in a single government, providing unity in the solution of those overall problems which no national government can solve either for itself or for others. At the same time, the diversity in local traditions, customs, and forms of government which the people of the federated nations cherish and wish to perpetuate would be retained.

In this way, we will in effect be doing for the democratic world what the authors of our Constitution did for this nation, when in 1787 they established our own federal union. I have been particularly encouraged by signs that many groups of students (such as the Student Committee for Federal Union at 700 Ninth Street, N.W., Washington 1, D. C.) are translating the lesson of history into the growing demand for such an immediate trans-Atlantic federal union of the free. To all those, young or old, who are dedicated to saving freedom and peace for man—my best wishes for success.

Sincerely yours,

OWEN J. ROBERTS,

Letters to Editor

May 20, 1948

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

It is not often that I take exception to a CYNIC editorial but in fairness to myself and the other busy people who act as judges of the Junior Week Peerade am compelled to say a word in answer to the editorial of May 19, in which it was intimated that the judges were not interested in their selection of the winner in the Peerade.

I have acted as a judge on many occasions but never when it was so difficult to render a fair decision as was the case this year. I believe the reasons to be found in the circumstances under which the judges were forced to review the Peerade rather than in bias or bad judgment on their part.

Prior to last year the preliminary judging was done before the Peerade started. The judges had an opportunity to see each float as they were drawn upon the Peerade. Row, with leisure to note details and compare one float with another on the basis of the rating points set up by the Committee.

This year we were hurried down to City Hall where the floats passed much too closely spaced to allow for more than a cursory view of each. While I was noting on the rating sheet the points to be given to the first two, the third float almost out of sight. Later we were taken back to Williams Street to see them again we were held up in traffic so that the first group had already passed before the judges arrived. Under those conditions it was impossible to form a proper judgment of Appearance, Value, Originality, Workmanship, and General Appearance. I was completely at a loss how to figure points under such conditions and I've no doubt the other judges had the same difficulty. Speaking only for myself I wish to say that being nearsighted I never recognized no one on the floats and no idea which was which until after the decision was made. Incidentally I did not give first place to either of the floats which won.

To avoid such a situation in the future I would suggest that the judges be allowed to see the floats before the Peerade leaves the campus. If that is done I am sure that a fair decision will result.

Miss Gladys Neiburg,
Robinson Hall
University of Vermont
Burlington, Vermont

Dear Miss Neiburg:

I have just read your item in the CYNIC of May 26th and I would like to wish you success and assure you of my moral support to your suggestion.

I have become of the opinion that the probably represented an archaic and less system in my feeling that the present lack of class organizations on the campus had much to do with the lack of interest among the students. When the present Student Government replaced the present class officers and class meetings that a valuable nucleus of action was lost.

Again, let me assure you that if it is any way in which I can be of assistance in supporting your plan, you may free to call on me. I believe we all are forward to a rebirth of a genuine university interest and spirit of cooperation on the part of students, faculty and administration.

Sincerely yours,

Museum Exhibit Portrays Early American Tastes

The Fleming Museum Association presented a Preview of their new Early American Room and 19th Century Glass Exhibit last Thursday night from 7.30 to 9. This Early American room, which occupies the third floor Art Gallery is now open to the public. The sides of the room have been partitioned into several alcoves representing several typical rooms of the early American period, which have been furnished with the authentic reproduction wallpaper suitable for the room and furnished in a typical manner. The entire exhibit was arranged by Mrs. Gladys G. Woods, curator of the museum.

As one enters the doorway the first alcove is an early American hall with a beautiful southern colonial sideboard bearing a gold luster collection of mugs and sets. Moving on to the next alcove one finds a typical kitchen of this period with the broad fireplace, pine walls, spinning wheels and various household implements. This section contains the cradle which once rocked Joseph Waterman. The next section is the living-music room. This section contains, among other things, a grandfather and grandmother clock, and several graceful early Victorian pieces. The next section is a dining room with a Sheraton style table, sideboard and chairs. These are made all the more interesting because of their association with the Tupper family, one of Vermont's oldest and the realization that such articles, before the day of the railroad, could have reached early Vermont only by cart or wagon. Along one wall is a collection of dresses and uniforms of this period including the Julia Holt wedding dress and the Horace Sawyer collection. Several of the hostesses were some of the charming gowns belonging to Mrs. Sawyer, whose husband was one of the heroes of the War of 1912.

One of the gems of the entire collection is a miniature of Ira Allen painted by the famous miniature painter, Edward Greene Malbone. Near it is a less famous miniature of his wife, Jerusha Allen. Other famous articles to be found in this same room are the trowel with which the Marquis Lafayette laid the cornerstone of the Old Mill, the Ethan Allen letter announcing his capture of Fort Ticonderoga and the Mason's Phi Beta Kappa key, the first one given to a woman at the University of Vermont.

In another section is the child's chair belonging to John Purple Howard, the man who joined the three sections of the Old Mill into one, and to the construction of the alumna took off the old dome of that same building. John Howard was the man who built the fountain in the city park and set up the Linnis Howard Relief Fund in honor of his sister.

Another feature of the Preview was the opening of the Early American glass exhibit on the first floor. Hanging on the wall in this room is a hand-woven blanket made by Bessie Taylor of Willisville, for whose sake Ethan Allen once stopped a battle. As he and his men were marching to meet the British they passed a small settlement where the people were greatly upset over the disappearance of two small girls, one of whom was Bessie. Ethan dispatched his men with guns and in a short time the two girls were found and returned to their parents. When the Green Mountain Boys resumed their march and their battle.

The glass collection is particularly interesting containing some examples of Portland Glass, Hobnail glass, and some charming examples of Victorian milk glass including one butterdish with a likeness of Dewey on the cover. (Not the New York Dewey, but the Manila one). Another interesting milk glass article, is a mustard dish in the shape of a cow, with a spoon of the mustard pot forming his

Gold Key Members Name Herriot Pres.

The Gold Key, Men's Sophomore Honorary Society, held their first meeting of the year May 27, 1948 in Room 263 of the Waterman building. The meeting was presided over by the newly elected officers, Bob Herriot, president; Jake Bailey, vice-president; and Ed Costello as Corresponding Secretary-Treasurer. Student Government President Harry Miele gave a talk on the duties of the Gold Key during a school year. One of the chief of these is to aid and assist the Athletic Association at all times, particularly in greeting and providing for the needs of visiting athletic teams. Another function which the Gold Key is to undertake this year, at their own request, is that of managing Sophomore Day. With the aid of the Women's Sophomore Society, the Sophomore Aides, this day will consist of the Freshmen-Sophomore Fountain Fight, Cane Rush and the annual Sophomore Hop. Before the war these activities were always handled by the Gold Key and the Sophomore Aides, but due to the nonfunction of all honorary societies except Boulder, during the war these activities were turned over to that society.

The Gold Key is also planning to take over the management of the baseball scoreboard at Centennial Field for the rest of this season and next are now working on some plan of notifying U. V. M. students of baseball, basketball and football games all season. Another tradition which the Gold Key is hoping to reestablish is the old custom of freshman beanies. This motion will have to be voted on by the Student Government, of course, with the probable exception of all veterans. Next year the Gold Key hopes to have Society pins and sweaters for all its members, including new ones who may be added at any time with due thought to their scholastic and extracurricular activities.

University Coeds Floored By Rugged Dancing Routine

There is an old saying that if the dress rehearsal goes badly, the show is sure to be a success. Proof of this was the recent recital put on by the Modern Dance Workshop. To see the finished product, the casual observer must have assumed that everything has gone like clockwork—but he was wrong. And if he needs proof of this, all he has to do is ask either Joyce Viventi or Betty Simms!

These girls like to dance. It is a fine form of recreation and expression—but if anyone had ever told them it was dangerous, the girls would have—in the common vernacular—said he was nuts! But they learned!

The minor tragedy, which insured a successful performance opening night occurred, of course, at the dress rehearsal. The girls had been practicing all afternoon. In putting some final touches on a little number called "Depression" (oh! so aptly named!), Betty and Joyce started toward each other from opposite sides of the stage to a dramatic leap in the center. In was dramatic all right. Betty's right hand made a four-point landing on Joyce's face and Joyce made a four-point landing on the floor. After ice-packs and rest did their job, she was all right though and able to go on.

Helen Schnitnikoff Raises Chickens At UVM Girls' Dormitory

Have you ever wondered what city people who love the country do about it? Most of them do nothing at all, except perhaps some wishful thinking. But there is one girl here from New York City who does more than just that—she has adopted the way of life she loves.

Helen Schnitnikoff came to U. V. M. last year to study Horticulture. She did not have an opportunity to develop a real hobby, however, until this year when she moved to Rooney's. When she moved there in the fall, one of the first things she noticed was an empty garage in which Mr. Rooney had at one time raised chickens. Relying upon a natural aptitude and one summer's experience on a farm, she asked if she might use the space to raise her own chickens—and that is how she went into business for herself.

After buying twelve hens, she suggested to Mr. Rooney that eggs could be a medium of barter and so she began giving him a stipulated number each month in exchange for her room—a novel form of rent. In addition she started selling her surplus to private parties which include the home management houses and her biggest customer, the Weather Bureau.

Not only is she her own producer and salesman but Helen also does her own distribution by way of bicycle. Another job that she does herself is to weigh and sort the eggs according to weight and size—a procedure for which she has special equipment in her room. Before packing each egg in a carton, she cleans it with sandpaper and a wet rag. Her record of non-breakage is remarkable considering the delicate objects with which she works. She is especially proud of having taken eight dozen eggs home one vacation without breaking any.

Occasionally there is an accident, however, and with philosophical good nature she cleans up from her industrial hazard. One story that she tells concerning breakage involves her habit of placing eggs on the top of the window ledge to cool. She had gone out leaving two there when Barbara Beecher came into her room, opened the window and leaned out to talk to a friend. They say that eggs make an excellent shampoo.

As chickens generally lay less in the fall and winter months, Helen attempted to increase the output by leaving lights on at night so as to keep them awake and eating more. This method netted her from nine to twelve eggs a day (an extraordinary number). Now that she depends upon normal daylight hours, she finds that production has decreased rather than increased. This does not bother her, however, because it is in the winter that the prices are higher.

Raising so many eggs, Helen has to eat a lot, also, and sometimes, when business is poor, a great many more than she would care to. Because of this, she has experimented with a number of recipes and has really developed some good ones. One, a cake recipe calling for seven eggs would really solve her business problems were it in common use. If every cake used seven eggs, she would have no worries about selling them!

REGISTRATION WORKERS

Students who have worked at registration in the past and who wish to work next fall, (Wednesday, September 29 and Thursday, September 30) should sign up in the Registrar's office immediately. Other students who are interested should also register, since a number of the regular workers will graduate this June.

Honor Societies Discuss UVM's Financial Set-up

In the attempt to enlighten students' views on the financial status of the University and to explain the factors behind the forthcoming increase in tuition, President Millis recently presented a talk to Honor Society members and members of Student Government. A résumé of the talk follows:

President Millis began by stating the four functions of a University: (1) To teach, (2) research, (3) extension service, (4) auxiliary ("peripheral") enterprises, (such as housing, feeding the students; the bookstore, the farm, the dairy, etc.).

To finance the auxiliary enterprises, or sales division, a "break-even" system is employed. Some parts may lose, while some gain. Incidentally, the dorms are operated below cost, according to Millis.

The extension service is maintained by appropriations from the Federal, state, and local governments. Research is maintained by federal and state appropriations, and by gifts from individuals, foundations, firms, etc.

The primary job of the University, that of teaching, is financed in several ways: appropriations, endowments, sales, and tuition. Under the Morrill Act and its amendment, the federal government makes appropriations to it, as does the state government, also. Money is received in the form of interest, dividends, etc., on funds of interested people who have made endowments. However, many times, this money is earmarked for specific purposes, such as scholarships, new books for the library, building funds (the Waterman, the chapel, and the museum), or for the salary of specific professorships.

As for sales, the University performs many additional functions. For example, the Medical School furnishes its services to many of the surrounding hospitals. Lastly, tuition is self-explanatory.

To explain the factors behind the increase in costs of running a university, President Millis outlined several points. He cited as two representative budgets those of the years '42-'43 and '47-'48 (President Millis came in 1941). In the year '42-'43, not counting tuition, the University received $317,635.92; while in '47-'48, it received only $298,806.89. With an enrollment of 1200 students in '42-'43 and a tuition of $350, there was $615 for the education of each student. In '47-'48, with an enrollment of 2600 students, although there was a higher tuition of $370, there was only $500 for each student.

Why the decrease in income, excluding tuition? Although the federal appropriations remained the same, the state fund dropped $35,000. The reason: '42-'43 was an especial year for the finances and existence of this University, and the state gift was unusually high. Since '42-'43 the endowment fund increased, as did money from sales. However, miscellaneous funds (such as rental on buildings) decreased, the reason being that in '42-'43, one-third of the Waterman Building was rented to Northeast Airlines for pilot-training.

Thus, there are two big factors: the enrollment has doubled and the money for the education of each student has decreased from $615 to $500. And now, overshadowing all, is the factor of inflation.

Normally, without the added factor of inflation, there would be means to cut down on costs. One would be increased efficiency: for example, filling each class to its capacity actually increases the administrative cost proportionately far less.

Therefore, under the existing conditions, there is but one solution: an increase in the tuition. This increase, however, is greatly modified by one factor, approved by the trustees: additional fees (lab fees, piano rentals, locker fees, etc.) will not be assessed directly to each individual's account, but an average of all fees will be found and added to the tuition of each student, regardless of his course. Thus, the engineer will, in the future, pay the same tuition paid by a music student. Under this system, it is hoped that much of the additional costs of accounting, etc., can be eliminated.

16 Girls Initiated By Staff and Sandal

New Staff and Sandal members were initiated Friday, May 7, at Southwick, by the outgoing members. The new members are: Phyllis Barron, Betsy Bigelow, Dorothy Brau, Louise Gee, Gerry Goeltz, Harriet Gregory, Jean Hurlburt, Doris Jones, Millicent Jocelyn, Katherine Kidder, Barbara Larrabee, Rae MacTiernan, Jean Ritchie, and Rose-Mary Traynor. A banquet at Happy Acres followed the initiation.

Elections were held on Tuesday, May 14. Officers are: President, Gerry Goeltz; Treasurer, Jean Ritchie; and Secretary, Louise Gee.

On Wednesday, May 25, the new members installed Betty Simms and Lillian Cotnoir into their group. Appointed were permanent committee chairmen, Rae MacTiernan, Millicent Joslyn, Lillian Cotnoir and Barbara Larrabee.

Discussion followed, and projects for the coming year were considered. The group decided on bi-monthly meetings during the coming year. Another meeting will be announced this year.

Freshman Teams Complete Successful Year

Kittens Take 3 Straight To Finish Season With .875

By BOB HERRIOTT

The UVM Kittens bounced back from their stunning defeat at the hands of the Mikemen Frosh to sweep their next three games and finish the season with the impressive record of seven victories and one defeat. On Friday they met and defeated the Clarkson Yearlings 7-2, on Saturday they journeyed to Montpelier to down Vermont Junior College 7-1, while on Monday they really celebrated the holiday by beating the previously undefeated and highly overconfident St. Michael's nine 6-1.

CLARKSON

Dom Cote worked on the hill against Clarkson and pitched three hit shutout ball before being touched for a run in the sixth. Previously Clarkson's only defeat had been when Don McQuinn had shut them out earlier this season, and so this victory by Cote gave the Kittens complete mastery over the New York state team.

As in all their previous wins the Kittens struck fast, scoring in the first inning. Webster, leading off, was safe on the third baseman's error. Goulet sacrificed him to second, where Guiliani drove him home with a sharp single through the box.

The Frosh scored again in the third. Fitts singled to right to open the inning and then promptly stole second. Webster walked. Cubby Goulet then laid down another sacrifice, but when the pitcher handled the ball poorly all hands were safe. Guiliani then hit a sharp hopper to the shortstop who relayed the ball to second to get Goulet, but letting Fitts score. This left runners on first and third. Big Bob Twiss then doubled to center field, scoring Webster and putting Guiliani on third. Schofield flied to deep right, scoring Guiliani after the catch. Dom Cote then picked up the first of his two hits, scoring Twiss and putting the Kittens out in front 5-0.

In the sixth Goulet singled and Guiliani was hit by a pitch. Bob Twiss then polled one of McGinty's pitches out over the center fielder's head, an easy homer for anyone else, but Bob isn't the fastest person around the bases and all he could get was to third. However, in his eagerness to get as far as possible he missed second base. The Clarkson keystone man spotted this, called for the ball and touched the bag. This cut Bob's hit down to a single and after a long debate the umpires (erroneously) ruled that only one run could score.

Clarkson picked up single tallies in the fifth and sixth innings. In the fifth Walker walked, Kopchik singled him to second and O'Brien singled him home. In the sixth it was the same thing as a walk, and two singles drove across another tally. This time McGinty came home on Gatta's blow.

Bob Twiss, Cubby Goulet and Dom Cote sparked the Kitten attack with two bingles apiece, while O'Brien, the visitor's big catcher led his team with a single and a long triple.

VT. JUNIOR COLLEGE

With that victory under their belts the Kittens then journeyed to V. J. C. This time it was Doc McBride on the hill in his second starting assignment of the season. Doc had previously twirled one hit shutout ball for five innings against R. J. C. to win 14-0, and but for a streak of wildness in the last of the ninth he might have had another shutout. In going the whole route he gave up only four hits and four walks to register his second win.

Only three men batted for the Kittens in the first inning, but in the second they garnered their first tally as George Schofield drove the ball over the left fielder's head for a triple, and scored when the shortstop's relay was sloppy.

Two runs came across in the second when an attempted pick-off throw to first went wild for a three base error. A walk, a hit and a deep fly ball in the third made the score 4-0.

In the eighth things really happened. With two men out Doug Knab, catching his first ball game for the Kittens, singled. Leo Johnson then drove one at the shortstop who let the ball go through for an error, scoring Knab. Pandolfe then dropped in a "Texas League" double scoring Johnson, and McBride's single, his third hit of the day drove in Pandolfe.

V. J. C. scored in the last of the ninth. Dodge was safe when Pandolfe missed a grounder for an error. He then went to second on a pass ball by Cote, who was showing his versatility by playing "Bill Dickey for a day." (It seemed that beating Clarkson the day before wasn't enough for Dom, so when Knab developed a bruised hand, Cote volunteered to replace him.) McBride then tried to pick Dodge off second, but when Pandolfe failed to play the bag the ball went into center field, putting Dodge on third, with one out. Atkins then walked. Richardson, in an effort to break up McBride's shutout tried to bunt and after fouling off the first pitch, popped on to McBride on the mound who quickly threw to third for the double play on Dodge.

That made it two out, but Doc wasn't quite out of it yet. He hit Mikolich, the next batter, and was then touched for a single by LaRose, driving at Atkins with VJC's only tally.

It was a very nicely pitched ball game by McBride who also showed ability at the plate by banging out three hits, two singles and a double. Besides McBride the Kittens had heavy stick men in Schofield and Goulet, who stroked triples, and Pandolfe who got a double.

Frosh Track Team Sweeps All 3 Meets

By BOB HERRIOTT

The UVM Kittens, coached by Norm Strassburg, ran only three out of a scheduled five track meets in a very abbreviated season. However, they swept all three, beating Burlington High School twice and Lyndon Institute once, and in doing so showed great promise as a team, and also as individuals.

Probably the most outstanding runners of the team were Howie Haddigan, and Russ Mahoney. The former a dash man and the latter the Kittens' record-smashing distance man.

Haddigan who competed scholastically for New York Military Academy before the war was a half miler until his last year of competition. In the latter part of his senior year he decided to try the 100 and in his third competitive race negotiated the distance in 10 seconds flat. He spent two years in the army and then entered UVM last fall as a freshman.

This past season he competed in ten events and out of these copped nine firsts and a second. Oddly enough that second was in the broad jump at Lyndon where, though making his best jump of the year, he placed behind Fred Allard's record smashing jump by two inches. It is believed that if he had concentrated on any one event he could have easily broken a record, but his desire to be a team man was greater than that to be a record holder, and so he spent his time on four events instead of one.

Russ Mahoney, the other half of the Kitten's one-two punch was the team's distance man. Russ ran both the 880 and the mile in the three meets and came out undefeated in all six races. His best race was against Burlington when he ran the mile in 4:40.5, despite a bad case of the shin plints, to further lower the freshman record which he had set two weeks before. He is a transfer to UVM from Mass. State at Devens where last year he ran a 4:27 mile against Ted Vogel of Tufts.

The jumping was taken care of by Dick Fink, in the high jump, and Bob Herriott in the pole vault. Both men had two firsts and a third to show for their efforts. Fink also took a whack at the hurdles and won against Lyndon in his first start.

In the weights the Kittens had Dave Hinkley and Allen Hitchcock. Both men developed into good shot putters and discus men and could also pick up a few points in the javelin when necessary.

Review of Frosh Season Indicates Help for Varsity

By BOB HERRIOTT

By trimming St. Michael's Frosh the UVM Kittens closed their 1948 season Monday with a record of seven victories and one defeat, giving Coach Maynard a two-year record at UVM of seventeen victories and one defeat.

Among the individuals who have shown to be promising are Dom Cote and Don McQuinn, the first as a pitcher, batter and all around player, and the latter as a pitcher. Cote started the season as a pitcher and filled in in the outfield on non-pitching days. Dom led the team in batting with a healthy .391 average, had two victories and one defeat, and twenty-four strikeouts in twenty-two innings as a pitcher.

McQuinn, as strictly a pitcher, had won and loss record of three victories and no defeats. In compiling those three victories he worked thirty-one innings and had a string of twenty-five scoreless innings before being touched for one run by St. Michael's. This feat gave him the amazing earned run average of 0.00 and makes him about the best pitcher in his class in the state. In those thirty-one innings he gave up only nineteen hits while striking out thirty-five men.

These two men were the basic contributors to the team, but there were many others who helped to make this season as good as it was, and no one can be singled out as the outstanding player. They all worked together, that, and the instructive and helpful coaching of Don Maynard made the team what they were, a winning outfit.

were many men who never took a hit but yet who, through their second and thirds, aided the cause almost as much as the winners. The most prominent of these is Jimmy Porter. Jim saw no action but Russ Mahoney's heels as he finished second to him on four occasions. (Continued on page 5)

Vermont Beats State Champs In Final Game

Before a shirt-sleeved Memorial Day crowd at Centennial Field, the U. V. M. team defeated the Middlebury College team by a 3-1 score. It was the first time in state competition for the Blue Devils to mark the second victory over the "Cats."

Stimets and Jim Newman pitched a real pitchers duel and the final tally for the Catamounts was sufficient for the well pitching

Middlebury had threatened in the first inning as a result of two well executed batters. Wendy bore down to get the next batter. In the home half of the game, Heather walked, "Pat" Hurley, who was fine afternoon both in the field and on the plate, singled through the

Heath stopping at second. On a play which misfired, Heath took St. Gelais struck out, but on an error by catcher Corbisiero, Heath scored. Hurley moved to second. Ballard moved up on a wild pitch, both runners moved up a base. Then "Pat" Hurley displayed real base running as he came home on a long wind up by Newman. The Middlebury pitcher got Collier

Averill on strikes to end the inning. In the eighth, Newman had allowed three hits but his mates had committed three too costly errors which resulted in Vermont scoring. Wendy, although touched for hits in every inning, was faring equally well and helped by a sloppy double plays.

The 8th Vermont registered its third run on Hurley's double to right center. He went to third on a wild pitch and as Ballard was being thrown out on a grounder to third.

The ninth produced the only serious contest made by the Panthers, Maurer singled down the third base line. Hurley hit down Jack Valentine's drive and for extra bases with a fine running play in left center. Buonerba reached on an error by "Bob" St. Gelais and scored on the play. After Buonerba was picked off first base on a quick throw from catcher Art Collier, Corbisiero reached on an error by St. Gelais. They then banged a hit through third to the winning run was at the plate, but they got the all important third out as St. Gelais hit Masters grounded into a double play.

Without a doubt, the game was one of the better contests played at Centennial Field this season. Jack Valentine, Middlebury's left fielder finds time between the game and baseball to instruct swimming during the summer on Nantucket Isle. It looks more evident that Vermont have an excellent baseball team next year, with the addition of fine material in the freshman squad. Newman struck out twelve men which rates he has a great deal of stuff.

'Big Green' Mist Befogs Cats 5-0

By GLENN FAYE

A big green mist which blew in from Hanover, N. H. settled over Centennial field last Saturday afternoon and befogged every Vermont attempt for victory as the Green and Gold dropped a surprisingly interesting baseball game to Dartmouth 5-0. The outcome came as not too much of a surprise to most of the loyal fans after they saw the Indians go through their warm-up drills and batting practice.

Manny Setien of Barre toed the slab for the Cats and though he was outshone by the Green's Lockyer he had by far the harder job as he allowed but six singles by the Indians powerful thumpers. Lockyer, who throws the ball as if it were jet-propelled, applied the whitewash brush to the Gardnermen as he rationed out two hits.

Bill Flanders, who no doubt will receive the Good Housekeeping medal for the most miscues in the least strategic situations, set up two of the Indians runs in the sixth inning as he threw wild twice in succession. Flanders was later removed in favor of Stan Grandfield who finished the game at the hot corner.

Dartmouth scored in the first inning as Frechette opened with a bunt, stole second, and trotted home as Hank Mueller singled to center. Vermont threatened to score in the seventh as "Thumbs" Tudhope lashed one of Lockyer's favorite pitches down the left field foul line and pulled into second base on all fours. But he went no further as the side was retired in short order.

In the dashes were Al Tavares and Art Leavitt, while in the hurdles the Kittens had Glenn Wheelock and Chad Arms. Tavares also competed in the broad jump while Arms had a first to his credit in the 440.

Individually and collectively the Kittens had a good team. Their spirit was exceptional and they certainly deserve the title of "U.V.M.'s only undefeated team of 1947-48."

All men who have more than five points will, pending action of the University Athletic Council, receive their numerals.

on an error, two hits and a wild pitch. Dom Cote opened the inning by singling. George Schofield then hit one on the ground to short and both men were safe when the throw to second went wild. They both advanced on a wild pitch by Devaney and then scored on a single by Stan Fitts who was back behind the plate after a short vacation.

In the sixth the Kittens scored two more. Cote walked, Schofield popped to the first baseman, and Frank Pandolfe tripled to bring in the first run. Fitts then singled again to send Pandolfe across the plate with the fourth tally. Another run came in the seventh as Guiliani singled, went to second when an attempt at a pickoff went wild, and scored on a single by Webster.

The final score for the Frosh came in the ninth when Guiliani again singled, went to second on an infield out, to third on a fly out, and scored on an error by the third baseman.

St. Michael's score came in the last of the fifth as Naples led off with a triple and was doubled home by Zucknieovich.

It was a great victory for the Frosh, for it was the game they wanted most. Their play showed that they deserved to win and Coach Don Maynard and his team deserve a lot of credit for slowing down "The Big Train from Across the River."

Dance Accident

Then it was that Betty discovered that she too was a casualty. Joyce's face must be harder than it looks, for that right wrist began to get larger and larger. The next day it had taken up temporary residence in a cast, and slapped Betty right off of the program.

In case you saw the show (yes, it did go on), Joyce really was there and the girl with her in the ill-fated "Depression" was Bevvy Barker, whom Joyce trained to replace Betty, and "The Old Devil Moon" found itself a solo by that sturdy Viventi gal.

The moral of all this is that the show must go on—despite such things as one sprained wrist and—if you looked carefully—one artfully concealed, but very existent, black and blue face.

PHI DELT SPRING FORMAL

King Neptune ruled at the Phi Delt spring formal. Surrealistic art, including sharks, mermaids, and a prehistoric trilobite (a geology student's nightmare), formed 439 College Street to Davy Jones' locker.

Phi Delt's Spring Formal Features Aquatic Setting

At the Phi Delt spring formal held recently Neptune ruled as king of the evening deep in the subterranean haunts of Davy Jones' locker. Favorable comment was heard when the dates of the brothers first encountered the deep sea atmosphere of fish nets and driftwood in the well.

A completely transformed room greeted the arrivals. Local "artiste" had sacrificed their conservative drawing and painting (No. 26) reputation by coming down from the upper garrets of the house. After donning diving helmets to obscure their own works they painted surrealist sunfish, sharks, battling Tarzans, and placid mermaids with abandon. A quick trilobite was cooked up by a Geology student. A lowered blue ceiling with black seaweed streamers supported this effect of murky depth.

As the couples entered, a faint, shimmering light indicated the corner of the genial chaperones, Mr. and Mrs. cardi, Mr. Truman Webster and Kelly held forth. On the further of the room, the Mikemen's music can be heard rippling forth from the sconced hulk of an old treasure ship which the letters, "Spanish Phi" still be perceived. The formal attire many of U. V. M.'s loveliest lovely floating around the floor in the arms their dates, complimented the inform of the background.

To finish the evening and stir up a marine stardust in the girl's eyes, silver bracelets with cut Greek block letters of the fraternity were given. The ing knee deep in happiness, swimming bliss, the dance ended and the dance faced the prospect of the sterile life the soda fountain again.

Justices To Be Chosen At UVM General Elections

Six new justices will be elected to the U. V. M. Student Court in a school-wide election on October 21. Three of the new judges will be drawn from the College of Arts and Sciences, two from Technology, and one from Agriculture. All candidates must be Juniors—members of the class of '50.

Petitions are currently available at the information booth on the main floor of Waterman. A prospective candidate must obtain 100 signatures by undergraduate students of any of the several colleges. All petitions are due by 9:00 a.m., Saturday, October 16, and should be turned in at the information booth.

It has never been the custom for Student Court candidates to electioneer as prior to Student Government and Kake Walk polling. Official posters on the bulletin boards will give all the pertinent election information, and a candidate who has been accepted as a nominee may have a photograph of himself displayed on a special board at the polls if he wishes.

The U. V. M. Student Court, although a relatively new addition to student government on campus, has increased its scope and influence since its recent inception. Last year the Court had a busy time, trying a total of 13 cases. Having student judicial jurisdiction over the general body of University rules and regulations, the Student Court's cases have ranged from alleged dishonesty on examinations to accusations of drinking on school property.

The twelve justices represent every undergraduate college of the University. Once elected by the entire student body, a justice holds his position for the duration of his undergraduate career. Half the Court representation is elected each year.

Proceedings of the Student Court are conducted in a manner similar to that used by civil courts of justice, and they are generally open to the public. The Chief Justice acts in the capacity of presiding officer or judge. The Court justices serve as both jury (deciding guilt or innocence) and judge (passing sentence). Presently sitting on the tribunal are Chief Justice; Ed Goetz, Dean Milligan,

Vermont Forums Launches University Drive For Members

Vermont Forums launched its 1948-49 program at the City Hall auditorium Wednesday evening, October 6, with the discussion of the topic "America's Second Chance, 1920-1948." Speakers included Quincy Howe, Scott Nearing and Sen. Ralph E. Flanders.

The Vermont Forums is a non-partisan, non-political, non-profit organization devoted to the American ideal of free speech and the Vermont custom of talking things over. It is in the tradition of the cracker barrel and the town meeting. It is devoted to the conviction that clear thinking on public issues is necessary for the survival of the American way of life. Every forum meeting will bring out conflicting viewpoints, with plenty of opportunity for members in the audience to question, challenge, or contradict the speakers.

Vermont Forums has presented such speakers as Harold Stassen, Justice Owen Roberts, Lord Inverchapel, James P. Warburg, Henry Wallace, Cord Meyer, Jr., Boris Shishkin and other experts in their respective fields. Speakers of the same high calibre will take part this year in the programs which are scheduled as follows: November, "What's Happening to Vermont's Resources?"; December, "Do We Want World Government Now?" No statewide forum has been scheduled for January. Local forums will have the opportunity to hold a meeting on some vital local issue.

Admission to the forums is by membership only. Membership tickets are available at Bailey's, McAuliffe's, Everyday Book Shop, the Fletcher Free Library, or through the University ticket committee, Marshall Sabens and Scott Mahoney. Membership tickets for students are available at the reduced rate of $1.75 for the entire season. There are no single admission tickets sold and students are urged to get their season ticket now.

Several New Registrants Hail From Foreign Lands

President Urges Incoming Students To "Know Thyself"

Classes were stopped at 2:50; students were seen lining up four abreast outside Williams Science Hall; the faculty in their academic robes gathered in front of the Waterman Building, and the Catamounts fell into band formation for the ceremony which was about to begin. On this day, October 1, and in this manner, the ceremony which marks the beginning of the college year 1948-49, namely the Opening Convocation, got under way. It may very well be a day to remember, for it was to re-establish a precedent, non-existent for many years—that of assembling the entire university as a group. Because of the extent to which the University has grown in number, it was not possible to gather the student body in the University Chapel, as was formerly the custom. Therefore, a plan was formulated to commemorate this occasion by holding it in the Memorial Auditorium.

After the Freshman class of '52 and faculty had marched down to the Auditorium, via College Street, they were seated in the orchestra and on the platform respectively. There the Freshmen were welcomed by Professor Evans of the History Department who spoke on behalf of the faculty. President Millis, as principal speaker, then addressed the student body giving a résumé of the history and purpose of the college; using as his theme, "Know Thyself," or rather, the "University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, What Is It?" He began as follows:

"I have had the opportunity to greet all the new members of the student body but I want to take this occasion to greet those of you who are returning for another year. May I also add a word of greeting to the members of the staff who have joined the University in the recent months. To all of you, I extend a hearty welcome and wish you a most happy and successful year."

While Princeton, Harvard and Yale made plans to return enrollments to pre-war levels, U.V.M. swung even wider its doors of welcome in order to admit one of the largest freshman classes in its history.

Together with 2,089 returning and 239 transfer students, the 779 beanie-bearing freshmen make up a total enrollment, according to the Registrar's Office, of 3,107 students. Library records of one hundred years ago show 1948 enrollment exactly 3,025 students larger than the enrollment of 82 students in 1848, when a freshman class of 17 students was admitted.

Today's student body hails from as near as Burlington and as far as the Philippines, with only slightly more than half of the enrollment claiming Vermont residence. Out of states represent the 48 states and 11 foreign countries, including Norway and Estonia, Venezuela and China.

Said Mr. Collins, Director of Admissions, fondly surveying the mass of figures on his office blackboard, "Ours is a truly cosmopolitan body of students."

Phi Sigs, A E Phi's Post Highest Grades

Phi Sigma Delta fraternity and Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority led other U. V. M. Greek societies by amassing averages of 81.90 and 81.61 respectively in the quarter ending last June. An all University average of 77.87 was reported by the Registrar's office with U. V. M. men averaging 77.87 and U. V. M. women averaging 80.17.

Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity and Alpha Chi Omega sorority placed second with averages of 78.83 and 80.66 and the following fraternity grades were listed: Alpha Tau Omega, 76.48; Kappa Sigma, 75.99; Sigma Nu, 75.70; Delta Psi, 75.62; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 74.42; Phi Delta Theta, 74.41; Sigma Phi, 73.35, and Lambda Iota, 71.07.

Adverse Weather Fails To Prevent Initial Pep Rally

Things in general were drenched or dampened on campus Friday night except the spirits of a number of students who just wouldn't let the weather interfere with the fun of a pep rally. Wearing boots, slickers, jeans, and a layer of sweaters for warmth, the rooters really let loose with U. V. M. songs and cheers in the cage.

Led by Phil Robinson, strains of "Champlain" and "Vermont Victorious," a little weak on the verse but strong on the chorus, helped to loosen up the bashful vocal chords of the freshman supporters in the group. For obvious reasons, "Don't Send My Boy to Harvard" seemed to exercise the most throat muscles.

When the cheerleaders took over, everyone was in perfect condition, if not in perfect pitch, to yell "the chant," "the echo," and other cheers with which to prove to our team the next day that if "they did the fighting," "we'd do the yelling." It was hard to say who had the harder workout, the cheerleaders or the cheerers. Those "loose-jointed lads" deserve much credit, for they are full of fun, full of spirit.

The only disappointment of the evening was the fact that the bonfire could not be built outside in the rain or inside of the cage. The snake dance, originally planned for Friday night, was postponed until next pep rally. If supplied with boats, the rooters could have paddled instead of slithered down Main St. Next week when the weather is clearer and the gang larger, the snake dance will be held.

"Hobie" Cook, this year's varsity captain and record tackler, spoke a few words to the group. He explained that the team had had a hard week of practice and would do its best to win on Saturday. He also thanked the students for turning out and hoped that our efforts would be rewarded.

White tickets were given to each student present which would permit him to sit in a special section reserved for cheering at the game. The effect of a concentrated group is much better than the widely scattered and faint yells of students sitting at various places on the grandstand. If you are an ardent cheerer with strong lungs, attend the next pep rally.

With a closing song, "Champlain," the first pep rally was concluded. It was fun on a small scale. Next week the attendance should be greater. However, the spirit in the cage Friday night was excellent, a promising sign that this year's cheering section at Centennial Field will be tops.

The contrasts between three campuses, that of 1900, that of 1950, and that of 2000, will be stressed in the 1950 Ariel, Carol Chapman, editor-in-chief, has announced. Because the class of 1950 is the largest ever to be graduated from U. V. M. Carol expects the '50 Ariel to be unique in size also.

Assisting Carol in the publication of the

Carol Chapman

1950 Ariel is Newell Curtis, managing editor and Basil Ferber, business manager. Heading the sports and departments are Pamela Crandall, women's sports editor and Alan Fogg, men's sports editor. The 1950 Ariel staff was chosen last spring from the ranks of last year's Ariel scrubs by Dot Ross, editor of the '49 Ariel, and Ralph Conant, business manager.

Carol, who was a CYNIC reporter and Ariel scrub last year, is an English major. She has been active in the International Relations Club, on the Dean's list and is an Alpha Chi Omega. Carol also worked for the World Student Service Fund. She was editor of her high school yearbook in Vergennes, Vt.

Newell Curtis, also an English major, is a Delta Psi who comes from Montpelier, Vt. He has been active in Dramatic Club. Pam Crandall, from Hardwick, Vt., is another Dramatic Club member.

Alan Fogg was awarded a journalism scholarship to U. V. M. when he was graduated from Bellows Free Academy, St. Albans, Vt. During his high school years he was editor of his school paper and editor of the newspaper at Green Mountain Boys State.

'Scribes' Announce Complete Rules For Literary Contests

The third literary contest of Scribes, publishers of U. V. M.'s literary magazine, opens today. This contest for literary achievement is open to all University of Vermont students until the thirtieth of October, with the specific purpose of gathering contributions for the magazine. This contest is divided into three groups: Short Story, Poetry, and Non-Fiction. There is no limit to the number of words for any group. However each contribution must be typewritten (double-spaced) and submitted on or before the thirtieth of October with the name of author, address and phone number listed on the article, all sealed in an envelope.

We especially urge all students to consider contributing to the non-fiction group. All articles on literary criticism, political and social analysis, musical or artistic comments fall into this category. In short we want a good cross-section of college writing, including humorous essays and articles.

Three professors will judge each of these groups and announcements of winners will be made in November. Though we realize that monetary compensation is no real reward for any creative effort, 'stimulation prizes' will be awarded to first and second prize winners for each group—$15 for first place in each group and $5 for second place, making a total of $60 in prize money available to the student body.

Two boxes for collection of manuscripts will be available. One will be placed in the bookstore, the other in East Hall. All manuscripts will be returned at the end of the contest.

Scribes began as the original literary group on campus to encourage creative writing. Last year this organization merged with WINDFALL and the two now form the staff of that magazine. The present Editor is Joyce A. Viventi, Managing Editor, Warren Caryl; Business Manager, Willard Robertson; Prose Editor, Bill Clossy; Poetry Editor, John D. Adams; Art Editor, Ellwyn Hayslip; Public Relations Chairman, Alan Luce; Social Chairman, Gladys Neiburg; Faculty Advisor, Betty Bandel. Free copies of last year's issue are now available at the bookstore. There will be two issues put out this year so get out that typewriter and become immortal!

Notice

Don Marburg Returns to UVM As Assistant to Proctor Page

Mr. Donald Marburg, who graduated from U. V. M.'s College of Technology last June, is now a member of the Treasurer's staff. With a Bachelor of Science degree in Commerce and Economics, Don has the title of Assistant to the Treasurer, an exceptionally busy position during the recent period of registration and enrollment.

Don Marburg

Mr. Marburg gained extensive experience in the field of finance as a director and business manager of the Fiftieth Kake Walk in 1947. His interest and ability in skiing took him into the Tenth Mountain Division for four and a half years. During his undergraduate years at U. V. M., Don was a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, and in his senior year a member of Boulder, senior men's honorary society.

Mr. Marburg, whose home is in Montclair, N. J., was married Saturday to Mary Ann Smith, another member of the class of 1948 at Hackettstown, N. J. Following the honeymoon, the well-known couple will reside here in Burlington.

Clerics To Give Chapel Addresses During Fall Term

Midweek chapel service at U. V. M. will be held at 1.00 p.m. on Fridays in Allen Chapel, with Newman Club conducting its own service in Waterman at same hour. For the first Friday, however, there will be an interfaith meeting at Chapel hour in the Chapel at which the student leaders of the three faith groups will outline their programs for the year. Newman Rome will speak for Hillel, Walter J. Fimian, Jr., for the Newman Club, and Hugh W. Gorton for the Student Christian Association. Mary Ellen Fuller, chairman of the student Committee on Religious Life, will introduce the speakers.

The speakers at the subsequent University chapel services in October have been announced. On Friday, October 15, Rev. Max Webster, secretary of the Vermont Congregational Conference, will tell of his trip to Europe this past summer. The speaker on October 22 will be one of the leaders of this year's Parley on Religion and Life, Rev. James H. Robinson, Negro minister from New York City who made the most impressive speech of all the leaders at the great national student conference at Kansas University last Christmas vacation. On October 29, Rev. Richard F. Beyer, minister from Springfield, Vt., will speak on the subject "It's a Good Sign."

Ramblin' Round

By Ed Waters

The writer is no doubt new to the readers of this paper so a little background might help in order that you will be able to read him out properly. He is a male and a veteran, which will eliminate a number of readers; an upperclassman, which will let out freshmen because they can't understand what he is writing about and other upperclassmen because they will read trash. Finally, he is a Democrat, which eliminates all Vermonters. So we have decided this will be a personal letter to Joe Schlouk the Midget, who sits under the Boulder and clings to it, keeping inebriated groups of gentlemen from removing it from its base.

We love criticism, and that goes for constructive as well as destructive. We have always been a little wary of the people who welcome "constructive criticism" and from upon the destructive sort. In all too many cases, criticism is destructive if it ruffles their feathers in any way or strikes home. The right to stand up and criticize is pretty wonderful. There has always been far more harm done by the limitation of a right than by the misuse of it. Suppressed criticism only builds up steam, and in many cases little difficulties are transformed into major issues.

Our first pet peeve of the year is the book line. No doubt there have been more words, cuss and otherwise, said about this form of torture than any other at U. V. M. We have been assured by older students (we are new here, a transfer from LSU) that this intolerable situation has been in existence for the past couple of years. We are sure that if a little thought were applied to the problem that it surely could be solved. Why not, for instance, instead of having all this confusion in the bookstore, have the sale of books take place in the student lounge for the first week or so after registration?

Peve No. 2. As an ex-student of LSU we made comparisons, naturally, of both campuses, and frankly, the thing that surprised us most was the treatment of freshmen here at U. V. M. There, freshmen lived lives slightly lower than a worm; here they are the guests of the University. It is probably too late now to change the present class, they are sophisticated collegians already, but next year we hope the the Freshman Orientation Committee and the upperclassmen will revive and enforce a few of the old University customs with regard to freshmen.

Freshmen Camp Is Great Success

If you were a lucky one who attended Freshman Camp this year, you'll recommend it to any friends coming to U. V. M. next fall. If not, read on and find out all the fun we had that wonderful weekend!

It all started Friday morning when cars bearing a variety of license plates began coming in droves to Redstone Campus. Then girls with a bewildered but eager look in their eye were soon carrying assorted sizes of luggage into their dorms, deciding which bed was the softer, and finding a proper place for O. A. O.'s picture. By 3.00 most of the freshmen had arrived and were swarming the campus in classic loafers and sox. But something new had been added! Something green with gold lettering now perched atop each "new look" hairdo—the BEANIE!

After buffet supper at Waterman (we had learned that anything that was anything took place there) we trailed back to Southwick to meet Miss Simpson and see skits by the hilarious Sophomore Aides. As much as we dislike admitting it, we were awfully tired and sleep was sheer bliss. Saturday a.m. began another exciting day with instructive talks by upperclassmen and tours of both campuses. Didn't Sci Hall positively reek? And wasn't East Hall confusing? That afternoon we walked proudly (with our beanies) to Centennial Field with high hopes of seeing U. V. M. beat St. Mike's... well, we won't talk about that, but each of us did experience some sort of thrill when the band struck up the victory cheer as the team ran out on the field. The game over, we dashed back to our new homes and then to the Freshman girl-meet-Freshman boy-Banquet. The place card gimmick was a good "mixer." Even the speeches were interesting. Wonder what the deans and guests thought of us sitting at the tables—the girls, wearing generous splashes of "Suivez-moi," looking like a page from Vogue; the boys, with shaven faces and vaselined hair, minding their manners and making new friends.

Sunday morning we dressed in hats 'n' heels for church then in the afternoon got together again for talks on the Kake Walk, U. V. M. traditions—old and new, and general info on Vermont. The picnic at 5.30 really climaxed the week-end. Probably more so for the fairer sex for we were allowed to don blue jeans. Mmmm... sitting around the fire eating hot dogs...

Bunny's Rescue

By Mickey MacLaughlin

Bunny Cotnair, a 20-year-old U. V. M. junior, and two companions, Bob Brown of Sterling, Ill., and Alan Brown of South Burlington spent a Saturday night, September 20, clinging to a storm-lashed, barely floating sail boat, named the "Little Pooch," in Lake Champlain. Alan Brown was treated at Mary Fletcher Hospital for shock after the trio's experience.

"I'll never forget it. The deck was perpendicular to the water and then over it went, said Bunny. The group had been sailing since three in the afternoon when a heavy wind came up about ten. The skipper, Bob Brown, didn't try to "take in the sheets" until it was too late to even slit the sail with a knife. All three were completely clothed when the eighteen-foot boat overturned. Al held on to the flashlight, Bob held on to the jackknife and she held on to the boat. When they finally righted the boat they found that all their extra clothing, the all-important bailing cans, floor boards, Bob's glasses and anything else that was removable had been lost. In order to right the boat, they had to cut off the sail. Although the storm lasted for only half an hour the boat continued to overturn and fill with water all through the night.

The moon came out and for a short while morale was high. But as the ferry and Burlington lights retreated because they were drifting towards New York, the wisecracks stopped. Several times one of the stranded trio attempted to swim to a nearby island but gave it up as impossible. SOS signals sent with the flashlight failed to bring rescue. Once Bob thought they were grounded and near land but when the boat overturned completely without the mast raising a bit of mud, they realized that hope was also unfounded. "The night seemed so long," Bunny said. "At 2 a.m. we thought the sun was rising. After five in the morning Al was so completely in a state of shock that he didn't know what was going on."

"The sunrise was beautiful," Bunny said, but by that time she was beyond appreciating nature's beauty. During the morning they tried to signal an airplane with the one remaining floor board. When they were finally rescued by Arthur McDuffee who was going from New York to Burlington in his speed boat, they found it hard to believe. (They had seen a mirage that resembled a sail boat, close trimmed, on the horizon.)

Mr. McDuffee first noticed the poor "Little Pooch" when the floor board sign

UVM Fetes Frosh At Opening Dance

To describe modern freshmen at a dance is not an easy task as I think most of you know. For instance a group of modern U. V. M. freshmen recently had a dance in their school gymnasium. As it so happened the task of writing about this affair was given to me. Immediately I started to review the stories of the past dances so that I'd have a basis for comparison. However the contrasts and descriptions were so confusing that it seemed for a while that it was impossible. But suddenly the idea came to me that the person most gifted for describing things of this sort would be a surrealist. Hurriedly I ran to a phone and called up the most famous surrealist I could think of and asked him to paint two pictures, one depicting the prelim dance of the class of '52 and the other, because of the contrast, the dance of the class of '48. Unfortunately we are unable to reproduce these paintings, but I shall try to describe them to you as best I can.

In the center of the first picture, which is that of the class of '48, is a young man pointing aimlessly about in a circle of skirts. Above him there are crowds of more skirts and below him is another young lad jumping with glee and waving his freshman cap proudly in the air. The background of the picture shows a waterfall with skirts and dresses flowing over the top.

The artist's explanation was as follows: The young man pointing aimlessly about symbolizes the easy task the freshman boys had in order to get dances. The boy waving his cap is just an exuberant freshman thrilled with the evening's prospects. And all the skirts and dresses flowing over the waterfall are merely supposed to be the flood of women cramming the dance hall in the hope of going home with at least one dance tucked under their girdles.

In contrast to that picture we have the more somber one depicting the class of '52.

The center of this picture is adorned with an electric mixer beating a batter of green and gold. Above it is a megaphone producing soft music, and below it is an enormous hand and scrutinizing eye hovering over a timid little boy. As a note of brightness we have balloons, footballs, and baseball bats floating through the air. And finally along the sides and gradually moving toward the

Beanies Return

By Bill Riddell

"Holy Pete! Have I gotta wear that thing?" exclaimed the newly enrolled freshman as he received his cute green beanie, sporting a striking gold button on top and inscribed boldly on the front with the numerals "1952." Stuffing it in his pocket or slapping it on his head in an indifferent attitude, he stalked away with the humiliated expression of a man who has been caught playing with baby brother's yoyo.

On the days following enrollment though, there prevailed a certain tendency (mostly for the laughs) to wear the things around according to the fashion preferred by the owner. This taste for style afforded everything from the "Hell-for-Leather Jockey" mode, perched on the back of the head, supported by a few strands of hair at the base of the neck to the "Big Joe baseball" in front resting on the tip of the nose. Now that's all well and good; who's going to say how you hang your hat after you've paid your buck fifty, but after the novelty wore off, the green caps began to shed faster than the leaves this autumn.

In regard to the veterans on campus, this lack of headdress is understandable. These boys are, on the whole, usually older than the average student entering college and have come here with a more serious, broader outlook on life, having little time for the seemingly infantile traditions of this school, which appear, perhaps, of little importance to their education. Now since the veterans constitute over 50 per cent of the freshman class, the absence of their caps produces a highly noticeable barren effect on the total number of caps around the University and invites the non-veteran minority to wonder why they bought them in the first place.

In the good old days, when men were men, these caps and caps similar to them were a common sight at any University. The boys in those days were "fightin' proud" of their colors and wore them around at a jaunty angle to show the outsider whom he was tangling with. In those days you had to be man enough to wear one.

At U. V. M. this is the first time since the war that they have appeared, but the caps themselves are nothing new to the school and their return only marks the continuance of a grand old tradition.

Back in the "Gay Nineties" the cap was kept on until "Founder's Day" where it was replaced by a knitted skin cap,

For Our New Students

To the many new students we extend a warm handshake and a hearty welcome.

You are entering a university that possesses one of the great liberal traditions in New England. Since its founding in 1791 U. V. M.'s history has been an enviable one with a host of prominent Americans counted among the alumni and an intellectual background that has introduced many liberal and unique philosophies during our country's formative years.

In the sphere of state relations the governmental units of Vermont have long received their greatest guidance from graduates of U. V. M. U. V. M. has become a training ground for the leaders of the state.

The polyglot character of our school and the activities that provide means of expression for the student give ample evidence of a liberality that supersedes the usual democratic formula. For instance, we have a representative student legislative body which allows unlimited student participation, i.e., public sessions and an insured right to speak one's opinion. Fraternities for both men and women exist on our campus along with independent groups working quite as powerfully in the conduct of student affairs.

Though criticism is often directed at the extra-curricular system owing to the innumerable clubs and organizations on campus, such numerosity may also be construed as a many faceted outlet for student expression.

We, of the CYNIC staff, join with fellow upperclassmen in wishing you an enjoyable and beneficial school year.

Weather Eye Open

Forty-five thousand is a tidy sum for 18 people to spend.

But this is the assignment that the U. V. M. student body places in the hands of their student government this year since the 3000 or more U. V. M. students paid an activity fee of which $15 will eventually make up the working fund of our campus legislative body.

The U. V. M. Student Government is an elective body with representatives of each class participating. Their job is to cater to your demands. If you want a post office, barber shop, or a tap room it is their responsibility to make it a reality and to pay for it.

Too often interest in Student Governments subsides after the election and the representatives meet regularly and quietly each week making decisions that reach the student only through the second hand means of CYNIC coverage almost a week later.

During the past year the CYNIC gave assiduous coverage to the weekly meetings and publicized the various new enactments in an effort to revive a long overdue interest among the students.

This paper emphasized the fact that these council meetings were public and urged students to attend. This year the council has $45,000 to spend of which $15 is your individual share, and it is your constitutional right to join in the proceedings and pronounce your rebuttals or approvals in the allocation of this money.

The Editor's Column

Anchors Aweigh

Blessed by the influx of an experienced and versatile assemblage of frosh and transfer recruits, which surpassed even the highest hopes of the Senior Staff, we proudly present this, the opening tabloid of the college year. Throughout the summer months, numerous college publications have been carefully perused in an effort to garner a few new ideas for CYNIC improvement, the initiation of some of which will be found in this Freshmen Dedication issue.

Return to Normalcy

Upon the "careful" consideration of the former staff, who were interested in clearing out only, the CYNIC was thoughtlessly placed on a co-editorship basis last February. Although the new set-up was given every possible chance to succeed, all parties concerned realized from the start that only an act of Providence would save the CYNIC's face. Undaunted by the combined pressure from both Student Government and certain by-line addicts, who, demoralized by their failure to cop the leading positions, resigned en masse leaving gaping holes in the nuclear staff of the paper, a minute group carried the entire weight through the danger period.

At the close of the school year, Charles Carleton resigned from his co-editorship voluntarily in an effort to alleviate the trying situation, thereby reverting the CYNIC back to the regular single editorship. Carleton, in his farewell speech before a Student Government "CYNIC-study" committee, bared the facts of the dilemma. As this issue goes to press, Charlie, according to his wishes, is heading the news department in the the capacity of Campus Editor. The Managing Editor's post rests in the capable hands of "Fable 'n Folly" John Adams. The champion of the CYNIC drive for better athletics, Sam Houston, is now a sports writer for the Burlington Daily News, so Gordon Bickford, the original appointee, has returned to his former position as Sports Editor.

Staff in the News

The CYNIC is very proud of two of the staff, whose Herculean efforts and stamina paid off inspiring dividends during the summer vacation. Bunny Cotnoir, whose features were an integral part of last year's CYNIC, hung tenaciously with two companions to the unsubmerged segment of a new sailboat for eleven hours on the rough waters of Lake Champlain before a passing vessel sighted the weary trio. Although the bitter experience would have hospitalized the average student, "Bunny" showed no ill effects from the gruelling nightmare.

Meanwhile down along the Atlantic seaboard, another CYNIC stalwart, Stan Susskind of the business staff, hit the headlines, when in the midst of rough seas, which twice had hurled back lifeboats, he swam out to rescue single-handedly a drowning duo. Hats off to a pair of hard-working newspaper colleagues for a job well done.

Attention Engineers

Sandwiched among the propaganda pamphlets, publications and bills which have been pouring into the CYNIC office is the notification and rules for the annual Engineering Undergraduate Award and Scholarship Program. This gives any University of Vermont engineering student the chance not only to fill his coffers but also to have the chance to receive recognition which could possibly lead to an outstanding employment offer. If there are any interested parties on campus, kindly drop into the office and the information will be turned over. This is the first step in the CYNIC's new policy of keeping the students informed of opportunities in the field of advanced training.

Fraternity-Sorority Squabble

The CYNIC staff is continually criticized verbally by uninformed parties on the disposition of space in the fraternity and sorority columns. To each fraternity on this campus, the same treatment is given whether everyone realizes this or not. The head of the publicity in each fraternity is invited to turn in the "behind the scenes" report every week. Unfortunately, the coverage and the space can not be allowed if the publicity agent for the fraternity or sorority in question fails to turn in the news. If you want your fraternity notes in the CYNIC, convey your wishes to the publicity agent. However, all criticism is always welcome here in the CYNIC office—in spite of our fifty-odd staff, who continue to pummel suggestions at us the way is wide open for CYNIC advancement. Yours for a better CYNIC.

First, A Resurrection

The committee system in any type of representative democracy has its drawbacks and particularly when potential enactments are put surreptitiously out of sight. Student government's executive council has several projects which were approved last year and have since been dying a slow, inactive death in the committees responsible for their fulfillment.

Foremost is the oft quoted and never materialized student barber shop and post office which U. V. M. students have desired for many years. These propositions were accepted last year yet now eight months since the Council's original approval, U. V. M. students are still being short changed.

The Council's rebuttal to the charge of inaction is that there is no available room in the Waterman building for the barber-shop, but concerning the opening of the post office there seems to be no specific answer. The Book Store is rightly considered the ideal location for the post office. Its central position in the Waterman is excellent for a postal enterprise and since such an enterprise would bring an excellent revenue the Book Store's profit motives should be appeased.

Currently on the Executive Council's legislative docket are new appropriations for student lounge redecoration and a sinking fund for a new student activity building. There seems little use of giving full consideration to these potentially beneficial projects until the Council resurrects the business they failed to act upon last year.

Sophs Lose Vote

The absence of executive council representative, Mary Bitt '51, from U. V. M. this semester has posed a legal problem for Student Government which must be decided by the Student Court.

The vacancy must be filled to give the class of 1951 the entitled vote on the council. Student president Harry Miller will present the problem to U. V. M.'s judiciary in an attempt to find whether there must be a special election or an appointment pro tem.

1791 - Looking At UVM's History - 1940

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This history is reprinted from last year's CYNIC. Although not a complete record of events, it is designed to give the incoming class an idea of the highlights of U. V. M.'s past.)

The University of Vermont was chartered in November of 1791. General Ira Allen, brother of Ethan, the leader of the famous Green Mountain Boys, was the executive man in the original corporation, and is now honored in the annual Founder's Day ceremonies. The University itself was not organized until 1800 under President Daniel Sanders, and the original college building was erected the next year. The original faculty was composed of the president and a single tutor; later, professors of mathematics, anatomy, Latin and Greek and Jurisprudence were added. (Educational changes have been considerable.)

During the War of 1812, the college buildings were seized for an arsenal, and then for soldiers' barracks. The war over, instruction was resumed under a faculty of three professors. A difficult financial period followed, and closing of the school only narrowly averted. Reorganization followed, with new presidents, and the student body growing to a total of 70.

The Struggling Years

Calamity then befell the institution when the college building was destroyed by fire in 1824. Again the challenge of crisis was met, and the necessary funds for new buildings raised. The cornerstone of South College was laid the next year by General Lafayette. Until this time, 156 had attained the bachelor's degree. The development of the college had been marked by disaster, lack of funds, and repeated administrative changes. So far it had been struggling through the experimental stage.

The selection of the Rev. James Marsh for the vacant presidency marked an important development. He was a man of "profound learning and broad views." Dissatisfied with the prevailing educational system, he bemoaned the failure to attain the desired intellectual and moral results. (Here, one is reminded of the contemporary President Hutchins of the University of Chicago, who is sounding the same note today.) He reorganized the curriculum completely, "aiming at a more natural and more philosophical selection and grouping of studies"; his plan in many ways anticipated modern methods. The rigid four-year scheme was modified and more emphasis placed on examinations and individual aptitudes and likings (that is, electives). Four departments were organized: English Literature, Language, Mathematics, including the physical sciences, and Philosophy.

President Marsh's Work

Of greatest importance was the Department of Philosophy, which attempted to unify the work in other fields, in addition to introducing problems in morals, religion, and social and political life.

Doctor Marsh, himself a noted philosopher, taught and stressed the importance of these subjects. He opposed the prevalent utilitarian and materialistic systems of thought, advocating "a philosophy which bases morality on something higher than personal or general advantage." He made philosophy religious, and theology philosophical, and did away with the oppositions and jealousies between science and religion.

In conjunction with academic changes, college government was put on a less restricted basis. The sentiment of honor rather than rule was appealed to for administration. The undergraduate was expected to govern himself, and the list of statutes and prohibitions was reduced to a minimum.

Doctor Marsh resigned the presidency in 1833, and was succeeded by a number of competent administrators. A period of general expansion followed: funds raised, buildings repaired, finances reorganized, apparatus secured, and faculty members added. At this time a library of about 7,000 volumes was purchased in Europe.

In 1837, in the midst of a fund-raising campaign, general bankruptcy came secret societies, and their extinction, in 1855, was deplored by all who knew the part they played in the development of individuals. (This fact may well contain an important moral for the University today. Perhaps secret fraternities are taking the place of open societies which might be of genuine value.)

The important milestone which helped to put the University back on its feet after the Civil War was the incorporation of the agricultural college, by act of the General Assembly, in 1865. The act under which the new college was organized prescribed that its "leading object shall be, without excluding classical and other scientific studies, to teach such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts." In accordance, courses in engineering, chemistry, and agriculture were established. The old classical studies were continued under the same five faculty professors. Also, the literary scientific course was added for the benefit of those who desired the advantages of a regular academic course without Greek. Many of the University alumni looked with disfavor on the recent union, while the practical heralded it as a progressive step. The two points of view were harmonized by the able President Angell, who after supervising years of steady improvement, resigned to accept the presidency of the University of Michigan.

The University Grows

The elevation of Prof. Matthew H. Buckham to the presidency in 1871 marked the beginning of a new era of growth which lasted for 40 years under his leadership. Coincident with his appointment, the trustees voted to admit women to the academic and scientific departments. Though co-education was not entirely new, Vassar was at the time the only college east of the Hudson which offered a collegiate course to women. Two were admitted the next year, and their number gradually increased so that 53 women enrolled in 1900. Vermont boasts the first two women in the country to become members in the Phi Beta Kappa honorary society.

After this, the "building era" of the University was inaugurated. The next 25 years witnessed the construction of the Billings Library, the Engineering building, Williams Science Hall, Converse Hall Dormitory, the Gymnasium, Morrill Hall, and the Medical building. Grassmount was acquired and a number of other houses which were used as homes for professors. Thus the University began to acquire the land and buildings which enabled it to take a more significant role in the life of the State and New England.

20th Century Progress

The above changes bring us well into the 20th century, during which the University has made its greatest forward strides. President Buckham was succeeded by Doctor Benton. During the World War he went to Europe and was educational director of the American Army of Occupation in Germany; he did not return to the University. His successor was Guy W. Bailey. During the early years of his administration the nation was unusually prosperous. Foreseeing years of even greater prosperity, a program of sending endowments and enlarging the physical plant was undertaken. Some of the buildings, like the Ira Allen Chapel, were outright gifts, but others, like the Robert Hull Fleming Museum and Southwick Memorial, depend on outside funds for completion.

The increasing enrollment necessitated acquiring more dormitories, particularly for the women. Consequently, Redstone campus was purchased. Formerly an estate, the main house is now Redstone Hall, and the stables were converted into Robinson Hall, while the gate house now houses the professor of philosophy. (All of their names will be familiar to you before too long.) Slade Hall was built and other small houses were acquired. The most recent addition was the Waterman Building which now serves as the center of most college activities.

But with the death of President Bailey in 1940 it was found that the expansion program had left the financial affairs of the University in a terrible tangle with a deficit of nearly $1,000,000. We were really in the hole. The job of putting the University back on its feet has been a long and difficult job. Financial affairs have of necessity dictated University policies, a fact which must be remembered in criticizing the administration. Our present chief is John S. ## Sport Slants

By Gordon Bickford

Glad tidings, indeed, to start another year of Sports Slants—The Union win reverses last season's rout at Schenectady and makes it two in row for the foot-balls.

Oh, the Cats looked a little pigeon-toed on pass defense, and the Union backs were knifing through the line with considerable enthusiasm and more than a little regularity, but the pay off is in points —we had 'em.

The week before the Cats finally succumbed to the overwhelming generosity of a humble-minded St. Lawrence U. team and waltzed away with a win . . . a little bit for the sting of the 13-2 St. Mike's affair.

The St. Mike's game is a sad and bitter tale to relate. We should have known, because we were duly and pointedly warned. Last year a local sports authority told us to "Stay off the U. V. M. campus when that shiny new train (St. Mike's) comes roaring through before too long." Alas, the train came, and it was new and shiny, but the roar was nothing more than a few faint and muffled groans. However, it did generate steam enough to take the win when the Cats served it up. The matter has been covered by other and more capable reports—suffice it to say that the diminutive Purple Knights of the Union were the least inadequate of the two teams, inasmuch as we would hesitate to employ any form of the word good in connection with that game.

Transition—The going of Don Maynard. The coming of the "Mountain" Mike Kemp and the "Bull" Maj. William Evans-Smith. Both very welcome and necessary additions.

Pass the towel Dept.—Weep large, sad tears at the mal-fortune that has visited our beloved Braves, and trust that the gods will intervene. But by the time this gets into print, the quote, Fall Classic, unquote, may be thoroughly and disastrously ($$$) over. And as for "cuz" Vernon B. of the Boston Bloops—rest assured that he will be, at the next gathering of the clan, firmly and sharply reprimanded for his mis-deeds in Cleveland.

The Shape of Things to Come—Saturday, when the Cross Country team runs against Champlain, the harriers may be bolstered by the presence of Mahoney, last year's freshman track ace.

On Saturday also, there transpires down at Northfield an event that will cause J. C. Evans, spiritual leader and father confessor of the stalwart Catamounts, some anxious moments. The Mountaineers will throw everything but Cabot Hall at the Green and Gold, and could take the verdict—maybe—and that, is fence-straddling in the best tradition.

Frosh Teams Need New Scrub Managers

Flash! The Sports Department has run into a snag! Scrub managers are badly needed. There are more than enough participants for the famous sports of baseball, football, basketball, ski teams and the like, but there is a large deficit where scrub managers for these various teams are concerned.

Come, come, boys! We can't all take part physically in these sports. Managers are also just as essential toward carrying U. V. M. to glory. The manager is confronted with much of the "dirty work," but without him victory by the football, basketball and other athletic teams would be impossible. And please note that those who go out for these scrub manager positions do not have to take Physical Education.

Think it over. It still isn't too late to enlist your services. There is just as much fun in being a scrub and having a chance to see all the games as it is to be required to go through the horrors of physical ed. every week.

If you are interested in this type of work and you have the "guts" and determination to work up to the top in this field, this is just the chance for you. Those interested should report as soon as possible to Ed Bartlett at the Athletic Office located in the gym. You will be doing a favor to your college and to yourself.

Pigskin Review

With World Series discussion gradually waning away, the National Collegiate Football season is entering its third week of full competition. Even at this early date, many pre-season prognostications have been proven to the contrary, but let me give you a quick glance of the football picture this second week of October.

At home, U. V. M. finds itself very much in contention for the State Championship despite a loss to St. Mike's, but a great deal hinges on this week's game with Norwich. The Cadets, who after defeating a good University of Massachusetts team, were then crushed by a very strong Trinity team on the following Saturday, are plagued by injuries. Probably the strongest team in the state at present is the Middlebury Panthers, who have won their first three games convincingly.

In the East, the Army Mule is again kicking over all opposition and should have an undefeated season. Cornell and Penn are at present the class of the Ivy League, but Columbia, Harvard or Dartmouth could prove otherwise on any one Saturday. Boston College has the brawn, but little St. Bonaventure held B. C. to a 7-7 tie. New Hampshire, which meets Vermont a week from Saturday, is the class of small elevens as the result of a 26-7 victory over Maine.

The "Tarheels" of North C. after chomping over Texas, Georgia, and Wake Forest are the power of the South. Despite tying its first two games, the Duke Blue Devils showed potential promise in defeating an undermanned, overscheduled Navy football team last Saturday.

Mountaineers Play Host to Cats in Traditional Clash

This coming weekend the Catamounts of the University of Vermont will face one of their oldest and most bitter football rivals when they meet the Mountaineers of Norwich University on Sabine Field at Northfield, Vt. The series dates back to 1897 and each year the tension, excitement, and color rises to a fever pitch.

The Horsemen will be out to defeat U. V. M. this year as the Catamounts lambasted them last year to the tune of 33 to 0. Norwich had pretty much of a green team last year which won only two of its eight games, but most of the squad is back, and a well seasoned aggregation will don the Maroon and Gold this Saturday.

Up until last Saturday the Norwich squad was pretty much intact, except in the punting department. Fullback Jake O'Connor, the number two kicker on the team was sidelined with a facial injury and will be out of the lineup for the remainder of the season. There was some doubt as to whether starting quarterback Mel Damon's sprained knee, which he suffered in the Massachusetts game, would prevent him from kicking in the Trinity game last week. Damon is the best punter on the Horsemen's roster and if he is unable to start this Saturday, Coach Hefferman will have to rely on either Jack A'Hearn or Murry Fisher for punting duties.

Fisher will probably start in the place of Damon in the quarterback spot. Left guard, Hial Lait will bear watching when any plays come his way. He was a tough man for Massachusetts to get by when they got close to paydirt. Left half back Nick Psalidas and substitute back Seward will also provide trouble for the Cats.

Third Period Pass Spells Doom For Larrie Green and Gold Drops Close One to Purple

Collier to Ursprung Aerial Brings Evansmen First Victory

After losing their opening game in an upset to St. Michael's College, the University of Vermont came back to gain its initial victory of the year with a close 7 to 0 triumph over St. Lawrence University at Canton, N. Y., on Saturday, October 2. Good defensive line play, the brilliant kicking of Jack Hurley, alert recoveries of Larry fumbles, and a Collier to Ursprung pass accounted for the Catamounts' margin of victory. St. Lawrence scored seven first downs to U. V. M.'s four and outrushed the Catamounts by some 70 yards on the ground, but the Green and Gold outfought the Larries and came through with some fine tackling and line backing up whenever they were in trouble. Only once could the Larries get as far as the U. V. M. 20 yard line; and when they did they found a hard charging line of Green and Gold-clad Catamounts blocking their path. Both teams were weak in supplying efficient, offensive blocking and as a result no long sustained drives were executed.

Last Saturday's encounter was the fifteenth meeting between the two schools and U. V. M. increased its number of wins over S. L. U. to 13. S. L. U. has won only one game in the series, which dates back to 1901, and that came in 1937. One game ended in a tie. The last time the two met was in 1939 when U. V. M. came out on top by a score of 12 to 0.

First Quarter Even

Vermont kicked off to St. Lawrence to start the game, however the Larries failed to gain the yardage necessary for a first down against the strong U. V. M. forward wall and they were forced to kick. Vermont put the ball in play on their own thirty yard line after MacDonald returned the punt 12 yards. Vermont also found a tough defense facing them and failed to gain the yardage needed for a first down, then Hurley dropped back from his left half back position to boot one of his long kicks. The greater part of the first quarter was a kicking duel with Vermont holding the edge over the Larries. The first big break in the game came late in the first period when Hurley kicked the ball out of bounds on the Larry six yard line. A few plays later Capt. Hobie Cook recovered a St. Lawrence fumble on the Larry 13 yard line. Seconds later the first period ended.

Cats Tally; Collier to Ursprung

St. Gelais kicked up four yards on the opening play of the second quarter to put the Catamounts to within seven yards of the Larry goal. Collier failed to gain on the next play. Farrell bucked through the line for two yards on third down. On the fourth down St. Gelais carried the ball to what looked like a first down on the Scarlet and Brown's three yard line but the measurement showed that inches were lacking and the Larries took over. St. Lawrence kicked to get out of danger up to the U. V. M. 48 yard line from where the ball was run back to the Larry 36 yard line by fleet George MacDonald. From this point the Green and Gold began the only touchdown drive of the afternoon. Hurley picked up four yards on the next play. Collier faked a hand off to Hurley and handed the ball to St. Gelais, who carried the ball off left tackle to the S. L. U. 25 yard line for a first down. A Hurley to St. Gelais pass picked up seven yards and moved the ball to the Larry 18 yard line. On the next play a bullet-like jump pass right over the center of the line from Art Collier to the waiting arms of Stan Ursprung on the five yard line was good for the only score of the game. Ursprung went over standing up. The extra point was made by Ursprung and the Catamounts enjoyed a 7 to 0 lead which they never relinquished.

Cook and Line Mates Shine on Defense

The second half was just as tight a game as the first half with neither team able to get their offense moving. Capt. Hobie Cook made the biggest save of the day when he brought down MacKay from behind when he got loose from several tacklers on a return of a punt.

Yearling Harriers Hold Opening Drill

With fall here Cross-Country again comes into the sports spotlight. On the Frosh side of the ledger Coach Post reports that 24 enthusiasts have turned out for the up hill and down dale sport. Leading the list of experienced harriers is Bob "Curly" Caswell, ex-Burlington High track star and holder of the State record for the 880. Bob has been working out with Burlington all fall and seems to be in top shape. Another ex-Burlington runner is Dane Shortsleeves. He captained B. H. S. in 1942 and is expected to show good promise after he rounds into condition.

Also on the list of those with experience is Bob Pierce. Bob was the first Frosh this year to attempt the Varsity course of 4.3 miles and shows promise towards becoming a good distance runner. Mention too should be given to Kurt Schindler, Clarence Fagan, and Dave Cowles.

Coach Post's biggest problem right now is sore legged runners. Many of them are all expected to be in top shape for the first meet which is on October 23. It will be a triple meet with Waterbury and Danville High Schools furnishing the competition.

Spirited Mikemen Capitalize On Single Break to Notch Win

Before a crowd of 6,000, the Cats opened their 1948 football season most inauspiciously losing to St. Michael's by a score of 13-2.

Though the Mikemen were on the wrong side in every statistic department, they capitalized on the only two scoring opportunities they had, while Vermont threw away numerous chances.

In the first period, Ed Krupinsky, St. Mike's quarterback faded back from the Vermont 44 yard line and threw a pass down the middle to his right end, Bill Knight. Knight eluded two Vermont backs and went over standing up.

Knight again, in the third period, was mainly responsible for the second St. Mike's score. He blocked a Vermont punt and recovered the ball on the Cat's 14 yard line. Five plays later Hart scored from the 3 yard line. Except for these two scoring thrusts, St. Michael's played defensive football.

Cats Miss Scoring Chance

Vermont ran the ball well. In the second period they moved sixty yards to the St. Mike's one yard line. The biggest ground gaining play was a wide end run by Jack

Hurley which succeeded because of fine downfield blocking by the Vermont guards. However with the ball on the one yard line, the turning point of the game occurred. On the next play the from center was a little high and Vermont fullback, Frank Farrell fumbled the ball. St. Mike's took over and to punt on the first play. The Vermont line broke through and blocked the punt but the St. Mike's kicker recovered the ball in the end zone giving the Cats rather shallow two points.

Cat Line Impressive

The line play was excellent. The Green and Gold forwards blocked well on offense and outcharged the Mikemen on defense. At times the passing attack was adequate. The main fault seemed to be the lack of overall cohesion. Vermont couldn't coordinate their running and passing game. When one was going well, the other bogged down.

Cook and Hurley were outstanding for the Cats, along with three sophomores, Dave Banta and George Schofield, guards and Frank Farrell, a fullback.

Undefeated Union Eleven Falls 7-6; Comolli, Cote Star

A fighting University of Vermont eleven upset a heavily favored and previously undefeated Union College team last Saturday before a crowd of 4,000 at Centennial Field. The play of the Cats' line and punting of sophomore Dom Cote were the two big factors which led to Union's downfall.

After a scoreless first period, Cote sent a long punt to the Union 20-yard line. When two running plays failed, Ken Whalen, Union center dropped back to attempt a pass. He fumbled a low pass from the center and was hit as soon as he picked up the ball, by Stan Ursprung. Again Whalen went back to punt and again the pass was low but this time practically the whole Vermont line smothered him on the six-yard line.

On the next play Frank Farrell made five yards around left end. After being stopped by the center of the Union line, Farrell crashed off tackle and scored standing up. Stan Ursprung kicked the extra point.

Cote Keeps Union at Bay

In the third period Cote's punts, along with the fine defensive play of the Vermont line kept Union bottled up. One of the Cote's punts traveled 80-yards in the air and another went 60 before rolling out of bounds on the Union six-yard line.

Union made the longest sustained drive of the game, when, in the fourth period, they marched from their own 30-yard line to the Vermont 22-yard line. This drive was featured by delayed line bucks and an effective flat pass play which the Cats' secondary could not cope with.

At this point Vermont held for downs and took the ball on their own 20-yard line. After Farrell gained three yards, George MacDonald went around right end for five, but as he was tackled he fumbled the ball and Union recovered on the 22.

Two line smashes carried to the U.V.M. 10-yard line and on the next play Strauss, a fine T-formation quarterback, used the same flat pass and threw to Wade in the end zone. The Vermont stands cheered as Snow's attempt for conversation went wide of the goal posts. For the rest of the game the Vermont line led by Ed Comolli, stopped Union and the Cats were in possession of the ball when the game ended.

It is almost impossible to pick an outstanding player in the Vermont line for they all played remarkable football. In the backfield Frank Farrell was again the offensive and defensive star. MacDonald looked especially good on punt returns and one of these days should break away for a few long runs.

Kittens Prepare For Norwich Frosh

The U.V.M. Kitten ball club swings into action for the first time when they meet the Norwich Frosh on Centennial Field Friday, October 22. They are hosts again to the Squires of St. Michael's on October 27, and round out their brief season against the Middlebury College yearlings at Middlebury, November 6.

The squad, like all freshman teams, is an unknown quantity. But their quantity is impressive, and the lads are willing, so with good support from the freshman contingent and the student body in general the Kittens should hold their own in their outings with the other Vermont freshman squads.

A near record turnout of ninety freshman aspirants reported to Coach Norm Strassburg early last week. After a week of strenuous conditioning and workouts, the squad has been cut to fifty.

Garnet Harriers Outrun Untried Postmen 24-36

The Maroon and White clad harriers of Union outran a game U. V. M. cross-country team here on the local course Saturday afternoon by a score of 24-35.

Despite the efforts of Captain Earle Randall who finished first in the excellent time of 21 minutes and 47 seconds (just 10 seconds off the course record), and John Bellows who placed third, the well-conditioned Union squad bunched its men in the 2, 4, 5, 6, and 7 positions to gain the victory.

Randy, running effortlessly and displaying great stamina, led the pack from the start, set his own pace, and crossed the finish line a good 30 yards ahead of Garloch of Union. The race was held under near perfect cross-country weather with warm skies and just a slight breeze, but Randy's time was outstanding for such an early season meet.

It was the first meet of the season for both teams, yet Union had a distinct advantage over Vermont as their runners have been in school since the middle of September with an additional two weeks of conditioning. Coach Archie Post was not disappointed with the outcome. He predicted that this would be a tough race because the Vermont hill and dalers had not had sufficient time to get into top shape.

Then, too, the team missed the services of Russ Mahoney, a sophomore, who displayed such fine form as a miler on the Frosh track team of last year. Russ had shown up well in the practice sessions this fall, but due to an administrative tech-

Election of Justices

Duncan McLaren, Martha Wood, and George Brigham. Mitch Hunt is prosecuting attorney while Dick O'Connell heads the defense counsel.

To answer a few questions concerning the election...

How may I become a candidate for Student Court? You must be a Junior at the University. Obtain a petition at the information booth, have 100 different undergraduate students sign it, and return it to the Waterman information booth before 9 a.m., Saturday, October 16. Petitions will then be checked by the election committee.

How many petitions may be signed by each student? Each undergraduate student of the University may sign as many petitions as there are openings in each college. For example, each student may sign the petitions of 3 candidates from the Arts College, of 2 from the College of Technology, of 1 from the College of Agriculture. Which means that a student may sign six petitions! He or she cannot, however, sign all six petitions from one college, i.e., the petitions of six different Arts candidates. He may sign one for each opening in the respective colleges and the candidate must be from that college.

giving the freshmen a warm advantage over the upperclassmen during the winter months. Later in the 1920s the skin cap was ruled out and only the beanie was worn until Thanksgiving.

But, alas, as time passed by, that old devil-may-care school spirit went with it and in its place evolved the modern age of sophistication, where school spirit dwindled down to a hip-pocket flask. The do-or-die pride faded away and the battle scarred cap, reborn new and shiny, remained as something to ridicule.

As a school enlarges, the student may lose the feeling of being an integral part of consolidated group. That green and gold cap is your link. Without it you're just another Johnny Doe in a multitude.

TUTORS AND TUTORING

The Mortar Board Tutoring Service is in operation again this year. Any student who wishes to be tutored or to do tutoring may register in the Office of Student Personnel, No. 104 Waterman Building. The rate paid to tutors is 80 cents per hour. Veterans' tutoring will be paid for by the Mary Jean Simpson Fund for Veterans. Mortar Board will pay one-half of any woman student's bill.

But those ugly monsters closing in on the mixer are that extra supply of men who avariciously tapped the boys on the shoulder and took their girls.

Thus we have seen how our dance compared to the one held by today's seniors. But despite the artist's sobering interpretation it can safely be said that a good time was had by, well, most of you (freshmen that is).

From the College of Agriculture—Robert Billhardt, Katherine Kähler, William Van Scoik.

Every undergraduate student of the University is eligible to cast a ballot, unless previously restricted from doing so by specific judicial action. In order to vote, however, each student must produce his or her own athletic identification ticket—the blue card received at registration.

Every student who votes will be entitled to one ballot, but he or she may vote for six different candidates, apportioned as follows: three (3) Arts and Science candidates, two (2) Technology candidates, and one (1) Agriculture candidate. Students are requested to read the instructions on the ballot carefully and then to vote accordingly. A student does not have to vote for his entire quota.

Mrs. Rod Smith, Jr., Reigns As Harvest Queen At Ag. Ball

Last Saturday evening in the festively decorated gymnasium, Mrs. Carol Ballou Smith was crowned queen of the second Harvest Ball. At approximately 9:45 o'clock Sherman Sprague called Carol to the platform and crowned her with a coronet of multicolored leaves. She was given a gold bracelet in honor of the occasion and led to her throne to reign over the ball for the rest of the evening. The dark-eyed beauty was dressed in a white-fitted crepe gown with a tiny bustle. She won the title of queen over four other contestants sponsored by the different sororities. Carol is a senior, hails from Chester, Vt., and is living at the UVM Trailer Camp with her husband, Roderick Smith of Scarsdale, N. Y.

As a little sidelight of the event, Ken Belding, leader of the "Blue Riffs," who furnished the music for the dance, presented Bob and Howard Hemming, vocalists, to those assembled. The twins offered "Rambling Rose" and "Those Wedding Bells are Breaking up That Old Gang of Mine," for the apparent enjoyment of their audience.

The gym itself was a multicolored array of balloons, corn stalks, and pumpkins. The harvest moon above the bandstand added to the general atmosphere. And the refreshments of cider and cookies completed the picture.

The dance, sponsored by the UVM Aggie Club, began at 8:45. The Grand March was led by Prof. and Mrs. Wheeler and Prof. and Mrs. Carter, chaperones. The crowning of the queen climaxed a week of campaigning for the various contestants. Competition was close with every candidate highly worthy of the honor. The candidates were as follows: Shirley Dennis, sponsored by Alpha Chi Omega Sorority; Barbara Preston, Tri Delta; Norma Carmichel, Kappa Alpha Theta; and Cathy Valori, Sigma Gamma. With enthusiasm and anticipation the Aggie Club would like to see the Harvest Ball become an annual affair at UVM.

Council Rejects 10-Year Bldg. Plan; Burke Heads Probe

Fear that a sinking fund started at this time for a student activities building would be reallocated to other projects by the administration caused student government to reject a ten year building plan proposed at the October 6 meeting by sophomore representative, Edward J. Costello.

Council representatives also expressed apprehension that the building plan might be rejected by future councils leaving previous allotments stagnant. The plan called for a kick in of $5000 a year from student government funds to be under the trusteeship of U. V. M. treasurer and assistant treasurer, Proctor Page and Donald Marburg.

The proposed building was slated to house all student offices and thereby give these activities a more independent setup since student activities in Waterman now subsist under precarious housing conditions.

Registration Called Obsolete

Charges that UVM's registration is unwieldy and in many unfair to the student will be investigated by Daniel Burke, Junior class representative on the Executive Council this month.

Burke, who is familiar with the enrollment procedure in other colleges, states that in other colleges much of the work is completed during the summer so that students need only to spend a few minutes registering when they return to school in the fall.

Questions Validity

At the request of the council Burke will also investigate the validity of the administration charging twenty-five cents for a student activities card.

During the recent signing up students unable to produce a previous activities card were obligated to pay for a new one. The revenue from this small charge is estimated at over $100 and according to council members was an unjust charge prolonging the interminable process of registering.

Gorton and Rome Handle Preliminary Arrangements

The three leaders who will visit our campus next week come with a specific purpose in mind—that of relating subjects of everyday interest to a religious background. The better correlation of religion and life, then, is the primary purpose of the Parley.

The Planning Committee has asked the speakers to discuss at the first forum the question "What Do We Believe?" from the Christian and from the Jewish point of view. On Friday night at the second forum the leaders will endeavor to relate these essential beliefs to campus life, discussing campus politics, academic honesty, alcohol, dating, etc.

On the basis of these main topics each speaker has selected minor topics for round table discussions. Mr. King will talk about "Religion and the Individual" and "Religious Experience by Trial." Mr. Robinson has selected "God in History" for his Thursday round table and "Life, A Living Chapel" for his second discussion. Rabbi Alpert will use "Religion in the Life of Man" in both of his seminars.

The subject of Friday's Chapel Service conducted by Mr. Robinson is "Gospel for an Age of Disillusionment."

The Interfaith Parley on Religion and Life is an annual project of the Student Government Committee on Religious Life. Formerly three faith groups have participated in the Parley activities but this year the Jewish and Potestant groups will make up the representation. Co-chairmen of the Parley are Newman Rome, president of Hillel, and Hugh W. Groton, President of S. C. A.

Nineteen forty-eight parley leaders will be Rabbi David B. Alpert of Boston, Rev. Herbert King of New York, and Rev. James H. Robinson, also of New York. The program includes two evening forums in which all of the speakers will take part, interviews, seminar groups, and a University chapel service for both faiths.

Parley Speakers

The Rev. Herbert King is the minister of Grace Congregational Church of New York City whose letterhead carries this description: "The High Church—The Low Church—The Broad Church—The Church of the People." Mr. King has become one of the most sought-after

A Pause That Refreshes

Here is proof that something is free at U. V. M.! When the coke machine in East Hall broke down last Wednesday morning a few students gathered to watch the company man do a repair job. When he proceeded to pass out free Coca-Cola the crowd became a mob which blocked the hall for some time. On hand to catch "the Pause that Refreshes" was CYNIC camera man John Leak.

Six UVM Students Describe European Marshall Aid Plan

Six U. V. M. students, members of the Marshall Plan In Action Course, discussed the "calculated risk," hopes, and early first-hand observations of the European Recovery Plan at the open meeting of the International Relations Club on Thursday evening. Al Redway, moderator, introduced Dot Ross, Lillian Tucker, Howard Aaron, Robert Taisey, and Malcolm Severance, who related their observations on different parts of the tour through Europe this summer.

Tells of Plight

Dot Ross '49 described Britain's battle of the balance of payments and noted that it was being fought with the same courageous spirit as of the Battle of Britain. Before the war Britain was able to obtain international exchange necessary for world trade through sale of manufactured products, overseas services such as shipping, insurance, tourist trade, and reserves including foreign investments. All these have been greatly depleted by the war. Mr. Harold Wilson, prominent Laborite, explained to the U. V. M. students at the University of London, Britain's austerity program which includes increasing exports, decreasing imports, with the resulting tightening of the British belts.

Abundance In Belgium

Belgium, Malcolm Severance noted, was a great contrast to the Netherlands. There is no rationing, and plenty of food and clothing. Part of this early recovery may be attributed to the fact that Belgium was one of the first countries to be liberated and benefited as 'liberty towns' for American soldiers. Benelux, the customs union of Belgium, the Netherlands, and Luxembourg, is now in operation although as yet a common currency is not in use. The U. V. M. students reported that barely a building was standing in the center of Cologne. Although about sixty-five per cent of the city has been destroyed, five hundred thousand still live in Cologne which had a population of over seven hundred and fifty thousand before the war. Hitler youth, now ages fourteen to eighteen, roam the streets at night in gangs. Everywhere the students felt ill at ease in Germany because their appearance attracted attention. Although Severance noted that the following may not have been a representative student, he was interested in the ideas of a German girl who was about to receive her doctor of medicine degree. She upheld the concentration camps, the anti-Jewish policy of the Nazis, and felt that the only sorrow the German people should feel was for losing the war. She, like most of the German people, seemed to think that World War III was only a matter of time. In addition, she warned that Russia would be a more treacherous enemy than the Germans were since the Germans were "bad only in theory."

Taft May Kill Plan

The chief criticism by the students was the choice of goods sent under ECA. For example, it seems contrary to the expressed desire of the Marshall Plan "to help Europeans to help themselves" to send finished products instead of raw materials. For example, Howard Aaron cited the sending of coal instead of mining equipment and oil instead of refining equipment. Aaron also noted that Senator Taft has stated that he has felt no moral obligation to continue the Marshall Plan beyond one year. It was emphasized that European countries are gearing their future plans to the Marshall system and that unexpected withdrawal might be disastrous.

"Windfall", Campus Literary Magazine, Plans Better Year

"Our obligation is to give the student body the best literary magazine reflecting a cross section view of this campus," said Joyce A. Viveni, '49 Editor-in-Chief of Windfall, at the first Scribes meeting held Tuesday evening October 12 in Waterman. The Scribes, U. V. M.'s undergraduate literary organization, publishes Windfall as its literary magazine twice yearly.

It was the general agreement at this meeting that even though last June's issue of Windfall received favorable comment from faculty members of other universities, the magazine could be improved. Suggestions made which it was felt would aid in improvement were: were non-fiction articles, wider selection of poetry, building up of interest in Windfall by securing more contributions from a larger variety of student body, more reader appeal by presenting them with subject matter they will want to read, and less but more interpretive art work. A literary contest, from which many of the published articles will be taken, is again planned. The contest awards sixty dollars in prizes; fifteen dollars for first and five dollars for second prize in poetry, short story and non-fiction. The judges are members of the faculty.

David B. Wheeler, UVM Graduate '47, Studies In Sweden

Uppsala, Sweden—An exchange scholar at Uppsala University since August is David B. Wheeler, U. V. M. '49, who is studying geology and taking botanical courses in addition to aiding in English instruction.

Wheeler writes in a recent letter to President Millis that the Swedish language poses a definite handicap but adds that he is making excellent progress in mastering the tongue. He has met several other Americans studying at Uppsala and mentions that the English speaking students are housed in the same seminary.

During September Wheeler viewed much of the country's scenery and states that the particular field trip he accompanied was not allowed to view many of the great mining fields since current suspicion lists foreigners as possible spies.

The exchange student praised the University system in Sweden but believes that initial enthusiasm makes it difficult to make a fair comparison.

While at U. V. M. Wheeler was active in campus affairs with special accomplishments in debating and R. O. T. C. and was an apt student in the school of geology. His home is in Morrisville, Vt.

Lamp-Key Jamboree Feature Of A Gala Homecoming Fest

The sophomore honorary societies, Gold Key (men), and Sophomore Aides (women), are holding their annual sophomore dance as the finishing touch to Sophomore Day which is scheduled for Saturday, October 23. The dance is to be called the Lamp and Key Jamboree, and will be held from 9.00 to 12.00 p.m., at the UVM gymnasium. Music is to be by the latest dance band on the campus, the "New Vermonters."

The gym is to be decorated by the honorary societies and refreshments will be on sale through the entire evening. Sophomore Day falls on Homecoming Day (UVM vs. New Hampshire), this year. As is the custom, the freshman-sophomore cane rush will be held that day. The freshman are, therefore, cordially invited to attend the Lamp and Key Jamboree. The admission will be 60c a head "Drag or Stag."

UVM Dramatic Club Opens New Season With 'All My Sons'

The Dramatic Club will present "All My Sons" as their first offering of the '48-'49 season. Tom Hayes, Gladys Williams and Newell Curtis have been selected to play the leading roles in the act drama written by Arthur Miller, which has enjoyed a long Broadway and a movie career.

The cast of 9 was chosen from 30 students who tried out for the part. Supporting Mr. Hayes, Miss Cummings, Curtis, who will play the member of the Keller family, are Mary Ann Brown and Courtland LaValle. Other members of the cast include Maynard North, Ley Gleason, Dan Peisch and Paul Greenup. The play is to be presented two evenings; Thursday November 11 and Friday November 12. Tickets be on sale November 4 at Waterman though rush seats will be available the door both evenings.

Autumn Show Scalamandre at Fleming Display

FLEMING MUSEUM has had a rain-how display for the fall season of 1948.
On the other hand, it might be compared more accurately as a greenhouse of rare, exotic and lovely flowers or a galaxy of rich and form is the Scalamandre
Textile Exhibition. All of us have seen these advertising advertisements of the Scala-mandre Textiles in various nationally-known housemaking magazines. Now is our chance to see them in reality.
The textiles are all arranged as draperies in the Marble Court reception hall of the Museum. Each pattern is represented by a single length of material about eight feet wide and six yards long. Some of the lengths with the more definite patterns are hung as panels but the great majority are draped in full, rich folds from ceiling to floor.
Many kinds of textiles are included in the exhibit including brocades, heavy and light velvets, satins, silks, embroidered velvet and satin, glazed and unglazed chiffons and cotton fabrics.
The Franco Scalamandre was an Italian industrial and electrical engineer who came to America in 1924. With him he brought European looms which have an advantage over American looms by using twice as many threads. As a result Scala-mandre textiles use twice as much raw material as native manufacturers have used making a heavier, more durable, fabrics. Most of his workers are Europeans and as part of their training it is imposed on them that each length of fabric is a masterpiece. As a result, each length is Due to the painstaking work, clever craftsmanship and emphasis on research which were evident in early Scalamandre work the Long Island City firm was asked to produce reproductions of historical fabrics for the restorations at Williamsburg, Mt. Vernon, Monticello, the White House and other old American mansions.
Some of these textiles are in the collection all clearly marked as such, but the bulk of the collection are Scalamandre originals. Some of the modernistic textiles, many of which involve the use of a great deal of gold or other metallic threads, show the trend toward striking and rich-textured materials as an integral part of the decoration of tomorrow's homes.

Freedom Of Movement Modern Dance Ideal

Modern Dance is an American form of art which was conceived in the belief that an idea can be transmitted to an audience through body movement. There are no stereotyped positions or rules in modern dance as one finds in the traditional ballet.
Rather the dancer is free to use any movement that is appropriate for the mood of the dance. Because of this freedom of movement, Modern Dance is less restricted than traditional ballet and has grown rapidly in popularity in this country.
The Modern Dance Club at the University of Vermont is a student organization with the purpose of furthering the interest of dance as an art on the campus and in Burlington. It is organized into three divisions: The Master Group, The Dance Workshop, and The Apprentice
Group with the system of advancement similar to that of the guilds of the ninth and tenth century. An individual works under a master for a year and is then eligible for membership in the workshop.
After a certain degree of perfection has been reached by the individual, one may be appointed to a position in the Master
Group through choice of the master.
On many campuses the dance groups are co-educational since the men have much to contribute and much to gain from Modern Dance. In the past years the University of Vermont Dance Workshop has been composed of women only, but quite a few men on campus have expressed a desire to join the group. The members of our group would like to have the Workshop opened to all men and women who are interested.
The groups meet regularly once a week to improve their technical skill and at an additional time during the week to compose dances for the program which they present each year. The Apprentice Group will meet every Monday at 5.00 p.m. beginning October 11, the Dance Workshop every Wednesday at 5.00 p.m. beginning October 13, and the Master Group every Friday at 4.30 p.m. beginning October 15.
All groups meet at Southwick ballroom.

UVM Students Start Campaign For Third Party

Every student will receive information from the U. V. M. Wallace for President Club concerning the People's Party, which will be on the presidential election ballot in Vermont this fall.
Recognized April 16, last year, by the Student Government, the Wallace Club plans to aid the Burlington Wallace for President group and to present the aims of the People's Party before the U. V. M. students. The Club's most notable activity last year was obtaining Rockwell
Kent, noted artist and author and member of the National Wallace for President committee, as a speaker.
The Club is composed of a small group of students who are, to some degree, supporters of Wallace. Their aims are to perpetuate the People's Party on campus and to get students of voting age to register.
President pro tem of the club is Marshall London while the club's secretary is Jo Aberdeen. The members represent a good cross section of U. V. M.; seven of them being pre-medical students, six in Liberal Arts, and two from the College of Agriculture. The Club has gained two new members from the freshman class.
Fifty per cent of the club's members are voters. Both sexes are equally represented in the membership.
Marshall stated, in describing his political opinions, "The Wallace program for world peace and the man himself as leader of it are more stable than the platform of any other candidate. The country and the world would benefit from his leadership."

Time College Bureau Reappoints Christian

The re-appointment of David G. Chris-announced recently. The post is to be a permanent one, with tenure to remain

she) is in college, and then to go to the best qualified undergraduate member of his staff. All of the larger colleges in the U. S. now have students serving in this capacity. One purpose of the office is to make ready available to students and faculty the special subscription rates pro-educational institutions.

In the past, Time has seen fit to offer positions with its organization to graduat-

Crucial Elections

When a newspaper reiterates the necessity of voting the public will concede the necessity but seldom follows the advice.

The CYNIC thinks it has a pretty good case for urging students to vote in student court elections Thursday and will give some reasons that constitute more than a nuisance value.

There are six vacancies on the UVM judiciary and more than fifteen competing for the positions. The new justices will not be engaged in administrative duties but will be making legal decisions that will profoundly affect the students who come before the court.

Look the list of candidates over very carefully before you vote in order to spot the persons who you think might be prejudiced or unfair. It takes but one narrow-minded big timer to ruin the college career of a young man or young woman who comes before the court.

Instead choose candidates whom you know to be intelligent and equitable in their judgments. Fair play will mean a great deal to the accused and the old custom of giving a "second chance" still has more merit than enforcing the strict letter of the law.

The court tried thirteen cases last year and it is expected that the number of cases will be trebled this year owing to increased enrollment and a broadening of the judiciary's power.

Remember also that the people you elect hold their position for the duration of their college career.

UVM 1948

The CYNIC's announcement last week that this year's executive council had a sum of $45,000 to spend has amazed many students and friends of the university. The local papers also gave considerable space to publicize the fact.

The latest question is, "Is this the largest amount allocated to a student government in a college this size?" The CYNIC is interested in finding out and so far has discovered that $40,000 is allocated to the student council at the University of Connecticut. However, a check reveals that the UConn has 1000 more students enrolled.

The 1948 Ariels, so long held up, are at last on the way! Dean Kidder has just received request for shipping instructions. This means that they have been printed and ready to go.

Three Years Ago—October 24, 1945

The renewal of the annual Mortar Board Formal was heralded by the throngs of voracious women students here on the campus. Prospective dates will be transported from Dartmouth, Norwich, and Champlain for the occasion.

Bart Barry was the sole member of "the unfair" sex to be elected to the Student Court; the remaining four seats were overrun by the predominate co-ed faction.

Justice Owen J. Roberts advocated a "super government" for world peace in a stirring speech at the Memorial Auditorium. The former Supreme Court Justice told the packed audience that the world looks to the U. S. for leadership.

Coach J. C. Evans resumes his position as head coach of basketball and football on November 12.

Five Years Ago—October 20, 1943

There was an excellent turnout at the Hobo Bean Supper in spite of competition from the U. S. O. and A. S. T. P. Crystal Malone and Pat Van Ameringen, "man and wife," copped high honors in the costume parade. Ken Gibson annexed honorable mention with his Lana Turner get-up. Professors Carpenter, Marvin, Pooley and Kidder amused the audience with their portrayals of "Pupil Bidders."

Thirteen Years Ago—October 22, 1935

Russ Sunderland spearheaded UVM to a 6-0 victory over Union College on Centennial Field. Bedell, Ciardi and Gardner rendered excellent line performances for the Green and Gold.

Even without the services of Jimmy Starbuck, who sustained a leg injury during the week, the harriers of Coach Archie Post scored an overwhelming 19-36 decision over the Dartmouth Indians. Lawson and Capt. Izzy Lehrer, crossed the finish line in quick succession to pace the UVM victory. Meanwhile, the Kittens were not faring too well as they dropped a verdict to a stronger Dartmouth yearling aggregation 22-33.

Sixteen Years Ago—October 18, 1932

Placards adorned the Old Mill bulletin boards as the polls opened for the International Relations Club straw-presidential balloting. Vivid display slogans urged:—"Upset the apple cart and vote for Thomas"; "Go Republican and elect Herbert Hoover"; "Root with Roosevelt—He's the man."

Novelty features of the Co-ed Field Day and campfire picnic will be a tennis game in the style of the nineties and a talk on the Olympic games by Professor H. A. Prentice of the men's physical education department.

Sixty-four Years Ago—October 21, 1884

"The faculty have forbidden games on the campus during the time of the morning recitations."

"Two more ladies have joined the class of '89. This swells the members in the class to 8 and in the college to 18. This is the largest number since co-education began at the University of Vermont. An extra row of seats has been put in the chapel for their use."

FROSH NOT SLAVEYS

It is not with malice nor without forethought that I attempt in small measure to reply to the column "Ramblin' Round" which appeared in last week's CYNIC, for like seeds scattered haphazardly find little chance to root securely we find that seeds planted at the proper time and in the most suitable areas eventually become a fine specimen of the original.

My analogy is clearly illustrated in the columnist's peeve No. 2 in which he disapproves of intelligent treatment accorded to freshmen at UVM. I take the privilege of trying to bring a more healthy meaning out of his distortions.

The columnist states that freshmen at his former school lived lives slightly lower than worms and he believes that an importation of such sadistic methods would benefit UVM. There is a question whether his panacea would result in making better upperclassmen since new students look to upperclassmen as models after whom to pattern their behavior. The idea of cruel horseplay shows worst in its doers and sets an extremely bad example for the freshman.

UVM does not try to duplicate hazing shown in other schools but instead realizes that the vast majority come to school with the intention of learning and the hope of developing themselves mentally and socially. The horseplay advocated by the columnist prevents this integration and results only in setting emotional maturity back ten years.

For a concise analysis of the institution of hazing I would suggest the reading of the article, "Why I Left Annapolis" which appeared in the October, 1947 issue of the Atlantic Monthly.

Sincerely,

HARRY MIELE

GOOD LUCK!

This is my tropical "saludo" in your new year. I cannot forget my nice time up there, where I received so many good lessons. I have had some opportunities to talk here about the U. V. M., and the friendly spirit of American students.

I also remember the fraternal CYNIC, for which I enclose this souvenir of my city. ED. NOTE—The "Senor" sent a panoramic photograph of Havana.

May you have a successful activity through this scholar year.

Very cordially,

Smoke Gets In My Eyes . . . by

Weather Eye Opens

Student Government clearly realizes its scope of action when it directs its efforts toward problems which harass a student from day to day. At the October 11 meeting the council rejected a ten year building plan and instead set the sights on several pertinent problems which are capable of solution and direct action immediately.

In the "First, A Resurrection" editorial last week the CYNIC touched briefly on the executive council's obligation to the students whom they represent. The crux of the duty to the UVM student body can easily be defined—it is to better the UVM environment in any way that will work to the weal of the student.

This idea was well illustrated when high rentals of university buildings was decried and an investigation of the registration procedure was ordered. The latter investigation is particularly meritable since it is a problem affecting all the students. Registration has been unwieldy and time consuming, and any contribution towards a reduction of red tape enrollment should be acted upon by administrative officers.

Effectiveness of executive council investigations has been extremely good during Harry Miele's administration and the student may expect concrete results from the registration probe. Last year's athletic investigating committee can take a great deal of credit for the extra money and new addition to the coaching staff by virtue of their appeal to the administration and later to a group of alumni.

As long as the council continues to exert its powers along these lines students who take an active interest in the council's work and those who do not, except in emergency cases, may be satisfied that the money they contribute each semester is being used for the best possible ends.

"The Post" Looks At Football

Moral paralysis has made college football at most institutions a frankly professional enterprise in which players are paid for their service, "football factories" are deeply involved in staging commercial entertainment, and coaches are hired to produce winning teams rather than "build character." The Saturday Evening Post charges today (Oct. 20) in an editorial "Football's Dirty Linen Sometimes Shows."

"College football has grown far too big for its britches," the Post declares. "No one believes that we can turn the clock back . . . but it does seem odd that the very institutions that are supposed to instruct our young—to teach them integrity of thought—should lend their names and their resources to the kind of chicanery that seems to go with Saturday-afternoon agitation of a bag of wind."

The Post's criticism of the "professionalization of college football" stems from an article in the same (Oct. 23) issue, "Football Fans Aren't Human," by Mrs. Harry Stuhldreher, wife of the athletic director and head football coach at the University of Wisconsin. Mrs. Stuhldreher, a Philadelphia newspaperwoman until she married Harry, then head football coach at Villanova College, tells what happened to her family because her husband produced a losing team at Wisconsin in 1946. . . .

Angry, disgruntled fans telegraphed, telephoned and delivered their abuse in person—not just to the coach, but to his wife and sons as well. Other children taunted the Stuhldreher boys. The townspeople of Madison were outspoken and "I didn't relish their candid contempt," the Post author says. A local attorney demanded a legislative investigation, and the student newspaper inflamed the student body against the coach. . . .

"Taken by itself, the Stuhldreher story might be passed off as an amusing account of the tribulations of a football coach. But it cannot be so interpreted. Rather, it is still another manifestation of the moral paralysis which has made college football at most institutions a frankly professional enterprise."

"The 'loyal alumni,' of course, have long been party to the professionalization of college football. They were among the first to realize that a social stigma is cast on everyone associated with a losing eleven, and they have supported the conviction both orally and financially. Now, apparently, the students have been infected by the same virus. As Mrs. Stuhldreher so eloquently illustrates, today's crop of undergraduates are willing 'to die for dear old Rutgers' only during winning seasons. Football is no longer a game in the eyes, but a yardstick by which their school is judged."

Fraternity-Sorority Notes

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

College life, it's wonderful," was the sentiment at the Alpha Chi House Saturday night, plus a most successful tea party complete with banners, autumn leaves, and yes, even a football on the wall. Becky Wheatley was in charge of arrangements.

At the first meeting of the year, Alpha Chi Omegas, such as they were, went to the home of Janice Baird, engaged to Bob Cates of Montpelier, passed chocolates. Several brand new names appeared on the list, also, those being Alice Rooney and Heidi Stoeck Ballantyne.

Speaking of diets, if we were, can you grow up a chicken? Can you broil a pork chop (or do you broil pork chops?)? Questions like these are flying like mad around the house these days since 16 of the girls have suddenly gone domestic, and started cooking their own meals in the Alpha Chi kitchen. Dinner bell rings at six o'clock, if the potatoes are done.

Rumor flew back via Brackenridge from Hackettstown that Mary Andrew carried the bouquet at Smitty and Don's wedding. We will have to do the same for a Tri Delt some time.

The Alpha Chis are happy to welcome Mary Ann Brown back to the fold.

Teachers' Convention brought a lot of familiar faces back to the chapter house. Pat McGinnis has been popping buttresses all over the place since she got word of a new niece. But that isn't all—"it's" name tag is Patricia Ann!

Has anybody noticed the French accents (?) acquired by Brackenridge and Andrew since their trip to Europe on the Marshall Plan this summer?

At the first house meeting of the year the following house officers were elected: President, Betty Buzzell; treasurer, Jane Hill; secretary, Dodo Elmer; Health Council representative, Rita Bolognani; house manager, Harriet Gregory; and house captain, Yvonne Croom.

DELTA PSI

UVM's 7-6 win over a favored Union team amplified the feeling of good times at the Delta Psi tea dance Saturday, October 9. Professors Humphrey and Willard and their wives were chaperones for the large crowd of delts and friends who danced to recorded music between 5 and 8 at 61 Summit St. Bill Murray made all the arrangements for the tea dance, which included a buffet supper.

A call has been issued by coach Ralph "Knobby" Kehoe to the members of the Delta Psi football team, and practices are being held whenever possible. Coach Kehoe plans to keep his lineup secret until the start of the first game. The positions of manager and waterboy are still open.

KAPPA PHI KAPPA

The Alpha Gamma Chapter of Kappa Phi Kappa, campus national professional education fraternity, is sending two delegates from UVM to the national conference which gathers in St. Louis, Mo., from October 21-23. The local representatives are Albert S. Redway and Ed Grelz.

Al Redway is the present president of the Alpha Gamma chapter, while Ed Grelz was last year's executive. The two seniors will leave Burlington on Tuesday, October 19 and return Sunday, October 24. They will stay at the Hotel Statler in St. Louis where the convention will also meet. The trip is being financed by Kappa Phi Kappa's national headquarters and UVM Student Government.

Kappa Phi Kappa is an undergraduate society, for the most part, composed of men students interested in the profession of education from some standpoint and who plan to be associated with its activities in later life.

PI BETA PHI

Pi Phi is really cosmopolitan this year, with Jean Ritchie back from Denmark and Barb Purdy, Tody Page, and Lillian Tucker still talking about Paris. Margie and Joyce have big plans gleaned from the National Pi Phi convention at French Lick, Ind. Hot discussions, weren't they, Margie?

Wilma Murphy started out the year right by announcing her engagement to Bill Dempsey. Congratulations, Bill, and you too, Bill.

Keeping up with studies and married life are Pat Malmquist Doyle and Carol Ballou Smith. Pat is now living on St. Paul street, and Carol is out at the trailer camp. We're glad that Jean Davis Brigham and Jackie Hardgrove Robinson, both '48, are still around. They are both working for the University.

As for the Open House Friday, it was a success but definitely! We were glad to see all the new faces not to mention the not yet too familiar old ones. Here's hoping many more may get up to 369 next time. We're really sorry about not being able to welcome the freshmen and transfer women too, but Pan-Hell "no."

SIGMA NU

After the football game with Union College, Sigma Nu's and their dates gathered at the Lodge for a very enjoyable evening. Immediately following the game, there was open house until six, at which time everyone found their way to the dining room and the buffet supper, presided over by Messrs. Wood, Williams, Milligan and Desorcie. After a time, the group deployed to either the playroom downstairs or the ballroom upstairs, according to their taste for dreamy dancing or sparkling conviviality and good fellowship. As the evening passed, there was a steady interchange between these two focal points, as one couple after another felt the whim to change from music to chatter, and vice versa. Finally the girls had to be taken home, and the party was reluctantly broken up. Sigma Nu expresses its thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Kelly and Captain Johnson, who were our chaperones, and to our housemother, Mrs. Brauer, all of whom contributed greatly to the success of the evening. The affair was ably handled by the Social Committee, under the leadership of Doug McSweeney.

A familiar face seen around the house for the week-end was that of Bill Towle, who is now enrolled at Tufts College, studying dentistry.

Don't forget the pep rally before the New Hampshire game. Watch bulletin boards for details.

All men interested in scrubbing for the cheering squad please meet in the cage Thursday, October 28, at 4.00 p.m.

Any organization desiring to use the Student Lounge, please contact Harry Miele in advance. This will help to eliminate any embarrassment which may occur if two organizations are scheduled to meet at the same hour.

Students desiring the use of rooms in Waterman Building for meetings must see Mr. Kingsley so that application blanks can be filled out.

Additional tryouts for the University Orchestra will be held from 4.00 to 5.00 p.m. on Thursday, and from 4.30 to 5.30 p.m. on Friday of this week (October 21 and 22) at the Music Building, 70 Williams Street.

Former members as well as new candidates are expected to report for the tryouts.

One semester hour of academic credit is granted for satisfactory attendance at rehearsals and participation in performances of the orchestra. Rehearsals will be held on Tuesday evenings from 8.00 to 10.30 at the Ira Allen Chapel. Rehearsals and performances of the orchestra are considered academic sessions, and do not count as social evenings.

Members of the faculty and staff, as well as students, are cordially invited to join the orchestra.

LOST—A gold coil bracelet with a little rhinestone on the front; finder please return to the information booth in Waterman Building.

HEALTH COUNCIL

Health projects on good study habits, prevention of colds, dental care, and the need for proper amount of sleep and rest were among the topics discussed by the Women's Health Council which met with Pres. Rita Bolognani at Southwick, Thursday evening, October 14.

It was voted to hold a tag day, the climax of which would be reached October 25 and 26, to raise funds to carry out the two-fold project of the health council. The projects are to raise the standards of good health among the women on campus, and to have a loan fund whereby women students can borrow money for unexpected emergency health expenditures such as dental work, x-rays, and eye glasses. Application for such loans may be made through Dean Mary Jean Simpson or Miss Eleanor Cummings of the Physical Education Department. Loans granted may be repaid within three years from the time the student leaves the university and are free from interest charges.

First aid kits were given to the health officials for their dormitories. Any dormitory which was not represented at the meeting last Thursday evening may get their first aid kit by stopping in Room 230, Waterman.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB

Highlighting the Home Economics Club's social and business meeting on Tuesday, October 12, was the presentation of the Omicron Nu cup to Jean Hard-the freshman who attained the highest marks last year. Omicron Nu, national honorary home economics organization, also welcomed as new members, Miss Esther Knowles of the faculty and Charlotte Plumb, class of '49.

The meeting, which included an informal supper in honor of the new home ec students, was held in the Brick Barn on Summit Street where approximately 100 students joined with the faculty for the evening. Freshmen were given the opportunity to get acquainted with the upperclassmen, faculty and the head of the home economics department, Dr. Florance B. King.

Catherine Carter, president, conducted a short business meeting after supper, introducing each faculty member to the group. Marie Matthews, secretary, outlined the outstanding activities for the coming year including such things as the Christmas party to be given for the children of a local orphanage, the Spring Fashion Show and Banquet, and the Cookie Bar project.

V.I.P.

More than 400 students attended the Independents dance held on October 9 in the Student Lounge and Soda Fountain. Members of all classes danced by flickering candle-light to the music of the Kittens.

Under the general direction of Lou Lane, this was the first Vermont Independent Party function of the year. Prof. and Mrs. Nuquist and Prof. and Mrs. Trevithick were the chaperones.

Cats Claw Norwich For Third Straight Win

Powerful Evansmen Shackle Mt. Boys By Score of 14-0

By BOB HERRIOTT

The Green and Gold made it three in a row last Saturday as they toppled the Mountainers of Norwich 14-0. The victory made it 3-1 for the season and marked the third straight year that the Catamounts have shut out the Mountainers. In 1946 it was that memorable 0-0 tie while last year the Cadets took it on the chin to the tune of 33-0.

Jack Hurley, who had been sidelined for all of last week's thriller with Union, was the first to hit paydirt. He smashed over midway through the second quarter from the fourteen yard line in two tries after George MacDonald had set the stage with a 26 yard runback of a Norwich punt. The second tally came in the third quarter as Johnny Ballard, who last year ran wild against the Cadets, maintained his mastery over them by slipping over untouched from the one yard line to cap a drive of fifty yards. Stan Ursprung converted after both scores.

Vermont kicked off to Norwich to open the game but after moving the ball only four yards in three tries the Mountainers punted out of bounds on the Vermont 35. Collier, MacDonald, and Farrell all tried the line, but with no luck so Cote came in to kick. Dom, who last week broke the back of Union with his terrific punting, again showed his ability as he got off a boot that carried sixty-five yards to the Norwich end zone.

Norwich took the ball on their twenty as a result of the touchback and with Nick Psalidas doing most of the carrying rolled up one first down and moved to the 41 yard line before having to punt.

Cote + MacDonald + Hurley = 7

The first quarter continued to be a saw-saw affair, but with the Catamounts having the advantage. The quarter ended with the Green and Gold on the twelve yard line as a result of a twenty-one yard pass from Hurley to Collier and two line bucks by Frank Farrell which were good for eight yards. Jack Hurley carried the ball to the nine as the second quarter opened but here the attack bogged down and Norwich took over on downs. After one play they punted to the twenty-six. Ballard and Hurley again tried the line but with no luck. A long pass to the end zone failed and Hurley was forced to kick. It was a good kick, of the coffin corner variety, and went out on the Norwich five yard line. The Mountainers tried the line twice and then kicked to the forty where George MacDonald who played a terrific game all afternoon took the ball and behind some good blocking ran it back to the 14. Here Jack Hurley took the ball and after sweeping the end to the two went off tackle for the score. Stan Ursprung then split the uprights to give the Catamounts a 7-0 lead.

Ursprung kicked off and after trying three plays Norwich punted. George MacDonald again took the ball and this time went fifty-five yards, doing a tight rope walk along the sidelines, to the fifteen yard line where he was pushed out of bounds by Nick Psalidas, the last possible man that could have gotten him. Here Hurley passed to Ursprung on the five, but again the attack bogged down and Norwich took over on downs. After an exchange of punts the half ended with the score still 7-0.

The second half opened with Norwich again receiving. They tried the line three times with no luck and then kicked

CLOSEUPS OF THE UNION VICTORY

Ed La May (35), Union backfield operator, fails to gain on an end sweep against U.V.M. in the initial quarter. Stan Ursprung (44), right flank guardian, nailed La May on the play. ### Football Freshmen Hopefully Prepared For Norwich Clash

Preparing for their opening game against the Norwich Frosh this Friday the football Kittens had their first taste of contact work in a scrimmage against the Varsity last week. The Frosh were out-weighted and out-manuevered on offense, but they did display a promising offensive potential.

Coaches Strassburg and Lapointe bringing the green but willing yearlings along little by little from the fundamental stages, with play assignments being stressed.

To date, Robinson, Coutts, Keefer, MacDonald, and McSweeney have been outstanding in practice, but starting backs for the Norwich game are still wide open among the 38-man squad.

Intramural Football Play Begins - Sig Nus Take Lead

The lid came off the 1948 Intramural Football season last week as nine of the scheduled ten games were played. Looking at the list of victorious teams in the intramural circuit were the Sig Nus, Phi Sigs, and Kappa Sigs. The Sig Nus were by far the most exciting game of the week as they edged the Phi Dels 14-9 in the rain. John Steinmetz sped around the field for the vital tally on the last play of the game. Their second game came a week later as Dick Nims passed and ran for a 44-12 win over the ATOs. The Phi Sigs, showing some of that terrific offensive power that won for them the intramural championship last year, easily slaughtered the Owls, 73-0. It was a wide open game all the way as Stanley Goldberg, Mal Mickler, and Stan Bailey all hit paydirt three times. Another wide open affair saw the Kappa Sigs, led by Charlie Lewkowicz and Gene York, batter the TEPs to the tune of 44-0 for their initial win. In the other fraternity games played last week the Sig Phis trounced the Owls 34-0 on single touchdowns by Dick Birge, Bill Chapin, Doug Tudhope, and Cubby Conley, while the Dels sneaked by the SAsEs 13-6 on the good right arm of John Emerson and the sticky fingers of John Pierce and Bob Abbiati. Three games have been played in the league. Buckham, led by Ray Black who intercepted two passes for touchdowns, looked strong in drubbing Wills 40-0. Chittenden, with Ken Wilbur tallying three times and John Churchill twice, ran over Claggett 36-12, while in the only other dorm game, Wills edged Converse 18-14.

Freshmen Harriers Show Promise As Triple Meet Nears

In an attempt to find the best starting combination for the opening triple meet against Waterbury and Danville High Schools Saturday, Coach Archie Post sent his freshman cross-country aspirants through their first time trial last Friday. Leading the pack was ex-Burlington high track star, Bob Caswell, who sped over the freshman course in the excellent time of 16:02. Finishing behind Caswell were: Lou Williams, George Rowell, Kurt Shindler, Bob Farrell, Murray Lyon and Dave Cowles, in that order. Manager Wally Lash says the yearling squad shows a lot of promise and should give a good account of themselves throughout the season. After Saturday's meet, the frosh harriers face Burlington High, Randolph Aggies and the Middlebury freshmen.

Sport Slants

By Gordon Bickford

Norwich—much stomping of feet, shouting of mouths and pulling of rank. Their band was pretty good, their Army impressive, the hospitality, food and spirit-s at the Phi Kap house all in the best New England tradition—nice boys these soldiers, but their football team was fortunate indeed to hold the Cats to two touchdowns.

The Norwich team from coaches on down, singled out Dom Cote as the man they most wished had missed the bus to Northfield.

The Shape of Things to Come—Saturday, the hired hands that Middlebury College employs to represent her on the gridiron will really earn their keep when they tangle with the titans from Trinity. This isn't sportsman-like, but we trust that the young giants in the Trinity line will set to work with their usual zeal and industry to rent asunder any and all wearers of the Blue that they encounter, and leave Middlebury a little more vulnerable to the onslaughts of such simon-pure teams as Norwich and our little group.

To Centennial Field, Saturday, come the scarred but mighty Wildcats of New Hampshire to entertain a Home-coming crowd. Ragonese and Mather, Messrs. No. 1 and No. 2 for the New Hampshires, are hors du combat as of this writing, and without any personal maliciousness whatever, we sincerely hope that the two above-mentioned gentlemen will remain flat on their respective backs until after the contest with our Cats. It will improve a bleak situation considerably.

to the forty-three. On the first play Johnny Ballard broke lose off tackle and went to the twenty-three before being brought down from behind. Johnny then went to the nine on the next play, but Bob St. Gelais fumbled on the five with Cox recovering for Norwich.

Norwich tried the line three times with Nick Psalidas carrying but could get only six yards. Nick then booted out of bounds on the midfield stripe. Here the Catamounts put together their longest drive of the season as they went fifty yards in twelve plays for their second score. Johnny Ballard went over standing up from the one yard line after he and Jack Hurley had brought the ball there from the fifty. Urspring's kick was true and Vermont led 14-0.

The rest of the game was played by the second and third strings as Coach "Fuzzy" Evans made an effort to give his reserves experience and his regulars rest before the New Hampshire game.

In the statistics column the Catamounts outshone the Mountaineers 182-107 on the ground and 61-0 in the air. Hobie Cook, Dave Banta, and Ed Comolli played their usual good game.

Vermont Face Wildcats In Homecoming Fray

Ragonese Return To Head Offensive; Line Is Excellent

New Hampshire's Wildcats, who provided the opposition to the Catamounts this afternoon, bring with them some of the best players in New England.

Leading the Blue horde will be Coach Morris Ross at center and Ted Peterson at left tackle. Ross is one of the numerous Wildcats on the injured list and if he does not start, the center position will be held down by scrappy Tommy Munson, the small but capable reserve center.

At left end will be All-New England Ed Miksenas, and on the other flank Jim Nestor, playing his first season as regular right end. The right tackle berth is usually filled by big Norton Tupper, but Tupper, supposedly one of the best tackles in the East, has also been plagued with injuries. Bill Haubrich, a 6' 4" 200 pound transfer from Dartmouth may get the starting nod.

Wildcats Strong Down the Middle

New Hampshire is very strong in the guard positions with All-New England George Gorman on the left side of the center. Gorman is considered the hardest-hitting lineman on the New Hampshire team and should speak for itself. At right guard Glassford usually employs another All-New England team member, Al Siska, but Woody Noel has been showing so well to date, that he may start against Vermont. Another lineman who will be watching is George Kachavos, "The Mechanical Man."

The backfield features All-Eastern tackle Carman Ragonese. The burly Ragonese gained over a thousand yards last year and averaged a touch-down per game. But here again, the injury jinx hit Ragonese as he was severely injured last year against Springfield College, and his place will probably be filled by stocky Mike Gage.

Injuries Hamper N. H. Backs

Mike Mather, the quarter-back, field general and outstanding passer, is out with a bone-chip, so the Wildcats will have to rely on sophomore Tom Gorman to do the passing and run the T. The half-back posts are the only spots in the backfield free from injuries. At left half will be Jim Pritchard, last year's All-Star. The swivel-hipped Pritchard is ever-dangerous in an open field and will bear close surveillance by the Catamounts and Gold. Fred Comings, a former speedster, will round out the backfield line-up at right half.

Coach Biff Glassford Leads Talented Staff Of Wildcat Mentors

New Hampshire's outstanding gridiron coach, the past three years is not entirely accidental. The Wildcats attract a lot of the talent from the football Granite State High Schools and are moulded by Head Coach Wm. B. Glassford, the driving force behind the precision-like Wildcat teams.

He comes from a great football background. He played at Pittsburgh under Coach Sutherland and was an All-American guard in 1937. From Pittsburgh he moved to Yale as an assistant coach and then came to New Hampshire in 1946.

Glassford with the help of line coach Petroski and backfield coach Kachavos, has pushed the Blue and Gold to the front of small New England

Thumbnail Sketches of Our Catamounts

First String

L.E. Jack Hudson—hailing from Montpelier, Vt., Jack is playing his third year of varsity ball here at UVM. Jack has an excellent build for an end as he stands 6' 2" and weighs an even 200 pounds. He is 20 years old and a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences. His high school ball was played at Montpelier High School.

L.T. Edward Comolli—a junior and one of the most outstanding members of the big Catamount forward wall, Ed has had a lot to do with the fine defensive game the team has played this season. He weighs a hefty 205 pounds and is the tallest man on the squad, standing 6' 4". Ed is in the College of Technology; he is 20 years old and comes from Barre, Vt., where he played for Spaulding High.

L.G. David Banta—an outstanding lineman, beginning his first year on the varsity, Dave has come up fast with several brilliant performances in early games. A hard charging guard, he uses his 190 pounds to good advantage when tackling and blocking. He resides in Riverside, Conn.; played two years at Greenwich High School and one year at Cheshire Academy; and is now a sophomore in the Aggie School. He is 20 years old and stands 5' 11".

C. William Dempsey—a dependable center and an alert lineman, Bill always plays a very aggressive game. He is 24, weighs 190, and is one inch over the six foot mark. Bill lives in Dorchester, Mass., and began his football days at Boston Tech High School. Besides football, he specializes in baseball and hockey. In his junior year, Bill is enrolled in the College of Education.

R.G. George Schofield—on the freshman squad of last year, George has moved up rapidly to gain a varsity berth at right guard; he has a great deal of drive and hits hard. He is an 18-year old sophomore from South Orange, N. J., and played his early football at Columbia High School. George is six feet tall, tips the scales at 180 pounds and is enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences.

R.T. Hobart Cook—captain of the team and one of the mainstays in the Vermont line, Hobie hails from Auburn, Me. Last year he put on the best performance of the season at his tackle spot against the University of Massachusetts; he stopped several plays before they could get started by knifing his way through the line. He is a junior in the Arts and Sciences College, weighs 195, stands 6' 2", and is 24 years old. He played ball at Lewiston High School and the USMC before coming to UVM.

R.E. Stanley Ursprung—an excellent pass receiver at right end, Stan also drops back to the back-field when the extra points are needed after touchdown; incidentally, he has three for three tries thus far this season. Stan also plays a commendable game at defense. He is 23 years old, tips the scales at an even 200 pounds and measures just six feet in height. His home town is New London, Conn., and he is a junior in the College of Arts and Sciences. In the spring Stan helps to keep himself in shape by shot putting for the track team.

Q.B. Arthur Collier—a fine passer and capable ball handler, Art sees plenty of action as first string quarterback. His home is in Great Neck, L. I., N. Y., where he played for Great Neck High School. Art is 22 years old, weighs 186, and is 6' 1" tall; he has been participating in UVM athletics for three years on both baseball and basketball teams, as well as football. He is a junior and is majoring in Business Administration.

L.H.B. John Hurley—the triple threat man of the squad, Jack specializes in the quick-kick of the coffin corner variety. He does the actual play calling despite the fact that he does not call the signals. Jack may turn a pass play into a long end run or vice versa, which makes him a constant danger to the opposition. His home town is Morristown, N. J.; he is 25 years old, weighs 165 and is the shortest man on the squad at 5' 8". This is his junior year and he is enrolled in the College of Education.

R.H.B. John Ballard—a junior in the Arts and Sciences College and hailing from Milton, Vt., John is playing his second year of varsity ball for the Catamount. At his right half back position he is always a threat to opponents with his speed and adroit ball handling. John is 23 years old, 5' 10" tall and weighs 164 pounds. His early football experience was obtained at Milton High School.

F.B. Frank Farrell—from the freshman team of last year, Frank now holds the starting berth at fullback on the Green and Gold varsity. He hits the line hard, is difficult to bring down once he gets moving and plays a bang-up game on defense. His high school ball was with Hartford High and later he starred with St. Benedict's Prep of Newark. Frank lives in Irvington, N. J., and he is a sophomore in the College of Technology. He is 21 years old, weighs 190, and stands just one inch over six feet.

Second String

lacks one inch of being a six footer, and hails from Morristown, N. J. He played ball at Johns Hopkins before being called into the service. Charlie is 26 years old and is a Technology student.

Ricardo Rasines—is one of the larger members of the team as far as weight is concerned; he weighs in at 210 pounds but only stands 5' 9". He is an experienced tackle and is called on to play a good share of each game. Ric is 21 years old, a product of Barre, Vt., where he played for Spaulding High and was elected captain of his team senior year. He is enrolled in the College of Education.

William Carpenter—Bill is playing his year of varsity ball for the Green and Gold. A product of Barre, Vt., he is 20 years old, weighs 180 pounds, and stands 6' 1"; he played three years for Spaulding High and was named captain in his senior year. He is a junior and a business major.

Roderick Goyette—another Barre, Vt., boy and a graduate of Spaulding High, where he was all-state guard in his senior year. Rod is playing his second year of varsity ball for UVM. He weighs 180 pounds, stands 5' 10", and is 19 years old. Rod is a junior in the College of Agriculture.

James Turnbull—from Orleans, Vt., Jim begins his second year on the UVM varsity. A tackle and a 23-year old junior, he weighs 190 and stands an even six feet. Jim played his high school football at Orleans High School. In the winter he plays hockey and in the spring he holds down the first base assignment on the baseball squad. He is enrolled in the College of Technology.

William Grant—a sophomore from Meriden, Conn., Bill begins his first year on the varsity. He weighs only 150, but his capabilities as quarterback are above average and his extra speed gives him an added advantage. He is 5' 11", 19 years old and a Business Administration major. Baseball and basketball are also his specialties.

Robert Barrie—a 24-year old center from Rutherford, N. J., Bob is a junior playing his second year of varsity football. He is 6' 2", weighs 183 pounds, and is taking Mechanical Engineering.

Dominic Cote—no one can underestimate the value that Dom has been to the team this year; those long, high kicks of his have helped to pin back UVM's opposition several times this season. He comes from Rochester, N. H., is 24 years of age, weighs 175 pounds, and is 5' 10". Dom played ball at Cushing Academy and with a U.S. Navy Service School before matriculating at UVM. Hockey and baseball also hold his interests.

Twin Injuries Sap Strength Of Foes; UVM Loses Farrell

Coupled with UVM's traditional Homecoming, the once beaten grid forces of Coach "Fuzzy" Evans play the role of host to the highly-touted University of New Hampshire eleven this afternoon at Centennial Field.

Until the results of last week's games came out, the Cat's chances of pulling off a major upset over the power-studded Wildcats from the neighboring state appeared about as slim as they would be if you pranced down to a local car dealer expecting to find a car sitting there in the show window waiting for you. But the 23-0 trouncing handed the Wildcats by Springfield last week caused a dim glow to shine a little brighter on the campus of the Green and Gold.

Until last week New Hampshire had picked up where they left off last year and had squeezed by Rhode Island State 10-7 and followed up the next Saturday with a convincing 27-6 win over a supposedly better than average eleven.

Renaissance for the Evansmen

At the same time the local gridiron outlook wasn't so bright. St. Michael's upset the dope in the opening game 13-2 but since then the Cats have fought their way back from a state of humiliation. St. Lawrence fell 7-0, Union was notably upset 7-6, and then last week the Norwich Mountaineers bowed before the Cats 14-0.

New Hampshire rode high in New England gridiron circles last year by waltzing through their entire schedule without suffering a loss. This impressive record gained for them a post season game in the Glass Bowl at Toledo with the University of Toledo. The Ohio aggregation came out on top 20-14.

Vermont Holds Slim Edge

The series between Vermont and New Hampshire dates back to 1899. Since that time the two clubs have met twenty-four times, Vermont winning 12, losing 11, and tying one. The last time the Cats were victorious was in 1940 by a 33-13 score. Since then the series has taken on a definite New Hampshire color.

The Wildcats gained revenge in '41 by a 49-19 count and for the next four years football was disbanded because of the war. In '46 the Wildcats again came out on top 39-0, and last year the Cats fell victims to the powerful Wildcat onslaught 28-6.

The fraternities and sororities will hold the traditional open house this week-end for Homecoming.

Univ. Toledo Nails Wildcats In Close Glass Bowl Finale

Last year, the Wildcats climaxed an undefeated season by meeting the University of Toledo in the post-season Glass Bowl Classic at Toledo. UNH was barely edged out by the Rockets 20-14. Trailing in the third period by 14 points, the Wildcats rallied on an aerial from Mather to Miksenas. Late in the game, Toledo again reached paydirt but Pritchard intercepted a Rocket pass and ran to the Toledo 36. Ragonese took over and bulled his way to the Cats second score. Kachavos converted both points.

The Wildcats held Toledo after the kickoff, and Pritchard ran the Rockets' punt deep into Toledo territory. Mather then proceeded to fill the air with passes, and just missed a connection as the game ended. Thus, the curtain was lowered on still another great year for our arch-rivals, the Wildcats from the UNH.

Vermont Heralds Arrival Of Evans-Smith and Kasap

Two new faces have joined the ranks of Head Coach John "Fuzzy" Evans' gridiron tutoring aggregation this year as assistant coaches.

Big Mike Kasap, an outstanding star on the University of Illinois Rose Bowl Championship eleven in '45, has taken over the duties as head line coach, and Major William "Bull" Evans-Smith, a former Rutgers star, who is also with the Kasap returned to Illinois to carry the load on the Illinois Big Nine and Rose Bowl Championship eleven. He graduated in the spring of 1946 and last year he played a season of professional football with the Baltimore Colts.

Besides his duties as assistant coach of football, Kasap will take up duties as hockey coach at the completion of the gridiron season.

Mike Kasap

"Bull" Evans-Smith

R. O. T. C. Department at Vermont, will help Kasap with the line coaching chores.

Kasap was one of the many college stars who were coming into the limelight on the gridiron when World War II broke out. Big Mike was already a bulwark of the Illinois line in 1942 when he was called into service. As an addition to the Marine Corps, Kasap landed at Purdue in 1943 where he played regular tackle for the Purdue team that tied for the Western Conference Title.

Following his service during the war,

Major Evans-Smith's athletic history reads something similar to Kasap's, but he was able to complete college before the service became a phase of his life. The "Bull" graduated from Rutgers in 1942 where he operated with outstanding success on the gridiron. His service with the Army took him to the Pacific where he went on to coach the champions of the Pacific football circuit in Japan.

Besides assisting in line coaching, Major Evans-Smith's special duties will be the coaching of the end positions

General Good Will Features Inter-Faith Religious-Life Parley

"Unless we have faith in the good faith of other people we have no faith," stated Rabbi Alpert, the opening speaker at the Thursday evening session of the Religious Life Parley. Rabbi Alpert noted that he feels that Judaism is so complete that it does not require a Moses or Jesus to complete it.

Rev. H. King, opening the discussion on "What We Christians Believe," remarked that the history of the struggle of good men and women of Biblical times was exemplary for us. Reverend King added that we cannot despise men of evil per se.

Rev. James H. Robinson believes that no religion is infallible. The Bible is the only sure guide and religion gives man wisdom and power to meet crises. As for life after death, Reverend Robinson stated that he earnestly hoped there was a hereafter, but that he could not honestly promise one since he was not certain.

KROEPSCH COOPERATES IN STUDENT GOV. PROBE

Willingness of administrative authorities in charge of registration to cooperate in the current enrollment probe was heralded early this week and Dan Burke, in charge of the project, expects to confer with Robert Kroesch, Dean of U. V. M. admissions during the latter part of the month.

The inquiry into registration procedure was inaugurated at the October 11 meeting of student government when, in the interest of the students, it was felt that possible amendments could be made to shorten the process.

YOUNG REPUBLICAN CLUB ADMINISTERS FREEMAN'S OATH TO UVM STUDENTS

U. V. M.'s Young Republican Club swung into action last week with the Club's pilot Edward J. Costello, general chairman, joining with the 1948-49 members in mapping out one of the most extensive programs of any organization on campus including arrangements for the administering of the Freeman's Oath to over 200 Vermonters of voting age, Friday afternoon October 22.

Costello and the executive committee secured the help of notary public and Republican candidate for county senator, Howard Allen Jr., in the Freeman's oath proceedings, Friday when a booth set up in Waterman gave full information on voting procedures.

C. P. Smith Jr., who is seeking reelection to the state senate on the Republican ticket this November, addressed the first YR meeting Thursday and pointed out the importance of voting and the YR's responsibility in getting out the vote. The meeting was handled by Will Taylor '50, veteran campaigner, in the absence of Chairman Costello and Publicity Director, J. D. Adams, CYNIC managing editor.

Leaders in the field of government and labor administration will be among the 1948 feature YR speakers. Forums and question periods similar to those of last year will be retained. Gov. Ernest W. Gibson whose speech to the YR last May and subsequent campaigning won for him the admiration of the U. V. M. student body is expected to address the YR again this year.

Costello Heads County Office

After handling the Gibson-for-Governor headquarters during the recent Republican primaries and receiving plaudits from the local press for his effective work, Ed Costello is carrying a similar assignment with the Republican headquarters in Burlington which is making an unstinting effort to elect the Chittenden County candidates to the Vermont legislature November 2.

U.V.M. GOP Drive Starts

Fraternity, sorority and housing unit canvasses were placed under the direction of several committee members with the expectancy that the list would be extended before October 27.

Dorothy Elmer will head the women's angle while Dean Moore, Burt Sisco and Will Taylor will be in charge of Fort Ethan Allen and the U. V. M. Trailer Camp.

A partial list of fraternity chairmen was drawn up with Bob Morgan covering Kappa Sigma; Peter Haslam, Sigma Nu; Fred Cook, Alpha Tau Omega, Alan Pratt, Delta Psi and Marshall Sabens, Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Will Robertson, formerly of Greenwich, Conn., now from Manchester, Vt., is a Liberal Arts student majoring in economics. Last year he was on the CYNIC business staff and this year is business manager for Windfall.

Jack Hinman transferred last year from Norwich where he played polo. Jack's home town is Bangor, N. Y., but he is a graduate of Franklin Academy in Malone, N. Y. Hinman is a pre-med student.

Although his original residence was New Rochelle, N. Y., Frank Peabody now hails from St. Albans, Vt. He is a pre-law student and a member of the CYNIC staff.

STUDENTS HERALD NEW LOUNGE REDECORATION

The U. V. M. student lounge takes on the "new look" this week with the addition of modern furniture and the latest in accessories. The redecoration has been the charge of Student Government with Edward J. Costello '51 handling the arrangements.

It has been reported that the Student Government will erect a small plaque in the lounge signifying that it is the students who have been responsible for the decorative innovation.

MORTAR BOARD PLANS USUAL AUTUMN DANCE FOR NOVEMBER FIFTH

Women Share Brunt of Expense At Semi-Annual Social Affair. Malmquist Heads Arrangements

TICKETS GO ON SALE NEXT WEEK FOR $2.40

Capacity Crowd Expected To Jam Southwick For Big Debut; Catamounts Will Furnish Music

Once again, as in the past, the Mortar Board Society is sponsoring its bi-annual affair, the Mortar Board formal. This event, which is considered by most students one of the highlights of the season, will take place on Friday evening, November 5th, in both the ballroom and gymnasium of Southwick Memorial on Redstone Campus. Dancing will be to the melodious strains of the Catamounts, and refreshments will be served.

This year's theme will be of a nautical nature and will provide through its decorations a seafaring atmosphere. Contrary to conventional procedure, it will be the girls in this case who purchase the tickets, extend the invitations and present corsages (boutonnieres) to the men. (The last is optional.) This turnabout of traditions usually causes a wide interest, and Mortar Board is anticipated by students who have attended previously and by those who plan to attend.

Tickets for the occasion will be on sale the week of November 5th, in the corridor opposite the University Book Store, in the Waterman Building. The admission is $2.40, a couple.

For those who are unfamiliar with the Mortar Board Organization, the following is a brief history:

Back in 1915, a local society called Akraia was organized at U. V. M., as the honorary society for senior women, and was considered the highest honor a Vermont woman could attain. Girls were elected on the basis of scholarship, personality and service to the college. Then, in the fall of 1924, Akraia was installed as a chapter of Mortar Board, the National Senior Women's honorary society.

Nineteen forty-eight finds Mortar Board upholding the traditions of leadership and example that was begun by their predecessors. Pat Malmquist Doyle holds the position of President, with Dorothy Ross, Marty Atwood, Jane Smith, Kathy Eaton and Jane Atwood as fellow members and officers.

THE QUESTION: Do you think that Sex Education should be a major course in the U. V. M. curriculum?

THE PLACE: The U. V. M. campus.

By Lou Lane

(Staff Photo by Arms)

Margaret Jenne, Junior, Richford, Vt.

I believe that a sex education course, such as the one given at Stevens College in Missouri, could be established here. However, I do not think that it should be a major part of the curriculum but rather an elective course which would be co-educational.

Robert Herriott, Sophomore, Tiverton, R. I.

I am against a course in sex education as a major course of study at U. V. M. If taught at all, it should be a minor subject, taken as an elective. I see nothing wrong with co-educational classes for a course like this if it should be taught here.

Patsy Holt, Sophomore, Birmingham, Mich.

A course in sex education should be included in the student's curriculum. However, with preceding generations, statistics show that morals were higher on campuses where sex was not as freely discussed; nor were the bookshelves filled with the best sellers of the same.

Robert Burns, Junior, Springfield, Mass.

I don't think that sex education is a University job. I believe that a course like this should be given in elementary or high school. The reason for this is that sex education courses as they are now being offered are designed to impart knowledge which is more beneficial to persons younger than college age.

Lyn Davis, Senior, Bridgewater, Vt.

I believe that a course in sex education, conducted by a competent, well adjusted person, would be of definite value to college students, provided that the proper emphases on the course were maintained. I believe that these classes should be held on a coeducational basis.

Dr. Paul A. Moody Is Conducting Rare Experiments With Agouti

Have you ever heard of an agouti? Probably not, and yet we have one living right here on U. V. M. campus. To relieve any curiosity you may have on the subject, an agouti is a wild relative of the guinea pig. Hailing from Columbia, it is as common in that part of South America as its cousin, the chipmunk, is here.

The agouti did not journey northward to Vermont to receive an education, but rather to give one. It is part of an experiment being conducted by Dr. Paul A. Moody of the zoology department to determine the relationships between different types of rodents and between rodents and rabbits.

The basis of the Precipitin Test is the way the body reacts to foreign objects which enter the blood stream as in an army. To oppose any such army of invaders, the blood sets up its own army of defense, composed of anti-bodies. This army remains in reserve, once it is used, just in case it is ever needed again. For this reason, you may get chicken-pox once, but not more.

The army just mentioned can be used for scientific study by deliberately building up anti-bodies against foreign types of blood. In the study he is doing, Dr. Moody has been mixing the serum (or watery part of the blood) from a rooster with the serum of rodents and also of rabbits. When left in a test tube, the anti-bodies separate from the serum and form what is known as a precipitate. With enough varieties being tested, a scale of relationship can be determined by comparing the amount of precipitant caused by each type of blood.

The test has not yet been completed, and the final results among the rodents alone have not been determined. As a matter of fact, our friend, the agouti has not even been used. Dr. Moody and his graduate assistants, Frances Watson and Herbert White, have been collecting blood from the animal since it was obtained this summer. This blood will not be used until enough of a supply has been collected. In the meanwhile, friend agouti has presented a slight problem. Dr. Moody, never having had experience with this South American animal before, had to go on knowledge of its general type and living conditions in keeping it. There have been no complaints from a diet of pressed dog rations and fresh greens. In reality, the new member of U. V. M. eats just about everything but meat.

When asked how long the experiment would continue, Dr. Moody could give no definite answer. Research always leads to further questions, and so to more research. To illustrate this, Dr. Moody explained how this present study stemmed from another begun in 1931 to see if field mice had different types of blood, just as humans do. The result proved that this was not only true, but that the mice had a far more complex system than we do.

Who knows what further questions this present experiment will lead to—and how many years more of research.

Pi Phis, Phi Delts, Win Poster Contest

"Wonderful!" "Marvelous!" A big success!—These were some of the comments made about the Lamp and Key Jamboree last Saturday night. Many were seen dancing to the music of the "New Vermonsters" in a gaily decorated gym, with green and yellow paper roped around the walls and a huge, glittering sphere in the ceiling, which reflected the different colors of lights on the floor.

The main feature of the evening was the announcement of the winners in the Homecoming Poster contest. Pi Beta Phi and Phi Delta Theta won the first prizes; Delta Psi and the Vermont Independents received second.

A surprise performance was given by Johnny Pappas, who is very good at characterizations. This plus the youthful looking chaperones, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Robinson, made the dance a big success and one to be remembered by all who attended.

Mortar Board Sets Up '48 Date Bureau

There is a serious problem on campus. There are no women in Wills, Buckham, Chittenden or Converse Halls. Recognizing the existence of this serious problem, once again Mortar Board has risen to shoulder its campus responsibility. Realizing that the Lonely Hearts Club which have formed on the East Campus cannot be allowed to continue, an opportunity has been found for lonesome men to meet ditto women. The women simply register their vital dating statistics (name, age, height, interests, phone number) in room 230 Waterman. The room is open on Wednesday and Thursday from 12.00 until 2.00. At these same times the office is open to men looking for week-end dates. They leave corresponding statistics and within a short time find themselves provided with the telephone number of a beautiful coed.

U. V. M. coeds have been found to have exceptional qualities as dates. They are required to be returned to their dormitories by 11.15 in the evening (or 12.30 on Saturday night). This early hour has many advantages. First and most important, it is easy on the pocketbook; there is no time to consume large quantities of expensive food and drink.

DAVID AND GOLIATH

Brute force, organization and superiority of numbers decided the annual Cane Rush in favor of the class of '52. The battle was held Saturday between the halves of the U. V. M.-U. N. H. game. "Wearing of the green beanies" can no longer be required of the triumphant freshmen by upperclassmen.

As soon as the first half of the game ended, froshies and sophomores poured out of the stands on to the field. An army of freshmen lined up at the east side and the sophomores lined up at the west side, both on the ten-yard line. The freshmen limbered up by waving to their girls, taunting the not so numerous sophs and doing exercises. A hundred fragile carnival canes were strewn across the 50-yard line. When the whistle blew, two herds of U. V. M. men rushed for the canes. The first wave of '52 men ran interference for the second which grabbed the canes. Some of the sophomores jumped the gun by entering the battle from the 30-yard line where they had been kneeling unobserved when the whistle blew. But it was an insignificant advantage for the class of '51.

Eyes were blackened and noses battered, while everyone hit, pulled and wrestled. Pig piles of desperate men were formed. One ambitious fellow swan-dove into a pile and came out riding piggy-back on an opponent. Lots of mouths, especially sophomore, bit Centennial Field dirt. Not content with carrying canes back to their line, the froshies lifted some sophs' bodily to their end of the field.

"I got a cane but in a few seconds it was in 18 pieces. I dove for another one and before I knew it 15 fellows were on top of me." The frosh who said that came out of the scrimmage with his shirt torn almost completely off his bruised and bloody back.

In spite of the legal five-minute duration of the rush, only the beginning of the second half stopped it. There is no official tally of the number of canes and pieces which each class acquired. A pile of 27 frosh canes was counted before the rush ended. Boulder men were counting soph canes when the Frosh descended to diminish the number. It was generally agreed that the class of '52 was the winner.

When the first CYNIC was published in 1883, the cane rush was already an established custom. In the early rushes, one large, stout cane was the objective. A faculty ruling in 1891 did not stop the rushes which were held on campus and in town during the following years. An editorial in the September 26, 1883 CYNIC states, "Rushes" are still tolerated by most faculties as a necessary evil, and is an infinitely preferable substitute for hazing. In spite of its brutal roughness, there is more manliness in a good fair knock-down rush than is discoverable in a systematic assault and battery committed on one man by twenty or thirty others." In speaking of the annual Cane Rush, the September 30, 1885 CYNIC used words that accurately describe the '52 versus '51 Cane Rush. "The scene presented was one mass of living beings, writhing and struggling for victory and many came out divested of raiment and stained with gore."

The Cane Rush was sponsored by Boulder Society, assisted by Key and Serpent and Gold Key.

Vive Varsity!

A U.V.M. varsity football player commenting on last week's victory over the New Hampshire Wildcats said that the student body supported the team "from the kick-off to the final quarter" and with such enthusiasm that it "couldn't help but affect the players."

Our varsity clubs have long needed this vocal backing and wholehearted response to the antics of our versatile cheering squad. The members of our teams are the first to admit that student support is half the battle. A U.V.M. underdog basketball team, playing a suave "five" from Yale in New Haven two years ago trimmed the confident Bulldogs when the crowd's sympathies swung to Vermont.

This school spirit business is overdone and there seems little use of trying to arouse a student body with this expression in mind. The real issue evolves about whether you like sports or not. If you do you will be anxious to see your team play and to win and if you throw your whole weight behind U.V.M. it won't be because your parents have invested $2,000 in this institution but because you have identified yourself with the team.

The Catamounts travel to Amherst Saturday to meet a potentially strong University of Massachusetts eleven and it will be a big boost to the team if U.V.M. students make the trip.

The U.V.M. societies could add to their prestige if they would charter two buses for the students wishing to attend. The UMass game is a crucial contest in preparation for the battle with the "Indentured Servants" of Middlebury College since a good slate of victories coupled with a win over the "hired hands" might mean a bid to the post-season Glass Bowl at Toledo.

FIRE HAZARDS

October 22, 1948

Editor CYNIC:

I wonder if proper authorities would install waste baskets, near vending machines, to take care of gum, chocolate bar, and cigarette wrappers so that the sand baskets could be used exclusively for cigarette butts, dead or alive. In this way, there would not be any smelly smudges and danger of fire which occurs too often for comfort.

If waste baskets were available for above mentioned wrappers and discarded newspapers, perhaps more cigarette butts would reach the sand baskets as their final resting place instead of floors and steps.

Forever the optimist—

Sex Education

Whenever the subject of sex education raises its provoking head the public usually connects it with the curriculum of schools on the junior and senior levels with little or no regard to its place in the college.

University of Vermont for its sparse efforts in this field can be placed on the same levels as the high schools. In Vermont especially sex education in the secondary schools is either haphazard or non-existent. Contemporary surveys show an appalling ignorance of the essential facts of life and as long as Vermont students receive no secondary school instruction—we find this ignorance present when a Vermont student enters college.

The reason why sex education is neglected in both secondary schools and college is the fear of public censure which is motivated by religious attitudes cultivated by didactic, dogmatic members of the clergy.

The control of delinquency resulting through sex ignorance requires the modern approach of reason plus health since the moral aspect insisted upon by the clergy has failed. Eternal punishment, final judgment are the "ace up the sleeve" of religious authorities and have little effect in promoting a better understanding of the sex problems.

Like the armed forces the public must realize that the fear of ruining one's health or family has a greater effect than dialectical spiritual approach which inhibits any readiness for the problems of life and offers no solution for the mistakes ipso facto.

Fast Shuffle

The recent telephone rate increase finds repercussions of disapproval with U. V. M. married veterans as well as with the people of Chittenden County, since vet students with children count it a necessity to have a telephone in their home.

It hasn't been a secret that the rates in the Burlington area were the highest in the state and the recent "hike-jack" by the telephone company has added fuel to the already present resentment.

The question being bandied in the arguments pro and con in the telephone fracas is whether or not the rate increase is justified. College students are especially well acquainted with the ascending spiral of prices today but do not figure that the telephone utility coffers merit an increase as long as poor service, exorbitant installation and moving charges continue.

Whether Vermont's newly formed Public Service Commission likes it or not its action in the present crisis will be a proof of its effectiveness in protecting the people of the state from a greedy monopoly enterprise. If the Commission fudges on the deal it will lose the prestige it has tried so hard to gain.

The CYNIC suggests that students affected by the increase or in sympathy with a move to block the "hike-jack" register their protest with the Public Service Commission at Montpelier.

Down The River

Cancellation of the annual tradition of Hobo Day and Bean Supper poses a question whether or not the honorary societies and committees long in charge of these and similar affairs will be able to continue many of the U. V. M. customs this year.

Honorary societies in charge of the Hobo Day scheduled October 16 curtailed their plans when their efforts to build a specific program failed, owing presumably to the swelled enrollment at U. V. M.

U. V. M. students interested in promoting a better school spirit through the medium of such full scale activities are disheartened to see the lapse and may possibly view the failure to produce these events as evidence of poor preparation on the part of the planning committees.

The U. V. M. Social Activities Calendar given to each student has tabulated the proposed functions for the school year and the groups discouraged at the discontinuance of the October social functions will watch with interest to see how many of the scheduled activities will be carried out during the school year.

Hobo Day, the first of what may become a succession of "dropped activities" is directed annually by the sophomore honor groups, The Sophomore Aides and the men's Gold Key, with the ladies society allegedly handling the major preparations. These groups and other leading organizations are expected to be under the close surveillance of the student body during the year.

Comments From Other Colleges

September 6—An investigation of the expulsion of 60 students who refused to register in protest of violations of academic freedom at Olivet College, Michigan, has been initiated by the United States National Student Association (NSA).

Following a plea from the Olivet students, the NSA national office has authorized the Michigan regional headquarters at the University of Michigan to conduct a study of the situation.

Of the 300 students at Olivet College, sixty have been expelled as a result of their refusal to register for the coming semester in protest of the request by the Olivet administration that Barton Akeley, a sociology professor, and his librarian wife submit their resignations from the faculty.

The school gave no reason for the action, but outside sources have called the Akeleys "ultraliberals."

Pending study by an "impartial academic board," the Michigan chapter of the American Civil Liberties union Friday urged the reinstatement of the Akeleys. The report also questioned Olivet President, Aubrey L. Ashby's understanding of academic freedom, and recommended that the expelled students be permitted to return to school without recrimination.

SIGMA NU

The afternoon of Saturday the 16th, the major portion of Sigma Nu made the journey down to Northfield to watch the Catamounts toy with the Norwich Cadets. After the game was over, many Sigma Nu's remained at Norwich to sample the hospitality of Phi Kappa Delta fraternity. Their open house lasted well into the night, and all the Sigma Nu's who attended had a highly enjoyable sociable get-together with the fellows at Norwich. Football is in the air, it seems. Every afternoon, the lot behind the Sigma Nu house is covered with men sharpening up their eyes and instincts. Under the close supervision and direction of Coach "Boats" Baldwin and Captain Dick Nims, another Notre Dame is being born, right here on the UVM campus. With two victories under its belt after the first week of the season, the team is well on the way to the championship (we hope!).

SIGMA PHI

After the first few hectic days of school, Sigma Phi Place has again settled down to normal for another very promising school year. The social year was well started with a dance at 420 College St. on October 9. Many people attended this initial social event including brothers, pledges, grad brothers and guests representing many of the fraternities and organizations on the hill. Chaperones for the evening included Professor and Mrs. Daggett.

The actives and grads were kept busy during the summer attending many Sig weddings, including those of: David Cox to Mary Jean Dunsmore; Philip Robinson to Jacqueline Hardgrove; William Salmon to Julia Smith; Mitchell Hunt to Marjorie Nelson; and George Brigham to Jean Davis.

Many of the Sigs had interesting and varied summers. John Burrows and Ron Page attended the annual Sig convention at the mother chapter at Union in Schenectady, N. Y. the first part of the summer. Bob Arthur, Elly Hayslip, Bill Chapin, John Burrows, Cubby Goulet, Mick Boylan, Sky Banghart, Bob Ker, and Hal Perry were on hand during the summer keeping the house in order. Bob Taisey and Norm Vercoe were in Europe as members of the Marshall Plan In Action Course. George Davenport spent a few interesting days driving back to school from his home in San Gabriel, Calif. Jack White and Dick Nostrand spent six "enjoyable" weeks at Fort Meade, Md., as part of the UVM ROTC summer camp. The chapter welcomes back from the service two former members, Dick Haigis and Mick Boylan. The first few days of school were filled with enthusiasm as everyone swapped summer's experiences.

The Sig house underwent many fine improvements during the summer. Notable among them was the complete remodeling of the kitchen including the installation of two electric stoves, two dishwashing machines and two garbage disposal units, making the fine art of cooking and the arduous chore of dishwashing a pleasure.

During the summer, too, the Club suite has undergone a renovation which was instigated by Mrs. Nancy Reynolds, Mrs. W. R. Freeman, and Mrs. Myers J. Reynolds, II, wife, sister, and mother, respectively, of Myers J. Reynolds, III, Vt. 1942, who was killed in action during World War II. The installation of new furnishings and the erection of a plaque in memory of "Chum" Reynolds have comprised the major part of the remodeling. A tea and formal dedication were held Sunday evening, October 17, attended by the Reynolds family, grad brothers, Sig sisters, brothers, and pledges of the fraternity, at which time the Club suite officially became known as the Reynolds suite. The Sigs are indeed grateful to the Reynolds family for their generosity and thoughtfulness.

TAU EPSILON PHI

The TEP's are pleased to announce that they have adopted a twelve-year old Italian girl through the Foster Parent Plan for War Children. Virginia Della Seta is one of four children whose father died of injuries received while trying to escape the Fascists. Virginia will be able to remain with her mother because TEP is supplying the necessary food and clothing. We feel proud that we have aided in rehabilitating Europe, and more specifically, we have given a young child new hope and courage.

All freshmen will have a class meeting on Thursday, November 4; for further details, watch the bulletin boards.

There will be a meeting of the Editors of the 1950 Ariel on Thursday, October 28, in Room 49, Ariel office, at 4.00 p.m.

SCRUBS NEEDED: Anyone wishing to work on the Ariel, contact Carolyn Chapman at 3092 or Newell Curtis at 741. Sophomores are needed particularly.

JUNIORS: Sign up now to have your picture taken. These pictures have to be in in the near future.

LOST—a green wallet; finder please return to the information booth.

PI BETA PHI

After three weeks at the old grind, the Pi Phi's seem unanimously agreed that we are ready for the best year yet. Monday we were very happy to welcome in as a new pledge, Nancy Stell, class of '51, a bit of good news for us all.

Not only do we start the year with a grand new pledge, but even the house has had a good start. All the rooms are repainted, though some of the girls are having trouble matching yellow walls which turned out a glowing chartreuse, shades of last year's green. The kitchen turned up under a enlightening three-tone color combination; especially snappy is the soft coral ceiling. And here's three cheers for the pledges for doing a really professional job of painting the chapter room, with rumors of even more remodeling around the corner.

Our best wishes are all out for three Pi Phi's who have passed chocolates lately. Wilma Murphy announced her engagement on October 4 to Bill Dempsey. On October 11, Betsy Bigelow announced her engagement to Edward Bouton, and Barbara Spaulding to Edward Hinds of Colgate University.

While most of the house took off for Norwich to attend the game, Pi Phi was well represented at Dartmouth, Union and Princeton over the week-end. From all reports the trips were successful, even if the football games were not.

Plans are in the offing for a formal dance to celebrate Pi Beta Phi's fiftieth anniversary. Definite arrangements though, are yet to develop.

And the question of the hour is—"Where are the missing 'Successful Marriages'?"

ROBINSON

Bobby Spaulding is flashing a diamond. The lucky fellow is Edward Hinds who is attending Colgate. Chocolates and more chocolates were passed by Bobby, fortunately before a special reducing class was organized at Robinson. The slogan is "Twenty pounds off by Christmas!" The girls are very serious about this, and they are having a lot of fun at the same time. The thumping, bumping, kicking, rolling and bending hour is from ten to ten-thirty every evening to make sure that the "spare tires" and other accumulations will come off. Diet is being watched, too. No more heavy desserts. No more eating between meals. Weight and measurements of each girl has been recorded . . . just to see what does happen when one exercises and leaves the tain and Speedy Raymond is the assistant. lemon meringue pie on the counter.

The officers at Robinson Hall for this year are president, Bobby Spaulding; vice-president, Lois Sundeen; secretary, Gladys Neiburg; treasurer, Puttsy Wood; social chairman, Nan Bachman; assistant social chairman, Mardie Atwood; health official, Verda Gray; alternate health official, Lorraine Miles. Mardie Wood is the house fellow.

CLUB NEWSLETS

CLASSICAL CLUB

The Goodrich Classical Club held its first meeting of the year on Thursday evening, October 14, at the Alpha Chi House. During a short business meeting Ed Goetz, acting chairman of the Program Committee, outlined plans for future meetings. On Thursday, November 18, a play will be read to which the faculty and student body are cordially invited. A committee was chosen to arrange for making costumes to be used at the annual Roman Banquet in February.

The evening's program was conducted by Dorothy Ross and Harry Meile, who told the group about their trip to Europe last summer and the conditions they found. David Partridge showed the kodachrome slides he took on the same trip.

Refreshments prepared by Mrs. Lester Prindle were served; and the meeting was ended with Latin songs sung by the group and accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Prindle.

DEBATE CLUB

Hoping to surpass last year's record as one of the outstanding teams in the nation, the U. V. M. Debate Club held its first meeting of the year Tuesday evening, October 5. All upperclassmen interested in taking part in the forensic program were invited to attend. John Harrington conducted the transaction of routine business, after which the program for the coming year was discussed.

Dr. Robert Huber, head of the Department of Speech, then introduced Mrs. Connell, U. V. M.'s newly acquired debate coach. Mrs. Connell has directed public speaking and debating at several schools in the Middle West and has produced outstanding teams. She is an accomplished speaker herself, having had seven years of debating experience in high school and college.

Previewing the events for the coming year, Dr. Huber pointed out that the U. V. M. Invitational Debate Tournament which is to be held here November 19 and 20 is one of the largest of its kind in the East. A series of practice debates with Champlain, Middlebury and St. Michael's is also planned. Vermont will send teams to practically every major tournament in the East, including, it is hoped, the Nationals at West Point. In addition an entirely separate program for freshman debaters will be announced soon.

A public discussion program far outstripping last year's is anticipated. Teams of three speakers are being prepared to discuss some vital topic of the day before any organization desiring a program. Included in this will be students who participated in the Marshall Plan in Action trip this summer.

The first of these programs was given by John Harrington and Ed Costello when they spoke before the state convention of the Federated Women's Clubs of Vermont on Juvenile Delinquency, October 1, the first day of school.

HILLEL

Dim lights and soft music created an enticing atmosphere for the annual Hillel Dance which took place on Saturday, October 16. Held at the Roof Garden of the Hotel Vermont, the dance proved to be a huge success with about 200 people attending.

Set for 8.30 p.m., people started drifting up to the roof at about that time to start the ball rolling. Everyone was dressed in his best bib and tucker and it really was a pretty sight to see all those pretty girls and handsome fellows having such a good time dancing and partaking in the refreshments provided for those who desired them. The many chairs placed around the room for dancers with tired feet were certainly put to good use by many enthusiastic dancers. Colored crepe paper and balloons adorned the walls and together with the music injected the spirit of gaiety into anyone within hearing or seeing distance. I asked some of those present what they thought of the dance and how it compared with previous ones.

I first approached one of the many stags who arrived. She seemed to be bored when she said, "Yes, it seems to be very nice, but I wish one of those nice boys would pay me a little attention." I saw her a while later dancing to her heart's content. I went on to an upper-classman who said, "Compared with last year's dance there is a much better turnout. I myself am having a swell time here and am sure everyone else is too." Upon interviewing others I received similar answers and so can truthfully say "A good time was had by all."

On Tuesday, October 5, at 4.00 p.m. the Student Christian Association cabinet met in the Religious Life office, though a permanent meeting time is to be Monday at the same hour. The meeting opened with a prayer followed by an announcement of "front page" events, each month which are to be the highlights of this semester's schedule.

Gladys Clark was suggested as co-chairman of the publicity committee, and Ruth Mason was elected S. C. A.'s representative on the parley's planning committee.

Other headline events this semester will be a vesper service on December 5 led by Rev. Wilmer J. Kitchen, Secretary for W.S.S.F., N.Y.C., and vespers on January 9, led by Rev. John Hanna, Secretary of the Council for Unity, New Rochelle, N. Y. Both vesper services are to be preceded by a buffet supper in the soda fountain lounge. From January 9-15 the W.S.S.F. committee is planning its drive on campus.

Bitsa Bunk

Rumor has it that the Prexy is diminishing in size. At least the following story came forth from his office this week.

The president's secretary had shooed an ambitious ne-er-do-well out of the waiting room with the words:

"I'm sorry, Sir, but the President cannot be seen."

"Can't be seen," muttered Sam. "By Mansfield's hoary brow, has he got as small as that?"

Pi Phi: Men shiver when they stand before my hero.

Theta: Yeh? What does he do, pass out towels in the gymnasium?

House Mother: Doesn't that young man know how to say goodnight?

Pledge: I'll say he does!

Newly married Vet: Are those eggs strictly fresh?

Grocer (to boy helper): George, are those eggs cool enough to sell yet?

Employer: "I have looked over your references, young man."

Graduate: "So, you will give me a berth in your business."

Employer: "Yes, a wide one!"

STUDENT GOVERNMENT NOTES

Ed Costello moved that discussion on the proposed sinking fund for a student activities building be postponed until the first meeting in November when more Council members might be present. The motion was seconded by Jane Smith but defeated. During the ensuing discussion the expense to organizations using the men's gym and Southwick was emphasized. Jane Atwood moved that the presiding officer appoint someone to investigate the student rental of the gym and Southwick. The motion was seconded by Dan Burke and carried. Al Pratt received the appointment. Ed Costello's motion of the last meeting to originate a sinking fund for a student activities building was voted upon and defeated.

TENNIS COURT FEE

On behalf of a number of summer quarter students, Peter Haslam questioned the charge to students of $3.00 for use of the University tennis courts. It was explained that the University courts were rented to the Burlington Tennis Club for the summer, that the membership fee of $3.00 was a reduced rate for students. Jane Atwood and Mary Jane Farnham both pointed out the many activities and programs open to summer students, the expense of which far exceeds the income from a fee of $2.50 per student.

BURKE TO INVESTIGATE

Several criticisms arose of the twenty-five-cent charge to students lacking their spring activity cards at fall registration. Ed Costello moved that Dan Burke be appointed to investigate the authority for such a charge and the use made of the income derived from it. The motion was seconded by Karl Webster, amended by Al Pratt to empower Dan to look into the whole registration process and report within four weeks, seconded by Bob Perkins, and carried.

NEW ACCOUNTING SYSTEM

Jane Atwood, treasurer, presented a report on the new accounting system for the treasury of U.V.M. students. Student Government funds have been established with the Chittenden County Trust Company in Burlington. Ten accounts have been opened, nine for nine largest and most active student organizations and the tenth for about twenty-six other groups. Each member of the finance committee will be responsible for one or two of the larger accounts; the treasurer will supervise the tenth. Faculty advisors for organizations must approve expenditures. The treasurer of Student Government will check all accounts once a month, and Mr. Donald Marburg will oversee the whole student accounts once a month.

By GORDON BICKFORD

Last Saturday afternoon on Centennial Field, Arthur Collier and John Hickey led and encouraged a determined group of gold-helmeted students from our institution in dis-counting a myth that has haunted New England for the past three autumns—the invincibility of a football team from the University of New Hampshire.

Much can be said for the Wildcats. Ragonese, the All-Eastern fullback, good, but he either ran into his own team-mates, or a number of our lines came along and spilled him . . . it was noticeable that he and the other renowned N. H. backs, Rafferty and Pritchard, stepped more softly and gently after they had been belted a few times by Comolli, Ursprung and their associates in the Green and Gold forward line . . .

—Shots at random and other deserving people—Before baseball is completely buried for another year a parting shot at the past World Series might be in order. It has been 28 summers since a pennant flew over the fair city of Cleveland. In the fall of 1920, the Indians trounced Brooklyn for their first series win, due mainly to the efforts of a playing manager-center fielder, the immortal Tris Speaker, a catcher named O'Neil who is now connected with Detroit, and a left-hand hitting third baseman who batted .310 for the season—Gentleman name of Larry Gardner.

—There seems to be a mass exodus to the bull rushes of those young lusty boys that St. Michael's brought in to aid in the erection of their science hall. "Two Star" Hennessey and "Two Gun" DiSpirito led the evacuation and now it seems some sophomore linemen are among the missing and unaccounted for. No union scale—

—Union College is still yelping "sour grapes" over their loss to the Cats.

—First Glenn, then George, now it seems that there is in our midst the youngest of the clan MacDonald. The freshmen are claiming, with usual enthusiasm, that Leland is the greatest of them all. Be that as it may, this Crown Prince of the St. Johnsbury football dynasty conducts himself with at least the same skill and fortitude that his elders have displayed, and will suffice.

—Joining Farrell, French, Cook and G. MacDonald in the ranks of the football wounded is Doug Stantial, ex-Bates basketball star and stellar back of the Phi Delta Phantoms of the inter-frater league.

The Cane Rush went according to tradition with the frosh overwhelming the Slers, but we failed to notice an exhibition to match the one turned in last year by Andre O. B. J. Lepine of the class of 1950.

—The Shape of things to come—Saturday, John C. Evans takes the Catsmounts to Amherst, Mass., where they will fasten their claws into the Redmen of Mass. U., for their second Yankee Conference win and fifth straight for the season.

The Cats are not enjoying the best of health, and Mr. Eck, coach of the red-shirts will be much pleased with this intelligence. Eck has in Amherst a fullback of monstrous size named Fineman, and Lee, a halfback sound of wind and firm of limb—'tis rumored that the Mass line employs in their battles—pikes, lances and clubs, but despite all this Vermont will subdue them.

—And those professionals at Middlebury can rest from their endeavors against Trinity, contemplate the New Hampshire upset, and amuse themselves with lesser teams the next two weeks until they have to come here and try their record on the line. Then (Att. Joe Sherrer of the five cent Morning Agonizer) the statistics will again catch H—

Pigskin Review

By Mort Kaufman

With the nation's football teams entering the final stretch of this most productive '48 season, undefeated elevens are eyeing prospective Bowl Games, All-Americans have proclaimed, and last year's predictions are being torn to shreds every Saturday from Kennebunk to Anaheim.

Who would never have foreseen the State of Vermont possessing three of the teams of New England as election time nears, but it's an actuality. U. V. M.'s victory over favored New Hampshire, St. Michaels 54-0 rout of New England and dear Middlebury's win over a great Trinity team last Saturday, well verify the fact.

So as tension increases on every succeeding Saturday, the Vermont-Middlebury game of November 13 will take on added importance regardless of what happens in the meantime. For the game could very well decide the Mythical State Champion as well as produce a Bowl Bid. As "Red Barber would say, there'll be blood on the moon when Middlebury meets Vermont."

A quick view of the national scene finds the Cadets of West Point as the leading team of the East by virtue of their victory over Cornell last Saturday. North Carolina and the Rambling Wreck of Georgia Tech are the pride of the Solid South.

Notre Dame is still Notre Dame. Michigan retained the Little Brown Jug, while clinching the Big Nine Title for the second straight year. In the South West Conference, dark horse Baylor is trotting along undefeated with S.M.U. a close second. California will win the Pacific Coast Conference Title and represent the far west in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

Eighty Aspirants Vie Rifle Team Openings

The initial practice for the Rifle teams of the University of Vermont was held on October 20 with 80 men, including both the Varsity and Freshmen aspirants, comprising the largest turnout in the history of the University by a wide margin.

Of the seven members of last year's varsity, six are back again this year. There are also 24 others on Captain Johnson's varsity club this year, several of them coming up from last year's freshman team.

As yet Captain Johnson has not issued a call for just freshmen so at present the entire group is practicing together.

Evansmen Journey To Amherst For Crucial Clash With Mass.

Cats Are Slight Favorites Over Traditional Foes; Return of French Partially Balances Loss of Cook

By Vic Murdock

With memories of last year's game still fresh in the minds of both U. V. M.'s and Mass's supporters, a hard fought game should be expected when the two teams meet on October 30 at the camping ground of the "Redmen." The 7-7 encounter of last year at Centennial Field was one of those games when both teams gave all they had and then some more. This will be the thirteenth meeting between the schools, in a series that began back in 1890. Vermont has won four, lost six and tied two; a win for the Evansmen would do much toward squaring things up. Thus far this season the crew coached by T. W. Eck has won two games and lost two. Norwich's 27 to 19 defeat over the "Redmen" should indicate that the Green and Gold has better than an even chance of walking off the field victorious, but three games have gone by since then and comparative scores mean very little.

Redmen Play Tricky Ball

Coach Eck styles his Maroon and White warriors in the wide open type of attack which involves many risks, but also keeps the opposition praying and guessing. His team is light but fast; U. V. M.'s line out-weighs them ten pounds to the man. No doubt the "Redmen" will be forced to resort to passing and end runs under such circumstances.

Lee Still Going Strong

No reports have been received in regard to the Mass' injuries in previous games so we will assume that they are still at top strength. Little 166-pound fullback Dick Lee will be the man to hold in check; he is the team's leading and most consistent ground gainer. Not only is he a fast, shifty runner, but he also tackles as hard or harder than any man on the squad. Despite the fact that the Maroon and White's line is light they have one bruiser who is enough to make anyone shudder. His name is Izzy Yergeau, who tips the scales at 244 pounds; the mainstay of the Mass. line. At left half, up from the freshman squad of last year, the Eckmen have Russell Beaumont a fine passer and runner. Right end Bob Raymond has plenty of height and speed for his position; he is a senior and the co-captain of the team. Two men who were sidelined last year because of injuries, but who will undoubtedly see action this Saturday, are Ed Struzziero, blocking back and Pete Tassinari, 191-pound left tackle.

Coach "Fuzzy" Evans will probably use the following starting lineup which includes: Ends, Ursprung and Hudson; Tackles, Turnbull and Comolli; Guards, Schofield and Banta; Center, Ernoch; QB, Collier; Halfbacks, Hurley and Ballard; and Fullback, St. Gelais or Pandolfe.

Sterling Defense Enables UVM To Notch Upset Win

Hurley to Collier Aerials Decide Victory;
Ed Comolli, Shines Brilliantly On Defense

by Clarence Bishop

A Homecoming crowd of some 4,500 saw a rejuvenated University of Vermont eleven come up with one of the greatest upsets among New England's small colleges at Centennial Field on October 23 with a smashing 14 to 0 shutout over the powerful and clever University of New Hampshire.

The Catamounts went into the fracas as decided underdogs with everyone but the Cats themselves expecting the Durham, N. H., highly-touted powerhouse to roll on without too much trouble. The much publicized power of the Wildcats was there as can be seen in the statistics, but so were eleven men wearing the Green and Gold who fought back in the best fashion seen this season.

Cats Unleash Aerial Offensive

Taking to the air for both touchdowns, the Cats scored once near the close of the second period when Hurley faded back on the nine yard line and fired a pass to Art Collier standing clear in the end zone, and then used the same play again midway through the third period when Hurley faded back to the 30 and threw to Collier who came up with the sensation of the day with a one-handed catch over the heads of two would-be blockers for the second score. Ursprung, who also played a top notch defensive game, split the uprights both times for the extra point.

With the Cats out in front by two touchdowns, the large crowd of Vermont rooters turned into a wild cheering mass. At the same time the Cats turned on a show of defensive power and fight to protect the lead. Early in the fourth period the granite state eleven opened up again both on the ground and through the air to drive to the Vermont five, but again the Cats' goal line determination paid off and the Wildcats were held back.

Twice during the second period the Cats had their backs to the wall inside their own 15 but beautiful pass interceptions by Collier gave the Cats possession and Cote was called upon to put his educated toe into action and his beautiful spiral punts went a long way toward keeping Vermont out of trouble most of the afternoon.

Wildcats Display Power

From the first period the combination of Ragonese and Gage on the running and Gorman showing some beautiful passing, gave the Wildcats a wide edge on the yardage gained. The granite state boys were fast and deceptive, but a combination of 113 yards lost through penalties added to fumbles and pass interceptions coming at the wrong time kept the Wildcats from crossing the Vermont goal.

Up in the Vermont forward line, a big boy named Comolli came up with a great defensive game as time and time again he broke through to stop the play before it had hardly started. Ursprung, the Cats' point-after expert held up his end of the line as though he owned it.

With Frank Farrell, the Cats' hard-charging fullback, out with a broken ankle, the hopes of the Green and Gold were dimmed still further in the first period when Capt. Hobie Cook dislocated his left arm. At first the reports were that he had sustained a broken arm, the latest reports show that he might be back in action again before the season ends.

Caswell Leads Frosh X-Country To Initial Win

In their initial outing of the 1948 season the Freshman Cross Country squad romped to an easy victory last Saturday over Waterbury and Danville High Schools. The U. V. M. Freshmen captured seven of the first ten places compiling a low 23 points. Vermont's Bob Caswell was all alone at the finish line coming in first with the excellent time of 16:22. Woods of Danville, timed at 16:41, came in second. Third and fourth places went to Williams and Rowell of Vermont followed by two Waterbury runners, G. Lowe and Smith. The next four positions were held down by Vermont's Lyon, Randall, Farrell and Shindler.

Caswell, Williams and Rowell seem to be the outstanding runners for the Freshmen. They also placed one, two, three in the first speed trial of the year. Caswell wasn't hard pressed in this meet and appears capable of much better time than 16:22.

Saturday the Frosh meet Burlington High here at Burlington in a meet that promises to be a little closer than Saturday's triple meet.

Vermont Harriers Sweep Tri-College Meet In Maine

Earle Randall Easily Cops Third Straight To Lead Postmen To Bates-Bowdoin Win

By Bill Matthews

The University of Vermont hill and dalers traveled to Brunswick, Me., this past weekend and on Friday, October 22 scored a lopsided victory over the harriers of Bates and Bowdoin. The final tally was Vermont 24; Bates 41, and Bowdoin 63.

Earle Randall won his third straight cross-country race of the season by touring the comparatively short three-mile course in 15 minutes and 45 seconds. Randy was followed by Horn of Bates and John Bellows of Vermont, back in competition after a leg injury, romped home in third place. Gould of Bowdoin placed fourth, and Elwin Wolcott and Frank Peabody completed the scoring for U. V. M. by finishing in the fifth and sixth positions respectively. Moores and Buker of Bates placed seventh and eighth.

Harriers Reaching Peak

The Postmen appear to be rapidly gaining peak form as they point toward the remaining important meets and especially the Connecticut Valley Championships to be held at Storrs, Conn., on November 1. Particularly impressive has been the steady improvement of such runners as Porter, Wolcott and Peabody as the season progresses.

The race on Friday was held on the shortest course that the Varsity will run on all season. The local course is 4.2 miles and a majority of the varsity courses are at least 4 miles. However, the shorter distance did not seem to upset the pacesetting of Captain Randall as he led his team to another win.

Vermont vs. Massachusetts

This coming Friday, October 29, the squad takes a trip to Amherst, Mass., to meet the harriers of Massachusetts in a dual meet. It will be an excellent opportunity for the squad to gain top form against keen competition for the Connecticut Valley Championships to be held either on November 1 or 2.

Kittens Down Cadets 11-0 At Centennial

The U. V. M. Kittens successfully opened their season by defeating a weak Norwich eleven at Centennial field Friday afternoon. The Cadets, minus the services of several freshmen who were playing with the varsity against Coast Guard, displayed very little in an offensive manner, gaining only 13 yards on the ground and 46 through the air. The final score, 11-0, was brought about by 2 safeties in the first and third periods, and a fourth period touchdown.

The first break of the game came early in the first period with Norwich in kick formation on its own 9-yard line. A bad pass from center sent the ball sailing over the kicker's head into the end zone where it was recovered by a Cadet who was immediately tackled for the safety. At the close of the period, a long pass from MacDonald to Pruneau scored but was called back because of an illegal use of hands penalty.

Both teams spent the second quarter smearing ground plays and knocking down passes. In the third period, Flanigan passed to Malucknich, who was knocked down by the last man who had a chance to keep him from going all the way. Another Kitten pass was intercepted, but a clipping penalty put Norwich on its own 7-yard line. A kick was blocked and fell behind the end zone for an automatic safety.

Keefer Tallies for Frosh

In the fourth period, a pass from MacDonald to Hall brought U. V. M. to the 8 yard line of Norwich. Keefer plunged to the 3, and three plays later, went through the center of the line for the score. Hutton neatly kicked the point after the touchdown.

Outstanding for the Kittens were Keefer, Flanigan and Pruneau. Flanigan, playing quarterback, was very deceptive, and with a little luck would have gained more yardage passing. Pruneau was a bull on defense and came up with a couple of beautiful tackles. Keefer brought the crowd of 500 to their feet when he ran back punts. One time, he dodged, bulled, twisted and feinted his way through most of the would be tacklers while almost literally carrying three men on his solitary back before he was brought down. As a whole, the team looked good, and should have a highly successful season. The Kittens have two games remaining with St. Mikes and Middlebury.

Phi Sigs Hold Lead; Kappa Sigs Win 'A'

As the third, and final, week of intramural football rolls around the power is beginning to show. The previously unbeaten Sig Nus fell before the insurgent Kappa Sigs 32-0 as the boys from Main Street swept three straight to finish the season unbeaten, clinching the league, and marking the second straight year they have made the playoff. The game was Kappa Sig all the way with Gene York, Hammy Livingston and Al Niemann leading the attack. In the first of their other two encounters of the week the Kappa Sigs dropped the hapless ATOs 48-0 with Syl Sylvies scoring three of the seven TDs. In their other game they trimmed the Phi Deltas 40-13 as Ed Kotlarczyk passed for four touchdowns and three extra points. The Phi Deltas trounced the TEPs 26-0 with Bill Spreen scoring three TDs and passing for the fourth in the only other League A encounter.

In the other fraternity league the Phi Sigs remained unbeaten as they sneaked by a stubborn Sig Phi team 25-20 in their only game of the week. The Sig Phis drew first blood, but the combination of Mickler to Goldberg and visa versa was too much for them to handle. Wednesday the SAEs led by Jeff Griffin and Art Leavitt bounced back from their defeat at the hands of the Deltas to trim the Owls 24-14. The only other League B game

Vermont 14, New Hampshire 0

The first Vermont break came in the first period when Comolli and Traverse teamed up to block a New Hampshire punt on the Wildcat 20. DeRubio intercepted a Vermont pass however, on the first play and the Wildcats took over again. The granite staters brought the ball up to the Vermont 37 before DeRubio fumbled with Comolli recovering. On second down Hurley quick kicked to surprise the Wildcats and set them back to their own 11.

The Wildcats rolled up a pair of first downs before Gorman kicked to MacDonald who took it on his own 10 and brought it back to the 25. The Cats were forced to kick and then again the Wildcats began to threaten on steady ground plays and through the air. The drive went as far as the Vermont seven before the Cats took over and called on Cote to punt them out of danger.

Vermont Marches To Score

The buildup to the first Vermont score came when Ursprung intercepted a pass on the 40 and raced to the New Hampshire 28 before being brought down. Pandolfe went through for eight and St.

Gelais picked up four more to the 18. Ballard went through center to the 13 and St. Gelais drove to the nine through the middle to set up the pass play from Hurley to Collier for the first score.

The second Vermont score started on a punt return by MacDonald from the midstripe to the 41. St. Gelais went through for eight and then picked up one more with Ballard making it a first down on the New Hampshire 29. Here Hurley faded back, took plenty of time while evading would-be tacklers and fired a long pass to Collier who bobbled it on one hand but held onto it with two blockers practically on top of him.

The remainder of the game found the Wildcats desperately trying to roll both by air and the ground but the determined Cats held on and kept their goal unblemished.

FRATERNITY RUSHING BEGINS FOR FRESHMAN AS UVM HOUSES OPEN

First Period Underway With Feast and Pledging Slated For December 8, 14

Fraternity rushing gets underway this week with the first period scheduled for November 1-4 and November 8 when freshmen will be the guests of Vermont's ten fraternities. Stephen Gates, president of the Interfraternity Council greeted approximately 350 rushees at a special meeting Tuesday evening and stated that a second rushing period is slated for November 29, 30 and December 1.

RULES

1. For a period of 30 days prior to Freshman registration and to such a time beyond this date of registration as the Interfraternity Council desires to designate, no fraternity man or pledge shall discuss under any circumstances, matters concerning fraternity, rushing, or pledging of these Freshmen.

2. At a date designated by Interfraternity Council, a meeting will be held for all Freshmen interested in fraternity.

3. Following this meeting, the committee will arrange those men interested in fraternity into blocks, each block scheduled to visit fraternities according to a pre-arranged schedule. THAT EVERY MAN SO SCHEDULED SHALL VISIT EVERY HOUSE SHALL BE MANDATORY.

Each fraternity shall be provided with a copy of this schedule and the names of the men to appear prior to the first day of rushing.

Should a Freshman fail to appear as scheduled without a valid excuse, he shall be considered to have forfeited his chance to take part in the current rushing program, and further, shall not be extended a bid until such time as he shall have been subjected to a formal rushing period.

4. On the days scheduled and the times designated, the Freshmen will be present at the fraternity houses. These days will be known hereafter as the "First Rushing Period" and fraternities may be discussed. Under no circumstances must a pledge or a member be allowed to discuss any other fraternity.

5. Upon the completion of these first visits or of the "First Rushing Period," there will be a "Hands Off" period during which no fraternity matters may be discussed with these men.

6. One week prior to the termination of this "Hands Off" period, all Freshmen will turn in a sealed envelope listing a maximum of four fraternities which they desire to visit again. The Rushing Committee will again schedule these men in blocks of smaller number and for longer periods of time. Fraternities will be tendered again a list of men, showing the names and times when these men will visit the respective houses.

7. This period will be known as the "Second Rushing Period." Again, members and pledges shall be allowed to discuss fraternity but must confine their talks to their respective houses, and under no circumstances, shall they discuss other houses on the campus. Following this period two nights will be given over to "Rushing Banquets."

8. A "Hands Off" period will take effect from the date of the final banquet to the end of one week following the date of bidding. During this time the fraternities will draw up a list to be given to the Rushing Committee of men it desires to pledge. The Freshman will also give to the designated official a sealed list of the fraternities in which he is interested in order of preference. The designated official shall match the rushee's list with the lists presented by the fraternities and will notify the rushee of his acceptance or rejection. The Freshman shall be allowed a maximum of three choices.

9. On this date a list of new pledges will be given to the fraternities.

10. As soon as the rushee is pledged, the Interfraternity Council will be notified in writing within 48 hours. The chairman of the Rushing Committee will then notify all other fraternities.

11. If a man breaks his pledge or a pledge is revoked, the man will not pledge another fraternity for a period of 90 days after notification is received by Interfraternity Council from the fraternity in question.

12. No pledge shall be initiated prior to one complete academic term.

13. In the rules when reference is made to "Freshmen" or "rushees," it shall be construed to mean all men entering the University of Vermont for the first time, or such men as have not been subjected to a formal rushing period except such men as are already members of a fraternity represented on the Council.

OVERSTEPPING POWERS? STU-GOV. FLAYS FINANCE COMM. IN HOT DEBATE

The Finance Committee was accused of overstepping their powers October 25 when Council members clashed in bitter debate over the committee's $1,800 appropriation to the recreational ski program which was according to the members made independently from the Council.

Tempers flared when Jane Atwood, finance chairman told of the altering the financial setup so to include a full time bookkeeper to take care of Student Government transactions and to be paid a salary ranging from $1,200 to $1,500 a year. The Council then rapped the finance committee for not securing assent before undertaking new programs.

Dan Burke halted debate when his proposal to form a committee to study the finance group's powers was accepted by the Council. Appointed to the committee was Karl Webster, Bob Perkins and Norman Dennis who will present their recommendations.

STU. COUNCIL REPLACES UVM'S BLOCK V CLUB WITH "VARSITY CLUB"

Total agreement that the Block V Club for varsity lettermen was doing nothing resulted in Student Government authorizing slight financial aid to a new replacing organization to be called the "Varsity Club" at the October 25 meeting when football manager, Joe Waterman, acting as promoter for the new club asked for the executive council's approval.

The Varsity Club purports to band athletics in all sports and promote better athletic spirit among themselves and among the student body. In addition the new group hopes to provide a nucleus for a stronger athletically-minded alumni in the future.

The new club will take over the Block V Club's position as the representative of all athletic groups on campus. Alan Pratt, chairman of last year's successful athletic investigating committee suggested that a set of by-laws be drawn up for the group.

School Spirit Rapped

Questioned as to the work of the Pep Committee in arousing school spirit, Alan Pratt cited the lack of support from the honorary societies and his own inexperience as major weaknesses.

The executive council discussed several means of improving the school spirit and urged the ringing of the chapel bell after victory and a new supply of school songs. They also suggested that more help be recruited in carrying out the work of the Pep Committee.

Renowned Violinist Will Give Recital At City Auditorium

The University is sponsoring a recital by the celebrated violinist Fritz Kreisler, to be held at the Memorial Auditorium, Friday evening, November 12. The recital is part of Mr. Kreisler's farewell tour, which, in addition to Burlington, will include appearances in Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Baltimore, Boston, and Washington.

Mr. Kreisler is one of the most beloved figures in the world of music, and his Burlington appearance promises to be an occasion of state-wide interest. No violinist of our time has equaled Mr. Kreisler in his hold upon the public. The response in the larger metropolitan centers to the announcement of the eminent musician's farewell tour has been overwhelming.

Mr. Kreisler's decision to include Burlington in his tour is based in large part upon the love he has developed for Vermont audiences in previous visits to this state many years ago. Music lovers of Vermont consider the forthcoming recital an opportunity to pay tribute to one of the legendary figures in the world of music, and a capacity audience is expected.

Members of the University family and others who failed to secure tickets may still purchase them by mail order by addressing the Music Department of the University. The scale of prices is $3.00, $2.40, $1.80, and $1.20, tax included. All seats are reserved. Checks may be made payable to the Kreisler Concert, U.V.M.

WALLACITE ON CARPET; NEVER RECEIVED OKAY ON CLUB FORMATION

Marshall London, U.V.M. Wallace Group president will be called on the carpet before Student Government this week to explain as Council authorities say, "the source of a story which appeared in the CYNIC referring to the Executive Council."

The story in question appeared in the October 20 issue of the CYNIC and told of the Wallace for President group's campaign plans on the U.V.M. campus. It is likely that the Executive Council of Student Government will take issue with London over club recognition of the Wallace Club.

It was stated in the article that the club was recognized by Student Government, April 16 of last year but the Council has either forgotten or does not have any record of a Wallace group petition. The Student Constitution dictates that all organizations must receive their charter from the U.V.M. government or will be considered non-existing and unable to share the facilities of the University.

UVM COLLEGE DEANS ANNOUNCE NEW RULES FOR JUSTIFIABLE CUTS

Instructors Will Handle Class Lecture Absences; Infirmary To Excuse Ill

Thoroughly displeased with the former setup with regard to the handling of excused absences, the University Council has agreed upon the new procedure, which is outlined briefly below by Dean G. V. Kidder, secretary of the organization. Whereas in the past, the Dean's office has been the gateway through which all of the excuses have funneled, the new rules and regulations pummel the majority of the confusion on to the various professors. The primary reason for the shift in policy is to alleviate the congestion in the Deans' offices. Students are advised to study these new rulings very carefully in order to curtail as much as possible the misunderstandings, which are bound to arise.

Excuses for justifiable absence from an hour test or final examination will be issued for the women by Dean Simpson and for the men by the Dean of the College in which the student is enrolled. Absence from recitation, laboratory, or quiz will be handled by the instructor concerned.

Excuses for justifiable absence from a scheduled University exercise immediately preceding or following a University holiday must be obtained from the appropriate Dean. If possible such absence should be anticipated and the excuse obtained in advance.

Students must obtain in advance from the appropriate Dean permission for any absence from Burlington for 24 hours or longer which involves absence from class.

Excuses for absence due to illness will be issued by the Deans only on receipt of written evidence from the Infirmary or attending physician.

Students who are sufficiently ill to miss class should go to the Infirmary, if able, or ask the Infirmary to have the college physician visit them. The Infirmary will send to the office of the appropriate Dean formal notice of cases of illness under its care but will issue no excuses for other cases.

Students who are attended by a private physician must present a statement from the physician to the Dean.

Laundry For Trailer, Dairy, Science Hall Will Be Built Soon

A new laundry for the UVM Trailer Camp, a dairy manufacturing plant, and an agricultural science building are all under construction with hopes of completion in the near future; the laundry, within a month and the others by late 1949.

The laundry, located immediately south of the Trailer Camp, will provide laundry facilities for all residents of the Camp, recreation rooms, and toilet facilities for the mobile units. Of frame construction, it will be a one story and basement building, 25 by 30 feet.

A three-story dairy building, containing a manufacturing plant, dairy sales room, and offices, class rooms, and laboratories for the Dairy Department, will be erected on Williston Road, east of Morrill Hall.

Immediately south of Converse on the back campus is the location of the prospective Agricultural Science Building, another three-story unit, providing offices and class rooms for the various departments of the Agricultural College, a small auditorium, study hall, greenhouses, and cold storage facilities.

Minor Details Of SG Oct. 18 Meeting

Tom Hayes made the motion that Sherman Sprague approach President Millis concerning rental and student use of the University tennis courts during the summer. The motion was seconded by Bob Perkins and accepted. Jane Smith moved that Sherm consult with President Millis also about a room in Waterman for a barber shop and that he present a proposed deadline after which the council will attempt to pursue the project no further. Karl Webster seconded the motion and it was approved.

In answer to Bob Perkins' inquiry regarding night use of the soda fountain, Harry Miele explained that not enough students made use of the fountain to cover the expense of having it open. The council has abandoned the idea for the present. President Miele announced that the doors from the soda fountain to the Student Lounge will be kept unlocked during soda fountain hours.

Dan Burke brought forth the subject of the campus fountain. Karl Webster made the motion that Dan be appointed to investigate the possibilities for improving or replacing the present fountain. Bob Perkins suggested that the council's maintain the attitude that responsibility for improvement of the fountain actually lies with the administration.

The cafeteria lines were considered. Harry Miele felt that freshman hesitation at the counters caused some delay. The council agreed that the situation will ease itself with time.

Noted Cleric Will Preach At Vespers

The second University vesper service will be held on Sunday evening, November 7, at 7.30 p.m. in the Ira Allen Chapel with the Rev. Prentiss L. Pemberton of Boston as the preacher. Mr. Pemberton is the secretary of the Student Christian Movement in New England and is remembered on the campus as one of the leaders of the Parley on Religion and Life held in 1947.

Mr. Pemberton was born in Kansas and took his A.B. degree there; his Bachelor of Divinity degree was obtained at Andover-Newton, an M.A. at Harvard in history, government and economics. He is now working for his doctorate in history and religion at Harvard. His experience has embraced a pastorate of Grace Baptist Church in Somerville, Mass., teaching religion and philosophy at a South Dakota college, and serving as minister to Baptist students in the Boston area. He is now the able director of the New England Student Christian Movement.

His subject at vespers will be "A Vital Faith." He will also be the speaker at the midweek chapel Friday afternoon the 5th, and Friday evening at 7.30 he will speak at an open meeting sponsored by the S.C.A. in 239 Waterman on "Communism, Christianity and Man's Future." He will meet with other campus groups during his weekend stay at UVM; personal interviews may be arranged at the Religious Life Office. The cabinet of S.C.A. will meet with him following the vesper service.

Fable 'n Folly

By John D. Adams

Like the well known craft that is stranded up the well designated creek, Fable 'n' Folly once again has completed its sybaritic preparations and now sets forth to make frequent sallies against the strongholds of wisdom, convention and accepted good taste.

Andy Hardy's World

Not long ago the eyes of thousands of college students were dilated with tears when a champion representing youth and progressivism made his bid for the Republican presidential nomination. Harold Stassen, the David in question revived in the nation's youth the avid enthusiasm that occurs among us when we feel that the federal government has the opportunity to be run on the basis of political science par excellence instead of dirty saddles in the Washington corral.

Our David's opponents in his own party and in the other parties were repulsive to us. On one hand we had an average man of whose actions and manners smacked of something we had read in Sinclair Lewis and we could never consider Harry Truman anything else but a haberdasher who sold out Hart Shaffner and Marx for white porte-cochere in a Washington square.

Thomas E. Dewey's was a familiar name but it struck no responsive chords unless we were still in the gangbuster stage of development and could appreciate his work as District Attorney in New York. He is evidently a careful administrator, not apt to be impetuous, or for the matter, imaginative.

Far to the left or right according to your foresight is Henry Agard Wallace who is a far better topic for conversation than reading matter on a ballot. Fundamentally Wallace has advanced the only Christian platform, a dangerous course of action in our modern times.

Are we decadent or merely treading in its murky waters? If the writings of the articulate members of society are any indication of public sentiment as related to our domestic and international issues is an indication we are decidedly plodding the barbed path.

The world has an extraordinary guilt complex since it turns morality on and off like a faucet and reserves specific types of behavior for specific situations. What kind of a culture is it that makes a man behave tenderly to his wife and children and yet in the business world blithely blackmail the public. Which reminds me of my new poem.

New Poem

"The chaplain excused himself from God, and joined his combat brothers; Bayoneted a few kidneys and spleens And silently moved on to Hell."

Be Bop Music Chamber

The oeuvre d'art or masterpiece of UVM, "The Financial Report" appeared not long ago and squatted on little catfeet, Sandburged for awhile and then silently dehaunched and disappeared leaving the faces of those versed in accounting a trifle blanched.

There was a question of whether fiscal license which is akin to poetic license did a few Houdinis with Book-Store and Cafeteria items of the report. There was speculation as to whether other charges like maintenance were not added to these items in order to conceal the fact that the little store around the corner (a corner we all remember being backed into) and our gilded mess hall garnered such extraordinary revenues during the '47-'48 season that it was necessary to pad the two items with other expenses.

This course of action might have been expedient because the guiding hands of the fiscal statement did not want the reader to be sickened at the sight of the such ovalrhea (excess of zeros) after the dollar sign on the profit portion of the report.

If UVM with its present standing as a bastard state institution wishes to petition the state legislature for money it must provide service to the Vermont student instead of charging them to the utmost.

Curtain Down

In the very near future this writer will attempt a survey of the sororities on campus with an eye to giving unsolicited advice to freshman ladies hoping to enter the Greek petticoat world. This survey will be conducted with the same unprincipled enthusiasm that marked the coverage of fraternities last year.

BENNINGTON'S KAMPELMAN

Bennington College Professor Urges Socialist Candidate

The Students for Norman Thomas group here at UVM had its first meeting on October 27. The meeting was opened by Burton Blechman, one of the founders of UVM's Students for Norman Thomas group, who introduced the guest speaker.

The guest speaker at the meeting was Professor Max Kampelman, who is at present a Professor of Political Science at Bennington College. He was formerly on the executive committee of the ADA, political adviser to the Textile Workers Union, and a summer teacher at the School for Workers at Madison, Wisc. Professor Kampelman began his talk by saying that he is not a member of the socialist party, but rather is a member of the Independents for Norman Thomas, which includes among its members such well-known people as Dorothy Thompson, James T. Farrell, and A. Philip Randolph.

He said that our world today is neurotic and insecure, and cannot decide whether it wants to "blow its brains out or eat its heart out." He further stated that all people today feel insecure; farmers because they know that good times will not last forever; workers because they may be fired any day and so be without income; old people because they cannot get jobs and social security benefits are not large enough; rich people because they may lose their money if our present precarious economy falls into depression as has been done before. He further pointed out the insecurity in our economy by stating that a family of four, today needs $3,500 to live adequately, and yet according to a survey 48% of our nation's families of four earn under $3,000 a year.

At this point in his talk, Mr. Kampelman turned from the domestic to the international scene. He said that today, after the end of a horribly destructive war, we are already talking about a third world war. Millions of people are still in the concentration camps of Europe because they refuse to obey certain doctrines. Our government is offering no solution to the problems of the world and we are entering the foreign scene with dirty hands.

The liberals who are backing Thomas in '48 realize our responsibility to the rest of the world and they also realize our failure to live up to these responsibilities. Although they are not as well organized as they should be, the liberals supporting Thomas are registering a positive protest vote and asking for a complete realignment of our government.

After the discussion a business meeting was held and the Students for Norman Thomas elected the following as their officers: Burton Blechman, chairman; Herbert Levine, secretary; and Eugene Kalkin, treasurer.

Stan Susskind Is NJ Hero In Atlantic Drama

Death was playing Blind Man's Bluff in the wave-decked Atlantic waters along the Jersey shore.

Because of the dangerous conditions, the beach guards stayed on at their posts almost a full hour after their usual departure time. But at 6.00, with no guards on hand, swimmers were still answering the ocean's challenge. On the beach, Stanley Susskind, a U. V. M. sophomore, and his sister Betty, both life saving instructors, aware of the ocean's superior power on this unusually rough day, were content to watch rather than contend with it. At approximately 6.20, they were attracted by the screams and yells of others around them.

Stanley rushed with the excited crowd to the water's edge. More than one hundred yards out two swimmers were desperately fighting to swim shoreward. The waves knocked them about like bits of wood as their mouths and nostrils filled with water and they struggled for breath to continue the uneven contest. Their efforts seemed puny against the ocean's magnitude as the undertow took them farther out with each succeeding gasp.

Stanley, among others, plunged into the water and swam with all his might toward the spot where two young men were losing their last feeble energies in a frantic bid for life. As he swam, some men on shore attempted to control a lifeline; a life boat was started on its way.

Finally one of the boys lost consciousness, but his companion was able to hold him above the water. As Stanley approached he saw that the boy was not panicky; he took the other boy's inert form from his grip and gave them both support until the life raft arrived. They held onto that and fought for breath; the second boy collapsed and had to be held up.

When a nearby fishing boat arrived on the scene, the two unconscious boys were hauled aboard to be taken to a hospital down the beach for treatment. Stanley insisted on donning a life preserver vest and swimming for shore. The return trip was easier and he soon reached his sister who was anxiously waiting on the shore. Except for a short period of shock, during which he could neither eat nor sleep, Stanley's startling role in the ocean drama was over.

FIRST BRIDGE GAME

Old Lounge Now Swanky Spot Since Classy Redecoration

Many bewildered upperclassmen, as well as freshmen, have reached the door of what they had always thought was the Student Lounge during the past week, and decided they had the wrong room. Even people as wise as the sagacious seniors have been known to be on the verge of a nervous breakdown as a result of their search for the long lost Student Lounge. It is primarily for the benefit of these few misguided souls that this feature is written.

Yes, the rickety chairs and cigarette-scarred tables that formerly cuttered up the Lounge have been thrown into Lake Champlain (we hope you won't get lonesome for them and try to fish them out), and in their place are the most comfortable chairs imaginable, upholstered in lush green, red, and yellow leather, and green, chrome-trimmed tables, perfect for studying, card games or just lounging. The officials of the Student Government have turned our old Student Lounge into a swanky hangout for sophisticated "college joes and janes," but once you summon your courage to enter the still smoke-filled college meeting place you'll find that underneath the surface it hasn't really changed.

When you walk down the middle of the room sooner or later you will discover that you just tripped over the same pair of feet that you have been tripping over for the last month. Likewise, when you finally settle yourself in one of the super-deluxe chairs and look around, it will become evident that the cigarette butts under your feet are no different than the ones that have been missing the ash trays since September; except perhaps they are less numerous, as a result of the bigger and better ashtrays. Observing still further you will see the same hard-working students slaving over math or history in the corners completely oblivious to the card playing set, battling out a game of bridge at the shiny new tables. If you're still not convinced as to your whereabouts, just perk up your ears and listen. That's right, that throbbing noise is the juke box in the soda fountain, and where else on campus can you learn your Spanish to the tune of "Maybe You'll Be There," other than in the Student Lounge?

So, all ye doubtful sons and daughters of our Alma Mater, don't take our word for it, but go downstairs in Waterman, and enter the door that says "Student Lounge" to see for yourself. If you don't think that Student Government did a wonderful job in redecorating the lounge without spoiling the traditional atmosphere of conviviality and friendliness, you are in a class by yourself at this University. Now, when showing off our school to visitors, instead of saying "This is our Student Lounge, isn't it quaint?", we can say "This is the classiest spot on campus, eh what?"

A Last Word

In answer to the many complaints and praises for the headline accompanying a front page news item concerning the appointment of the 1950 Kake Walk directors the CYNIC says to both parties, "The head was correct and any animosity aroused can be chalked up to cringe of conscience on the part of the objectors.

The fact still remains that this year's director slate composed of Alan Pratt, Frank Krug and Frank Zwick presumably after long deliberation chose three of their fraternity brothers to succeed them.

In CYNIC opinion we see little appeal in accepting Kake Walk responsibility. The CYNIC of seven years ago, would however, have seen very definite advantages in being a Kake Walk director since a student holding said position might well add a new automobile to his possessions after the annual festival owing to the acquiring of sundry revenues.

Perhaps our innocence has been stretched too far and we have lost sight of the inner workings of Kake Walk and have overlooked the fact that munificent revenues are still in order for those who handle the February stint.

Last year Student Government thrashed the matter of Kake Walk directorship inheritance over thoroughly but a block of council members belonging to the fraternities in question succeeded in fudging a revision.

The CYNIC shall continue to print the straight news, with the primary aim of keeping the vast populace of U.V.M. informed. This is the school paper of the University of Vermont—news of interest to all cannot be curtailed merely because a few so desire.

ALUMNI PLEASED

To the U. V. M. Students:

Returning Alumni for "Home Coming" . . . October 25/48 were loud in their praise of the welcome given them on the Campus.

'Grads' fall into line pretty well at Commencement Time, and do as they are told, but at 'Home Coming' they refuse to be regimented and 'nagged' by their Alumni Secretary, they want to visit friends and, in general, do what they please.

The banners and posters with salutations of 'Hello Alumni,' 'Welcome Alumni,' etc., together with a most cordial invitation to all social functions following the game, seemed to be more appreciated than any form of entertainment we have attempted in years past.

The team also decided to cooperate in a 'big way,' and the spirit shown at the game was really 'something'!! Who says college spirit is lacking at U. V. M.?

Congratulations on the accomplishment of an excellent job.

(MRS.) ISABELLE Y. GALLUP,
Alumni Secretary.

The Editor's Column

While the last vestiges of this paper are pouring through the presses, the long-awaited-for news of the torrid presidential race will be blazing over the telegraph wires and radio networks from coast to coast. Enthusiasm struck an unexpected high on campus as the campaigns drew to a close.

Unfortunately, when the Student Government election rolls around shortly after the Christmas recess, all fervor for good government seems to ebb out to sea. The CYNIC has unrelentingly tried to create student enthusiasm in the Student Government. After all, the highest campus organization not only spreads a fair amount of cabbage among all of the university-sponsored organs but also carries out an aggressive improvements-for-U.V.M. policy.

Although this may seem to be a little early to emphasize the importance of the coming elections, let us not forget that the sophomore members of this year's council will without a doubt furnish the nucleus of the aspirants for Student Government president in February. Campaign promises are all very well during the pre-election flowery speeches but why wait until then to attempt to visualize the colors of the prexy-hopefuls, when every U.V.M. student is afforded the privilege of attending the Student Government meetings which take place every Monday evening. An ounce of prevention is still worth a pound of cure.

Exchange Publications

The circulation department of the CYNIC carries on an aggressive exchange policy with all of the leading colleges in the country. Newspapers pour into the office week after week from every state in the union. These publications are available to the students on the campus who are interested in keeping abreast of the activities in other schools. So therefore, if any of you wish to peruse through any or all of these exchange papers, just drop into the office at any time and we shall be very glad to take care of you.

Attention: Veterans

In response to several inquiries, here are a few imported deadline dates on G.I. benefits which World War II veterans should keep in mind. Education or training must be started within four years after discharge or by July 25, 1951 (which-ever is later). As a general rule, education or training must be completed not later than July 25, 1956. However, there are a couple of exceptions to the above ruling.

Veterans may apply for guaranteed or insured G.I. loans for the purpose of buying or building homes, farms or businesses, up until July 25, 1957.

Veterans who were discharged on or before July 25, 1947 can apply for readjustment allowances up to July 25, 1949. Men discharged after the above date are entitled to readjustment allowances until two years after their date of discharge. However, no readjustment allowances are payable after July 25, 1952.

Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament

This university has just received an invitation to compete in the 1949 National Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament. Invitations have also been extended to 325 other colleges and universities accredited by the Association of American Universities.

Only undergraduates are eligible to play in the duplicate Contract Bridge event for the title and silver trophy. A preliminary round will be played by mail in February, and the sixteen highest ranking pairs will meet for the face-to-face finals on April 22 and 23 at the Drake Hotel in Chicago, where the players will be guests of the Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament Committee.

In last year's Intercollegiate Tournament, which was won by the team from Capital University, Columbus, O., 1,216 students representing 152 colleges in 43 states played in the round-by-mail. To insure representation of all parts of the country in the finals, the country is divided into eight zones, with two pairs from each zone qualifying for the finals.

The Intercollegiate Bridge Tournament Committee, which supports the event so that there is no cost to the competing colleges or the players, is a group of college alumni and officials interested in developing Contract Bridge as an intercollegiate sport in which men and women can compete on an equal basis.

The committee requires that the approval of the dean or a corresponding authority be granted before a college can be regarded as officially entered in the tournament. Although the CYNIC is in no position to select a pair to represent Vermont, front page publicity will be rendered, if some interested students take up the challenge.

Keys to Success

While gallavandering through the halls of Waterman Monday evening, in search of CYNIC material, I was impressed by the quality of the music floating out from the lounge. Still entertaining therein was Russell Young, exceptionally talented Negro pianist and composer, who is widely known in New York City entertainment circles. Mr. Young has recently returned from a concert tour of Europe and South America, which would have tired even the sturdiest of politicians to say nothing of musicians. To the members of V.I.P., who were responsible for the appearance of Mr. Young at U.V.M., congratulations for a work well done. The inspiring renditions will long be remembered by the small throng, which sat spellbound until the very last note of "Ain't Misbehaving" brought to a close the well-rounded selection of classics, semi-classics and jazz.

Procrastination is the Thief of Time

Tickets for the Burlington appearance of Fritz Kreisler, sponsored by U.V.M., are selling very fast to citizens of both Vermont and New York with the result that Mr. Kreisler will face a packed auditorium on November 12.

To avoid disappointment any Vermont student who wishes to attend the concert, should purchase his ticket immediately. This is one of a series of concerts in Mr. Kreisler's farewell tour. Not any individual can afford to push aside the opportunity of attending this recital. Don't wait until tomorrow for tomorrow may be too late!

Failure of the contestants to arbitrate the Hallowe'en fracas, resulted in the students pelting the policemen with apples and the latter returning with fire from revolvers.

Collins, son of Ray Collins, a former American League baseball pitcher, received a wound in the right forearm as he was in the act of heaving an apple. The bullet diagonally pierced his lower forearm and came out by his upper forearm without injury to bones or nerves. He was able to attend classes on Wednesday.

Sorority Notes

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

Accomplishment is the keynote of AEPHI on the Vermont campus this year. Not only are plans being formulated, but also ideas are being carried out to help to make this year Alpha Omicron's best since the chapter first appeared on the UVM campus. Under the very capable leadership of Dean Adele Kaye, the sorority begins a new year.

Highlighting the functions thus far was the Founder's Day Tea on Sunday, October 24. The sorors wore green and white ribbons on Monday to commemorate the occasion.

News of our alums brings word of the following marriages during the summer. From the class of '48, Renee Finberg was married to Stanley Begame, ex-dean Claire Glass became the bride of Manny Schindel, and Mickey Weinberg, the wife of Manny Wiedman.

Sister Jimmy Schenkman became officially engaged to George Borofsky, Phi Sigma Delta, Saturday, October 23, when she received her engagement ring. Dean Adele Kaye returned from her trip home the same weekend with a beautiful ring given to her by her fiancé, Eugene Cohen.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

About 70 University of Vermont faculty and students attended the "Butterfly Breakfast" served by Delta Delta Delta sorority Sunday morning at the Tri-delt house, 143 South Willard Street.

The breakfast was given to raise money for a scholarship fund. The sorority already contributes to a national scholarship fund, and hopes to establish a local scholarship, open to any U. V. M. student. Hostesses at the breakfast were Jane Smith and Nat Salls. Batterbeaters Norma Stephenson and Mattie Matthews were really on their toes keeping the six waffle irons going.

Pledging took place early Tuesday morning at the house, as the sorority welcomed Evelyn Glysson '51, Fair Haven; and Barbara Whitney, '51, Williamstown into her fold.

The engagement of Beth Mack has been announced and chocolates were passed Monday night. The lucky man is "Det" Divine, A. T. O. A December wedding is planned.

"Smitty" and Don are back in town after a week's honeymoon in Canada. Lucky Tri-delts who attended the wedding were Janie Smith, Dona Donelon, Peggy Ingalls, Jerry Balich, and "Dee" Cureau.

DELTA PHI EPSILON

Marcia Osher and Ruth Levine have been elected president and vice-president respectively of Delta Phi Epsilon for the coming year.

Betty-Rose Levy, former president of the sorority, spent two months in Europe on the Marshall Plan this summer. She visited France, England and other countries surveyed by the Marshall Plan. Although she has been back in the United States a short while, she hopes to return soon. D Phi E announces the engagement of Carol Handel to Oscar Lax, both of South Orange, N. J. Judy Goldblatt Kunkin, alumna of D Phi E announced the arrival of a baby boy.

Mrs. Rose Boyarsky, the national rush and pledge mother, and Miss Phyllis Perelman, the eastern regional director of the sorority, visited the chapter of which both are alumnae, about two weeks ago.

SIGMA GAMMA

Jean Preston recently presented a box of chocolates to her sorority sisters. Jean is engaged to Karl Puechl, class of '48, who is now studying at Columbia.

Mrs. Kenneth Prior, class of '48, of Essex Junction, is the mother of a son, Duane, born on October 22.

Peg Rowell, also of the class of '48, is engaged to Davies Katy of Maine. Peg is teaching in Shoreham.

There will be no class in Hygiene on Wednesday, November 3, 1948.

The open house of the Student Branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers has been changed from November 12-13 to Friday evening 7-11 p.m. November 19, and Saturday afternoon 2-5 p.m. November 20.

Featured in the CYNIC each week will be a "Coming Events" column. If anyone wishes a notice of his meeting to go in, he may write up the information and leave it in the mail box marked "Gladys Neiburg" in the CYNIC office, at the right of the door inside the office. The deadline is Saturday noon of each week.

The name of the organization, date, time of day and place must be included.

Notices of meetings, dances, or any gathering of college interest may go into this column. All notices are welcomed so it can be a real, live, worthwhile column. Notices of events ten days in advance of the Saturday noon deadline will be considered.

There will be a meeting of all of the members of the fraternity bowling teams Tuesday, November 9, at 7:00 p.m., in the Waterman alleys. The independent bowling team members will meet at the alleys Thursday, November 11, at 7:00 p.m.

STANLEY F. URSPRUNG,

Fraternity Notes

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

Entertained by Host Harry Nelson and with good, soft music aired by Brother Jerry Wood, Alpha Tau's and their dates had an excellent evening of dancing and relaxation at the Tea Dance held at the ATO House immediately after the exciting 14-0 victory of UVM over UNH. Hoarse voices were relieved by the fine punch concocted by Brother Nelson. Our chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. Willard and Professor Daggett.

A little clue from the Social Committee says there will be another surprise package for fellow Alpha Tau's after the Middlebury-UVM football classic.

On Monday, October 18, initiation was held plus a small party for new members afterwards. New brothers are Jerry Wood, Nick Brecker, Fred Cook, "Chick" Medlar, and Art McCann. Congratulations, fellas!

One week later, John Tampas, popular man-about-campus, was pledged into Alpha Tau Omega. Good luck to you, too, Johnny!

Since the new semester began, the boys have been hard at work—trying to give the house the "new look." Highlighting the labor was this discovery: many carpenters and painters with latent talent.

Elections of new officers were held on October 11, with many changes. The new list now shows: Bob Chittick, president; Al Ketcham, secretary; Warren Field, treasurer; George Sumner, chaplain; Paul Kelly, annals; and Ken Belding, Harry Nelson, and Bob Fordham holding down the remaining positions. Pledge Chairman is Bob Brown, and Social Chairman is Harry Nelson. Bill Emerson, Steward, and Al Ketcham, House Manager, are the house officers.

PHI DELTA THETA

Brothers and pledges returned this semester to find the house completely redecorated. This was accomplished mainly through the hard-spent efforts of President and House Manager Dick Long.

Dances were held on the nights of the Union and New Hampshire games. Chaperones for these affairs were Professor and Mrs. Ricciardi, Professor and Mrs. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Page, and Professor Webster.

The Wedding Bells rang for the following couples this past summer: Rod Smith and Carolyn Ballou, Don Marburg and Mary Ann Smith, Bob Sumner and Jane McCormick, and Doug Pierce and Nicole Rucquoi.

Congratulations are also extended to Bill Dempsey, Ed Bouton, and Dusty Miller who have all passed the "chocolates." The fatality list grew as Joe Perry, Bob Ray, Reg Linsenmeir, and Bud Gleim lost their pins.

Brothers Stan Ursprung, "Dum-Dum" Comolli, "Blimp" Banta, Buck Piche, and

"Anthony" Dempsey are on the football squad. Brother "Atlas" Kehoe found his studies too difficult and was forced to give up football, much to the chagrin of Coach Evans. The Phi Delt touch football team operated with moderate success and one major casualty, Doug Stantal, who was lost to the squad for the remainder of the season with a broken ankle.

Summer found the fellows well scattered. Reg Linsenmeir and Walt Fimian attended Phi Delta Theta's Centennial Anniversary at Miami, Ohio, and from all reports had quite a time. Bill Clossy, Bob Freeman, and Will Robertson extended their "home-ec" studies south of the border for several months sipping tequilas, meccal, vino tinto, and sampling those Mexican dishes we've heard so much about. Dave Banta got into shape by passing the summer in the saddle on a Wyoming ranch.

"Old Man" Eklund has returned for his seventh or eighth year, no one seems to know which it is. Many rumors ran rampant about Dick S. Fink's naval enlistment, but he returned for another quiet year on the home front.

The fraternity got off to a good start by taking first place in the homecoming poster directed by Frank Eklund and Bob Freeman. Excellent help was also given by Jim Raleigh, the only man in captivity born and bred round.

Congratulations are extended to new Brothers Hutchinson, McGinnis, Piche, and Simonds. Recent visitors at the house included Brothers Bill Benoit '43, Butch Bailey ex-'49, Air Cadet Williamson, and "The Neanderthal Man from Newark," '48.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

After the defeat we handed Union October 9, the SAE's held a gala dance in celebration of our victory. The affair was honored with the attendance of representatives from the different fraternities and sororities on campus. The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Page and Mr. and Mrs. Palmer.

At the recent election of officers for the coming year, Harry Bolwell was elected Eminent Archeon and Gordon "Bud" Atkinson took over duties as Eminent Recorder. Harry has proven his ability as a good leader in a previous term at the helm and great things are expected for the coming year.

Work on the chapter room in the basement is rolling along and plans for the coming rushing season are shaping up nicely under the guidance of pledge master, Bob Billhardt.

The touch football team is holding vigorous practice sessions every night under the guidance of Harry Bolwell, and we will have a team to reckon with this season.

Kappa Sigs; Phi Sigs; Buckham Lead Leagues As Playoffs Near

With only a few contests to be played the curtain is rapidly falling on the intramural football scene. The Phi Sigs lead League B and have only to trip the twice beaten SAEs to earn the right to defend their title against the Kappa Sigs. In League C Buckham kept rolling with one and a tie and needs only to win the tie playoff to capture the dorm league.

League A

With the Kappa Sigs having completed their schedule undefeated all League A action now centers on the fight for the remaining four places. In the fight for who is to stay out of the cellar, the hapless TEPs battled the unblest ATOs to a 12-12 tie. In the only other encounter of the week these same ATOs took it on the chin 35-14 from the Phi Deltas, as Bill Spreen ran wild, scoring four TDs and two point afters.

League B

In League B the Phi Sigs kept rolling toward a chance to defend their 1947 championship by dropping the Deltas. It was 6-0, and anybody's ball game going into the last quarter but a pass, in the dying minutes of the game, from Bailey Goldberg to Mal Mickler clinched it for the boys on Pearl St. 12-0. In another contest the Sig Phis spotted the Deltas a 7-0 lead in the first quarter, but then turned on their razzle-dazzle offense of Flanders, Goulets and Co. to win handily, 27-7.

Then on Thursday the Sig Phis went on to down the SAEs and complete a season marred only by their one touchdown, 25-20 loss to the league leading Phi Sigs. It was again the razzle-dazzle offense that did the trick with Bill Chapin, George Nostrand and John Goulet supplying the scoring touches.

League C

In League C the powerhouse Buckham Hall aggregation kept on rolling as they swept by Chittenden 31-0 to remain unscored upon, and then battled Converse to a 31-31 tie which was called because of darkness. In the Chittenden game it was Smith and Ray Misker teaming up to give the win, while in the wide open Converse tilt their cohorts supplied the necessary scoring punches. In the only other game of the week Converse shutout Chittenden 28-0.

The standings as of October 29:

—33-0! We wuz robbed! Due to the general incompetence and boobishness of the referees, linesmen and timekeepers, the score fails to indicate the decided superiority of the Catamounts over Mass. U. The Green and Gold offensive hasn't exactly singed the turf of Centennial Field or the opposition's arenas, but it was never that bad. They must have poisoned the soup.

—33-0! And some guy named Anderson was running all over the place and the Cats were running after him like mad people, but neglecting to make him desist.

The Passing Parade—Watched the Kittens take it from St. Mike's Frosh. The Lavender Squires are loaded. Shannon, Hall, Pruneau, Keefer and Malucknick looked good for the young Green and Golds.

Memo to J. D. A.—Gil Wood says for you to quit calling Middlebury names. (ref. Dale Carnegie.) So, cut it out! End of Memo.

Not much news this week. Just what can one say when one's football team is on the 0 end of a 33-0 score except—Ouch!

—The Shape of things to come—Saturday comes the Rochester University team to Centennial. After deep and thorough consultation with Pearson in Washington, Winchell in New York, Joe Sherrer in Burlington and "Spider" LeBlanc in the Mill Cafe . . . We predict . . . That St. Michael's on the Onion River will have to move to get by Norwich. That Middlebury on the Rutland Railroad will take Union. That an improved Vermont will squeeze by Rochester.

And Jack Welter, the 130-pound halfback from Rochester, had better have his G.I. insurance paid up to the hilt. The tiny back has a wife and two infant sons, and for their sake we recommend that he take them for a long walk in one of Rochester's parks Saturday afternoon, for the Cat line is enraged indeed, after the debacle at Massachusetts.

UVM Meets Rochester Saturday In Fourth Renewal Of Feuden'

On November 6 the Catamounts of the University of Vermont will meet the Rivermen of the University of Rochester at Centennial Field for the fourth time since 1916, when the series began. The Cats will be out to avenge the 7-6 loss they suffered at the hands of Coach Burnham's aggregation last year; and they will also be anxious to even things up for the record books. Vermont has won one and lost two in games played down through the years.

Rochester has fifteen lettermen from last year's squad and a group of talented players from the freshman team of 1947. In the backfield there is both experience and depth, but the line lacks seasoned men and good reserve strength. The biggest weakness confronting the coaching staff circles around the gap left at the tackle spots caused by graduation. Bob Whitney, a 210-pound junior, is the only returning tackle on the squad. Very few freshmen from last year's yearlings have showed promise for making up the deficit. There are two other linemen in the 200 pound class; Center Tom Hoffman, a dependable performer from last year's varsity, weighs in at 206 and end Bob Smith, 23-year old senior, is an even 200 pounds. The remaining first stringers on the forward wall bring the average weight of the line to well over 190 pounds. UVM's line averages about 195 pounds, so the two teams will be well matched in that respect. Captain Howie Hoesterey, rated as one of the best fullbacks in Rochester's history, will be the man to stop when a few yards are needed for first down. Little Jack Welter, one of the smallest quarterbacks you will see anywhere, will do most of the passing and kicking for the Rivermen. Jack weighs a mere 139 pounds and stands 5 feet 9 inches. In the half-back positions the Yellowjackets are well supported by Don Beattie, a clever ball handler, and Dick Garnish, an experienced and able veteran, who is playing his last year of college ball.

Coach Burnham, who was head mentor at Purdue before coming to Rochester, employs the T formation with some variation to increase his team's offensive punch. His strategy has not met with the success with which it was intended, as the Rivermen have gone down to defeat three times in five games. The only common foe the two schools have faced has been Union College, and the Dutchmen swept by the Yellowjackets 19-6. Rochester has met some extremely stiff competition in teams like Amherst and Tufts, both of whom scored four touchdowns to one lone tally for the western New Yorkers, therefore they are not lacking in competitive experience.

There is still some doubt whether "Hobie" Cook will be ready for this week's contest and if he is not he will be replaced by Jim Turnbull. The rest of the starting lineup remains the same as it has been for the past two games. Coach "Fuzzy" Evans will start the following: Ends—Ursprung and Traverse; Tackles—Comolli and Turnbull; Guards—Banta and Schofield; Center—French; QB—Collier; Halfbacks—Ballard and Hurley or MacDonald; and FB—St. Gelais.

Mass. Humbles Evansmen To Snap Winning Streak

Anderson, Fienman Sparks Razzle-Dazzle Attack As Redmen Romp Through Bewildered Catamounts

The four-game win streak of the Catamounts was brought to an abrupt halt at Amherst, Mass., last Saturday, when the Green and Gold was crushed 33-0 by an aroused Mass. U. team before 5,000 spectators at University Field.

Using a fast-moving, pass-lateral offensive, the surprising Redmen led by Lee and Anderson ran rough-shod and scored almost at will while holding the bewildered Evansmen scoreless.

The first quarter was even, with both teams moving on the ground around the mid-field stripe and Vermont displaying some of its defensive potential.

But Mass. started a preview of what was to come in the second quarter, when they moved the ball to the Cats' one yard line on a pass. From here, big Hal Fienman crashed over. The kick was no good, and the half found Vermont trailing 6-0.

Redmen Roll

In the second half Mass. went to work immediately. Lee lateralled to Anderson for the score. Charlie Traverse and the Green line blocked the kick to hold the Redmen to a 12-0 lead. Barely minutes later, the same play produced another score and Anderson converted. Late in the third period Lee carried to the Vermont eleven. Anderson swung wide around end for his third touchdown and again kicked the point.

In the closing minutes of the game Vermont unleashed an air attack with Bill Grant doing most of the throwing, and seemed to be on the move for the first time, but an interception at this point paved the way for the fifth and final Mass. score. Anderson converted for a personal total of 21 points for the afternoon. The Cats, in absorbing their worst beating of the season were powerless throughout the game both offensively and defensively. They gained only 28 yards on the ground while allowing the Redmen 255 and were out-passed and garnered 7 first downs to Mass.' 16.

The starting lineups: Mass.—Roth, 1c; Yergeau, 1t; Raymond, 1g; Estelle, c; Cox, rg; Warren, rt; Harrington, re; Gagnon, qb; Johnston, 1hb; Anderson, rhh; Lee, fb. Substitutes: Nichols, Luer, Gilman, Driscoll, Beaumont, Struzzerio, Tassinari, Hall, Bulcock, Walz, Pasini, Barone, Desautels, Gleason, Looney, Fienman, Son Kenyon, Bolak, McManus, Natale, Phanuef.

Frosh Harriers Win Again Burlington HS Falls 22-37

Caswell Leads Kittens Over Ex-Teammates in 14:04 Williams, Rowell, Shindler Score For Vt. Yearlings

The Freshman Postmen easily racked up their second win of the season by defeating the fleet-footed squad of Burlington High School, 22-37. Bob Caswell led the Vermont squad to victory over his former teammates. Caswell, the outstanding runner for the freshmen, was clocked at his best time of the year, coming in at 14:02. Pressing Caswell was his running mate, Lou Williams, who finished second in 14:21. Third place was captured by a Burlington High runner, Robinson, with Brothers, also of B.H.S., in fourth. The fifth, sixth and seventh positions went to Rowell and Shindler of Vermont and Widden of Burlington. The next four runners were all Vermont, Farrell, Fagan, Randall and Lyon.

Caswell, Williams and Rowell again came in one, two, three for the freshmen. From all appearances thus far these three men should bolster Coach Archie Post's Varsity squad considerably next year. Also noteworthy of mention are Shindler, Farrell, Randall, Lyon and Fagan. With more experience they should develop into top flight cross-country runners.

Saturday the frosh Postmen will take on a tough Aggie squad from Randolph.

Frosh Lose To St. Mike's Heavy Line Stops Kittens

The St. Mike's Frosh from across Winooski way, beat the U.V.M. Kitten football team 28-0 Friday afternoon at Centennial Field. Before a crowd of 750, the Knights displayed a smooth offensive and a hard charging line which time and again smothered the Kittens' running and passing plays. St. Michael's scored two touchdowns in the second quarter, a safety in the third, and two more touchdowns in the last period of play. A fumble and an intercepted U.V.M. pass led to two of the St. Mike's scores.

The first period started slowly with neither team displaying much. The Knights' attack got started toward the end of the quarter, and in thirteen running plays carried the ball from their own 32-yard line for the score. Plourde plunged over from the 1. The attempted conversion by Coggio was wide but the Kittens were offside, and on the second attempt, he dropkicked the ball through the uprights. St. Mike's kicked off, and on the first running play, Keefer fumbled and McClory recovered on the Vermont 27.

Lucius carried to the 15, and Plourde went through tackle for the score. The conversion was wide.

The St. Mike's backfield consisting of Normandin, Lucius, Plourde, and Simas displayed a very deceptive running attack. They would get the ball and hand it off on a reverse, or keep it themselves and cut through wide holes at tackle or guard, and head for the sidelines. Many times these backs were in the clear and then suddenly pulled down from behind. Midway in the third period, Coggio, kicked the ball out of bounds on the U.V.M. 3-yard line. MacDonald trying to run the ball was trapped behind the goal line for the safety and St. Mike's led 15-0. Early in fourth period, Lucius passed to Cormier who caught it on his own 35 and went the rest of the way behind some timely blocking. The conversion was good. A few plays later, Coggio intercepted a pass on the Vermont 40 and we scampered to paydirt. The try for the extra point was wide and the final score read 28-0.

Pigskin Review

By Mort Kaufman

A highly spirited University of Massachusetts eleven won its second game of this current football season at the expense, and sadly so, of Vermont on Saturday, celebrating Homecoming as the Catamounts had done on the previous weekend. St. Michael's found another Bay State school hungry for victory, and the result was a 6-0 win for visiting AIC.

Only power-laden Middlebury emerged victorious on Saturday and the victims were the weak Cadets of Norwich by a round 40-0 score. So it seems safe to conclude that the Panthers from the impressive record they have compiled thus far—are at present the best football team in the state and among the best in New England. (It hurts me.)

What no upsets on Saturday? It seems the football prognosticators had a banner week-end throughout the nation as most of favorites came forth with victory as expected. California Georgia Tech, North Carolina, Notre Dame, Michigan, Army and—Middlebury remained undefeated.

Mass. Harriers Edge Cats; Postmen To Run In Conn.

A rugged, well-balanced University of Massachusetts cross-country team took the measure of the Catamount harriers at Amherst on Thursday, October 28 by a score of 22-35.

For the first time this year Earle Randall failed to cross the finish line a winner. However, Randy did press Clough of Massachusetts to the extent that the latter broke the college record there. Clough turned in a time of 20 minutes and 14 seconds over the grueling four-mile course. Randy finished 35 seconds later in second position.

Running on the concrete pavements of Amherst village and on old gravel roads liberally sprinkled with cobblestones proved to be too tough for the local thin-clads. In the opinion of the Green and Gold harriers it was the toughest course they have had to run on this year, and the final score might have been different on a grassy layout.

John Bellows finished in fifth place with Wolcott, Peabody, Porter, Harwood, and Pierce in the seventh, tenth, eleventh, thirteenth, and fourteenth positions respectively.

The summary of the race is as follows: Clough (M), Randall (V), Szetela (M), Cossar (M), Bellows (V), Pierce (M), Wolcott (V), Funkhauser (M), Schannel (M), Peabody (V), Porter (V), Hopkins (M), Harwood (V), Pierce (V).

Connecticut Valley Championships

The Varsity squad travels to Storrs, Conn., on Monday, November 1, to participate in the Connecticut Valley Championships there on the University of Connecticut course.

This meet will include runners from seven colleges and universities representing the University of Connecticut, Springfield, Coast Guard, Massachusetts, and Vermont.

Except for the absence of Russ Mahoney the team will be at full strength for the meet. It is hoped that the wearers of the Green and Gold will be well up in the thick of the pack when the final tallies are in.

UVM Welcomes Beloved Fritz Kreisler; "All My Sons" Opens At Southwick Tonight

Famous Violinist To Play Friday, At City Auditorium

State-wide Attendance Expected At Recital

Music lovers from all parts of the state are anxiously awaiting the arrival of one of the world's most beloved artists, Fritz Kreisler, who will present a recital at the Memorial Auditorium in this city Friday at 8.30 p.m. The famous violinist's appearance marks a high point of interest with reservations for the recital being received from throughout Vermont. Vermont colleges have been alerted to news and large delegations from several state campuses are expected at the Friday evening event.

Born in Vienna in 1875, Kreisler entered the Vienna Conservatoire at the age of seven. Next he studied at the Paris Conservatoire, where his instructors were Massenet and Delibes. Here he was awarded the Grand Prix upon graduation in 1887. After a tour of the United States in 1889, the young musician abandoned his career as a violinist for a time, studying medicine and then serving in the Austrian army. Returning to his violin, Mr. Kreisler made a tour of the United States and Great Britain. At the outbreak of the first World War he re-enlisted in the army, was wounded and discharged. His book, Four Weeks in the Trenches, tells about his war experiences. Among Mr. Kreisler's works are several lighter style compositions for the violin, an effective string quartet, and his opera, Apple Blossoms.

The Kreisler concert promises to be an occasion of state-wide interest. Student response to the ticket sales during Registration and in the days following was favorable. Certainly students should avail themselves of the opportunity to attend this concert by a man who is such a master of his instrument.

Micro Film Versions Of 'Times' Available At Billings Library

The New York Times can now be read on film instead of paper at the Billings Library on the campus at the University of Vermont. According to Sidney B. Smith, Director of the University libraries, this great record of the happenings in this country and the world can now be consulted for the years since 1940 in the convenient modern form of microfilm. A reading machine has been set up in the Marsh Room for the convenience of faculty and students who may want to use the newspaper.

The microfilming of newspapers is a new development in libraries in the last twenty years, and has proved successful in reducing a modern newspaper to convenient size. A year of a big city newspaper makes a pile of about 25 cubic feet. The same year on film can be put on a shelf and takes up less than a cubic foot of space. Microfilm has the further advantage of being more durable than newspaper. The paper used in a newspaper disintegrates rapidly; microfilm lasts almost indefinitely.

A University library needs a file of a newspaper as part of its reference collection, and the New York Times is the most generally useful one partly because it has a detailed current index. The index is kept up to date and frequently serves as a guide to other papers, for items in the news are covered on approximately the same day by all papers.

Northern Vermont now has readily available a number of years of the Times, since 1940 on film and from 1916 through 1939 in the regular paper edition.

Tom Hayes Heads Talented Cast In Drama Club Show

Prof. Humphrey

Play Under Direction Of Professor Humphrey

The play that wowed Broadway not long ago, Arthur Miller's "All My Sons," will make its appearance this evening with an experienced and talented cast of U.V.M. students under the direction of U.V.M. dramatic coach, R. H. Humphrey giving their interpretation of post-war disillusionment, or more specifically, a son pitted against his war profiteering father.

The houselights will dim at 8.15 p.m. at Southwick for the play's initial performance while a second showing is scheduled for Saturday evening at 8.00 p.m.

In the role of Joe Keller, the war plant executive, is Tom Hayes '50 of Bellows Falls who received dramatic training in the Army during a six-month itinerary in Asia and has since appeared in summer stock roles as well as handling several leading roles in dramatic club productions.

Kate Keller, the high-strung wife, will be played by Dee Dee Cummings of Burlington. Miss Cummings, a psychology major and a senior has previously played in "My Sister Eileen."

Newell Curtis, another familiar name in the thespian fold will handle the difficult role of Chris Keller. Curtis has been a headliner in Drama Club plays since he arrived in 1946.

Mary Ann Browne '51 accepts her first major part in "All My Sons" as Annie Deever, the pretty young sweetheart of Chris Keller. Miss Browne has had considerable high school drama experience at Burlington's St. Mary's Academy.

Another Burlingtonian is Courtland LaVallee '52 who will play George Deever, the young lawyer. LaVallee has starred in high school dramatics.

Pat Greenup of Barrington, R. I., a sophomore with summer stock experience will play the gay and jovial Lydia while William Riddell '52 and Shirley Gleason will play Dr. and Mrs. Jim Bayliss.

Emmett Van Buskirk, age 8, of Burlington will play the part of the Bayliss' young son, Bert, and regardless of a consuming ambition to become a state policeman the youngster is expected to show the same mastery he has exhibited in city productions.

Fort Vets Greatly Alarmed Over New Telephone Increase

U. V. M. students living at Fort Ethan Allen are following with interest the squabble arising from the recent telephone rate increase by the New England Tel and Tel since phone charges at the Fort and in the Burlington area have long been considered too high for the veteran student's income.

Many of the vets are banking on Vermont's Public Service Commission to block the proposed hike in price which would set up a monthly charge of over four dollars for the predominant four party lines at the fort.

A phone is almost a necessity to vet's with children owing to emergency calls to physicians in the Burlington area.

Staff and Sandal Forms Plans For Turkey Trot

Plans for the Turkey Trot, a dance to be held on Debate Week-end, November 20, were the main business topics of the Staff and Sandal girls at their meeting November 3 in Waterman building. Rae MacTiernan is dance chairman, and under her are: Lillian Cotnoir, coat checking; Jean Hurlburt, refreshments; Jean Ritchie, chaperones and tickets; Phyllis Barron, Louise Gee, and Rae MacTiernan, decorations; Katherine Kidder, Millie Jocelyn, Harriet Gregory, and Doris Jones, posters.

Any members of the junior class who are interested and would like to contribute their talents are welcome to assist in planning and preparing for the Turkey Trot. These people may sign a paper on the bulletin board across from the bookstore, leaving their phone numbers.

Mortar Board's Date Bureau for the Debate Week-end was mentioned as being helpful to insure success of the social aspect of the Debates, and all interested in taking part in the "Date Bureau" are encouraged to do so.

U.V.M. VARIETY SHOW NEEDS MORE TALENT

Think you can act? Have you original ideas? Think you can dance? It's not too early to dig up sensational numbers for next year's U. V. M. Variety Show. We want this performance to be the biggest and best that our University has ever produced with all the known plus hidden talent coming into the limelight.

Professor Humphreys already has the skeleton worked out, and some outstanding fill-ins for the framework are needed.

Professional equipment is being acquired for the Southwick stage with a traveling spotlight adding to the atmosphere.

Don't be shy! Get out those dance routines, skits, solos, plus all the original numbers you are capable of doing and start practicing now! Rehearsals will start near the beginning of next quarter.

S. G. Thrashes Out Finance Privileges In Heated Debate

Harry Miele read a letter from President Millis expressing the desire to originate an Athletic Council to be composed of four faculty members, four alumni, and four students, and asking that Student Government conduct an election for the student representatives. The request will be acted upon at the next council meeting.

Student Court has advised the council that vacancies should be filled by special election. Al Pratt moved that the council stay an election until January. The motion was seconded and carried.

Lucille Wetherby moved that the Social Committee be designated to issue a handbook or some similar publication to guide organizations in conducting dances and other social functions. The motion was seconded and carried.

It was made known that Professor Grosscup paid for the printing of the U.V.M. Calendar and agreed that he should be reimbursed immediately.

Bob Perkins moved that the Social Committee publish in the CYNIC a set of rules and regulations regarding use of the bulletin board and be empowered to remove any posters not adhering to these. The motion was seconded and carried.

Peter Haslam initiated discussion on the possibility of deriving some more lawful procedure for elections. Sherm Sprague moved that Pete draw up a complete plan for such an improved system, including several suggestions which had been forthcoming during the discussion.

Debate followed concerning Finance Committee privileges. Bob Perkins, presenting one view, said that the authority should be so reduced that all appropriations would have to be approved by the executive council. Norm Dennis voiced a contrary opinion. By a motion by Ed Costello, the committee formerly appointed to study and conclude somehow upon the powers of the Committee was re-instituted and asked to convert conflicting ideas into concrete proposals.

The motion was made by Al Pratt, seconded, and carried, that ASME be permitted to request approval of its budget. Al moved also that the president of the council report at each council meeting of all approved budgets and appropriations made by the Finance Committee during the previous week. He moved further that Harry be empowered to grant permissions for use of the student lounge for private meetings. Both motions were seconded and approved.

NEWCOMERS HOLD FIRST INFORMAL MEETING OF TERM

The Newcomers' Coffee Hour commenced for the fall term with its first informal get-together, at Southwick Hall, Sunday evening.

This club which is a faculty organization, consists of the faculty members and their wives and husbands, and all those who have been at U.V.M. for less than three years. It is the work of this club to introduce the new faculty to the other members of the staff and this is done by a series of meetings throughout the year.

Sunday evening, after the introductions were completed, the two hundred in attendance were served coffee and cakes.

The fall program will consist of a series of bridge parties and regular coffee hours. In January there will be a covered-dish supper to which each member will bring one dish of food, such as a salad, which can be served for that evening's meal.

The co-chairmanship of the Newcomers' Coffee Hour is shared by Mrs. H. C. Collins and Mrs. Arnold Schien. The chairman of the Executive Committee is Mrs. O. W. Witherspoon. Miss Margaret Wing and Mrs. J. W. Spaven serve in the capacity of Secretary and Treasurer, respectively. Mrs. D. E. Johnson is in charge of the club's publicity while Mrs. V. L. Ansbacker manages the entertainment.

ADSIT ENTERTAINS DANCE CHAPERONES

Adsit House, where the elite meet to eat, held a dessert hour Friday night before the Mortar Board. Duffy was not present but dutifully phoned.

Those entertained were the chaperones of the Mortar Board formal including Miss Mary Jean Simpson, Miss Godfrey, and the girls' dates. Mrs. Maybelle Blake, housemother, poured.

Thanks, Dee Parker, for acting as general chairman.

We extend our sincere hopes for a rapid recovery to Lucy Benedict who was taken to the hospital for an appendectomy shortly after the dance. Let this news cast no reflections on our pre-mentioned dessert hour.

Aldridge Stresses Expression Before Windfall Authors

"If Windfall experiences trouble in finding creative writing on the UVM campus it is not the magazine's fault but evidence that UVM has few writers," stated John W. Aldridge, UVM English instructor at the Windfall Writer's Workshop, Tuesday, November 2. Mr. Aldridge added that any man or woman who is truly a writer will "beg to be printed" and that no one will need to seek him out.

Mr. Aldridge, who presented a talk on "Literary Criticism," went on to say that Vermont is not the ideal locality for a writer since it is too localized and provincial to present a broad view; nor does it afford that cross-section of life so essential for the atmosphere of creative writing. He also spoke of the basic requirements for writers: "The urge to express oneself; the desire to be read." Many helpful hints of correct form and conventional rules were discussed, with the audience participating throughout in an informal manner. Mr. Aldridge, at a later point in the meeting, chose to read an excerpt from Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms," which he entitled the "paragon of simplicity," and it was shown as an example of a simple, direct, yet well-written novel, as compared to the rather rhetorical works of Thomas Wolfe, who, it was agreed was as great in his own writing.

Contributions to the Windfall of last year were read aloud by the Forum's moderator, J. D. Sullivan in an effort to evaluate and objectively criticize the manuscripts. This analysis was used as constructive criticism, judging whether the material was entirely unsuitable for publication; acceptable but not enthusiastically so, or definitely good Windfall material.

Students may attend these meetings or workshops, which are to be held on designated days at least once a month depending on the need and wish of those interested students. Here, they may literally "hash over," the writings of others and preferably their own in an effort to better their writing.

EIGHT HUNDRED ATTEND MORTAR BOARD FORMAL

In the beautifully decorated Southwick gym and ballroom, Mortar Board held its annual Fall Formal, on Friday November 5, with the "Catamounts" providing the music. The gym was outfitted with sea nets and fishes to provide the proper atmosphere for "Davy Jones Locker." On the upper deck, the Captain's Ballroom was more discreetly decorated with life preservers and other nautical fare. The S.S. Mortar Board "sailed" at nine o'clock and docked at one.

Over four hundred couples attended the annual affair, which gave the girls a chance to ask their favorite date to "go out." The girls then took over for the evening, and paid the expenses.

After intermission the ship was fairly well cleared, but a few remained to enjoy the music, dancing and refreshments, consisting of ice cream, punch and cookies. The chaperones were Miss Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Schultz, Prof. and Mrs. Carpenter, and Miss Betty Bandel.

The annual dance was planned and carried out by the members of Mortar Board, National Women's Honorary, with its chapter here at U.V.M. Patricia Doyle was chairman.

Al Redway Heads Drive For Chapter Of Alpha Phi Omega

During registration a census was taken of the number of students who had been Boy Scouts and who desired to join a service organization.

The response was so favorable that a meeting was scheduled and held on Wednesday November 3, at 7.30 in Room 239 Waterman.

At this meeting the organizer of the group, Albert Redway, explained that the organization is called Alpha Phi Omega and is a national service fraternity composed of college and university men who are or have been previously associated with the Boy Scouts.

He also stated that the purpose of the organization is to develop friendship and promote service to humanity. These services are rendered in four major fields: to the student body and faculty, to youth and community, to members of the fraternity, to the nation as participating citizens.

Mr. Howard Butler, a scout executive of Burlington, also addressed the group and elaborated a bit on the aims and background of Alpha Phi Omega.

Throughout the country there are 167 chapters and many preparatory chapters. It is hoped that U.V.M. will soon be one of them.

All students who are interested in joining such an organization will be welcome at the next meeting which will be held on Wednesday, November 17. Watch the bulletin boards for the time and place.

Two UVM Co-eds Spend Unique Vacation Traveling With A. Y. H.

This summer over one hundred young men and women members of the American Youth Hostels traveled by train and bicycle across our nation to San Francisco and returned by way of Canada. Five separate groups and their leaders made this nine-week trip. In one group of twenty-six were two U. V. M. students, Joan Marker and "Rickey" De Forest. These two girls experienced "excitement-plus" on this cross-country bike excursion.

Joan and "Rickey," bikes and baggage, left New York City by train for Washington, D. C., on June 24th. Here they spent two days of sightseeing before heading west. Stopping at St. Louis and Hannibal, they toured the surrounding country on bikes, visiting the house of the character in overalls and checked shirt, Huck Finn. The two girls, wearing jeans and old clothes, might have easily passed for Huck Finn twins! In Colorado they viewed Pike's Peak and Colorado Springs. Then on to the Grand Canyon. Here the girls swapped their bicycles for mules, and slowly descended to the base of the canyon. It was great fun, and Joan says she would go through it again, but Rickey says positively not. It was 120 degrees in the shade! Thirst also got the better of them.

After reaching California, our two bikers got a big thrill out of seeing a few beautiful Hollywood homes. They didn't run into any movie stars, however! Santa Monica beach was also inviting. In San Francisco, they wandered into Chinatown and rode on those "way up in the air" cable cars. Next stop was Seattle, Wash. On the way the girls were awed at the beauty of Crater Lake. They climbed snowcapped Mt. Rainier but couldn't see the view because it was so foggy. "In fact, it's practically always foggy," remarked Joan.

After visiting the campus of the University of Washington, the group viewed the Columbia River region. They saw evidence of the recent flood there and also the Bonneville Dam. Then they were off on a four day trip, the longest distance to be covered by bike. They toured Vancouver Island, Lake Louise and then continued up into Canada. At Victoria they took the train to Montreal where the party separated. This was on August 23.

Of the total ten thousand miles covered, only eight hundred miles were traveled by bicycle. However, trains can be difficult. At some stations, interested sightseers who did not watch the time carefully were unfortunately left behind! Joan and "Rickey" said it was very difficult at times to load your bike and bed roll on the train in the few minutes allotted. Consequently, some members of the group were minus something to ride on. While on the way home through Canada, "Rickey's" bike was stolen. However, she didn't really mind, for the Royal Mounted Police soon retrieved it for her!

The girls didn't plan on having to defend themselves out in the "wild woolly west." "Rickey's" group came upon a rattlesnake which they stoned to death. The brave souls! The girls didn't seem to be allergic to raccoons, but thought they were cute. If you believe the preceding statement, try this one. While the girls slept, bears crawled over them! Of course they didn't actually see them, but others did. They must have been dreaming of "honey!"

The girls lived in jeans and shorts and carried only one dress apiece to wear in the city. They bought their food on the way and carried only a little with them. When they started out, they had packs of twenty to twenty-five pounds. By the time the groups reached Montreal, some packs weighed forty pounds. Souvenirs, no doubt! The bed roll presented some problems. Joan found out it wasn't pleasant to sleep without one. The group members often played such pranks as hiding bed rolls and bikes!

All in all, it was great fun and a wonderful opportunity to see the states. Even though "Rickey" couldn't get used to wearing dresses after her return and Joan couldn't forget that thirsty and dusty trip down the Grand Canyon, the girls certainly had a valuable experience. They loved every minute of it. Well, almost every minute! Next time you take out your bike, think of the places it can take you to. If you travel the right road, maybe you'll meet rattlesnakes, raccoons and BEARS! Happy biking!

Cynic Investigates Trailer Camp Life

Do you know that life in the University Trailer Camp is not as bad as might be imagined? At least this is the opinion of the 120 adults living on University Road and they should know. Of course there are inconveniences such as carrying the little woman's water supply, and wading through drifts of snow on a cold winter morning to get ready for an eight o'clock class. But, misery loves company enough at the camp so that troubles are virtually reduced to zero.

Though the generally accepted name is the Trailer Camp, actually there are only ten privately owned trailers and fifty University owned Government Housing Units. Living in them are between forty-five and fifty children under the age of five which along with the adults make a close neighborhood of 170 people, where a cup of sugar or an egg is only as far away as the next unit some ten yards distant.

The University tries to give the married vets who are lucky enough to get a unit as many breaks as possible. In fact, even with the inconveniences there are so many advantages that a downtown apartment cannot even compare with a trailer camp unit. Rent is only one-fifth of the vet's subsistence up to twenty-five dollars. Each unit is equipped with a kerosene heater and stove, ice chest, a table with four chairs and a sofa bed. Tom, the genial caretaker and every family's best friend, is also hired by the University.

The Trailer Camp is really almost like a dorm, complete with horseplay, bull sessions and hen parties, squabbles, midnight snacks, and an overall spirit of co-operation.

There is always a pot of coffee brewing in most of the units and a couple dropping in on another for a neighborly cup before retiring is a very common occurrence.

Before the year is out each vet becomes a general handyman able to make minor repairs and help his neighbor to build an addition or put on a porch or something. It is this spirit of cooperation that does the most in making the University Trailer Camp such a great place, and allows the residents to philosophize. We are not living in palaces but they are a lot more than livable.

Thumbnail Sketches Illuminate Backgrounds of Talented Cast

Before the house lights dim and the curtain goes up on the first performance of "All My Sons" Thursday evening, November 11, it might be helpful and enlightening to know something about the U.V.M. talent listed on the program. I won't disclose any telephone numbers or "evenings free," but if you're interested in such data, you may be able to see the stars in their dressing rooms the night of the performance.

Starring in the role of Joe Keller, a devoted family man, is personality-plus, TOM HAYES. Tom comes from Belkows Falls, Vt., and is enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences, class of 1950. He has been active in drama since his freshman year when he appeared in "Night Must Fall." Tom toured Asia for six months with other well known stars, such as Jerome Courtland, presenting "My Sister Eileen." During one summer, he appeared with the Ethan Allen Players in several stock plays. One of Tom's interests, besides the opposite sex, is radio work. He's quite a golfer as well as an ardent reader of his favorite European author, Dostoyevski. Tom believes the producing of "All My Sons" is a daring step for the Dramatic Club to take and a challenge to those acting the parts.

Kate Keller, the high-strung wife of Joe and a mother to all in her neighborhood, is played by Burlington's own DEE DEE CUMMINGS, a psychology major and a senior. Dee Dee has played the part of Mrs. Wade in "My Sister Eileen" and of Olivia Marden in "Mr. Pim Passes By." In the spring of 1948, she became a member of the Dramatic Club. Dee Dee is fond of children and knitting, which go together very well! She finds acting afar from dull activity, and has enjoyed work on "All My Sons."

NEWELL CURTIS, enrolled in the College of Education and a member of the class of 1950, plays the very difficult role of Chris Keller, son of Joe and Kate. Newell is from Montpelier, Vt., and appeared with the University Players in the "Variety Show" and "My Sister Eileen" last spring. His interest in drama has extended to include radio work in which he acquired experience here at U.V.M. during the summer of 1947. It is not enough to just act a part, but the actor must feel the part, according to Newell Curtis.

Annie Deever, pretty, young sweetheart of Chris Keller, is in reality pretty, young MARY ANN BROWNE, also a sophomore and in the College of Education. While attending St. Mary's here in Burlington, Mary took part in Gilbert and Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore" and "Patience," in which she was the Duke. Mary likes to knit as well as to read the works of the Bronte sisters, Hemingway and Tennyson. Her particular interest in drama is clearly understood, for she "simply loves" Shakespeare, Mary would like to put in a "plug" here for the director of "All My Sons," Mr. Humphrey, whom she thinks is excellent.

COURTLAND LA VALLEE, class of 1952 and a Liberal Arts student, is another Burlingtonian in the cast. He plays the part of George Deever, a young lawyer and Annie's brother. Although he may appear very academic, Courtland's real interests lie in the field of sports such as basketball, bowling, hunting, and fishing. In high school, he was the fighting Captain Cocoran in "H.M.S. Pinafore."

DAN PEISCH, the lad with the blonde bangs, hails from Norwich, Vt., where he was active in dramatics at Hanover High. Playing the role of Frank Lubey in "All My Sons," Dan impersonates a neighbor of the Keller's who has always managed to evade the draft. Dan, a freshman in the College of Arts and Sciences, plans to go into journalism if he doesn't become a singing star overnight! Anything in the world of entertainment suits him, from acting in vaudeville to playing the bass viol or being a master of ceremonies, at which he is experienced. Right now he is trying to organize a band on the campus. Anyone interested? For exercise, Dan prefers swimming and riding to reading. Besides his dramatic and musical interests, Dan also likes radio work. Broadway, look out!

Frank Lubey's gay and jovial wife, Lydia, is played by PAT GREENUP, a sophomore and a future first grade teacher, who comes from Barrington, in "poor little" Rhode Island. Pat also has had much high school experience in dramatics, such as appearing in "The Mad Hatters" and belonging to a group known as the Barrington Players which

Wanted: Good Sportsmanship

This week-end will bring to U. V. M. the kind of excitement and anxiety known, perhaps, only when a team comparable in sports as Middlebury, vies with U. V. M. for the glory of a triumphant ending of a game out on the gridiron.

This excitement is a natural reaction on the part of the students and very necessary to good sportsmanship. But sometimes it exceeds its limits of good sense and ends up with ill-feeling on one of the two sides or both.

The cause of this ill-feeling is due generally to the prankish tricks of a few unintelligent individuals whose only means of expression of sympathy for the losing side, or of scorn for the winning side, is the exercising of perverted energies in what are termed vandalism and destruction. However true it may be that such base behavior is not that of the whole school it brings on the school, nevertheless, a disgrace and a bad reputation in the same measure as if approved and prompted by the entire student body. The results of these acts of vandalism go farther than doing injury only to others; they bring embarrassment and disgrace upon the guilty individuals if apprehended in the act or if later found out, by subjecting them to procedures which may unfortunately in some cases lead to expulsion.

The Boulder Society is cooperating with the administration in this matter and with competing schools by informing the latter, diplomatically, by letter the stand we have taken with the students of our school toward abolishing unsportsmanly behavior and hope that our initiative will be an inspiration to them.

With our excellent crop of freshman students the upperclassmen can reap a harvest of lasting joy by setting examples for the new students which will involuntarily aid them to cultivate the characteristics which are becoming to a college man.

Memo To The Anti UVM Factions

To those in the city of Burlington who have shown decided antipathy towards the University of Vermont fair warning is served that student interest is alerted more and more to what goes on in the state legislature. Questions concerning the Alma Mater betterment will be increasingly supported by these students.

In the past the school administration and its highest official have been scarified by members of the press and those who represent the Chittenden area at Montpelier.

The U. V. M. student will continue to reserve his criticism to the campus and throw its full weight behind the University and its president in public questions.

The Editor's Column

There seems to be quite an alarming error in both bad taste and misstatement with respect to one of the articles appearing in last week's CYNIC. In an effort to keep every person in the University of Vermont informed correctly of administrative doings, the CYNIC has not spared the rod in presenting the facts to its readers. Unfortunately, a usually reliable source of information faltered a little with regards to the details on the accounting set-up and the balancing of the books. Inasmuch as this mistake was brought to attention just prior to press time, a complete report will be discussed in next week's editorial column.

To Each His Own

For the past eleven years college students have danced to the sweet music of Freddy Martin at the Coconut Grove in Los Angeles. And for the same number of years Woody Herman has been playing for the jazz enthusiasts. Loyal supporters of the more orthodox method of music presentation claim that they enjoy hearing a pure interpretation of the melody. The more progressive music fans prefer arrangements which, in part, disguise and supplement the original tune. Sweet music fans like their music rich, warm and soothing. Swing fans prefer it strong, exciting and non-conforming. Freddy's followers want to dance to his sweet strains. Many of Woody's worshippers would rather just listen.

Do you prefer Freddy Martin's sweet music or Woody Herman's swing music? State your preference and why in twenty-five words or less and mail it with your address, telephone number and age to Gene Howard, 951 N. La Cienega, Los Angeles 46, California. The contest is available to the students of two hundred colleges and universities throughout the country and is also sponsored by the nation's leading disc jockeys. There will be two winners.

The winner of "I Prefer Freddy Martin's Sweet Music—" will be flown via T. W. A. Trans-World Airline Constellation to Los Angeles for three days at the world-famous Ambassador Hotel and will spend New Year's Eve with Freddy Martin at the Coconut Grove.

The winner of "I Prefer Woody Herman's Swing Music—" will be flown via T. W. A. Trans-World Airline Constellation for three days at the beautiful Knickerbocker Hotel in Hollywood and will spend New Year's Eve with Woody Herman at Hollywood's new, exciting Empire Room. Both winners will also be presented with a new RCA-Victor Personal portable radio and arrangements will be made for attending outstanding events while visiting the entertainment city of the world.

All entries must be in the mail on or before December 5, 1948. Winners will be notified no later than December 15. The winning entries will be judged by Peggy Lee, radio and recording star—Dave Dexter, editor of Capitol News and recognized authority on popular music—and Carlos Gastel, personal manager of important radio and motion picture stars.

The prizes are lucrative so if there are any interested parties here at UVM, the chance to fulfill a life's dream may be yours for the offering. When you send in your entries, I hope that you will mention the fact that the information was gathered from details in the VERMONT CYNIC.

Vermont Co-eds: Beware

Appalled at the low Q. P. R. rating of University of Connecticut freshman women, in comparison to first year co-eds at other schools, the Student-Faculty Committee has submitted the following plan to the W. S. G. A.

All first semester women will be in their dorms by eight o'clock on Monday through Thursday nights. One of these evenings, at the student's discretion, can be used for a ten-thirty permission. It is on this evening that the girl will have to plan to attend her club meetings and social functions.

It is hoped that this program, by requiring incoming students to spend more time on their studies, will do much in helping the co-eds make a satisfactory transition period between high school and college.

Opportunity in the Field of Foreign Service

A large and reputable client of Zinser Personnel Service has given them the responsibility of selecting a limited number of college graduates for employment in their Middle East offices. They want students with B.S. degrees in mechanical, electrical, or civil engineering; or with B.S. degrees with majors in chemistry or geology. Six months' training is given in the United States with a twenty-four-month contract for service in the Middle East. The training pay is $260 per month with a Master's degree commanding $280 per month. Merit increases in salary are given after each six months of service.

Those sent to the Middle East at the end of the training period will be provided with free modern air-conditioned quarters and subsistence. The company provides recreation facilities and free medical care and hospitalization.

At the end of the contract period, the employee will receive free transportation to the United States for a fifty-day paid vacation. He may return to the East and take with him his wife and up to two children. The company transports the family and furnishes, without cost, modern, furnished, air-conditioned houses and subsistence for the entire family.

Here is a splendid opportunity for young men to gain experience with one of the most substantial corporations in the United States, and one which provides an opportunity for advancement.

Letters to the Editor . . .

EXPLANATION

To the Editor of the CYNIC:

During the period from the opening of school until last Tuesday, I was daily being told by many students that the next President of the United States would be Tom Dewey. Since last Wednesday, these many who had climbed on the bandwagon have been stopping me and saying, "I told you so," and "What happened?"

Various commentators and politicians have given their opinions. Being in neither of the above classifications, but only a poor country boy trying to get along, I would not contradict those learned men. However, I believe that the cause of the Republican defeat was rooted not in apathy at the polls or the failure to campaign on the issues, but in the fact that some of the leaders of the Republican Party have not kept that inexplicable something known as "The common touch," the ability to get along with John Q. Public, and to know just exactly what he wants. Some of the leaders have. I would cite our Governor, Ernest W. Gibson, who led the G. O. P. ticket in Vermont by over 10,000 votes as one. Another is U. S. Senator George D. Aiken. These men, and others of their type have, unfortunately been in the minority. If the Republican Party is to regain its prestige, and elect Presidents in the future, it must clean out the Charlie Plumleys and others of his type who have caused the G. O. P. to be branded as the party of reaction. It must permit and encourage greater participation by youth, and must force leadership on those in the liberal element, such as the Gibsons, the Aikens, the Stassens, and the Lodges.

Here at U. V. M., Dean Moore '49, and myself founded a Young Republican Club for the purpose of aiding in the development of intelligent voters; of helping to develop youthful talent, abilities, and ideas; of providing a constant source of new progressive strength to the Republican Party, and to help instill in the minds of the students a sound political philosophy. To date, I believe that this organization has been successful in its purpose. It will continue to expand in the future.

Politics is the dynamo of the Republic, and if we are to have a successful republican form of government, there must be a greater participation in politics, particularly by the young people.

Cordially yours,

ED. J. COSTELLO, Chairman,
U. V. M. Young Republican Club.

Pan-Hellenic Rushing Rules

One of the largest turnouts of prospective sorority pledges is expected this week as UVM sororities hold open house to the freshman women. Pan-Hellenic Council in charge of rushing procedure for the women once again has formulated a code of rules to govern the annual recruitment.

1. An eligible girl may not visit any sorority house except at the times indicated on the Rushing Calendar approved by Pan-Hellenic Council unless she has already been through one rushing period.
2. An Open Bid may be extended to any girl who has been through one rushing period.
3. Sorority members may entertain eligible girls only if they are the Little Sisters assigned by Student Union. Entertaining Little Sisters terminates with Dean's Tea on October 30, 1948.
4. Both sorority women and eligible girls are honor bound not to give or receive special favors designed to influence eligible girls.

Procedure in Case of Violation of Pan-Hellenic Rules:

1. In the event that any member chapter of the Council or any individual member of the Pan-Hellenic Association shall violate any rule or regulation legally adopted and properly published by the Pan-Hellenic Council the following procedure for trial and punishment shall be carried out:
  - A. A statement in writing of the rule violated, the nature of the violation, place and time it occurred and any other pertinent information shall be presented to the Pan-Hellenic Council by the group or the individual making the charge.
  - B. Pan-Hellenic Council, in executive session, at the regular meeting or special meeting called for the purpose shall carefully consider the charge and weigh the evidence presented. An opportunity shall then be offered for the persons to defend the action in question. After all evidence has been heard and the defendants examined, the Council shall decide whether or not a willful violation of Pan-Hellenic rules has occurred and prescribe the penalties.

Penalties:

Penalties of violation of rules shall be imposed by the council in accord with the seriousness of the offense as follows:

- A. Warning: A statement of the rules violated and the name of the sorority guilty of the infraction shall be published in the CYNIC.
- B. Deprivation of Privileges: In case of a more serious infraction of rules the offending sorority shall be deprived of all social privileges during rushing including final party.

Standards of Ethical Conduct for Sorority Women:

It is beneath the standards of sorority women:

- A. To speak disparagingly of any sorority or college woman.
- B. To create any feeling between sorority and non-sorority women.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Monday evening, October 18, was Founder's Day for the Alpha Phis, preparations being in charge of the co-chairmen, Jay Brackenridge and Rose-Mary Traynor. Present were several alumnae whom everyone was happy to see.

We are all glad to have Mary Greene, who is now an instructor, back at U.V.M. The Alpha Chi House was the scene of much excitement and entertainment last Monday night, with hosts of alumnae buzzing around, chatting and serving refreshments at Alpha Iota's monthly cultural meeting. Jay and Andy furnished extremely interesting accounts of their experiences in Europe this summer. Adding much to their descriptions was Burt MacDougall's showing of colored movies which he took on the trip. Thank you, Andy, Jay, and Burt.

We were very happy to have Dean Simpson and Mrs. France as dinner guests Tuesday evening. Despite the fact that Carolyn Chapman and Harriet Gregory were having their first hand at cooking, we are pleased to report "no fatalities." Next week, however, may be another story—the cooks are "Georgia," "Hominy Grits" Croom and Joyce Rogerson!

Saturday was "Homecoming Day" and an Open House at Alpha Chi. A spirit of good cheer was especially prevalent after the victory over New Hampshire. A vote of thanks goes to Rita Bolognani, Dee Caryl, and Yvonne Croom who created the "mammy" poster and to Catherine Carter, Betty Davison, and Jane Hill, the committee for the Open House. Thanks also goes to our Kappa Sig heroes, Al Niemann and George MacDonald, who used both brain and brawn in getting "Mammy" out the front door.

Becky Wheatley had the wonderful experience of being present at the founding ceremony of a new Alpha Chi Omega chapter, Gamma Theta, at the University of Maryland over the week-end.

Committees have already been assigned to work on the Christmas Bazaar. Dodo Elmer is in charge of arrangements.

DELTA PHI EPSILON

Helene Shapiro '51, was initiated into the Delta Phi Epsilon Sorority on Monday, November 1.

Elly Hurwitz paid a surprise visit to her old camping grounds, U.V.M., on the week-end of October 24. All the girls were very happy to see her.

PI BETA PHI

On Monday, October 1, the Pi Phis of Vermont Beta initiated into the chapter Gladys Peloquin, '50 and Joyce Rolfe '51. Congratulations are in order for them both.

Our guest of honor at dinner last Wednesday was Miss Betty Claire Schmid, Campus Reporter from Mademoiselle. Miss Schmid was here at Vermont for the day to interview girls interested in the Mademoiselle College Board contest.

And Kathy Kidder sets a new style—fraternity pin after engagement ring!

That face in the window on Halloween was a Betsy Bigelow and Bev Hillman creation. It was a genuine Vermont pumpkin and strictly the personality job!

Three cheers herein included for Jean Ritchie and all those who helped to make our poster the cup winner during a really good Homecoming Weekend.

The house is glowing after its new coat of paint even if the yellow rooms are a friendly chartreuse. Shades of last year's green walls! The kitchen greeted us with a smooth three-tone color scheme topped off by a coral ceiling. All in all, the Pi Phis are very optimistic about a year that can't miss being just tops!

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Homecoming Week-end meant "big-doin's" at the Theta House. Saturday afternoon, after the game, there was open house at 215 South Prospect, with cookies and punch served. Bridge games and just socializing gave everyone a chance to relax before going on to more fraternity dances and parties.

Norma and Bunky were temporary "sweethearts of Sigma Chi" when "two gentlemen from Verona"—(and Colgate) came to UVM for the week-end. Rumors are flying, but let it suffice to say that a gay time was had by all.

New Haven is the destination of Lorraine Bosworth and Marilyn White this week-end of the 30th, for important doings are scheduled down Yale way.

Mary Lou Sweet '49, was pledged at dawn Friday, October 22.

Foreign Students—All students from foreign countries, whether or not they are citizens of the United States, are requested to report to the Registrar's Office before November 10, 1948.

BEAT MIDDLEBURY!

Organizations wanting the station wagon or the East Hall Student Lounge or the Waterman Student Lounge for meetings should make arrangements for them with Harry Miele, President of Student Government. Those using the Student Lounge in Waterman are requested not to move the furniture unless special permission has been granted.

BEAT MIDDLEBURY!

Mortar Board is missing several decorative items since the dance last week and pleads for the return of these articles since they were borrowed for the affair.

There seems little doubt that the items were taken as souvenirs with the students involved not realizing that they were not the property of Mortar Board.

Missing to date are: one plastic covered white ring buoy, four small ring buoys, and two cast iron anchors.

BEAT MIDDLEBURY!

The 1948 Ariels will be distributed Thursday and Friday of this week in the main hall of Waterman Building. All persons who paid activity fees in 1947 are eligible to receive a copy of the yearbook.

BEAT MIDDLEBURY!

The U. V. M. branch A. I. E. E. will meet in Room 239 Waterman, on Friday, November 12, at 7.30 p.m. All students are cordially invited to hear Ken Stewart discuss hearing aids.

Fraternity Notes

KAPPA PHI KAPPA

Dr. Bennett C. Douglass, Dean of the College of Education and Nursing, was elected national councilor of Kappa Phi Kappa at the recent general assembly of that professional education fraternity convened at St. Louis, Mo., October 21-23. Dr. Douglass will serve as one of nine such councilors and will be responsible for coordinating the organization's activities in the New England area.

Attending the conclave as representatives of the local chapter were Albert S. Redway, president of the campus group, and Ed Goetz, former president. They were elected as official delegates from the UVM Alpha Gamma chapter.

At the gathering held in St. Louis' Statler Hotel, the fraternity's constitution and by-laws were revised, its budget increased, its program enlarged, and its objectives further defined. Cooperative enterprise was the keynote of the convention, and expansion is the aim of the fraternity in the months ahead. New chapters are being sought, while old ones which lapsed into inactivity during the war are being rapidly reactivated.

Dean Ashbaugh of Miami University, Ohio, is national president of Kappa Phi Kappa.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

In celebration of our defeat of the UNH eleven the social chairman, Joe Peters, sponsored a buffet lunch for the returning alumni and during the evening a dance was held. We were glad to see among the guests, several members of the neighboring fraternities and sororities. The chaperones were Dr. and Mrs. Lang and Mr. and Mrs. Proctor Page, Jr.

The chapter was glad to welcome back Johnny Heast who was on campus before the war and is now continuing his studies in the business college.

The touch football team has met its first success of the season by defeating the Lambda Iota seven.

On November 6, after the Rochester game, we are planning to have a dance in accordance with our newly established policy of having one after each of the home games.

Good news! The long awaited furnace has arrived and is being installed now. For three weeks the brothers have had to contend with the unpleasantness of a cold house.

TAU EPSILON PHI

Tau Epsilon Phi inaugurated its social season by holding "open house" after the Union game. Chaperones were Prof. and Mrs. Lansden and Professor Worthman. Arrangements were under the direction of Steve Berman and Fred Sigman. The house was decorated to resemble a football field in the late fall season. An informal dance is in the offering in the very near future.

ACTION SHOTS FROM THE ROCHESTER CLASH

STAN URSPRUNG SHINES AS CATS TIE ROCHESTER IN SEE-SAW ENCOUNTER

By Vic Murdock

Last Saturday at Centennial Field, before a crowd of 4,000 people, the Rivermen of the University of Rochester and the Catamounts of the University of Vermont battled it out with everything they had to finally end their game in a 14-14 tie. It was a see-saw encounter from start to finish with Vermont dominating in the first and third periods and Rochester holding the upper hand in the second and final quarters. Despite the disappointment of ending the ball game in a tie, the Catamounts have reason for exhilaration over the improved offensive power they displayed. The superb playing of Stan Ursprung, both offensively and defensively, needs no flourish of adjectives and fancy phrases. That catch he made of Collier's pass in the first period will long be remembered. Bob St. Gelais has improved immensely since he shifted from halfback to fullback; the yardage he racked up with his line bucks in last Saturday's game certainly points that out. In the third quarter Vermont made its longest touchdown drive of the year when they marched forty-four yards in eight plays to score their second touchdown against Rochester.

More plays developed straight from the T-formation than in any other game this year; there was more coordination in the backfield regardless of the fact that costly errors were made. A total of 160 yards rushing and fifty-eight yards passing is the best performance of yardage gained the Green and Gold has made this year. The line did not hold up as well as it has in previous games, but they were called upon to do ironman work against the two heavy lines Rochester kept sending back and forth into the game.

Collier to Ursprung and 7

Vermont's John Ballard received the opening kick-off on his own six-yard line and ran it back twenty-four yards to the U.V.M. thirty. The Catamounts started to roll by making a first down, with St. Gelais, Hurley, and Ballard reeling off yardage. Vermont got as far as the Rochester 48-yard line, but the Rivermen stiffened their defense and Cote kicked the ball out of bounds on the Rochester 11-yard line. The Rivermen looked as though they might get moving down the field as they made a first down the first time they had possession of the ball. But shortly after that the first Vermont touchdown was set up when Collier recovered a Rochester fumble on the 31-yard line. On three plays the Catamounts carried the ball to the 23-yard line with fourth down and two yards to go for a first down, the passing combination of Collier to Ursprung went into quick and decisive action. Collier's jump-pass over the center of the line was too high, however, Big Stan Ursprung managed to hit the ball with his fingertips on the 12-yard line. Stan caught

Cross-Country Team Sparkles At Conn. Valley Championship

By Bill Matthews

The Springfield College harriers scored a decisive victory over four other cross-country teams at Storrs, Conn. on November 1 to win the 1948 Connecticut Valley Championships. The final tally found Springfield first with 41, Coast Guard second with 59, Massachusetts third with 65, Vermont fourth with 94, and Connecticut fifth with 107.

Capt. Randall Runs Fourth

Chittick and Klingensmith of Coast Guard linked arms and crossed the finish line together as co-winners. Their time over the 4.4-mile course was 23:09.2. Yet it was the overall team strength of Springfield that gave them the winning margin. Miller of Springfield was third, and our own Earle Randall, fourth. Randy toured the course in 23:30. Other point getters for Vermont who were among the thirty-five starters were Bellows (14th), Porter (23rd), Peabody (26th), and Harwood (27th).

Randy avenged his defeat by Clough of Massachusetts the week previous, by beating the latter out for the number four position. Clough had to settle for fifth place.

Tough Course

The Vermont harriers who made the trip were of the opinion that the UConn course was long and tough, but not as exhausting as the University of Massachusetts' course at Amherst. One long, steep hill near the end of the run gave them some trouble, and also the fact that a good share of the race was run on macadam surface which is always more gruelling than turf or dirt in any road race.

Freshmen Harriers Romp Over Aggies For Third Straight

It was Caswell, Williams and Rowell again for the U.V.M. frosh track squad in a 17-46 win over Randolph Agricultural School last Saturday. Vermont breezed to their third straight win of the season by virtue of the excellent times of the "Big Three." Hayer of Randolph took fourth for the Aggies as U.V.M. dragged down the fifth and sixth positions to compile the low total of seventeen.

Midd Next

Friday the junior Postmen take on Middlebury in their last outing of the year. Middlebury has strong teams in every sport and could spoil a perfect season for Vermont. But with Bob Caswell, Lou Williams and George Rowell leading the way, the Kitten prospects are bright.

DUKE NELSON'S CHARGES FAVORED TO HOLD STATE COLLEGE PIGSKIN TITLE

The University of Vermont's unpredictable football team closes its 1948 schedule at Centennial Field this coming Saturday, November 13, against the undefeated Panthers from Middlebury College.

The Blue and White from down the line always have been stepping high and handsome all season and will bring to Burlington a record of six straight wins this season up to the time of this writing with the results of last Saturday's game with Union unknown. The Panthers were expected to have little trouble making it seven in a row.

Cats Decided Underdogs

The Cats' record this season is one that might make the power laden Panthers look at things from the cautious angle but other than that Fuzzy Evans' gridmen will definitely be fighting an uphill battle in every department.

The experts, if anyone still uses the term after the recent election, will have the Panthers lined up for their eighth straight win at the expense of the Cats by a substantial margin. On the other hand, the Cats' upset win over the highly favored New Hampshire Wildcats two weeks ago will give Vermont backers an inside hope that they can come up with something of that sort again.

The Panthers will actually be after their thirteenth straight win over a two year period if Union becomes another addition to their list as of last Saturday. Looking over comparison scores of teams that both Vermont and Middlebury have played this season, the Norwich game will give an indication from that angle. The Cats took the Mountaineers into camp by a 14-0 count midway through the season and the Panthers had little trouble rolling up a 40-0 score over the same club two weeks ago.

Junior Panthers Roll Over Kittens 20-0 To Conclude Finish

The U.V.M. Kittens lost their final football game of the season to Middlebury 20-0, Saturday afternoon at Porter Field. Vermont was trailing 6-0, in the fourth quarter when Middlebury scored two fast touchdowns and a safety to complete their second undefeated season in a row. The Kitten line, led by Pruneau, Guziewicz, Kurkel, and Braithwaite, kept the Panthers in check by sparkling defensive plays. However, as has been the case in other games, they didn't give the passers, Flanigan and MacDonald enough time to throw the ball and didn't provide those wide open spaces in which their backfield could roam.

Keeper Stars for Kittens

Kurkel opened the game by kicking to Rathbun of Middlebury who took the ball on his own ten-yard line and carried it to the Vermont 24, in a great exhibition of open field running. Five plays later the ball was on the goal line and Duclos carried it over from there. This finished all the scoring until the fourth period. Both teams settled down to a game of bucking the line for three downs and then punting on the fourth. Keefer made the play of the game when he caught a pass from Flanigan lying flat on his back. He also led the U.V.M. ground gainers in yardage gained, and he is a boy that we will be seeing much more of in the future. Another of those lads is Dick Hollister who wears the colors of Middlebury. He is a fast charging back who picks up territory by going through tacklers and not around them, and when hit, he has enough power to spin an extra five yards.

Midd Rolls

Early in the third period, Pruneau recovered a fumble for the Kittens on the Middlebury 44. Flanigan passed to Keefer and then carried the ball to the 22-yard line, but the play was nullified and with it went Vermont's best scoring opportunity. In the fourth quarter, an exchange of punts gave Middlebury possession in Vermont territory. Duclos plunged to the eight, and Stalker went through the center for the score. Middlebury kicked off to the Kittens who tried two running plays which gained nothing. Flanigan punted to Hollister who returned it to the Vermont 37-yard line. Stalker passed to Hall who went all the way for a touchdown. The score was 18-0, since Middlebury missed all three attempted conversions. The final scoring came about when Salwak of U.V.M. was trapped behind the goal line for a safety and two points. Thus the game was finished and with it, the season.

Sports Slants

By Gordon Bickford

— Well, a tie is better than a loss, as anyone from Middlebury will verify. (Heh-heh.)

— "Ironman" Collier and Stan Ursprung were up to their old tricks and cooperated nicely to shove the Cats out in front. In case there is any misunderstanding and confusion among the local scribes as to who caused the fumble that set up the first score, it was Bill Dempsey who knocked the ball out of the hands of a startled Rochester back, and the "Ironman" promptly fell on it.

— Jack Welter, the tiny Rochester quarterback was treated most severely all P.M. by Jim Turnbull and his friends in the Green and Gold line. Once it seemed that the little one was down for the count, but he bounced back and led his charges to their second score through a very tired Vermont line.

— Dapper Bob St. Gelais was the answer to Fuzzy's fondest prayer. The Burlington halfback turned fullback was the hard-running threat so badly needed all season. Be-spectacled Ken Lawson from Albert Lea, Minn., plays a great game at defensive guard.

— The tough breaks that have plagued Don Hebsch all season cropped up again in his two tries Saturday, but the big sophomore back is capable of some long-distance leather moving, and next Saturday would be a fine day for it.

Shots at Random and other deserving people—Notice that the Frosh were beaten 20-0 by the Midd yearlings, and shame on Harry Thurber for being a party contributing to the downfall of a football team representing Vermont. Harry may be remembered as a thumping lineman on the pre-war U.V.M. teams, and a political science teacher here in '46.

The Shape of Things to Come—Now, the time has come to give thought to our dear friends from Middlebury who come here on Saturday.

We are happy to relate that the big, bad Panthers were walloped last week, which proves that they are, after all, only flesh, blood and bones, which we hope to see liberally spread around the Colchester Ave. premises.

The comparative records have been thoroughly covered and can now be discarded entirely, for the ensuing clash is strictly "no holds barred."—We predict—that the Catamounts will sail into the Panthers with total disregard for the impressiveness of the Middlebury record and the brittleness of Middlebury limbs.—That Centennial Field will be as crowded as the laws permit.—That the contest will be a trying tussel indeed, and that many on both sides will be seriously trampled upon.—That the score will be—available at the end of the game.

Thirteen Riflemen Practice Intensely For Opening Meet

Looking forward to their opening meet on November 13, the varsity rifle team has been on the practice range since the first of the month. From a squad of thirty candidates, Captain Johnson, rifle coach, has chosen thirteen men for his varsity team. These include six letter-men from last season.

Captain Johnson is pleased with the showing of the new men on the squad, especially the firing of Tom Green, a sophomore transfer from Fordham.

The early work-outs have consisted of practice firing and practice matches on the university range. The schedule includes matches against: Harvard, Yale, Coast Guard, Dartmouth, Norwich, Massachusetts, M.I.T. and the traditional shoulder to shoulder match against Brown University at Providence.

produced plays during the winter. She is very fond of poetry, especially Shakespeare's, and knitting. She enjoyed working with the cast of "All My Sons" because she likes to watch other people act.

WILLIAM RIDDELL, class of 1952 and enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences, plays the part of Doctor Jim Bayliss, a neighbor of the Kellers. Majoring in economics, Bill would like to work in a foreign branch when he graduates. He is very interested in drama and has played the stage manager who relates the narrative in the play, "Our Town."

A former nurse and Jim's wife, Sue Bayliss, is played by SHIRLEY GLEASON, a member of the class of 1951 and an English major. While attending high school in Chester, Mass., Shirley acted in "Through The Keyhole" and "Almost Eighteen." Shirley enjoys tennis and skiing. She also agrees that Mr. Humphrey's patient directing has helped a great deal in producing "All My Sons."

The youngest member of the cast is eight-year-old EMMETT VAN BUSKIRK of Burlington. Emmett attends Taft School where he is inclined to believe things are a bit democratic. It seems that the whole class has to stay in for recess if just one little devil acts up! Emmett has had previous dramatic experience. He's been in two Christmas plays in which he was a bouncing ball and "Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son." When asked how he likes to be on the stage, Emmett replied, "It's okay." For his outdoor sport, Emmett prefers football. However, he's an expert angler, for once he caught a catfish! When he grows up, Emmett wants to be a State Police Officer because he likes to "catch crooks." That's why he's a natural for the part of Bert, the Doctor's small son, in "All My Sons."

Two performances of "All My Sons" are scheduled on November 11 and 13. I hope you will all run and buy your tickets, if you haven't already. It has a super-special cast and I promise that you'll have an enjoyable evening. If you know the cast personally, and you've just been introduced to each one, then you'll certainly know it's going to be a fine production. Lights, curtain, and on with the play!

to try to do it again with a possible chance for a Glass Bowl bid, but if a stubborn and fighting Green and Gold should come out on the field as against New Hampshire, the Panthers might find themselves pushed to keep their record intact.

The Panthers are rated as fast, heavy and tricky, with a fullback named Johnny Corbisiero as the main cog in the backfield.

Captain Hobie Cook and MacDonald, the Cats' ace lineman and scatback respectively, who have been sidelined with injuries, are expected to be back in the lineup to bolster the chances the Cats have to upset the Panthers.

The lineups for the two teams will probably read something like this: Middlebury—LE, Loveys; LT, Hamre; LG, Lindeman; C, Drennan; RG, Connors; RT, Thompson; RE, Nightingale; QB, Sporborg; Lhb, Hughes; Rhb, Forbes; Fb, Corbisiero. Vermont—LE, Traverse; LT, Comolli; LG, Banta; C, Dempsey; RG, Schofield; RT, Cook or Turnbull; RE, Ursprung; QB, Collier; Lhb, MacDonald; Rhb, Ballard; Fb, St. Gelais.

the ball as it came down and bulled this way over for a touchdown, after being hit on the three-yard line. Collier's try for extra point was good and the Cats led by 7-0. Rochester's only scoring threat of the first period was staved off by the Cats' mounts on their 13-yard line. Comolli, Banta, French and Ursprung teamed up to hold the Rivermen in check.

Rivermen Score on Break

Early in the second period Rochester recovered a Vermont fumble on the Green and Gold 23-yard line. Three running plays were tried but the Rivermen could pick up very little yardage. On the fourth down with the ball on the Vermont 17-yard line, a pass was thrown into the end-zone; Welter, the little 139-pound quarterback doing the throwing. Interference was called on the play and the ball was placed on the one-yard line. Vermont put up a gallant goal line stand, but on third down, Rochester's Jack Garnish scooted off right tackle to score. When tied up the ball game with his successful try for extra point. Vermont came very close to scoring a touchdown late in the second quarter when Collier and Ursprung again pulled their jump-pass play. This time they picked up twenty-three yards and penetrated as deep as the Rochester 15-yard line. A few seconds later a pass interception ended the scoring opportunity and at halftime things were still all tied up at 7-7.

St. Gelais Puts Vermont in Front

In the third quarter Rochester failed to get moving after receiving the kick-off and Welter booted the ball up to the Vermont 45. Hurley ran back the punt to the Rochester 44 to set up the Cats' mount's second scoring thrust. With St. Gelais hitting the middle of the line, Ballard sweeping the ends and Collier picking up valuable yardage on his quarterback sneaks, the Evansmen marched 44 yards to garner their second touchdown of the afternoon. St. Gelais did the scoring, going over on a line buck from the two-yard stripe. Again Collier's try for extra point found its mark and the Cats' mounts went ahead by 14-7.

Many Colleges To Attend IRC Regional Conference

I.R.C. Pres. Ralph Conant Heads Program Plans

Scattered about U.V.M.'s cold and wintry campus over the week-end of December 4, 5, and 6, will be several hundred student representatives from various New England colleges. They all will be here to take part in the big New England Regional Conference for the International Relations Clubs. You can be sure that their purpose and their work will keep them warm.

Various Conference Committees under the direction of Martha Atwood and Ralph Conant have been hard at work fixing things up for the big event. Two speakers have been delegated to the conference by the Carnegie Endowment Fund for World Peace. A full three day program has been set up to entertain the delegates and to shower them with U.V.M. hospitality. There will be a dance, a luncheon, a banquet, teas, discussions and speeches. Everyone will be hard at work on International Problems. There will be seven round tables set up under the direction of various faculty members, and there are seven topics to be discussed. They are:

1. How much support should the United States give to the United Nations?
2. To what extent should we continue to aid reconstruction in Western Europe?
3. What is the future role of Germany in European and World affairs?
4. How can relations between the United States and Russia be improved?
5. American Democracy and Soviet Communism—room for both?
6. What is Japan's future role in the Far East?
7. How imperialistic has the United States Foreign Policy become, and should it remain so?

"Let there be light brought to bear on this world chaos!" is the war cry of these industrious I.R.C. members, and U.V.M. is honored to play host to them. President Millis will be among the people saying "Hello and Good Luck!" to the throng.

All in all, there will be much to do and much done at the Conference. Registration for the Conference will be at nine o'clock Saturday morning, December 4.

Miele Appoints New Council Committee; Streamlines Action

In an effort to streamline the operations of the Executive Council, Harry Miele, president of Student Government, announced at the meeting last Tuesday the appointment of two committees within the Council. The first of these is a Ways and Means Committee, the members of which are Ed Costello, Chairman, Al Pratt, and Dan Burke. Their duties will be to receive all new proposals brought in to the Council, investigate all the angles, and report all the facts, pro and con, together with their recommendations, for action by the Council. It is hoped that this setup will eliminate much of the waste of time that results when unusual proposals are received, such as the Kake Walk and CYNIC issues of last year.

The second committee will be the Elections Committee, which will consist of Peter Haslam, Chairman, with Lucille Weatherby, and Karl Webster. The duties of this committee will be to make arrangements for the handling of all regular and special elections, to check that all candidates have qualified in accordance with the Constitution, and to make proposals for election procedure. Elections themselves are supervised by Boulder and Mortar Board.

Student Treasurer Defends The Hiring Stu-Gov Bookkeeper

Discussion for the past week has been centered about the recent hiring of a bookkeeper to be in charge of Student Government funds. In answer to the question of the necessity of such a move, Jane Atwood, treasurer of Student Government, points to the confused and lax method of handling Student Government funds in the past.

Student Government has always allocated funds to the various organizations in the past. Upon receipt of a budget, the request has formerly been filled by means of a lump sum. Official records were kept by the U.V.M. Accounting Office. With all the other work which this office must perform, Student Government figures often were handled as much as five months late, rather than on a month to month basis. Consequently, there was no means of checking on where the amounts were actually spent as stated in the budgets. Organizations did not keep track of what they were spending and no one was exactly sure where student funds were going.

The new system hopes to eliminate this. By having an accountant specifically to take care of Student Government funds, all accounts can be kept up to date and regulatory measures strictly enforced. The new system calls for an itemized budget before any money is allocated by Student Government. Upon receipt of this budget, the amount of money to be received will be designated by the finance committee of Student Government in cooperation with the organization's treasurer for certain specific purposes. No organization will be allowed to exceed the amounts allocated for those purposes. Any reimbursement for cash already spent will be made only with written receipts for the objects. To help keep matters straight, the accountant will each month figure the amounts spent and received in the account of each organization and will present copies to both the finance committee and the organization in question. Organizations are also required to keep their own ledgers which are inspected by the treasurer of Student Government.

Weekend Debate Tourney Will Be Largest In East

Welcomes Debaters

Mary Jane Farnham

Mary Jane Farnham Is U.V.M. Student Manager

The largest debate tournament in the northeastern United States this year will take place at U.V.M. Friday and Saturday, November 19 and 20, when the Third Annual Vermont Invitational Debate Tournament gets underway. Thirty-five schools from eleven states and Canada will be represented by 232 debaters and fifty-two faculty members who will accompany their teams to act as critics and judges.

The first round of fifty-eight contests will be held Friday evening at 8.00 p.m., following which will be a coffee hour for the debaters and judges. Three more rounds of debates will take place Saturday. All classrooms on campus will be pressed into service for the Friday evening and Saturday afternoon programs.

A special feature of the tournament is the Congressional Session, which will be held Saturday evening in the City Hall Auditorium. Here, all 232 students will be assembled on the floor of the auditorium as a legislative body, discussing resolutions on improving all phases of education. The balcony will be open to visitors.

This tournament is sponsored by the U.V.M. Department of Speech and Dramatics. Mary Jane Farnham is student manager.

Dr. Robert B. Huber, head of the department, states that since the basic purpose of the tournament is to teach debating, no grand winner will be announced, but only the wins and losses of individual teams. There will be two divisions—a varsity or experienced division and a novice or beginners' division. U.V.M. will have ten of her own students entered in the varsity division and eight in the novice class. The question that will be discussed is the national college topic of the year, "Resolved, that the Federal Government Should Adopt a Policy of Equalizing Educational Opportunity in Tax Supported Schools by Means of Annual Grants."

The school traveling the longest distance to attend is Wake Forest in North Carolina. Other schools that will be represented here are Penn State, Rutgers, Temple, Syracuse, McGill, N.Y.U., Dartmouth, Navy, Army, Boston University, Maine, Brooklyn, Queens, Wagner, Wesleyan, Williams, Amherst, American International, Albany Teachers', Siena, Middlebury, St. Lawrence, St. Michael's, R.P.L., Springfield, New Haven Teachers', Bates, Rhode Island, Champlain, Colby, Hamilton, Bowdoin, Mount Holyoke, and Vermont.

Guerrilla-Minister From China To Talk Thurs. At Waterman

Dr. Liu, who was organizer of student liaison teams to promote cooperation between Chinese soldiers and civilians during the war, and has had an outstanding record of work among students in China will be on the campus Thursday and Friday of this week—November 18 and 19—sponsored by the Interfaith Committee as a preliminary for the WSSF drive to be held early next term. Dr. Liu is a graduate of Shanghai University and has worked at the University of Pennsylvania and Crozier Seminary. His career in China included training civilians in methods of supporting guerrilla fighters, and his special fame rests on his success in teaching mass singing to the Chinese. On one occasion he taught 10,000 soldiers in 30 minutes to sing Chee-lai, the famous Chinese marching song.

He is an eloquent and distinguished speaker on China, personally familiar with the problems facing the Chinese students today and is thus qualified to make them real to American students.

Thursday evening at 7.30 p.m. the Student Christian Association Commission on World Relatedness will sponsor a meeting in Room 625 Waterman.

UVM Dramatic Club Receives Plaudits For "All My Sons"

The U.V.M. Dramatic Club has done it again! This time they have made campus theatrical history by the performance of a three-act drama by the New York playwright, Arthur Miller, "All My Sons." By this presentation they have proved that not only are they talented, but versatile.

The Dramatic Club, and particularly their faculty director, R. H. Humphrey, should receive every commendation for last week's performance. This play was a difficult one to produce, not only because of serious theme, but because of its recent appearance in the cinema and its familiarity to those who keep abreast of the New York theatre. The cast and Professor Humphrey, made of the play a completely different, unusual and generally striking production, using a new approach which did not draw from any of the models used previously.

Of the cast, Newell Curtis deserves special praise. He played the role of Chris Keller, the son of the Keller household. Dee Dee Cummings and Tom Hayes, who played the roles of Kate and Joe Keller also demand special commendation. Mary Ann Browne '51, did an exceptional job as Ann Deever, Chris' unhappy sweetheart, and Courtland LaVallee '52 was sufficiently moody and vengeful as George Deever, her brother. Shirley Gleason, who played the role of Sue Bayliss merits a special award for "best supporting actress." She played her role of the understanding-misunderstood wife very well. The role of her stage husband, Dr. Jim Bayliss '52, was admirably played by William Riddell. Dan A. Peish and Patricia Greenup were excellent in their roles as the Keller's neighbors. And, of course, one of the outstanding roles of the evening was turned in by 7-year-old Emmet Van Buskirk, playing the role of Bert.

Impersonate Husbands In Classical Comedy

Amphitryon, one of the amusing plays of the second century Roman playwright, Plautus, will be read in English at the Goodrich Classical Club monthly meeting this Thursday, November 18, at 7.30 p.m. in Southwick. All people interested are cordially welcome.

The plot is woven around the escapades of the gods, Mercury and Jupiter, and their adventures in impersonating a soldier and his slave who are off to war. The two gods are warmly welcomed by the soldier's wife and her slave. From there on the plot thickens and is full of complications and amusing situations.

The drama's personae is as follows: Mercury, Bruce Stargatt; Amphitryon, Ed Goetz; Alcmena, wife of Amphitryon, Edith Schaffer; Jupiter, Harold White; Bromia, maid servant, Nancy Hafely; Sosia, a slave, Lindley Hardwell.

S. A. COMMITTEE TO ADVISE STUDENT GROUP ACTIVITY

The Student Advisory Committee of the University Senate held its first meeting on Monday evening under the chairmanship of Dr. W. P. Adams of the Forestry Department. The purpose of this committee, as defined in the current catalog, is to have oversight of all organizations and activities of students.

In order to unify more highly and to organize more effectively the extracurricular student life on campus, it was decided to request all organized student organizations to register with the Committee so that important data such as the names of officers, faculty advisors, and current plans could be assembled in one place for the convenience of the student body and the faculty. Also, as a result, the committee will be in a better position to assist faculty advisors with their problems and to be advised of the groups which might logically be permitted to make use of University facilities for meetings and other activities.

In the near future, student leaders will receive a registration form which must be completed and filed in the office of the Dean of Administration before the Thanksgiving recess.

Notice

Representatives of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company will distribute free Camels in plastic cases, outside Cafeteria in the Waterman Building on Friday, December 3, from 11.30 a.m. to 3.00 p.m. to each student. In order to avoid duplication, it will be necessary for each student to present his student activity card to obtain the cigarettes and case. Members of the administration and faculty may each receive a free package by calling at the Cashier's Office.

Also available at the University Book Store will be a special offering of a $2.50 pipe with a 16 oz. can of Prince Albert Tobacco for the price of $1.69.

Kreisler Concert Thrills Audience By Pure Artistry

Kreisler's playing is compact, his intonation silken, and fingering dexterous. His style is as mellow as the artist, gentle and politely flamboyant.

The program was as follows: The Suite in E Minor for Violin and Piano by J. S. Bach and the Concerto No. 6 in E Flat Major by Mozart occupied the first half of the concert. The Allemande of the Bach Suite was particularly gratifying although the Gigue suffered a bit when tempo affected bowing, but this was the Kreisler and in the shorter pieces given over to the second half, the beloved artist relaxed and brought the glitter of the European gaiety as of old. The charming Ballet Music from Schubert's Rosamunde and Viennese Rhapsodie Fantasia closed the program.

Time after time, the violinist was called back. There were three encores: Caprice Viennois; Londonderry Air, and Schon Rosemarin.

The capacity crowd had its cherished memento and the evening could not be improved. Carl Lemson ably assisted Mr. Kreisler at the piano.

The Department of Music of the University of Vermont was the sponsor of the program.

Faculty and Students In Vermont Varieties

A faculty-student orchestra and a theme song with words and music written by students, are some of the plans for the Second Annual Vermont Varieties Show, sponsored by the Dramatic Club, to be held at Southwick, December 9-10.

Words and music have been submitted by several students for the theme song. A decision on these will be made Tuesday afternoon.

A planning committee has been set up to handle try-outs for any talent that appears. No actual try-outs have yet been held.

The planning committee consists of: Dee Dee Cummings, chairman; Kathy Connerty, Dave Treharne, Augustus Girard, Neil Towne, and Howard Delano.

Success For Writer Consists In Rising Above Environment

In speaking of some of the basic requirements of a writer, Mr. John W. Aldridge's comments at an informal talk at Windfall Writer's Workshop, Tuesday, November 2, were not sufficiently expanded in last week's CYNIC.

Mr. Aldridge, a member of the English Dept., in one of the most comprehensive discussion meetings of the '48-'49 season stated that no locality aids a writer if he only accepts the way of life peculiar to it. This would apply to Vermont as an environment or to any other state, California included.

The creative writer, according to Mr. Aldridge, must be in touch with those qualities common to all people and not let his sensitivity be limited to the immediate environment.

It would follow that a Vermonter or Californian has an equal opportunity to become a great writer but that he or she must steer away from purely local influences that have little or no connection with other Americans and their way of life.

Windfall has made plans for future Writer's Workshops and notice of their meetings will be announced in the CYNIC.

U.V.M. Student Court Ready for Busy Year

Ed Goetz has been appointed Assistant Chief Justice of the Court. Warren Jones is Chief Justice. Filling the vital post of Court Clerk is Eleanor Griffith, a secretarial senior and Tri-Delt. Mitch Hunt heads the prosecuting attorney's staff, while Dick O'Connell is defense counsel.

Fewer than six hundred of the approximately three thousand undergraduates attending UVM voted in the recent Student Court election at which six new justices were chosen by the student body.

The new members of the Court were introduced to each other and to the remaining members at a brief meeting held on Tuesday evening, October 26. At that time a committee to revise the by-law and procedure was selected; serving on the committee are Ed Goetz, George Brigham, John Twitchell, and Robert Condon.

Can't Judge Wine By It's Jug Nor Jalopies By Their Flanks

Prologue

There was a young student from Mass.
Whose jalopy once ran out of gas;
But rather than leave it—
Would you ever believe it?
He lovingly pushed it to class.

Act I—Scene I

"What hol, Cassius, what manner of machine is yon contraption draped against the curb? I swear it has a leaner and hungrier look than thou."

"Speak low, unlearned one, lest the owner should overhear thee. Yon machine may have an infernal look about it, indeed, but you can't judge the goodness of the wine by the shape of the jug. Who knows what wonderful beauty may be hid 'neath the flanks of this chariot. Methinks, perchance, this woeful wagon is better appreciated by its care-taker than yon polished Packard by its master.—But to your question!

"I have heard it whispered in soft tones at the House of Sugar that these machines are termed—oh abominable title—jalopies by all except the owners. 'Tis further said that these chariots elicit glances of degradation and base statements of "Get a horse!" But, by all that's holy in a bachelor's sock, methinks such ignominious remarks betray the presence of a jealous soul. Damnatio quod non intelligunt. I have spoken."

Scene II

(Spoken by a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Jalopies).

I say, did any of you guys and gals happen to be in the vicinity of East Hall along about half past afterwards on a balmy day last week when all of a sudden there arose such a slatter that everyone ran to see what was the matter? You were? And as you stared at an ancient car with right-hand drive and a motor larger than the rest of it, did you ask yourself, 'Is it a bird? Is it a guided missile? Is it the Easter Bunny?' Well, listen my children:

This was the college prime-mover With its murmuring whines and (ahem) knocks

Yes sir, none other than the pride and joy of Mr. Rod Rice, the king of jalopies (pardon, I must delete that word from my vocabulary) the king of ancient automobiles, the proud possessor of no less than six antiquated vehicles. This model hinted at above, by the way, is a 1913 Stevens Duryea, a pretty fine old automobile, all jokes aside. As a matter of fact, Rod says that this foreign make is in the same class as a Rolls Royce and other fancy models.

Oh it's got an awful chassis,
But it's really mighty classy.

In addition to the Stevens and a 1923 Cadillac which Rod is driving at the present writing, he also has two Model T's and a handsome green and black 1920 Oldsmobile strategically deployed in various garages around the city. When interviewed, Mr. Rice had not taken inventory this week and so couldn't recall where he had left his other car. Maybe he will find it when he cleans out the cellar. This Oldsmobile, incidentally, is in amazingly fine condition. It has only been run 9002 miles, the engine purrs like a contented pussy cat and the upholstery isn't even wrinkled. Anyone who calls that a jalopy is, as our good friend Cas-

Ramblin' Round

by ED WATERS

Are our present standards of higher education obsolete? The field of higher education . . . is entered to lay the groundwork for a lifework; but also it is gone into to acquire a certain intangible culture, the training of the individual for the better evaluation of future experience. Do then our present educational methods effect this ideal?

There are two main methods of teaching in an institution of higher education, and of course many varying in degree between these two types. One is the dogmatic approach or the "teaching to" method. We find a great deal of this in our primary and secondary schools where it is the most successful type due to the student's emotional and mental immaturity.

The second method is the conferential or "teaching with" method. Here the teacher leads a discussion of the topic at hand, tries to keep the students interested and the discussion moving along. The student learns not by memorizing but by using his thinking processes to reason things out.

Now it is true that there are college subjects that cannot be taught entirely by this conferential method because of the mass of acts that the students must absorb. But, many subjects are being taught in the dogmatic manner due to the laxity of both the students and particularly the teachers. The dogmatic approach is an easier method; it is only necessary that a professor drone on through certain lecture material, the same lecture that he gave to last year's class and to the class of twenty years ago. The conferential method required good planning before each class.

Now as to the value of both these types of teaching. Europeans always think of Americans as the most educated people but still as the most unlearned. The why of this is simply that American students are not taught to think. This then is the training of the individual for the better evaluation of future experience.

Now, how about the other reason for a higher education, the preparation for a lifework? Of course, certain tangible facts are necessary for this, but not the enormous amount that some will make us believe are necessary.

It can be readily seen, although at times it is necessary to use the dogmatic approach, that it is of inestimable value to use the conferential method whenever possible.

Shedko Joins Economics Dept.; Trained At Rutgers And N.Y.U.

A new instructor is always fuel for conversational fires around a university. The members of the male gender wonder what his tests will be like and what kind of a marker he is; the girls wonder what he looks like and if he is married.

Thus was the situation facing Mr. Victor Joseph Shedko when he decided to accept a teaching post here in the Department of Economics. With the encouragement of his friend, Mr. Franc Ricciardi, who came to the Economics Department a year ago, Mr. Shedko got up the courage to brave the wilds of Vermont after the peaceful life of Elizabeth, N. J., and of New York City. He came armed with a degree from Rutgers and a great deal of graduate work from N.Y.U. As an extra added protection, he is to be married in New York some time before next semester, bringing the little woman up here with him at that time.

Since being up here, he has found many likable qualities about the place. To begin with he is very impressed by the natural beauty of the surroundings, something which he noticed on his initial visit here last Thanksgiving. He also likes the friendliness of the people (all except for the landlords who will not let him find the two room apartment that he is searching for at a reasonable price). The general atmosphere allows him to indulge in two of his favorite occupations—walking and eating apples. In a more sedate manner, he sings in the choir of Saint Paul's Church.

Getting Mr. Shedko to talk about the University itself was as easy as pulling teeth, since he feels that such a short period of time as he has been here is too little for any real commentary. One thing that he definitely likes, however, is the size of the school. Large enough to give variety and selection in subject matter, it is still small enough to maintain a friendly, personal atmosphere.

In discussing the curriculum of the Economics Department and of the role of economics in life, Mr. Shedko really warmed to his subject and became intensely serious. He mentioned that the present curriculum, which now offers as wide a variety as any school could be expected to have, is being expanded and will soon offer one of the most extensive courses obtainable anywhere. He feels this to be a wonderful thing for he considers economics to be one of the most vital subjects in the world today. Especially in a country such as the United States, where the people have control of the government, a thorough understanding is necessary. An enlightened electorate must understand our economic system in order to fulfill all their duties as citizens. It is the responsibility of all, especially of the college educated to have a background in economics which would enable them to vote discriminantly on all issues.

When questioned about the notoriously poor ventilation of the Old Mill, Mr. Shedko replied that he did not know the ventilation was notoriously poor, and he found the only thing necessary was to open the windows, something which he promises always to do. Perhaps a Vermont winter may change his ardor, but time will tell. In any case, he is hoping for a successful and happy year. He likes his students very much, and this, the basis of faculty-student relations, is the main measure of success.

Plumley

The moment for tears and pleading has been reached.

The voters of the state of Vermont have once again sent Charles Plumley to the House of Representatives to carry on his personal fight for Charles Plumley and those ideals we held so dear . . . thirty years ago.

Congressman Plumley's voting record has produced indignation among intelligent voters for years, but by sending out little pamphlets telling Vermont housewives how to master the culinary arts and how to fix fuses when the electric milkier pffts, he has been able to dupe several generations of voters.

His attack on Professor Andrew Nuquist four years ago paid for by the taxpayer destroyed Vermont's chances of done in the same pamphleteering manner and incidentally placing capable leadership in Congress.

Plumley continues his congressional work like some obscene toad under a toadstool.

Now for some facts:

During the 80th Congress, Plumley, who has chalked up an enviable record for absenteeism, did manage to vote on several pertinent measures.

First—a firm believer in the obsolete idea of high tariffs walls, he voted against extending reciprocal trade.

Secondly—a firm believer that the Statue of Liberty's raised arm means "scram," he summarily voted to exclude Jewish DP's from entering this country.

Thirdly—he stood valiantly by Representative Knutson (R) of Minnesota in upholding an income tax that favors the rich man only.

Fourthly—he voted to exempt RR's from anti-trust prosecution.

In simple words, he voted to preserve the monopolies and the people whose life tenure ended in the twenties.

He has never shown any interest in Vermont except at campaign time.

Whether he will run again is questionable but to the Vermont college student lies the supreme duty of seeing that Vermont's lone seat in the House of Representatives is never again filled with such stagnancy.

The Editor's Column

How High is the Sky?

Increasing efficiency in college teaching may be the answer, but it looks as if students will be asked to pay larger fees to attend institutions of higher learning in the years immediately ahead, according to Dr. Norman P. Auburn, vice-president and dean of administration at the University of Cincinnati.

"With the inflationary spiral seemingly continuing on its merry way and with other sources of income remaining constant or decreasing, college administrators are forced to raise fees or lower standards," he explained.

Another factor in any consideration of the future trend in tuition and fees is the probable effect of the peace-time selective service on college enrollments, when even a 10 percent variance in income from tuition fees will throw most college budgets out of kilter, and within a year, selective service can have that effect, he noted.

"Of course, before raising fees, the colleges will want to make every effort to increase the efficiency of their teaching processes," Doctor Auburn continued. "This does not mean overloading the faculty, but it does mean inquiring intelligently into the utilization of the best features of the lecture system, of adding teaching aids of visual and auditory types wherever possible, of using graduate assistants more effectively."

"It may mean using larger lecture sections than now in effect with the employment of smaller sections for quiz classes."

"It may mean that some of the smaller schools will find it advisable to reduce the variety of their offerings and to concentrate in narrower fields."

"Another device to increase efficiency would be greater emphasis on student counseling and guidance. Too many of our students are pursuing courses and programs for which they are not fitted."

"Let's insist on efficiency in operation, but at the same time be realistic," he added. "Rising costs of operation must be met; faculty salaries must be increased to a reasonable level. If we see a break in the price level, let's hold off on further tuition increases."

"If not, and if other sources of income are not forthcoming, we will have to follow the lead of Big Steel, of the auto companies, of the service fields, and increase our selling prices."

Where Does the Shortage Lie?

Only one out of four students in the United States ready to enter medical schools gained admittance this fall despite the fact that the nation faces an "acute shortage" of doctors.

Results of a survey of the nation's medical schools made by Junior Dean William S. Guthrie of Ohio State University's College of Arts and Sciences, point up two important problems:

1. An estimated 21,878 students sought admission to the 5,502 openings in 67 medical schools from whom reports were obtained. There are only 77 such schools in the nation. Many of these students applied for admission to more than one medical school resulting in 83,228 applications.

2. There is lacking any plan for training any more than the normal pre-war number of doctors in the nation's medical schools. The openings for qualified candidates in the medical schools are no better than they were last year—or 10 years ago.

Dean Guthrie, who as a counselor of students faces the problem of telling qualified students who have completed their pre-medicine training that they can't get in medical school, puts it this way:

"If a student earns all As and Bs, has completed all requirements for admission to medical school and has the personal qualifications, it is not an easy job to explain that there is no room for him—especially if he comes back with the question, 'Don't we need more doctors?'"

"But that is happening today, and it's a matter of concern to all that medical schools are making and expect to make no provisions to train more men for the medical profession," he declared.

Dean Guthrie bases this latter charge on the position of the Association of American Medical Colleges as expressed by Fred C. Zapffe, of Chicago, secretary of the association, in a recent letter, in which Mr. Zapffe refers to "The cry that we need more medical schools." Said Mr. Zapffe: "We in the business know that we do not. Medical education is our job and we keep in close touch with every phase of it."

Denatured Boys

The Truman "coup de ballot" is undoubtedly the biggest surprise of the year and almost as interesting to the U.V.M. student were the classroom reactions the following day.

Before Tuesday's election little or no opinion was expressed by the faculty on the virtues of the various candidates, yet afterwards the student listened to perfumed pedagogy on why Harry won and how splendid it was that Dewey lost.

These post-election professorial polysyllabics coming as an anti-climax to the election in comparison with the silence beforehand would mean almost necessarily that controversial issues such as elections are vinegar and verboten in the lecture hall.

The manner in which many of the faculty declaimed Dewey as a "Wall Street" lad, "Arsenic to Education" boy, and of course, "Nasty to Labor" boy indicates that they must have been repressing a lot of wicked epithets before the election.

There were a few, however, whom the student admires since they have been outspoken since the beginning in stating that the Democrats were chummier with labor and the small wage earners and hence Truman was preferable to Dewey.

It will be hoped that in the future that faculty members indicted for pre-election silence will realize that discussion of national policies and elections are as much a part of education as the feudal lords of Bombsicay.

EXTEND THANKS

Staff and Sandal wishes to thank sincerely all the sororities, fraternities, and VIP for their gratifying response to the Homecoming poster contest. We appreciate the turnout of posters, which, we think, added a great deal to the Homecoming spirit. Congratulations to the Pi Phis and to the Phi Delt for their trophy-winning entries, and to the Independents and Delta Psis for coming in second.

EARLY START

Dear Editor:

Apparently the biggest headache on campus right now is getting outside reading assignments done. The constant complaint is that there just aren't enough books in East Hall to take care of the enlarged classes. This is probably true in some cases, but the main difficulty lies in the fact that outside reading is such a pleasant thing to file away in the back of your mind until the last minute, and then there is the mad rush to East Hall. It's obvious that there aren't going to be enough books to accommodate the stampeding herd.

A few suggestions may help to alleviate the situation slightly. PLEASE sign up for books as soon as the assignments are given. Students, plan to use daytime hours to do your reading since a check with the librarian has revealed that there are many hours during the day when the books are not being used. Avoid the last minute rush which can only lead to a shortage of books and sleepless nights at the prospect of going to an exam next day without your reading done.

In addition, we urge the professors to cooperate by giving assignments at least a week or two in advance. In the meantime, we are looking into the situation more thoroughly to correct any actual shortages of books, but we ask that the students cooperate with us in helping the present situation.

Sincerely,

MARY E. ANDREW,

Women's Student Government Association.

KAPPA SIGMA

Following the untimely and unexpected departure of President Tony Anderson, the brothers of Kappa Sigma elected Bill Robertson '49 of Manchester, Conn., to his unexpired term of office. Tony, who lost considerable time a year ago because of a shoulder injury, was discouraged by the status of affairs at home. Good-bye and good luck to a great friend and leader.

The Kappa Sigs are canvassing the campus with chances on a 1936 Buick coupe in excellent condition. "Hoskie" and "Syl" are in charge of arrangements. The drawing is scheduled for November 18—the place is in front of Waterman building.

Final plans have been formulated for the annual Kappa Sig winter "semi-special." The Bowery Brawl. Over-all chairman of the big affair is Ronnie "Elia," ably assisted by Bill Wenning and "C. C." Sylvie. Hobie Cook has been putting the Flora Dora girls through their paces in preparation for the floor show. Everything points to another grand event.

The unpredictable "Lolo," coach of the winning fraternity football squad, almost lost in the towel, after notification of five hour tests in a three day period. Wedding bells will ring someday in the future for Jackie Bull and our own Jack Hurley. Jack is following in the footsteps of John Hryckiewicz, Art Cheney, Jack Mellin, Paul Provost, Ed Tadjewski, and Al Babby.

Sonny Dixon, at present associated with the local office of Tel. & Tel. in the capacity of assistant manager, will be married during the Thanksgiving recess to Jeannette Herman of St. Albans.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

At a banquet for Aggie College students, Brother George Sumner was presented with a scholarship for having the highest scholastic average in his class in his past three years at U.V.M. Nice work, George!

Brother Ken Belding and his "Catacombs" provided excellent music for the Martar Board dance on Friday night. Besides playing the drums, Ken also sang "Don't Blame Me" and tried his hand at slapping a few hot licks on an old trombone. Other Alpha Taus in the band are Dick Pervier and Bob Stanley, trumpets, and Cy Ferland, sax.

With bowling season near at hand, the members of A.T.O. will be out "striking" for the bowling crown for the third straight year.

Now that the rushing campaign is over for awhile, studious Alpha Taus will once more be able to pass their hour exams. Nevertheless, rushing did go off with amazing efficiency; the house looking very impressive, and the rushees being guided throughout by our newly discovered salesmen. The pay-off: a fine group of new pledges.

SIGMA NU

Monday, October 25, Sigma Nu fraternity held an initiation and banquet. Those who entered the fraternity membership as brothers were H. Brown Baldwin, Gordon J. Ballard, Thomas R. Ballard, Dale L. Barber, Bruce B. Bowman, David D. Boyd, Edwin J. Hryckiewicz, Friend H. Jenkins, John R. Milligan, Robert W. Moore, Warren Proctor, Alfred G. Wheeler, and Earle F. Wingate, Jr. The initiation was held at the Sigma Nu house and immediately following it, the banquet was held at the Lincoln Inn, in Essex Junction. Eminent Commander Robert O'Grady was master of ceremonies, and the speakers were James Jennings, head of the U.V.M. Public Relations Department; Asa Bloomer, prominent attorney from Rutland; Norm Boyden, the chapter adviser; and Robert Story, of the Agricultural College faculty.

Saturday, October 30, Sigma Nu played host at a Halloween party. Upon entering the house by a side door, the visitors were relieved of their shoes and started into a tunnel. Owing to the low ceiling of the passage, mattresses were thoughtfully provided on the floor in order to save the knees of the travelers. After a battle up a steep incline, a short crawl through old corn stalks, and a chilly encounter with the hand of a phosphorescent skeleton, the guests found themselves at the top of a long slide. The slide was found to be waxed and to include quite a large bump close to the bottom, but as it was the last obstacle, it was willingly endured. Upon picking themselves up, the weary travelers made out the dim, dark shapes of people dancing and heard the strains of popular music in the next room. After dancing for a time, the call of cider became overwhelming, and a general descent to the bar in the playroom was observed. There, sipping cider and sitting on the sawdust-strewn floor, the blue-jean clad revelers enjoyed the companionship and singing of the old songs. Later, with Tom Snelson as master of ceremonies, an interlude of entertainment was held in the ballroom. There was more singing, with Pete Haslam at the piano, a special number by Jack Steinmetz and Co., and a real old-fashioned "mellerdrama," "Little Nell," presented by Bill Baldwin, Norm O'Grady, Gerry McCormick, and Danny Monieson. ## Bitsa Bunk

Those of us who fall hard will appreciate this one.

A man walked into a butcher store and the following conversation ensued.

"I want a nice beefsteak," he said, "and be sure it's tender."

The butcher raised a slab of meat and remarked: "This one's the best, as tender as a woman's heart."

"Oh, it is, is it," replied the customer, "Then give me the sausage."

Walking into the sumptuous fraternity house, the auctioneer's son looked about. "Do I hear any bids?"

First Student: What'll we do tonight?
Second Student: I'll flip a coin. If it's heads, we go to the dance, tails we go to the show, and if it stands on edge, we'll study.

Campus Cop: Move that car along.
Coed: Don't get fresh, I'm a Delta.
Aforementioned Cop: I don't care if you are a whole peninsula. Move that wreck.

A divinity student named Tweedle, Once wouldn't accept his degree, 'Cause it's tough enough being called Tweedle, Without being Tweedle, D.D.

ing followed, until the stroke of twelve, when the spell was broken by the ending of the party. The chaperones were Major and Mrs. Witherspoon, assisted by our housemother, Mrs. Brauer. Congratulations go to Tom Snelson for his marvelous job as emcee, and to the Social Committee, headed by Doug McSweeney, which worked so hard and successfully.

Sorority Notes

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Tri-Delt welcomed four more "sisters" into its fold Wednesday, November 3: Barbara Preston, Marjorie Leach, Dorothy Rice, and Janet Williams, all class of '51. Corsages of yellow chrysanthemums were presented to the new initiates. After initiation, the Tri-Delts had a banquet at the Olde Board. Menu: Turkey with all the fixings and pie or ice cream for dessert. The girls congregated at the chapter house for singing after the banquet.

Did you notice all the lights at 143 S. Willard St. Friday, October 29? Reason: The Tri-Delt open house. It was a gay affair with "multi" people, much dancing and bridge playing, and cider and popcorn for all.

Tri-Delt Clean-up Week is now in full swing. At any hour of day or night you will find Tri-Delts busy cleaning the cellar, pantries, cupola, raking the lawn, etc.

The girls at the house are preparing to keep warm during the long, cold months ahead at the expense of low marks. The hammering, slamming and banging necessary for putting on storm windows and doors aren't conducive to study. However, the noise doesn't bother Gerry Balich. She made a week-end jaunt to Boston to see Eddie, and she's still walking on the clouds. Also on Boston's visitor list is Norma Stephenson who attended a dietetics meeting the week-end of October 23-24.

PI BETA PHI

Next week marks Pi Phi's fiftieth year on the Vermont campus and anniversary plans are in full swing. Friday, November 19, our regular monthly open house will be an event worth remembering. Faculty and students are herewith extended a personal invitation. On Tuesday, the house will be the scene of a semi-formal dance, just in time to get the holidays off to a good start.

On November 27, Marie Lawlor '48, will be married to Dr. John Corley. Peggy Lawlor, Barbara Picard, Ruth Haigh '48, and Cindy Smith '48, Joyce Foster, and Ellen Page, will be her attendants. A number of the Pi Phis are staying in town for the occasion, with Thanksgiving dinner served in the house.

Gladys Peloquin and Joyce Rolfe were initiated into Pi Phi on November 2.

Congratulations to two wonderful girls.

And last year hasn't been forgotten. The cup Pi Phi won with Theta at the interfraternity sing is now in tangible form. And now with the Ariel out, what more can we ask?

ROBINSON

"When is a dust mop not a dust mop?" When it becomes the head of a horse attending a Halloween party. And under that blanket of blue two girls ably handled the fore and aft positions of said nag! Bathing beauties, gypsy fortune tellers, chubby youngsters of kindergarten appearance, ghostly spooks, a backward Betty, and a life saver with a sieve over her face helped to create an atmosphere of fun and mirth which ghostly stories could not dispel. Apple bobbing, original Robinson Hall songs, fortune telling and games were the order of the evening, Sunday, October 31. Prize for best costume went to Mrs. Constance Cole and Miss Isabel Udall who came to the party as Frankie and Johnnie. Cider, doughnuts and candy rapidly disappeared, when refreshments were announced. Dim lights, Halloween napkins, paper witches, cats, and pumpkins added to the authenticity of the celebration, which was a happy "get-together" for the girls at Robinson Hall.

Bobby Spaulding and Polly McMurdo do not look a bit older, but they were reminded of the fact that they had a birthday recently when the girls ganged up on them and surprised them, pleasantly, of course.

Robinson Hall has started a scrap book to go on and on, down through the ages. It will be fun to come back "home" and look at the pictures, clippings and accounts of what happened "when"—even if it's only two years from now.

CAREERS AT GENERAL ELECTRIC

General Electric is not one business, but an organization of many businesses, offering opportunities in virtually all the professions. Here three G-E men brief the career possibilities for the technical graduate, the mechanical engineer, and the chemical engineer.

TECHNICAL SPECIALISTS: MEET YOUR HOST

M. M. Boring (Colorado), manager of the Technical Personnel Division: It's my job to contact young men who are interested in technical careers and start them through our training programs. This year we have hired more electrical, mechanical and chemical engineers, more chemists and physicists, than ever before.

MECHANICAL ENGINEER

H. P. Kuehni, of the General Engineering and Consulting Laboratory: Much of my work has to do with such hurry-up calculating machines as the differential analyzer. For the engineer with a bent toward mathematics, such machines offer exciting possibilities in problems whose complexities have heretofore discouraged study.

CHEMICAL ENGINEER

Gil Bahn (Columbia), graduate of the G-E Advanced Scientific Program: A graduate of this program wonders which of the company's diverse fields offers the greatest opportunity. My choice was plastics, particularly the manufacture of synthetic phenol, and I'm convinced it's one of the most fascinating jobs I could find.

For further information about a BUSINESS CAREER with General Electric, write Business Training Course, Schenectady—a career in TECHNICAL FIELDS, write Technical Personnel Division, Schenectady, N. Y.

GENERAL ACTIVITIES

IRC

The members of the International Relations Club had a genuine Russian dinner at Southwick, Tuesday evening, November 2. In honor of the occasion, many of the girls dressed up in peasant costume and black boots, while most of the boys were content with just dressing American.

The food was declared excellent by all. It was prepared by Janet Brooks, Helen Schnitnikoff, Barbara Beals and some helpers. Helen supplied some of the recipes and others were found in cook books. Some members tried hard to pronounce the names of the Russian dishes. The menu consisted of: BORSHCH & PIROSHKI; COTLETI, KASHA and SALAD; and KISSEL.

After dinner Phil Adler directed a game of Charades on the subject of current headlines from newspapers. It was quite difficult to guess the name 'Dewey,' even though it was the night of the election.

Following the game, Scott Mahoney led a roundtable discussion on "Democracy or Communism, Room for Both?", which is one of the subjects chosen for the New England Conference of I.R.C.s in early December.

Business meetings are held on Tuesdays at 4.00 p.m. in room 36 Waterman. All members are urged to come, and any others who may wish to join may do so at these meetings.

A Coffee Hour will be coming up shortly, so watch the bulletin boards.

NEWMAN CLUB

Planning for the All-New England Newman Club conference to be held the week-end of December 12 at U.V.M. was the main business of the Newman Club at its second meeting on November 10. Walter Fimian, presided over this gathering, which met in the chapel.

Father Dupont of St. Michael's College spoke to the club following the business meeting. "Voices of the Cathedral" might have been the title of his speech, he said, for it concerned the architecture of the Gothic cathedral, its modifications in structure, and the way they reflected the life of the time. "The voices," Father Dupont said, "speak of the faith, hope, and fear of the people throughout the Church's history; they speak of the gamut of human emotions."

Tracing the structure of the Gothic cathedral back to the Roman era, Father Dupont elaborated then on the modifications and annexations to the basilica during the Dark Ages, when various barbaric tribes ruled many lands in Europe. Through their ignorance regarding stone-lifting for the large arch came the modification of smaller concentric arches over the doors, which today constitute a beautiful feature of the Gothic cathedral.

The masons' limitations with window space caused the partial shutting out of sunlight, and more skilled artisans in later centuries regarded this "air of mystery" as giving atmosphere, so they darkened the churches by choice with the use of stained glass windows. During the Renaissance, when men "didn't want mystery," sunlight was let in, and the church lost for a while the grace unwittingly bestowed to it. Later, however, stained glass again was favored and the art in them was developed to a high point.

In the Dark Ages, fear motivated the people to seek protection from saints. Relics were put into the church walls at first, but when stealing of these relics became predominant, the problem of finding a safe place for them led to another modification in the rear of the cathedral—annexes through which pilgrims might visit the relics.

Father Dupont's speech was enlightening and fascinating, according to many of the Newmanites present at the meeting.

A social hour was enjoyed later at the Soda Fountain.

Valiant Cats Drop Heartbreaker To Middmen

Fourth Quarter Drive Gives Panther Machine Meager 13-12 Verdict

By the Sports Editor

Playing the great football that gave them wins over the New England Conference champions, New Hampshire, and the top small-college team in New York, Union, the Catamounts of the University of Vermont climaxed a successful season by battling a powerful and heavily-favored Middlebury College team to a 13-12 standstill before 7,000 spectators on rain-swept Centennial Field, Saturday.

Aided by some of the most crisp and timely blocking displayed all season, fullback Bob St. Gelais, playing his greatest game at UVM, scored both Cat touchdowns. Bob went over once in the second quarter after he, Hurley and Ballard, with Schofield and Banta clearing the lanes, had moved 65 yards, and again in the third quarter after a fumble recovery by Traverse and a Collier to Ursprung pass put the ball on the one yard line.

Middlebury's touchdowns came as a result of a beautiful 60 yard jaunt by the ancient but agile "Che-Che" Barquin in the second quarter, and a sustained drive in the fourth canto featuring "Jarrin' Jawn" Corbisiero who plunged for the tying score and converted the winning point for the Blue Boys.

Middlebury out-gained Vermont on the ground, and moved the ball around considerably, but savage defensive play by the Cats led by defensive fullback Bill Dempsey, and great punting by Jack Hurley kept the tricky Midd ball carriers bottled up.

Vermont threatened early in the first period. Ursprung jumped on a free ball after a Catamount kick to the Middlebury 45, and Ballard marched around end to the 15 yard line. The Cats moved down to the ten, but here the Panthers held and after an exchange of kicks the quarter ended scoreless.

After the flurry of touchdowns in the second period, Vermont moved once again. Dempsey recovered a Panther fumble and the Cats, with Capt. Hobie Cook and big Ed Comolli opening holes, moved to the ten. But the attack bogged down after a Vermont pass was intercepted. The rains came and the half-time score was 6-6.

Vermont went into a 12-6 lead in the third quarter, and the Cat defensive stiffened to protect the lead. The Panthers were trying, but Jack Hurley kicking a slippery ball into the rain, kept them back on their heels.

Cats Threaten in Closing Minutes

Midd moved out in front in the fourth period on the efforts of their fullback Corbisiero, but with time running out the Cats made a desperate bid to regain the lead. Collier ran the kick-off back to the Midd 40 yard line, but the play was voided by a penalty, and Vermont was shoved back to their own 15. The Green and Gold took to the air, as Collier rifled a short pass to St. Gelais who galloped to mid-field. Hurley pitched to Haddigan on the Midd 35, and the Cats seemed to be rolling. Two line plunges were turned back by the tough Panther forward wall, and the game ended with Vermont in possession of the ball.

Kappa Sigs Capture Touch Football Crown

Main Street Outfit Humbles Phi Sigs 43-26 For Fraternity Title

In the most exciting game of the season the Kappa Sigs downed the Phi Sigs 43-26 for the Intrafraternity Touch Football Championship and thus regained the coveted trophy they had lost in '47. It was a clash between two highly razzle-dazzle unbeaten clubs, and a game in which anything could, and did happen.

The first period was all Kappa Sig as Livingston, York, Kotlarczyk, and Co. built up an early 17-0 lead. The first points came when Mal Mickler passed incomplete from behind his own goal line. Then two plays later in very razzle-dazzle fashion a pass from Ed Kotlarczyk to Hammy Livingston to Stan Fitts netted the first touchdown of the post season tussel. Another safety and a TD pass from Gene York to Hammy Livingston brought the total to 16-0. York passed to Stan Grandfield for the PAT to make it 17-0 as the quarter ended.

The Phi Sigs took the kickoff to open the second period, and after five unsuccessful tries through the air relinquished the ball on downs. The Kappa Sigs first pass was intercepted by Bailey Goldberg and the Phi Sigs had another chance. This time they made it, as four plays later Mal Mickler faded back and passed to Rocky Rothchild in the end zone. The PAT try failed making it 17-6.

Stan Grandfield took the kickoff for the Kappa Sigs and after running to the fifty, passed to Stan Fitts sneaking down the sidelines for another TD. York passed to Syl Sylvies, "The Honolulu Barefoot Boy," for the PAT and the score stood 24-6. The next play brought the exact opposite as Bailey Goldberg looped a long one to Rocky Rothchild in the end zone. Goldberg passed to Stan Brown for the equalizer and the score became 24-13.

The Kappa Sigs took the kickoff back to the twenty-five yard line, but on the first play from scrimmage the ever-alert Bailey Goldberg intercepted. Four plays later he again passed to Rothchild who had sneaked behind the Kappa Sig defense. The Kappa Sigs countered on a pass from Gene York to Syl Sylvies, continuing the point a minute pace and uping the total to 31-19 at halftime.

The second half opened with the Kappa Sigs still rolling. This time it was Stan Grandfield scoring with Hammy Livingston and Ed Kotlarczyk in on the play. To counter the Phi Sigs took the kickoff on the forty-five and after failing with two passes came up with the play of the game. The play went from Goldberg to Mickler to Goldberg to Needleman to Rothchild, giving Rocky 24 of the Phi Sigs 26 points.

The final period saw only one score. This was on a pass from Ed Kotlarczyk to Hammy Livingston making it 43-26 and retiring the trophy to the "Halls of Kappa Sigma" until next fall.

The lineups: Kappa Sigs—Fitts, Grandfield, York, Niemann, Livingston, Lewkovicz, Kotlarczyk, Sylvies. Phi Sigs—Rothchild, Mickler, Brown, Goldberg, Marsa, Needleman.

The scoring: Touchdowns—Rothchild 4, Grandfield 2, Fitts 2, Livingston, Sylvies.

Points after touchdowns—Grandfield 2, Sylvies, Marsa, Brown.

Power-Laden A.T.O.'s Set Torrid Pace As Intermural Bowling Leagues Open

The interfraternity bowling leagues are off to a flying start again with the defending champions, the A.T.O.'s, displaying the most power thus far. The gruelling 49-match schedule extends to January 26, following which the fraternity-independent championship strings will be rolled off. Babe Post, who has been selected as secretary of the leagues, will keep an accurate account of the day to day standings. All competing teams are reminded that the failure of a foul line judge to put in an appearance will cost that fraternity a two-point deduction from the season's total.

A.T.O. 3, Sig Phi 1

After trailing by one point at the end of the first string, the A.T.O.s came roaring back to out-point the Sig Phis 1,051 to 972. Warren Field and Jack Wisner spearheaded the winners while Paul Goulet and Doug Tudhope were the high men for the vanquished.

A.T.O.—Fraser 194, Lines 202, Brown 199, Wisner 223, Field 233.

Phi Delt 4, T.E.P. 0

Dick Long led the Phi Delt to a 940-865 verdict over the T.E.P.s in the second completed game Tuesday evening. The scoring for the losers was fairly evenly divided.

Phi Delt—Schweyer 81, McCracken 74, Linke 195, Dempsey 182, Linsenmeir 201, Long 207.

T.E.P.—Berman 160, Waterman 167, Stone 171, Goodman 184, Irwin 182.

Sig Nus, S.A.E. Win Defaults

In the only other games scheduled for November 9, the Sig Nus and S.A.E.s easily garnered four points as the opposition in both cases failed to show up. However, in compliance with interfraternity rulings, the two teams had to roll off the pair of strings in order to take advantage of the default.

S.A.E.—Dennis 186, Post 199, Combs 189, Astone 189, Courtney 193. Total 956. Sigma Nu—Monieson 189, Wood 178, Snelson 194, Steinmetz 161, Gendron, 186. Total 908.

Kappa Sigs 3, Phi Sigs 1

A strike by anchor man Bill Gilbertson in the final box enabled the Kappa Sigs to squeeze by the Phi Sigs 973 to 967 in the final match of the first week of interfraternity bowling.

Brown led the Phi Sig attack with a respectable 213 while Gilbertson's 223 was high for the winners.

Kappa Sigma—Setien 187, D'Elia 176, Heald 166, Hoskiewicz 221, Gilbertson 223.

Phi Sigma Delta—Thomas 209, Palkowsky 167, Mickler 175, Brown 213, Frank 203.

Fraternity Champions Bomb Buckham 61-31 To Annex Coveted Cup

The first All-Campus Touch Football Championship has been decided—Kappa Sigma ranks supreme.

After being held to a comparatively low first half of 14-6 the "Boys from Main St." really let got in the last half adding 47 more points to their total to down a highly spirited Buckham Hall seven 61-31. Again it was their razzle-dazzle, basketball type of play that did the trick.

Buckham was the first to score. After stopping the Kappa Sigs for five plays they took over on their own ten. Four plays later Richmond passed to Tom Kiniry in the end zone and Livingston, York, Kotlarczyk and Co. were behind for the first time since they lost to the Phi Sigs in last year's post season clash.

Buckham kicked off and then quickly regained the ball on an interception. Three plays later the Kappa Sigs had the ball back again. Stan Fitts then passed to Gene York who was tagged on the three, but on the next play Ed Kotlarczyk looped one to York for the score. The PAT try was good, going from York to Syl Sylvies. The Kappa Sigs scored again in the half as Hammy Livingston passed to Sylvies in the end zone. Again the PAT try was good, making it 14-6 as the half ended.

The second half was all Kappa Sig, with Hammy Livingston shining, by scoring three times. Buckham countered, once on a pass from Bernie Higgins to Ray Misk, once on a play from Bernie Higgins to Misk to Ed Jusinski, and again on a run by Dalt Richmond in the closing minutes, but lacked the ability and experience to cope with the fast moving Kappa Sig attack.

The lineups: Kappa Sigs—Fitts, Grandfield, York, Niemann, Livingston, Kotlarczyk, Sylvies. Buckham — Kiniry, Smith, Jusinski, Richmond, Kendall, Higgins, Misk.

PERFECT SEASON

Freshmen Harriers Overwhelm Panthers For Fourth Straight

By Dick Barker

The freshmen made it an undefeated season by swamping the Middlebury freshman cross-country squad by a perfect score of 15-50. Seven Postmen jogged over the finish line hand in hand to tie for first place and sew up the meet. Timed at 16.58 Bob Caswell, Lou Williams, Murray Lyon, George Rowell, Kurt Shindler, Clarence Fagan and Bob Farrell made it look easy as they all finished in first place. Second place, but the eighth man to cross the wire, went to Middlebury's Ed Gable in 17.02. Although Vermont could not improve her score, Alan Bronner, Dick Randall and Wally Reed finished in the first eleven positions. The Middlebury yearlings finally got some men into the scoring as Crump, Gleason and Thompson managed to trot into the finish line shoot in 12th, 13th, and 14th places. Thus the Postmen racked up their fourth straight win of the year as against no defeats. Never hard pressed, the freshmen richly deserved their wins. Next year Vermont can look to an even brighter season as Caswell and Co. move up to fill in the varsity squad.

POSTMEN HUMBLE MIDD HARRIERS FOR STATE TITLE

By Bill Matthews

The Catamount harrier squad regained the state championship in cross-country here Friday afternoon by outrunning a strong Middlebury team in a nip and tuck dual meet by the score of 25-32. Jim Newman of Middlebury and John Bellows and Earle Randall of Vermont all finished in record-breaking time. Newman's winning time of 21:01.5 eclipsed the former course record set by Fred Webster of Vermont here in a meet against Dartmouth back in 1942 by over 30 seconds. Webster's record was 21:35. John Bellows in second place with 21:23 and Earle Randall in third with 21:29 also bettered the old record.

Running under near-perfect conditions with a slight zip in the air and no wind, it was the superior team strength of Vermont that spelled victory. Finishing strongly behind Bellows and Randall to assure the win for Vermont were Jim Porter, Frank Peabody, Jake Bailey, and El Wolcott in the 5, 7, 8, and 9 positions respectively. Moran, Pierce, Arms, and Flanders finished well up in the pack to complete the scoring for the Green and Gold.

The Middlebury meet brought to a close a very successful season for Coach Archie Post's hill and dalers. Vermont's record was three wins in six meets against some of the better small college cross-country teams in the East. Captain Randall and his teammates deserve a lot of credit for turning in such an impressive record.

The summary of the meet and official times follow: 1 Newman (M) 21:01.5*; 2 Bellows (V) 21:23†; 3 Randall (V) 21:29†; 4 Dale (M) 21:41; 5 Porter (V) 22:05; 6 Gore (M) 22:23; 7 Peabody (V) 22:26; 9 Wolcott (V) 22:52; 10 Perryman (M) 23:07.

Wrestling Matches Between Fair Sexes Excite Local Fans

The other night at Memorial Auditorium, a wrestling exhibition was staged between Juanita Little Bear and May de Simms. This bout between the lady wrestlers was advertised as a "battle of beauties," in keeping with the tradition of certain magazines who picture a beautiful woman on the cover as a further inducement to the public to patronize their product. The public turned out in full force and overflowed the small arena to the point where there were more people standing than had seats.

In the ring, the fact that the female wrestlers can be called women, is probably the greatest compliment they can ever receive. Juanita had the cute habit of grabbing her opponent by the hair and banging her head against the knot which ties the ropes together. This is what is known as a "crowd pleaser." Unfortunately her opponent, after a while, could not return the head banging and was forced to just sit on Juanita's head, which further contributed to Little Bear's cauliflower ears. However, Juanita Little Bear emerged victorious due to a series of skillful maneuvers, such as throwing the other contestant out of the ring onto a hard concrete floor, and massaging the helpless girl's gums with her feet.

If a situation should ever present itself where you have a free Thursday, drop into Memorial and have yourself an evening of relaxation and laughs. The match is usually between a hero and a villain, and you pick the hero because of your moral upbringing. You watch your favorite take a beating for awhile, but then emerge victorious. While watching the matches, you get a chance to let off excess steam, which otherwise would be spent on the authors of your textbooks.

INTERMURAL SIDELIGHTS

By Bob Herriott

Kudos to the Kappa Sigs—Here's to the Kappa Sigs for their undefeated, All-Campus Championship, season. A few basketball players certainly come in handy in a game like this, don't they?

Hail Buckham—Congratulations to Tom Kiniry and his Buckham Hall aggregation. Last year the dorms were the sore spot of the league setups, but this year, thanks to a few active tutors and some sports-loving freshmen, they really held their own. Those Buckham boys showed more spirit and ability than many a fraternity team and they certainly deserve a pat on the back for the job they did. Here's hoping they keep up the good work through the rest of the year.

A word to the wise should be sufficient—Much comment has been sent in this direction during the past season in regard to the inefficiency of the official system. The system was to have been an honor (give and take affair), but it seems that most of the fraternities on campus aren't quite ready for such a system—everybody was taking but only a few thought it any responsibility to do any giving. A hearty thanks to those few who gave—abusement to those who didn't.

Everybody's doing it—It wouldn't be a collegiate football season without an All-American team, so how could it be an intramural season without an All-Campus team. How's this? Bill Spreen of the Phi Dels for his campus leading total of 51 points scored; Gene York, Hammy Livingston, and Ed Kotlarczyk for their passing, running, and scoring in leading the Kappa Sigs to the Campus Championship; Bailey Goldberg and Mal Mickler for their outstanding play in bringing the Phi Sigs through to the runner-up spot; and Bernie Higgins for the fine showing he and his Buckham teammates made in winning the dormitory league title.

That's all for now. Don't Forget Those Bowling Dates! ! !

George's Wife Goes to the Game Or—Why Husbands Grow Grey

By "Bish"

George's wife had never been to a football game. And it never occurred to George that she might someday want to see a football game. But she was as normal as any other woman—unpredictable as the weather.

So, one lovely Saturday afternoon Myrtle decided it was time she found out just what the magnetic force was behind these Saturday afternoon excursions. She knew George would be more than willing to take her along. After all, it was only a football game.

Now George was a peaceful sort of fellow, so cheerfully (though forced to a certain extent) he fell victim to her wish. In no time at all Myrtle was fluttering about from one closet to another and finally blossomed out in an outrageous looking outfit which, in her opinion, seemed to be the appropriate apparel for such an occasion. George knew better but said nothing.

Basically, Myrtle didn't know the difference between a football and a cueball, but she knew George would be more than willing to explain everything that she didn't understand. George was so good that way! But George didn't know it.

George stumbled his way through the crowd 'til he found a couple of seats. The teams were still out on the field warming up, and, although the game hadn't started, Myrtle had.

"George, what are all those white lines on the ground for?"

"Those are the yard lines, dear. The field is 100 yards long and each one marks off five yards."

"Those players wearing white pants are going to get awfully dirty aren't they, dear?"

"They aren't players, dear, they are the officials. Watch closely, now, the game's going to begin."

"Well, what are they all lined up like that for? That team over on that side isn't playing fair. They're all lined up together."

"Yes, dear, I know, but that's the way they do it when they kick off."

"When they kick what off?"

"The football, dear. See that funny shaped ball in the middle? That's a football. One team kicks off to the other and they try to carry it over the other team's goal. The team that does it the most times wins the game."

"George, why do they always crowd around each other like that every time before they run with the ball? I shouldn't think they'd be allowed to have dice out there when they're playing football."

"Dear! They don't have any dice out there! That's a huddle and they decide what play they're going to use."

"Well! I should think they'd know what they were going to do before they got out there! Oh, George! That player's throwing the ball. That's not fair! He's supposed to run with it! Oh, well, that other fellow didn't catch it anyway. Good enough for him."

"Myrtle, dear. That was a forward pass. They can do that in football. They can even kick it if they want to."

"Well, why do they bother to run with it when they could just kick and throw it over the goal? This game seems awfully foolish to me."

"Myrtle, darling, they can't kick it over the goal. They only kick when they haven't anymore downs left and then the other team takes over the ball. Then if they can't make ten yards in four downs, the other team tries again."

"George—what's a down?"

"My dear—, when one team runs, kicks, passes, fumbles or does anything with the ball once—that's a down. Please let me watch the game, dear. I'll explain everything to you when we get home."

"That team that has the ball now has had more than four downs. Those officials aren't watching the game very close. I think they want that team to win."

"Now listen, dear, everytime a team makes ten yards before they have used up their four downs they get four more downs. Do you see now?"

"Gosh, this is fun! You know, George, I think I'll come to all the games with you. What's that fellow with the white pants doing now, George?"

"One of the players was caught holding, dear. He's getting a 15-yard penalty."

"Well, every time somebody holds the fellow running with the ball he doesn't get a penalty for it."

"No, my dear, he doesn't. I'll tell you all about it when we get home. Now watch, they're going to punt."

"They're going to what?"

"Kick, dear. They're going to kick the ball to the other team because it's their fourth down—they're deep in their own territory and they didn't make ten yards on their first three downs."

"I thought you said each team had four tries to make ten yards."

"Yes, dear. I did tell you that. They do have four downs—but they have to use one of them to kick in case they don't make the ten yards. Oh! What a beautiful kick!"

"I don't think it was any better than that other fellow's on the other side, George! They all look so cute in those big uniforms, don't they, George! Oh, dear! All the players are walking away. Is the game over?"

"No, darling, it's only the half."

"Half of what? George! Wait for me! Where are you going?"

"Home!! I'll tell you all about it when we get there!"

sus would say "employing base criticism where respect is due."

Whoops! What's that parked up there on the Science Hall roof? Great Caesar's Ghost! If it isn't el Senor Raol Smith's red wagon which he insists is an airplane. Doesn't he realize that if a Chemistry student is blown through the roof, he might crumple the fenders on the way up?

"What did you say, Red?"

"I said I took off without my parachute. What do I do now?"

"Keep your flight jacket on my good man. I'll run over to the trailer camp and borrow a flight manual."

Well, while we are awaiting further developments in this exciting drama, let us see what else we can find. Jeepers! Look at all those high class jobs. You know surprisingly enough, ye old campus is honored by the presence of only a very few jalopies. (Oops! there's that word again.) Derelicts? No! Crates? Heaven forbid! Well, whatever they are, it makes me sort of sad not to see 'em more often. Ah me! a piece of tin, four wheels, a suggestion of a motor, and two dozen students happily singing "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here." Now they glide around town in a shiny streamlined boat mournfully singing "Hail to thee, College spirit, will thou ever be as thou wert."

Epilogue

Atop the Science Hall roof a young man can be seen feverishly making adjustments on a brilliant red object which bears a slight resemblance to an automobile. On the ground below, a passer-by rudely taunts our hero with sardonic chuckles and shouts of "Get a horse!" Suddenly is heard the roar of a powerful engine. The young man hops into the cockpit, adjusts his goggles and taxis down the ridgepole for the take-off. Then with a revengeful gleam in his eyes, our hero opens the throttle and dives at a sickening pace straight for the now terrified intruder. There follows in rapid succession the sound of a stifled scream, a resounding crash and the sight of startled birds craning their necks to see pieces of the passer-by go passing by.

W.A.A. Notes

By Ruth Warrell

The end of the fall season of W.A.A. is almost here; in fact, girls, you have until November 19 to finish your credits. Tournaments and playoffs will be held between November 19 and 29. Then we are ready to start the clubs for the first winter season, so be thinking of the clubs that are available and the one that you would like to join next season.

All Sports, the honorary organization of W.A.A., has had its initial meeting for election of officers and to start activities for the coming year. Dorcas Hadwen was elected president with Nancy Tobey as secretary. One topic of their discussion period was the traditional jacket given to All Sports members. We shall hear more about their final decision later. Of special news to the upperclass girls is the fact that All Sports is planning to send each girl a letter about the new point system and stating how each girl stands for acquired points and the number of points that will be required to get this year's award. A big item of business was the Penny Carnival that comes around in February. The eight girls are dividing all the work amongst themselves for this big occasion in the winter. The committees have been chosen as follows: Co-chairmen (general), Dorcas Hadwen and Jan Brackenridge; Social, Mary MacBratney; Dance Manager, Jane Smith; Cashier, Nancy Tobey; Publicity, Pat Brush; Booths, Mary Andrews and Martha Wood. So you can see that All Sports is off to a big start. It's worth trying for, girls.

Student Government meets every Monday afternoon. If any student is interested in taking an active part in the proceedings or is merely inquisitive, plan to attend. The room assignment board near the Alumni office will carry the necessary information.

Points After

Coach Evans and the boys can rank the game along with New Hampshire and Union. It was a tough one to lose, but they met the best and gave them but a single point. . . . Coach Kasap did a great job with the forward wall this season. . . . Bob French and Bob Neuburg both '49, leave the football ranks. . . . Stan Ureprung is captain-elect for '49-'50. . . . Middlebury College has a fine football team—they beat Vermont—and at no time have we attempted to discredit them. "The Hired Hands" was meant as an editorial jest—nothing more. Congratulations to the Blue on a great season. . . . Hobie Cook and George MacDonald were playing Saturday over the protest of "Doc" Collins. . . . The Catamounts left their mark on small-college New England football this season—a good football team.

Pigskin Review - - -

By Mort Kaufman

"They came; they saw; they conquered," but not before Middlebury's vaunted football team gave its last ounce of ability to defeat fighting Vermont last Saturday, and thereby put the lid on this 1948 football season for the state schools.

St. Michael's journeyed to Northfield and defeated the Cadets 19-0 and as a result, won the two state contests without defeat. Middlebury also was undefeated in state competition. Mythical Vermont co-champions for the current season were the Panthers and Knights, but a practical vote to Middlebury as the best team in the state with UVM a close second.

During the last few weeks the national football picture has changed considerably as a result of the upsets and near defeats of many of the major football teams. "If Harry can do it so can we!" has been the password of the underdogs of the nation, William and Mary, Tennessee and Santa Barbara, to name a few, have all played the role in grand style on Saturday's gridirons. Near defeats have been more numerous, and it goes without saying that the '48 season has been one of the most unpredictable many years.

The only undefeated major football elevens at this date are Army, Notre Dame, Clemson, Michigan, and Penn. State. A few big games remain; Army-Navy, Georgia-Georgia Tech, Penn-Cornell, and Ohio State-Michigan before the Bowl Games terminate the greatest football season in the history of the game.

Fifteen Hundred Throng To EE Open House; Colorful Debate Tourney Enlightens Campus

EE Open House Shows Power Station Set Up "Gay Nineties" Style

On Friday evening and Saturday afternoon 1,500 students, Burlingtonians, and visitors on the campus were guests of the electrical engineering department at its first post-war open house. The open house was held in the Waterman Building power laboratory in the basement and the communications laboratory on the third floor.

One of the main attractions was the power station of the Gay Nineties, which included a generating unit of that period supplying a number of early American motors, Edison electric lights and a carbon arc light. The station was operated by an old-timer garbed in tails, spats, winged-tipped collar and black derby.

The ego of many beautiful women was shattered when they observed themselves in a mirror which was supplied with rays from a mercury-arc lamp. Everyone who dared to look saw their countenance take the appearance of a Frankenstein as horrible as any Hollywood could conjure.

A display which proved interesting to homemakers and bread winners as well, was the wattmeter which recorded cost per hour of operating home appliances. In this demonstration the cost of operating various appliances such as a refrigerator, vacuum cleaner, toaster, etc., simultaneously was also demonstrated.

In the communications laboratory, many people were able to make and hear recordings of their own voice, hear and see a television broadcast and watch a Geiger counter record the presence of radio-active material such as radium and uranium.

The odor of frying eggs and bacon attracted the guest to the experiments with induction. All the cooking took place from a pan placed on a cold surface, receiving heat by induction. By the same process fluorescent lamps were lighted without any physical contact to an electric source.

This open house was the first since 1942 but the electrical engineering staff plan to make this an annual function of the department.

THE HOST: UVM's CRACK DEBATING TEAM

STUDENTS NEED WSSF IN CHINA

Calling the Nationalist forces of Chiang Kai-Chek corrupt and terroristic, Dr. Liu Laing-Mo speaking in behalf of W.S.S.F., Thursday, November 18 at Waterman said it was natural that the thinking people of China should take a stand with the Communists instead of aligning themselves with despotic forces of Chiang.

He also emphasized that the students of China are often called communistic and are persecuted to points of great torture by the Nationalists. Doctor Laing-Mo, who worked with the Chinese guerrillas during the war told of the need for funds for the students in China and indicated that their fight against Chiang's forces was a true barometer of what the people were thinking.

Doctor Laing-Mo is a member of the traveling staff of the World Student Service Fund and is making a tour of Eastern colleges urging aid for Chinese students.

Phi Sigma Delta Wins Coveted Interfraternity '47-'48 Traynor Trophy

Phi Sigma Delta, having accumulated the most points in interfraternity competition, was awarded the Traynor Trophy as the most outstanding fraternity on campus. Charles Traverse, on behalf of Key and Serpent, presented the coveted trophy during the annual Football Hop.

The Traynor Trophy is undoubtedly the highest honor a fraternity can receive at UVM. It is awarded yearly to the fraternity that has emerged tops in athletics, social events, and scholastic standing in interfraternity competition.

The trophy was first presented in 1930, in memory of Edward L. ("Pie") Traynor '32, captain elect of the baseball team, who was fatally injured in an accident. The fraternity to which the prized cup is presented retains possession for the entire year.

During the college year, points are given to the winners of the various interfraternity competitions and campus functions. The trophy is bestowed upon that fraternity which amasses the greatest number of points.

During the past year, Phi Sigma Delta won first place in interfraternity touch football and volleyball. Scholastically, they garnered the highest fraternity average for two of the three quarters. The Phi Sigs also copped second with their Kake Walk skit, and ranked high in the relay and track meets.

This is the second time in the past three years of competition for the trophy that Phi Sig has been the recipient of the Traynor Trophy.

Vermont Debaters Win Twenty-Five Contests In Annual Tournament

Vermont's debaters, winning 25 out of their 40 contests, made a fine record in the Third Annual Vermont Invitational Debate Tournament which was held here November 19 and 20. A total of 188 debates took place in the two-day program which was sponsored by the UVM department of speech and dramatics.

Vermont had ten teams entered, two of which won all four of their debates, while three teams piled up three wins with but one defeat. Unfeated were Lindley Hartwell and Jean True, Tom Hayes and Stan Golden. Those compiling three wins were Mary Fuller and Pauline Wescott, John Howard and Richard O'Connell, Howie Aaron and Mal Severance. Other UVM speakers making a good showing were Patsy Schweyer and Barbara Gale, Bruce Stargott and Lionel Rothkrug, Helene Shapiro and Margaret Fisher, Don Kane and Albert Bingham, Hugo Squires and Joe Levin.

Among the 31 schools which were represented here, Bates and McGill made the best showings with two undefeated teams each. Other colleges with pairs who went through unscathed were Colby, Maine, Navy, Penn State, Wesleyan, Middlebury, Rutgers, and St. Lawrence. The "Congressional Session" which was held Saturday evening in the City Hall Auditorium saw all 232 debaters meet together to discuss five resolutions dealing with the general topic of education. After two hours of floor debate, the following two were adopted:

"Resolved, that all college students should have courses in the liberal arts, including humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences." "Resolved, that tax exemption privileges be denied colleges and universities having quota systems based on race or religion."

An added feature of the tournament were two radio discussion programs. WCAX and WJOY each presented half-hour discussions by students taking part in the tournament, on the question of financing the American educational system.

TROPHY PRESENTATION

CONSTRUCTION BOGDOWN

Dean Mary Simpson Advises Freshman Women On Sororities

Miss Mary Jean Simpson, Dean of Women, advised the freshman women as to the whys and wherefores of sororities at the mass meeting held November 17 by the Pan Hellenic Council, preliminary to rushing. Miss Simpson said that, although sororities have abused their privileges on some campuses, there has never been a time when the U.V.M. administration has had occasion to criticize sororities as a whole. She went on to say that the advantage of belonging to a sorority is the richness of experience one gets out of associating with people with whom one has a common bond. "Through the loyalty to the group there grows a larger loyalty to the University," she stressed.

"Whereas to belong to a sorority is a happy feeling for many, it is not essential to a successful campus life," Miss Simpson said. She advised freshman women not too get too excited and nervous during rushing since the large enrollment has created a problem which only the establishment of another strong national sorority on campus will solve." Many girls will not be selected simply because there is not room in the sororities to absorb them, even though they would make good sorority members," she said. The Dean of Women also asked the freshmen to evaluate both themselves and their financial status before joining a sorority. She said there is, of course, monetary expense to joining a sorority but the most important thing to realize is that, like anything of great value, a sorority expects a great deal of its members. "Before joining," she cautioned, "make sure that you are willing to uphold the traditions of womanhood, scholarship and ethics of a sorority and are willing to sacrifice some of your individuality."

Miss Simpson's final words of advice to the freshman women were, "Go through rushing with a mature attitude and do your own thinking. Get just enough excited, but not too much."

Following Miss Simpson's talk, Adele Kaye, president of the Pan-Hellenic Council, introduced members of the council who explained different phases of rushing to the freshmen. Jane Atwood outlined the function and organization of the Pan-Hellenic Council. Polly Klein explained the financial obligation of joining a sorority. Betsy Bigelow defined the rushing party system. Rosemary Traynor explained the signing up procedure.

Pre-Thanksgiving Turkey Trot Dance Opens Festivities

Staff and Sandal's "Turkey Trot," which was held last Saturday night in the gymnasium at 9 o'clock, served a dual purpose; that of welcoming the weekend debaters and starting UVMers off to a pre-Thanksgiving celebration.

Under the chairmanship of Rae Mac-Tiernan, the Staff and Sandal girls prepared the gym for the dance and contracted John Eddy and his eight piece band, the New Vermonters, to furnish the music.

Decorations were in black, red and white, under the directions of Louise Gee and Phyllis Barron. Life-size silhouettes of the traditional Thanksgiving Pilgrim and turkey were featured, while around the gym were seen various smaller turkeys and other evidences of the holiday spirit. A large poster bearing the words "Turkey Trot" hung vividly above the band.

Publicity for the dance was done by a committee consisting of Doris Jones, Millie Joslin, Katherine Kidder and Harriet Gregory. On the receiving end of the coast was Lillian Cotoir with Jean Hurlburt in charge of refreshments. Jean Ritchie arranged for the sale of tickets; Jerry Goetz secured the chaparrones who were Professor and Mrs. S. Willard and Mr. and Mrs. W. Riddell. Jerry also furnished the large "Turkey Trot" poster.

Staff and Sandal is the junior women's honorary society founded in 1939. Their members are recognized by the small silver pin representing Mercury's winged sandal.

University Band Adds Musical Background For Home Games

A football game just wouldn't be a football game without the added excitement of a band in the background playing the school song to the accompaniment of the blended voices of the eager fans cheering lustily as the grid squad runs out on the field. Especially a U.V.M. football game! We were quite lucky to boast such a classy outfit as appeared at the Middlebury game. Did you notice how the band formed a large "V" and "M" while playing the Middlebury song? Next the "V" and "M" faced each other and marched toward the center of the gridiron, now transformed to a drill field, where they proceeded to crash and mill around. Then another large "V" was formed to the strains of "Vermont Victorious." After this spectacular display, the band filed off the field—all in perfect timing!

But providing added thrills at the games is not the only function of the U.V.M. band. If you were at the Armistice Day Parade, you saw the familiar blue and white section marching through Burlington's main streets, preceded by the twirlers dressed in white.

With the coming of winter there is the annual Winter Concert and of course we wouldn't have the Kake Walk without Joe and the boys to strike up "Cotton Babes"—which reminds us—a new waxing of "Cotton Babes" and "Vermont Victorious" will be cut soon and on sale around the first of January... definitely a must for your record collection.

In the spring, the entire band has a holiday and spends a week-end at some point of interest chosen by the members.

The band, directed by Dr. Joseph Lechnyr, has a membership of eighty-three, not including the six twirlers. Here is some of the personnel: Drum Major and Manager, Bob Ray '50; Assistant Managers, John Dubuc '52, Ralph Jeffs '51, Marcel Trotter '52, and Sanford Epstein '51; Librarian, Marcel Trotter '52; Twirlers, Pat Doyle '49, Nancy Pearson '50, Pat Brush '49, Jean MacLaughlin '50, and Patsy Schwyer '50. New twirlers to replace the present seniors on the squad will be selected in January and by next year, there will be a grand membership of well over one hundred playing pieces.

Band awards are something to work for too. There are green and gold seven-inch chenille letters, with a lyre embroidered in at the vertex of the "V" for the men; and for the girls, there are five-inch letters.

FACULTY ADDITION

Hayles, British Columbian,
Joins Engineering Department

Every year, with the great influx of new students there comes a proportionate number of new instructors. Everyone, at a school the size of UVM, cannot possibly expect to become acquainted with all the new faces arriving each year. By having a slight acquaintance through this article of a new instructor, the CYNIC hopes that one more step will be made for the closer relations of student and faculty.

The electrical engineering department on third floor Waterman received Mr. Oliver John Hayles this year into its sparkling atmosphere. Coming from England at the age of ten, Mr. Hayles lives in Chilliwach, British Columbia. A graduate of the University of British Columbia in 1943, he took graduate work at McGill, and upon completion of his thesis, he will receive his masters, presumably next fall. He is interested in communications engineering, and has had experience in both radio and development work.

This is Mr. Hayles first year of teaching, and although, he has had only two months to form a decision, the newcomer believes that he is going to like Vermont quite well. The new instructor is pleased to find exceptionally good equipment at his disposal, especially the electrical laboratory in the Waterman basement.

Although Mr. Hayles was deliberative on many of his answers, he appeared most sincere in every manner. In response to his opinion of the school he said very neatly, "I like UVM; I really do."

He brings with him to Burlington a wife and a six-months-old baby boy. Having some difficulty in obtaining accommodation in town, he is staying at Malletts Bay, and commutes by car.

With his combination of a pleasant personality and warm friendliness Mr. Hayles will surely be admired by all who become associated with him at Vermont.

Tri-Delts Sponsor
Fall Fashion Show
For Benefit Fund

Flash! Colossal fashion show featuring ski clothes coming up! Vital statistics:

Time: December 1, at 7 p.m.

Place: Southwick Ballroom.

Theme: "Fall and Winter Fashions of 1949."

Admission: 40c. (Tickets can be purchased at Waterman, the Bee Hive, and the door.)

Models: Liz Barber

Lucy Thornton

Barb Fradenburg

Janet Williams

Janie Smith

Clare Mickler

Ann O'Donnell

Alice Streeter

Barbara Whitney

Chips Holden

These queenly Tri-Delts will model the Bee Hive's latest styles for the ski slopes under the direction of Mrs. Florence Tudhope. And will they model the "fireside fashions" to be worn after a hard day of skiing? Of course.

Falling in line with the featuring of ski clothes will be the showing of Brud Stratton's ski movies of the 1948 Olympics.

The girls are very fortunate in having their housemother, Miss Katherine Gutchell, who is well known in Vermont music circles, play for the big fashion showing. This will be of special interest to residents of Burlington, because Miss Gutchell has not made any public appearances in recent years.

The Tri-Delts are sponsoring the Fashion Show for the benefit of the Tri-Delt scholarship fund. This is now a national fund open to any college girl. Now, arrangements are being made to establish a local scholarship fund open to any girl on the U.V.M. campus.

EUROPEAN REFUGEE

Ingrid Anshlinger, Sophomore
Coed, Tells Vivid Life Story

"My German professor expects too much of me," were the plaintive words of Ingrid Anshlinger, U.V.M.'s latest European refugee. This was an odd statement, coming from a person who has spent all her early life speaking German as her native tongue. Further investigation showed however, the reasonableness of it all. In the first place, Ingrid never spoke "college" German, but only Swiss German, and in the second, she is taking the advanced German literature course which would be as difficult to a native-speaking German as an advanced English literature course is to a native-speaking Englishman.

Of course, there may be still another reason for this strange deficiency. Ingrid isn't straight from the Old Country. If the words, "European refugee" conjured up some mal-nourished, neurotic person with a gutteral accent, let me disillusion you. For Ingrid Anshlinger has been in this country since she was eleven. When she first arrived here from Europe in 1941 she was sent immediately to a boarding school in Carmel, N. Y., where she lost all traces of her German accent. From here she went to Western Reserve College in Cleveland, but when her mother moved to Manchester, Vt., last May, Ingrid transferred to U.V.M.

Although Ingrid's father, a European hotel man, is German, thus bestowing a German citizenship on Ingrid, she has never lived in Germany. Her mother is a Swiss citizen and Ingrid lived all her earlier life in Zollikon near the city of Zurich in Switzerland. Here she lived quietly, with her mother and father, until the war. At this time Ingrid was in the fifth grade. At first her family had thought that they might stay in Switzerland which was neutral, but finally they escaped from Lisbon. Ingrid still remembers, quite vividly, that flight and even more vividly her arrival in the States. The family was landed and briefly imprisoned on Ellis Island for immigration purposes. Ingrid still remembers the bitter irony of seeing the Statue of Liberty on nearby Bedlow Island, through the bars of their cell.

Here at U.V.M., Ingrid is enrolled as a sophomore. However, she is only going to attend two years here. When she has attained the prerequisite training she is going into an occupational therapy school.

Every summer Ingrid gets further training in her field by serving as a handicraft instructor at summer camps. She likes to do all sorts of things such as weaving, silver, copper or metallic craft, leather working, wood carving, etc., a talent which is probably inherited through her mother who is an amateur artist of some talent. Besides these interests Ingrid has always liked to ski and skate, learning how in the Swiss Alps. She prefers tennis above all sports, indoors or out.

Ingrid has not broken all her connections with Germany however. She still has an aunt who lives in the Black Forest district of Germany just across the border from Zurich. She also has an uncle who lives in South America and her brother is attending the University of California.

And the noted throat specialists who examined the throats of these smokers each week—a total of 2470 careful examinations—reported not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking Camels!

Make the Camel mildness test. Test Camels yourself for 30 days in your own "T-Zone". . . T for Taste and T for Throat. Let YOUR OWN TASTE tell you about the rich, full flavor of Camel's choice tobaccos—so carefully aged and expertly blended. Let YOUR OWN THROAT tell you the wonderful story of Camel's cool, cool mildness.

You'll enjoy the test...every puff of it. You'll enjoy Camels.

Money-Back Guarantee!

Try Camels and test them as you smoke them. If, at any time, you are not convinced that Camels are the mildest cigarette you ever smoked, return the package with the unused Camels and we will refund its full purchase price, plus postage. (Signed) R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

According to a Nationwide survey:

MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS THAN ANY OTHER CIGARETTE

Doctors smoke for pleasure, too! And when three leading independent research organizations asked 113,597 doctors what cigarette they smoked, the brand named most was Camel!

Journalism v. Censorship

Millions of Americans will pause a moment in their deliberations tomorrow to give thanks to God for the blessings bestowed upon them during the past year. Everyone living within the spacious realms of the United States certainly has a great deal to be thankful for—a mere fleeting glimpse of the dilemma overshadowing the rest of the world clearly illustrates this factor.

How the nuclear staffs of scores of college papers can proudly bow their heads in prayer is indeed baffling. For the administrations and high student campus organizations heap so much pressure and faculty control upon the editors that the contents of these publications reek with restricted censorship odors. The editors, cowering in awe at the Pontius Pilate tactics of their adversaries, do not evidently have a single ounce of gumption to strike back. Once this stagnancy infiltrates into the channels of the college paper, the germs multiply in ever increasing proportions until the last traces of true journalism disappear.

We are especially thankful that the administration and Student Government have pursued a praiseworthy course in the past with respect to CYNIC control. This newspaper has been endowed with the privilege of printing the straight news, not merely a restatement of a restatement, forced into the columns by the Klu Kluxian tactics of certain hooded figures. We trust that the administration will continue to be liberal with the CYNIC in the future—a reversal of that policy merely serves to uproot the very foundations upon which the CYNIC proudly bases its heritage.

The Shining Light

The students of the University of Vermont will watch with interest the current rebuttals by city officials to the city manager plan as proposed by Prof. Andrew Nquist at a Chamber of Commerce meeting last week. Burlington's mayor has already launched his attack and is vigorously defending the mayor-alderman system of government.

Political science students may have the opportunity to see the two ideas of city managership and mayor-council which have been theoretical parts of their study of government, clearly outlined in the current publicity.

The CYNIC uses the word "may" because of the local press. The minute Mayor Moran mentioned that the Free Press Association opposed the present mayor-alderman system it became possible that the Daily News might swing behind Moran and make what might be a logical discussion of administration become a highly geared attack against "professors and their plans."

In other words a newspaper rivalry may supplant what could be an informative group of facts for the public. If the discussion is still a major topic after U.V.M. returns from Thanksgiving vacation the CYNIC will print essences of both arguments with editorial evaluations.

The Editor's Column

Just two short years ago, a member of the University of Vermont faculty, who was running in the Vermont Republican primary for the coveted seat in the United States House of Representatives, during one of his campaign speeches assailed the federal aid to China program because, in his estimation, the Chiang Kai Shek regime was corrupt. In spite of the fact that the speaker had taught school in China for a number of years, and thereby had first hand information at his disposal, cries of Communism floated skyward from a few arm chair generals, whose sole source of data was gathered from the cackling of others.

Dr. Liu Laing-Mo of the travelling staff of W.S.S.F. spoke to the local group last Thursday on the relations of the Chinese students to the fund. Ironically enough, he pointed out that forces of Chiang were feared incessantly by the Chinese people (especially students) because of their corrupt and terroristic practices. Need more be said!

500 Engineering Jobs Open in N.Y.S.D.P.W.

The New York State Department of Public Works has immediate openings for more than 500 new engineering and architectural personnel in positions ranging in salary from $1,725 to $8,537 a year. Vacancies exist in not only the Department's Main Office in Albany but also in its ten District Offices located in Albany, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Hornell, Watertown, Poughkeepsie, Binghamton and Babylon.

In announcing the list of vacancies, Bertram D. Tallany, State Superintendent of Public Works, said, "Here is a double barreled opportunity for qualified workers who wish to enter civil service—a chance for employment with good pay and security and at the same time an important role in helping to build a 20th Century highway system for our motorized economy. It is an opportunity of a lifetime.

While most of the higher paid titles require graduation from engineering colleges, a large number of present vacancies can be filled by men with only high school education and a real interest in engineering and highway construction.

Titles in which vacancies presently exist and the starting salaries for each, including current cost of living bonuses, are: Chief Building Mechanical Engineer, $8,537; Assistant Civil Engineer, $4,242; Assistant Civil Engineer (Design), $4,242; Assistant Architect, $4,242; Assistant Architectural Estimator, $4,242; Assistant Heating and Ventilating Engineer, $4,242; Assistant Soils Engineer, $4,242; Assistant Building Structural Engineer, $4,242; Assistant Hydraulic Engineer, $4,242.

Other vacancies are: Photographer, $3,036; Senior Engineering Aid, $2,898; Senior Draftsman, $2,898; Junior Engineering Aid, $2,070; Junior Draftsman, $2,070; Junior Mechanical Draftsman, $2,070; Laboratory Worker, $1,955; Engineering Helper, $1,794; Laboratory Helper, $1,725.

Persons wishing to apply for any of these positions should apply by letter or in person to the Department's Main Office in the State Office Building, Albany, or at any of its ten District Offices.

Privately Endowed Colleges v. State Universities

A pilot study of the organization and operation of a privately endowed coeducational university which will serve as a model for other American universities and colleges of the same type, as contrasted with the excessively large government-financed state universities, will get under way shortly at Bucknell University.

The survey will be made by a well-known firm of management consultants in business and educational activities, according to President Herbert L. Spencer. "We want to make sure that Bucknell's organization and operation are the best that can be achieved by a university of our size," he said in his announcement.

Dr. Spencer pointed out that educators are becoming increasingly alarmed over the tremendous governmental expenditures in the larger state universities, tending to point in the direction of federally-controlled education and hence federally-controlled public opinion.

"In many respects, higher education in the United States is at the crossroads," he said. "The issue is clearly drawn between the privately endowed institutions such as Bucknell and centrally-controlled government agencies which may tend to dictate educational as well as political philosophies and policies, thus running counter to the American ideal."

Women Make Gains in Field of Medicine

A few years ago modern medicine created a profession for women. Training in the field has been making rapid strides since that time at various universities including Wayne University.

Medical technology is the profession's name, and the worker in this busy field is a highly trained person, who looks through microscopes, makes chemical tests, grows experimental colonies of "bugs," and performs many laboratory tasks to aid the physician in battling disease.

In the College of Liberal Arts, which administers the program, emphasis is laid on biology, physics, and chemistry during the first two years of study. Then the trainees go to the College of Medicine where they must grapple with many of the courses studied by the medical student.

The fourth year is spent at the various hospitals. At the completion of this training, they receive the degree of Bachelor of Science in Medical Technology from the University, and then comes another examination by the American Society of Clinical Pathology. When the student passes that, she becomes a registered Medical Technologist, and is officially qualified for work.

THE OLD REFRAIN

November 9, 1948

Dear Cynic,

Future Student Government presidents and members of the council, where have you been keeping yourselves during recent S.G. meetings?

Can it be that you already know all the inner workings of S.G. or do you expect to be in the know by osmosis?

Only four students who were not members of the council were present at the last meeting. How about coming and voicing your opinion? Strangely enough items which are of concern to us all come up every week.

By virtue of our constitution the council is likely to have a complete turnover, except for the treasurer, yearly. Some people would like to see the incoming council start a little ahead of scratch. Unfortunately that is a radical idea, but at least come and tell us we're crazy.

UVM's Scholarship Program

Ample proof that U.V.M. aids a substantial number of Vermont students in gaining a college education was illustrated by President Millis recently when an announcement of awarded scholarships for the year of '47-'48 was issued. The report showed that more than 95 percent of the scholarships were awarded to residents of this state.

It was also indicated that the increase of tuition from $600 to $700 will probably make it necessary that this year's scholarships exceed in total those given last year.

Certain Restrictions

Because certain of the scholarship endowments carry with them restrictions as to home town residences, special curricula or high scholarship records, it is not always possible to assist all the students who require help. However, President Millis' report shows clearly that a substantial number of Vermont young people who would not otherwise have the opportunity for a college education are thus enabled to do so.

Thousands Awarded

During 1947-1948, says President Millis, a total of $177,414.30 in scholarships was awarded. Of this amount $90,848.00 was provided by state appropriations as follows: College of Agriculture Scholarships, $43,600.00; Teacher Training Scholarships, $37,884.00; College of Medicine Scholarships, $1,800.00; Senatorial Scholarships, $7,200.00. The balance, approximately $87,000.00, was provided by the University from scholarship endowments and in the form of prizes. Total number of students assisted during 1947-48 was 666, with an average award of $266, and a range of awards from $100 to $600. Thus, according to Doctor Millis one-third of the Vermont students at the University received an average of $266 each in scholarship aid.

LAMBDA IOTA

The nest of the merry old owl has been in a holocaust for the last month. I guess the new deal came in here as in Washington. Harry Heath cracked the whip and as a result the Owls now have a rumpus room. Del Bressette made a ping-pong table to top off the "Garden of Eden" as it is known to some of the paint-spattered brothers. Thanks to Mary McBratney, who is nimble with a thimble, we have new drapes in the library. Some of the furniture also has been repaired. Fred, "Paul Revere" Luce and his co-pilot, Don Brothers, made a midnight ride to Waterbury on Fred's motorcycle last Friday night in search of some varnish for the ballroom floor. In dripping rain, Don returned to the nest at 2:00 a.m., sans Fred and the motorcycle, which ran out of gas half-way home. In spite of everything, when Fred got back to the nest, he stayed up 'til 6:00 a.m. varnishing the floor.

The informal dance held after the Middlebury game was a howling success. Refreshments were served, namely, coffee and doughnuts. Dick Bohlen and those who helped him are to be congratulated on the job they did as the dance committee.

Bob Morrison found time to come back to the green hills of Vermont for the opening of the deer season. He did a good job of opening it too, because at 9:30 a.m. Monday, he had bagged a fine 140 pound animal. Frank Round was also successful in getting a five point, 164 pound buck. It looks like the Owls are going to eat this week-end.

Getting down to more serious subjects, the Owls held their fourth degree last October 29, with Jim Sykes as degree-master. Dick Bohlen, Hal Carter, Jack Carrougner, Charlie Chiaradia, Jack Clarey, Ray Dana, Andy Dussault, Harry Heath, Jack Holly, Stan King, Bill Lizon, Art Merrill, Ken Pierce, Bud Stearns, and Gordon Sykes received their pins.

Some of the brothers have not been very successful in hanging onto their pins.

Art Merrill has pinned Dottie Nye, a member of Sigma Gamma. Andy Dussault and Polly Preston of Burlington plan to be married in February. Next June it will be wedding bells for Dick Bohlen and Ellen Ringey, who is a registered nurse at Porter Hospital in Middlebury. It has been rumored that a certain young lady who was up from Boston for the week-end also received the coveted Owl Pin. Oh, yes, Jim Sykes has also lost his pin. If anybody finds it, please return it to him.

SIGMA NU

On the afternoon of Sunday, November 7, the brothers of Sigma Nu attended the annual service in memory of the fraternity's war dead. Through the kindness of the university, the service this year was held in the Little Chapel of Ira Allen Chapel. Each brother wore a white rose, the fraternity flower, in honor of the occasion. Eminent Commander Robert O'Grady opened the service with the reading of a letter from the national headquarters setting forth the principles upon which the memorial service is based. He then introduced the Rev. Raymond A. Hall, head of the religious department of the university. Reverend Hall used as his topic the relation between the heroes of wars and the masses of common people from whom the heroes spring. He dwelt also upon the fact that this was the first occasion upon which a fraternity had used the chapel to such good advantage and expressed the hope that Sigma Nu would use the chapel for its memorial services in years to come. The fraternity chaplain, Leo Laliberte, was in charge of the arrangements.

Saturday evening, November 6, a group of Sigma Nus and dates dropped in to hear the piano magic of Russell Young, the colored virtuoso whose ability has won him the title of "The Man with a Thousand Fingers." Mr. Young had even the rafters pulsating as he accomplished one melody after another, in response to the requests of his audience.

In order that students may be free to take the trains or buses which leave Burlington at approximately 11:30 a.m. classes scheduled to meet at 11 o'clock and later will be cancelled on Wednesday, November 24.

Classes scheduled to meet at 8, 9, and 10 will meet as scheduled.

The Board of Foreign Scholarships and the State Department have announced that scholarship grants are available under the Fulbright Act for study in Greece and the Philippines. The closing date for filing applications is December 15, 1948. Applications for these grants should be made to: The Institute of International Education, 2 W. 45th Street, New York 19, New York.

Robinson Hall and Co-op Houses

No meals will be served after Wednesday noon meal through Sunday night. Regular meal service will be resumed Monday, November 29.

Soda Fountain

The Soda Fountain will close at 1 p.m. Wednesday, November 24 and will open at the usual time 8:30 a.m. Monday, November 29.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Alpha Chi's first chance to show off their fancy cooking came with the annual Mortar Board dance when the gals and their dates were treated to a buffet supper prepared by the cooks of the week, Joyce Rogerson and Yvonne Croom, ably assisted by Rosemary Traynor and Millie James.

Initiation took place on Tuesday, November 23, at seven o'clock when each of the following girls received her lyre and was made a "sister in the bond":

Lorraine Ayers	.....1950
Vivienne Olsen	.....1950
Janet Putnam	.....1951
Charlotte Raymond	.....1950
Jean Shufeldt	.....1951

A most welcome dinner followed at the Black Cat Cafe for the newly initiated Alpha Chis and their sisters.

Congratulations are in order for Mary Anne Browne for her outstanding performance in All My Sons.

Dinner at the house last week was climaxed with "Happy Birthday" and "Sweet Alpha Chi Girls" to Harriet Gregory and Carolyn Chapman. The celebration was made complete by a beautiful birthday cake which was successfully taken care of in a very few minutes by eighteen girls and Mrs. France.

Practice teaching leaves Jan Baird, Becky Wheatley, Yvonne Croom and Rita Bolognani exhausted after a trying, yet interesting afternoon in the local schools.

Alpha Iota spent a busy week entertaining our new province president, Mrs. Clifton Cope, of Belmont, Mass.

Harriet Gregory has been elected new treasurer to replace Alice Benson whose combined duties of student and housewife leave her little time for sorority financial matters.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

October 30 meant a big week-end at Yale for both Lorraine Bosworth and Marilyn White, and also the Theta dance for the entire university—The Cat's Meow.

November 1 was a happy day for the Thetas as it meant the initiation of Mary Lou Sweet, Ginger Hageman, Val Myers, and Jo Buck. Following the initiation ceremony, there was a delicious supper at the house, prepared by Nancy Tobey and her committee.

Keeping up the "Delt Tradition" of the Theta House, Dot Brau and John Cuban were pinned on November 10.

SIGMA GAMMA

Two members of the class of 1950 were pledged Monday evening, November 8, in Southwick Memorial. They are Joyce Lane of Barre and Kathryn Mears of Marshfield.

Last week Dottie Nye was pinned to Art Merrill of Norwich. He is a member of the Lambda Iota fraternity.

Problem: To hold down costs, and speed the extension of telephone service.

Solution: High-strength wire whose use allows the span between poles to be increased from 150 feet to more than 300. One pole now does the work of two.

The problem, of course, is a continuing one for telephone people. High-strength wire with required electrical qualities is only one of many things they have developed to help solve the problem in these days of high construction costs.

In total, their developments are the reason why telephone service here is the best in the world—the reason why a telephone call costs only a few pennies.

Middlebury's Ralph Loveys Heads All-Opponent Eleven

By the Sports Editor

This being the season of "All" teams, the U.V.M. Catamounts have duly balloted and selected their "All-Opponent" team for 1948.

The reason for the selections are apparent to anyone who watched the Cats in action this fall, but a quick run down the first team will indicate some of the strength available.

"Capt." Ralph Loveys spent so much time in the Cat backfield that the radio announcer was saying: "Collier gets the ball from the T, fakes to Loveys and hands off to St. Gelaiss."

Charley Abba is a young giant from Union College who trampled through, over and around any and all Catamounts unfortunate enough to be in his way.

Of Bob Raymond from Massachusetts, who ran a close second to Loveys in votes polled, the Cat guards, centers and backs said—"We thought there were seven of him."

"Morry Ross of New Hampshire is perhaps the best center in New England football"—that from men who have played against him the past two seasons.

Jack Barron, St. Lawrence's pile-driving, defense-smashing right guard, is being billed for "Little All-American" and the Evansmen give him an unanimous vote for same.

Bob Whitney of Rochester is a great tackle. He's 6 ft. 2 in., weighs 215 lbs., runs like a deer, and hits like a Mack truck. He lives in Barnstable, Mass., and the Vermont ends and tackles hope that he remains there throughout the duration of next year's football season.

Chuck Harrington, the second Massachusetts lineman to make the team, is a fine end and one of the reasons for the Bay Stater's crushing upset win over the Cats.

Leading the list of four terrific backs is Dave Strauss, Union's leather-pitching T general, the best passer and most deceptive ball handler faced this season.

Jim Pritchard of New Hampshire, shares with "Jarrin' Jaw" Corbisiero of Middlebury, the title of hardest-running back encountered and they both roundly deserve the praise.

Martin Anderson rounds out the squad from the other backfield post. Although not a consistent stellar performer, Anderson's one-man exhibition against Vermont, during which he personally accounted for 21 points, more than earned him a position on Vermont's all-opponent team.

Here is an "All" team picked by the men who know, the guys who played against them down on the field.

FIRST TEAM

Position	Player	School	Votes
LE	Ralph Loveys	Middlebury	7
LT	Charley Abba	Union	4
LG	Bob Raymond	Massachusetts	6
C	Morry Ross	New Hampshire	4
RG	Jack Barron	St. Lawrence	4
RT	Bob Whitney	Rochester	4
RE	Chuck Harrington	Massachusetts	2
QB	Dave Strauss	Union	3
LHB	Jim Pritchard	New Hampshire	4
RHB	Martin Anderson	Massachusetts	4
FB	John Corbisiero	Middlebury	5

* Loveys, who polled more votes than any other player is considered outstanding opponent and team captain.

SECOND TEAM

Ends—Roth, Massachusetts and Busino, Union.

Tackles—Branigan, Rochester and Piciorak, New Hampshire.

Guards—Ten Eyck, Union and Swekla, New Hampshire.

Center—Whalen, Union.

Backs—Gorman, New Hampshire; Best, Union; Eden, Rochester and Ragones, New Hampshire.

Honorable Mention: Linemen—Keck, St. Lawrence and Henty, Rochester. Backs—Lee, Massachusetts.

CROSS-COUNTRY SQUAD

Evansmen Prepare For Season Opener Against Dartmouth

The U.V.M. basketball squad has been rejoined by Coach "Fuzzy" Evans, fresh from the football wars, and is now about to enter its final week of practice before its opening clash against the Big Green of Dartmouth at Hanover on December 1.

A squad of twenty candidates, led by Capt. Hammy Livingston, has been working out since the middle of football season and is gradually rounding itself into shape.

Among those prepping for starting berths along with Captain Livingston are Ed Kotlarczyk, Big Al Niemann and Ken Pierce. These four, all starters on last year's state championship quintet, will form the nucleus of this year's combination according to Coach Evans.

Ed and Hammy operated from the two guard posts with a great deal of effectiveness last season and seem destined for the same positions on this year's five. Both are good floor men and possess the necessary scoring punch for the fast breaking offense.

At the center slot will be Big Al Niemann. Al has size, height, and ability and uses all three to the best advantage. The most notable of his accomplishments last year was when he was voted the most outstanding opponent by the Springfield quintet—a team that had faced a good many of the better teams of the country during its seasonal play—as a result of his great play in leading the Catamounts to their upset victory over the Gymnasts.

Ken Pierce is rounding into shape and will be holding down one of the forward spots, where hot Ken's corner shot is unstoppable. His one game high of 21 points last year proves that. The other forward spot is wide open with "Stretch" Galli, a standout with last year's freshman quintet, and Roy MacDonald showing the most promise.

The remainder of the squad is filled out by Pat Farma, Bob French, and Stu Moffit of last year's varsity squad; Cubby Goulet, Bill Grant, Harry McCarthy, Ken Terrill, and Bob Ratti of the '47-'48 frosh; Guy George, a transfer from V.J.C.; Ed Leach, who saw quite a bit of service ball, Dick Nostrand and Bob Bishop.

The schedule is tough, with eight of the twenty games coming before Christmas. Nevertheless Coach Evans looks for a good, but not easy, season with Dartmouth, Connecticut, Springfield and St. Michael's being the teams to beat.

ODE TO FOOTBALL OF '48

By Mort Kaufman

The season's almost over; the cleats are all worn out.

The coaches have their headaches from all the season's bouts.

The games are still discussed, which the team should have won.

But after all, both teams can't win, it wouldn't be any fun.

Some alumni are in glory and others, well—you know.

They don't have much to talk about; their schools were mighty low.

The best Eleven is being selected by every magazine.

Regardless of the victors, everyone can all agree.

The '48 football season was the best we ever did see.

So here's to the football player, who carried his colors true.

And made college days happier, for him, for me, for you.

Outing Club Presents Benefit Movie At Fleming Museum After Vacation

U.V.M.'s Outing Club is bringing to the campus an unusually interesting movie entitled "The 1948 Winter Olympics." It is a full 90-minute feature produced by Hans Thorne, noted ski movie producer. The movie will be shown on December 11 and 12 at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. each evening in the Fleming Museum Auditorium. The price of admission will be 75c including tax. The proceeds will go for the benefit of the Men's Ski Team.

The movie features several famous sport stars, each giving his own thrilling performance. The entire event has been filmed in detail under expert directorship and should prove to be a better-than-average skiing movie. The picture will take in not only skiing, but all the winter sports at the Olympics including skating, hockey, and bobsledding. The film is in color with music and commentary and is something that no one will want to miss.

INDEPENDENT CHAMPS

Captain Randall Leads Vermont Harrier Squad to 3-3 Record

Coach Archie Post's varsity harriers have just completed a very successful season with three victories in six meets. Prospects for future seasons look bright as not a man on the varsity squad will be lost through graduation. Captain Earle Randall, John Bellows, Jim Porter, Frank Peabody, Ced Pierce, El Wolcott, Jake Bailey, Frank Moran, Sam Harwood, Chad Arms, and John Flanders will all be back to participate in the hill and dale sport next year. Then too there are some promising runners up from the undefeated frosh squad which should bolster the U.V.M. teams of years to come.

Because of the late enrollment and the consequent delay in conditioning, the team started rather slowly against a strong Union squad and dropped a 24-35 decision to them in the opening meet held here on October 9. Captain Earle Randall showed great form in winning this race.

The following week the Green and Gold triads began hitting their stride and scored decisively over our neighbors from across the lake, Champlain. The final tally was Vermont 22, Champlain 33. John Bellows was unable to start in this race because of a leg injury. Again Earle Randall crossed the finish line the winner.

Cats Sweep Triangular

The next meet that the varsity participated in was a triangular affair with Bates and Bowdoin at Brunswick, Me. Our Vermont aggregation won rather handily over the short three-mile course. The score was Vermont 24, Bates 41, and Bowdoin 63. Earle Randall won his third straight race of the season. Bellows, Wolcott, and Peabody also contributed vital points to assure the victory.

On October 29 the team traveled to Amherst, Mass., and lost to an excellent University of Massachusetts squad by a score of 22-35. In this race Randy pressed Clough of Massachusetts to a new course record there.

On November 1 the varsity squad entered the Connecticut Valley Championships at Storrs, Conn. The competition was keen there and Vermont finished fourth. Randy avenged his defeat by Clough of Massachusetts and beat him for the number four position.

Vermont Edges Middlebury

In the final meet of the year, Vermont's harrier squad probably ran its best race of the year to down a stubborn Middlebury team by the score of 25-32. By virtue of this victory Vermont regained the state championship in cross-country. Jim Newman of Middlebury breezed home the winner to break the course record here by over 30 seconds. Bellows and Randall, finishing second and third respectively, also bettered Fred Webster's record which was set back in 1942.

So the Postmen hang up their spikes until spring when you will see the same men helping to win victories for U.V.M. on the cinder track at Centennial. In the meantime, congratulations to Coach Archie Post, Captain Earle Randall, Manager Wally Lash, and the entire squad.

The results of the season's meets follow:

October 9—Union at Burlington won by Union 24-35.

October 16—Champlain at Burlington won by U.V.M. 22-33.

October 22—Bates, Bowdoin at Brunswick, Me., won by U.V.M. 24, Bates 41, Bowdoin 64.

October 29—Massachusetts at Amherst, Mass., won by Massachusetts 22-35.

November 1—Connecticut Valley Championships at Storrs, Conn., won by Springfield 41, Coast Guard 59, Massachusetts 65, Vermont 94, Connecticut 107.

November 12—Middlebury at Burlington won by U.V.M. 25-32.

Freshman X-Country Squad Rolls Through Undefeated Season

The only Vermont team in fall competition to go undefeated, the freshman harriers were outstanding in rolling over their five opponents. The U.V.M. yearlings compiled a low average of 19 points to their adversaries' 47.

In their first outing, a triple meet with Danville and Waterbury High Schools, the junior Postmen had no trouble in running roughshod over the high school aggregations. Next to fall before the frosh was the Vermont school boy champion, Burlington High. The Randolph Aggies and the Middlebury Cubs were victims of Coach Archie Post's squad as they lost 17-46 and 15-50 respectively. Middlebury didn't have a chance as seven men crossed the wire, hand in hand, in first place to score for the Kittens.

The "Big Three," Bob Caswell, Lou Williams and George Rowell, always finished in 1, 2, 3, order for Vermont except when four of their running mates tied with them in the Midd meet. Caswell set the pace in all meets and no one scored ahead of him. Rounding out the scoring for the frosh were Kurt Shindler, Bob Farrell, Murray Lyon and Clarence Fagen. These seven men ran up most of U.V.M.'s points this year. The Kittens looked good in all their meets and should provide some good cross-country material for Vermont in the next three years. Congratulations, fellows, on a good team.

Seventy Hopefuls Answer Call For Frosh Basketball

Some seventy candidates answered Coach Norman Strassburg's first call for freshman basketball at U.V.M. last week.

Since then Coach Strassburg has divided the group into two sections and after a few more practice sessions he will make his first cut in the squad.

The large group which will be eyeing berths on the Kitten's squad this season includes an unusual abundance of former high school stars throughout Vermont and other states. The prospects appear bright for a strong Frosh quintet this season.

Not only has Coach Strassburg a large squad to pick from but he also has some boys who make out quite well in the height department as well as having a good deal of playing experience behind them.

Some of the aspirants who Strassburg will be watching closely are: Don Cullison, six foot two, of Hudson, N. Y., a transfer from Champlain College; Bill Riddell of Burlington, six foot two, played for Tucson, Ariz. high school and Fishburn Military School; Bud Prott, Brooklyn, N. Y., six foot one; Charlie Salem, Bennington, Vt., six foot one, played for Bennington High School and Lasall Military Academy, All-State in Vermont for two years and captain of last year's All-State team; Ernie Vuley, Winooski, Vt., five foot eight, played for Winooski High last year; Joe Normandeau, six foot two, played for St. Michael's High of Montpelier, played on all tournament team; Johnny Bloomer, five foot eleven, played for West Rutland High, all-state for two years; Howard Merrick, six foot three, Brooklyn, N. Y., played three years for James Madison High School in Brooklyn; Mark Byron, six foot three, played for Lincoln High School in Jersey City, N. J., and New York State Teacher's College; Lee MacDonald, five foot eleven, played for St. Johnsbury Academy; Bill Gillespie, six foot two, played for Newark High School of Newark, N. J., and Mercersburg Academy; James Hudson, six foot two, played for Plainfield, Vt., High School and was all-state four years; and Joseph O'Hehir, six foot three, played for Poughkeepsie, N. Y. High School.

Many Students Take Advantage of Mortar Board Tutor Service

Due to the large increase in the number of students desiring to be tutored, the Mortar Board Tutoring Service requests that all non-veteran men and women finance their own tutoring whenever possible. In the past Mortar Board has paid one-half of the tutoring bill. To date $42.00 of the allotted $95.00 has been spent and there is the danger the fund will not last for the whole year. The rates are $.80 per hour. If two or three are tutored together the rates are $1.20 and $1.50 respectively per hour. In mathematics it is advisable to tutor in groups of three.

The Tutoring Bureau is still prepared to contact qualified tutors for those desiring them. All tutors have the recommendation of their department heads.

Anyone interested in doing tutoring or in being tutored is invited to apply in room 104, Waterman Bldg.

Tutors are requested to report to room 104 as soon as they have commenced or terminated a tutoring assignment and to bring in their bills before the end of each month.

Howard Announces Opening Of Student Gov. Ski Program

The University of Vermont's long-awaited recreational ski program will get underway right after the Thanksgiving vacation according to John Howard, director of the U.V.M. ski school.

Howard has marked Tuesday, November 30, as the opening day with a meeting to be held at 3 p.m. in the Fleming Museum. Howard will introduce the program, what it hopes to attain over the season, and will also present a ski film entitled, "Ski Skill" by Friedel Pfiffer.

The film, according to Howard, will explain the technique of skiing, and how to choose correct equipment. Following the film, members of the ski school will move into the cage for the first contact with the conditioning program.

The remaining part of the pre-season program, extending over a three week period, will include twice weekly meetings on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Features of these meetings will be instruction in terminology, first aid, waxes, and general ski art.

Actual ski slope instruction is expected to get under way January 4, two days after students return to school. Five weeks will be spent on the snow.

Howard met with twenty instructors last week, and found a large number of prospective teachers with former teaching experience. "It is evident," said Howard, "that there will be top-flight instruction available."

Latest count shows that more than 70 students have shown a desire to take part in the recreational plan. Of that number 70 sophomores—both men and women—will take the course for gym credit. It was pointed out this week that this portion of the plan is in its experimental phase. The physical education department, in time, hopes to integrate the ski program with the existing physical education setup, and will be able to extend the privilege to freshmen as well. This year, however, the second-year students will get the break.

Howard pointed out that sections for actual on-the-snow-instruction will be selected at a later date.

Opening Night For Vermont Varieties Will Be Fri. Dec. 10

Before the cast of "All My Sons" began rehearsing at Southwick, a Dramatic Club committee was planning the "Second Annual Vermont Varieties," which will be presented December 9 and 10 at 8.15 p.m. in the Southwick Auditorium.

Vermont Varieties means variety not only in entertainment but in entertainers, for the cast includes everyone from the greenest greencap to Pres. John S. Millis. Students, faculty, wives of the faculty members, and members of the administration have put talent, long hours of rehearsing, and much diligent work together in order to produce this show.

In addition to its many new features this year's variety show has an original theme song which will be characteristic of Vermont Varieties in future years. Mrs. Florence C. Holden '49, wrote the lyrics for the song, and Natalie Aikens '50, composed the music. Miss Aikens' music was selected from a group of melodies composed by members of Professor Bennett's advanced harmony class.

During the week preceding Thanksgiving Vacation, forty acts auditioned for the show. The program of eighteen talent acts and an eight-piece student-faculty orchestra was then arranged. Six students, who were interested in being the Master of Ceremonies, auditioned Tuesday, November 30. A committee of Dramatic Club members chose Bob Condon '50, to be the M.C.

Tickets for Vermont Varieties are now on sale at the ticket booth across from the University Book Store.

UVM Health Council Will Sponsor Dance Saturday Eve at Gym

Music by the New Vermonters! An Intercollegiate atmosphere of fun and more fun! A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend the Health Council dance at the University gym, Saturday evening, December 4, where a happy and gay time is assured. A great many of the I.R.C. Regional Conference delegates are expected to help the U.V.M.'ers make and share a successful evening.

Tentative plans also include a preview of several acts from the second annual Vermont Varieties, which will be staged at Southwick December 9 and 10.

Health Council committees have been busy getting all phases of the evening lined up. Doris Galloway is chairman of music while Rita Elmer will have charge of the ticket sale. Publicity is under the direction of Gladys Neiburg. Phyllis Fraser has charge of inviting the chaperones. Martha Samson is chairman of halls committee. Cindy Williams will be in charge of decorations while Norma Stephenson will take care of refreshments.

The admission to the dance is sixty cents per person, which includes the tax. This annual affair, according to Rita Bolognani, Health Council president, is to raise money for the loan fund. This fund is available to women students on campus when application is made through Dean Mary Jean Simpson or Miss Eleanor Cummings of the Physical Education Department. The loans are to be used for emergency unexpected expenditures such as x-rays, dental work, fitting of eye glasses. There is no interest charges and students, to whom loans are granted, have up through three years after leaving college to repay the money advanced to them.

Brilliant Young Artist Guest At City Concert

Talented Violinist

Carroll Glenn

The first concert of the fourteenth season of Community Concerts will be given tonight in the Memorial Auditorium. The artist will be Carroll Glenn, the brilliant young violinist from South Carolina, who began to play the violin at the age of four. Accepted by the Juilliard Institute at the age of eleven, the youngest student yet enrolled at that most famous of all American music schools, Carroll made her New York debut at Town Hall at the age of sixteen.

Carroll Glenn is the only musician who has won all four of the major prizes offered in open competition to promising musicians in the United States; the Naumburg Foundation, the Town Hall Endowment, the National Federation of Music Clubs and the Schubert Memorial Awards. In her first two seasons as a touring artist, Carroll Glenn played with the New York Philharmonic, Philadelphia, National, Chicago, Minneapolis and Kansas City Symphony Orchestras, substituting in Kansas City for the great Kreisler. Miss Glenn, only 23 years old, is the wife of the famous pianist, Eugene List, who played for the Big Three at the Little White House in Potsdam, Germany. The violin on which she will perform is a Guarnerius, made in 1743, and is a sister-fiddle to one owned by Kreisler. She made a good-will tour for the Army throughout Germany and Italy and she represented her country at the 1946 International Music Festival at Prague, the only woman musician from the Western Hemisphere thus honored. She also played in other Old World music centers and won Europe's discriminating audiences with her rare combination of personal charm, youthful loveliness and extraordinary talent.

Line Crashers

U. V. M.'s Student Government has taken direct action to block students who break into cafeteria lines by the installation of a barrier running parallel to the line. Students, who have previously infiltrated into the line unnoticed will now have extreme difficulty in engaging in this covert activity.

In the past, pleas by Student Government President Harry Miele and the use of a monitor system have failed, so now under Miele's direction, a rope barrier has been installed to counter the problem of handling the traffic situation at meal time.

Elements of our student population urging the honor system recognize in this efficient move the hopelessness of promoting their idealism among a group of students who cannot even show the spirit of fair play in such a small matter as a cafeteria line.

Support WSSF

The World Student Relief Fund is an organization which campaigns annually in this country for funds to aid needy professors and students in Europe, China and other parts of Asia. This month, for the first time, the fund has had behind it student and faculty members of a dozen colleges and universities in this city, where the present campaign is sponsored by three religious groups, the World's Student Christian Association, B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations at American Universities, and the National Federation of Newman Clubs. Student leaders on campuses in all five boroughs are working hard to reach the goal of $50,000 before November 30, when the drive ends.

Here is a cause, we believe, which deserves support stretching far beyond college halls and the pockets of students in America who wish to aid fraternally those in less fortunate countries. Students of all races and creeds are giving to W. S. R. because they believe in the life of the mind and know that the international fostering of this mind helps to rebuild a peaceful world. But men and women who have long ago left college classrooms behind believe these things too. They will join, we hope, in generously aiding the present campaign of the World Student Service Fund, whose headquarters are at 20 West Fortieth Street, New York 18.

The Editor's Column

Vermont Forges Ahead

Vermont institutions of higher education are cooperating in a plan to provide a maximum of job finding assistance for graduates of their schools.

Meeting on the campus of the University of Vermont recently were representatives from Middlebury College, St. Michael's College, Norwich University and the University of Vermont, in addition to officials of the Veterans Employment Service and the Vermont State Employment Service.

It was felt advisable to coordinate the work of college placement boards with the services of these agencies to insure that every effort is made to develop, among business and industry, the types of jobs which will utilize the knowledge acquired by college graduates.

The agencies will canvass all Vermont employers to stimulate interest in the employment of trained people and to develop suitable employment opportunities. The plan also provides for registration of all graduates who desire job finding assistance. These will be cleared with the employment services.

Universal Military Training v. The Present Draft

The problem of deferring or drafting college students who are in fields which might be considered vital, such as engineering or science, would not have come up if Universal Military Training, which would take everybody, had been adopted, instead of the present draft, which must meet the problem of selecting a few from many, according to Dr. Karl T. Compton, newly elected chairman of the corporation governing the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. Compton, who was also chosen recently to serve as Chairman of the Research and Development Board of the National Military Establishment in Washington, stated that he still preferred the U. M. T. to the draft. Under this program, he said, an arrangement could be made so that college and agriculture students could complete their education before training. He mentioned the wartime system used in England and Scotland under which students in certain fields were deferred for a certain period, depending on what they were studying—liberal arts students for two years, chemistry students for three years, electronic students for four years, etc. Since this was a war-time plan, it may not be feasible for a peacetime draft, Dr. Compton said.

The Underestimated Factor

The big increase in money received from student fees is the only thing that has enabled the University of Omaha to balance its budget, the University's Board of Regents were told by Finance Secretary Charles Hoff. In his report Hoff said that student fees provided only 30 percent of the University's income ten years ago. Today, he pointed out, fees account for 63 per cent of the University's income.

Carthage College (III.) Studies Scholastic Standards

The Carthage College faculty recently voted to do away with six-weeks delinquency reports, and turn in delinquent students only at the mid-semester point. This move was a direct result of a faculty committee report on a survey of grading methods of 29 colleges and universities. The committee reported that 66 per cent of the schools surveyed used only mid-semester grades or delinquency reports to determine the progress of their students.

The first question asked of these schools was: What numerical evaluation do you attach to each letter used in your grading system? Fifty-five per cent of the schools attached no numerical evaluation, but left the matter up to the judgment of the teacher concerned. Ninety-six per cent of the schools accepted D grades toward graduation, but limited the number of D's a student can maintain.

Eighty-one per cent of the schools limited the number of D's by requiring a C average for graduation. The University of Illinois and Illinois Wesleyan University permitted 25 per cent D's. Knox College permitted one-third D's. Dana College permitted 20 per cent below the percentile of 80. St. Olaf, Muhlenberg and Wabash colleges would not accept transfers who showed D on their record for any subject.

American Express Forms Educational Travel Division

The establishment of a new "Educational Travel Division" by the American Express Company, to aid faculty members and students who contemplate traveling abroad to study in universities in foreign countries, has been announced by Ralph T. Reed, company president. The new division of the company, under the guidance of Dr. B. W. Van Riper, scholar and world-traveler, was established to aid thousands traveling abroad each year for foreign study.

The new division gives advice on scholastic requirements and fees, academic calendar and dormitory space, and answers a host of other questions on student activities in universities in 36 countries throughout the world. The new division further aids the traveling student by giving helpful advice on when and how best to go, what to wear and what to take along for life in another country.

In addition, students who travel abroad during their vacations can receive from the new "Educational Travel Division" valuable aid on where their most educational trip lies, whether in London, the Shakespeare Country and Glasgow, Paris and Versailles and the provinces of France, or the many other spots of historic significance in western Europe, including the occupational zones of Britain, France and the U. S. A. in Germany, even India, Australia, Latin America and Africa.

In connection with specialized educational travel service, American Express has prepared a brochure, "To Study Abroad," which is available at any office of the company.

The Whirl Outside By Montone

SOMETHING OLD: SOMETHING NEW

From The Archives . . .

Thirty Years Ago—November 30, 1918

Headline—"Influenza again in University—fraternity houses quarantined."

Editorial—THE SYSTEM OF BELLS: "Has anyone on the campus been heard to mention the fact that the system of bells newly installed this year is an improvement or even an agreeable change? We haven't. When we are just getting interested in the subject on which the professor happens to be lecturing we are rudely disturbed by a shrill gong which reminds us strongly of a grammar school building. Not only that, but the time for the sounding of the bells is by no means uniform in the various buildings. It may be that we have a class in the medical building; the professor in charge delays us five minutes overtime; when finally released, we rush madly over to the Old Mill to meet our next class there, and find that our hurry was needless, for even the ten-minute preparatory gong has not yet sounded there. Such an arrangement, of course, insures us against tardiness to that particular class. Yet it is hardly the most efficient method.

"But the foregoing is merely introductory. The real reason why we are all dissatisfied is that we love the sound of the Old Mill bell. For years the dear old bell has urged on hurrying feet from one end of the campus to another—its cadence is wrought into each man's heart, before he has been at 'Vermont' a month.

"As far as 'Vermont' students have traversed the globe, just so far have the strains of our old bell followed them. Is it because we are too conservative that we do not appreciate the change? Is it because the mill bell, like all else mortal, must become superannuated? Call it conservatism, call it what you will, but grant us this one boon, that when our undergraduates who have given so nobly of their time and youth for the winning of this war, shall again seek out the green campus of the University of Vermont, their ears may tingle and hearts beat faster at the dear familiar tones of the Old Mill bell."

Thirty-seven Years Ago—December 1, 1911

In a game teeming with interest for both players and spectators, 1915 won the class game on Centennial Field last Saturday afternoon by a score of 3-0.

The field was in poor condition. The recent snows and rains with the cold snap of Friday night had turned portions of the gridiron into veritable skating rinks. The lines were almost entirely obliterated, thus making it almost impossible to give a detailed account of the game. The classes met at 2.30 in front of the gymnasium and marched to the field led by the old bass drum. The young ladies preferred not to ride in the customary barge, but marched to the field and occupied a portion of the grandstand set apart for them. (This was followed by a detailed account.)

Thirty-nine Years Ago—December 2, 1909

At the close of the 1909 football season come many comments on the game by educators throughout the country. "President Buckham always has something worth saying when he comments on current events, and what he says is always aimed at the point," said the Daily News in an editorial recently.

President Buckham says, "Sport is mimic war. But when war has passed the savage state it calls more and more of mind into conflict. Football as now played—or fought—is an anachronism—it grows more brutal and less intellectual. There seems to be a call for one game in which muscular energy gets a chance to exploit itself, but in present football it is far too prominent. The game should be retained, but more of nerve, of strategy and tactics, of swift thinking and sharp decision, in distinction from the heavy brute force of the bear and the buffalo, should be brought into play."

Fraternity-Sorority Notes

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Alpha Chi is well represented on the forthcoming W.S.S.F. drive with Hedi Ballantyne representing the sorority, Louise Gee the Goodrich Classical Club, Harriet Gregory the S.C.A., Peggy Fisher the International Relations Club, Jan Kilary the Women's Student Union and Carolyn Chapman the Ariel.

The annual Christmas bazaar will be held on Saturday, December 11. Committees have been organized and the girls are knitting frantically in order to make something nice to sell. Refreshments will be served in the tea room and the alums promise all sorts of delicious candy and cookies. Also—it is rumored that Santa Claus will be present in Waterman to help advertise this event. Watch for him soon!

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Delta Delta Delta alumnae and the collegiate chapter observed Founder's Day, Monday, November 22 at the chapter house. The Tri-Deltas were especially honored with the presence of one of their patronesses, Mrs. Whiting.

The program was arranged by Beth Mack, Wendy Millington, and Patty Tucker. Wendy Millington gave a brief account of the history of Tri-Delt and Mrs. B. F. Lutman, an alumna, gave an interesting talk on the founding of Eta Chapter.

Coffee and cake were served buffet style by candlelight. The centerpiece was a large bowl of yellow chrysanthemums. Group singing was enjoyed by all. An exhibit, depicting "Eta Chapter Through the Years," consisting of scrapbooks, pictures and souvenirs was arranged in the rustic recreation room.

PHI DELTA THETA

In spite of the damp weather and discouragement over our near win with Middlebury this past week-end, spirits revived at the buffet supper which preceded an informal tea dance. Many alumni returned for this traditional week-end and enjoyed themselves along with the brothers and their guests. A good representation of Middlebury students, including our invited guests, the Dekes, also made the day a big occasion. Chaperones for the dance were Mr. and Mrs. Don Marburg and Professor Saindon and guest. The evening closed with the singing of "Tell Me Why She Wears His Pin" for Chuck Gordon who has recently pinned Miss Harriet Gifford of Manchester, N. H. Among the alumni here for the week-end were Whit Switzer, Mickey Cochran, and Lew Coddington.

Plans for the Christmas formal are being formulated; the committee for this dance being Brothers Will Robertson, Dick Fink, Dave Banta, and Don Duolos. From all appearances it should be very successful.

Captain Bill Dempsey's bowling team is off to a good start by winning its first bowling match against the Teps.

"Lanient"

'Twas the night before Saturday
And all through the house
Not an athlete was stirring
Nor "Bloody!"

The players were tucked in their snug little beds
While nightmares of Barquin danced in their heads,
Then up from the cellar came a cry and some shrieks,
"Good Lord," cried our President. "Here come the Dekes!"

Seriously, after this season, the entire football team receives congratulations, particularly next year's captain, Brother Stan Ursprung and the other house lettermen.

Surplus students found Sunday morning were shipped back to Middlebury on the nine o'clock bus. Included in a later shipment were the two "Mexicali Roses" from Vassar who finally arranged a Vermont week-end on their busy schedule.

SIGMA NU

The evening of Thursday, November 18, Dean Simpson and Miss Wing were dinner guests at the Sigma Nu house. The usual rush for seats was subdued to an orderly procession behind the two guests and the house-mother, Mrs. Brauer, who led the way into the candle-lit dining room. Once seated, everyone was surprised by a steak dinner (and rolls, too) which had been very tastily prepared under the direction of the stewards, Dunc McLaren and Sherm Sprague. The meal was topped off by a dessert of gingerbread and whipped-cream, which Dean Simpson avowed to be her favorite dessert. The guests lingered a bit after the meal to look at the alumni group pictures which are arranged in chronological order about the dining room. Dean Simpson recognized a good many of the alumni and related a few tales about them to the amusement of those who heard. Sigma Nu was proud to be host to Dean Simpson and Miss Wing and looks forward to the pleasure of their company again in the future.

On the other extreme, we find that some of the boys attended the Ice-Capades in old Montreal. One contingent left late Tuesday evening, followed by another group Wednesday afternoon. The two forces joined at Dinty Moore's at 5.00 p.m., by previous arrangement. Following an enjoyable evening, in the course of which they did manage to see the Ice-Capades, the boys climbed into their cars and found their way back to Burlington. The caravan arrived Thursday morning and it was found to contain the traditional traffic sign and a chair of unknown origin (well, almost unknown).

A tip of the hat went to Bob Wood and Charlie Wilcox, who were two of the four U.V.M. representatives at the Eastern Inter-collegiate Dairy Products Tasting Competition at Atlantic City. True, Atlantic City was a little out of season and bathing beauties were scarce, but the boys had fun trying.

SIGMA PHI

Sigma Phi Fraternity welcomed into its midst four new brothers at the 104th annual initiation of the Alpha of Vermont on Sunday, October 24, 1948. The newly initiated were George W. Davenport, III, class of '51 from San Gabriel, Calif.; Ellwyn F. Hayslip '50, from Flushing, N. Y.; Edward T. McKenna '50, from Brattleboro, Vt.; and Harold A. Perry '49, from Swanton, Vt. Congratulations are in order for them all.

The second informal dance of the fall semester was held at the Sig house on Saturday evening, November 13, from 8.30 to 12.00 p.m., after the Middlebury game. The brothers were very glad to welcome many grads and guests, including many Middlebury students, during the evening. We were also very happy to have Prof. and Mrs. L. S. Rowell and Mr. Truman Webster present as chaperones for the affair. Refreshments of cider and doughnuts were served and the party was arranged by Social Chairman Bob Taisey and Assistant Elly Hayslip with the added cooperation of many of the brothers. The current mystery: What happened to the dozens of doughnuts not consumed during the evening between the hours of 12 and 1?

Because of a revamping in printing schedules by the Free Press Printing Co., the 1949 Ariels will not be available until after the students return from Christmas vacation.

The first meeting of the new U. V. M. Marketing Club will be held at 4.30 p.m. Thursday, December 2, in Room 1 North College. Everyone is welcome and it will be possible to have some practical experience in marketing. Work that the members do in this club will more closely approximate what they will do after graduation.

See or drop a post card to Warren Coolidge, 15 Weston St., to get your free 1949 calendar.

The U.V.M. Band will make a new recording of "Cotton Babes" which will go on sale in January of 1949. The price is not known as yet but will be about $1.50.

ATTENTION SENIORS

The United States Civil Service Commission is announcing an examination for Junior Professional Assistant. Options include: Economist, Chemist, Psychologist, Social Science Analyst, Statistician, Food and Drug Inspector.

Examinations are also being announced for Junior Management Assistant with options in the following areas: General Administrative Assistant, Budget Assistant, and Personnel Assistant.

These examinations are open to college seniors. The closing date is December 21. Further information is on file in the Placement Office.

Broadway Actress Will Give Show At St. Mike's Theater

The Knights and Knaves, in cooperation with the Pen and Mike Club of Trinity and St. Michael's Colleges, and the Newman Club of the University of Vermont, recall an actress that thrilled St. Michael's Playhouse patrons last summer. The Knights and Knaves, who recently brought to Burlington, Margaret Webster's Shakespearean Company, now combine their efforts with the Pen and Mike Club to bring back to Burlington Miss Blanche Yurka.

In her repeat performance at St. Michael's, Miss Yurka is planning on giving a series of monologues from a few famous plays. There will be a matinee at 2.30 and an evening show at 8.30.

For students and connoisseurs, and for those who have a taste for finesse in execution—her fragmentary recapitulation of the great play, dramatic and comedy, through the ages is a rare theatre going experience.

Miss Yurka's acting is a phenomenon calculated once again to stimulate and delight theatregoers who witness her performance December 4 in Austin Hall, St. Michael's College.

Student Government Notes

Advisory Committee

Professor W. R. Adams, new chairman of the Senate Student Advisory Committee, spoke to the council concerning the plans of his committee. He explained that its chief aim will be to have contact with every existing student organization and to set up and perpetuate a group of faculty advisors to guide each organization, thus putting student organizations on a "better plane of stability." To achieve this purpose a file will be kept in the Dean of Administration's office as a "depository and reference on all student organizations." Each year each group will fill out an annual registration form stating its type and purposes. The file also will accommodate permanent records of any organization during the summer.

Professor Adams asked that Student Government select one or more faculty members to attend its meetings. He said that a member of the Student Advisory Committee will attend each council meeting.

Faculty Advisors

The Committee will insist upon faculty advisors for all student groups. Professor Adams implied that faculty members may oversee Kake Walk Committee proceedings. All faculty advisors will meet together once a year as a committee-of-the-whole to draw up a written statement of what should constitute the duties of a faculty advisor.

The Student Advisory Committee is not to act in a functional capacity. It will study student problems and make recommendations.

It was explained that any student group desiring official recognition must submit to the executive council a statement of its nature and objectives. The council in turn shall advise the Student Advisory Committee of the request and of its approval or disapproval. The Advisory Committee shall pass approval or disapproval and submit all facts to the University Council. The group alone may grant recognition of any student organization. Discontinuance of such recognition may occur upon investigation by Student Government and the Student Advisory Committee and the decision of the University Council.

Professor Adams issued to the council the initial draft of a statement regarding the sanction of student organizations and the relations of the Student Advisory Committee to them. Pete Haslam moved that a copy of this be given to all members of the council. The motion was seconded by Ed Costello and carried.

Athletic Council Elections

Harry Miele informed the council that four students should be elected immediately to the new Athletic Council. These may be chosen in a manner decided by the executive council. The council elected at once: William Elgood, William Knight, Wallace Lash, and Herman Paikowsky. They shall hold office until such time as Student Government elects their successors.

Dan Burke reported the request of Dean Kroepsch to talk with several council members on the subject of the registration process. President Miele will make the appointments.

Harry announced also that he will appoint a Ways and Means Committee and an Elections Committee to facilitate the functioning of U.V.M. Students.

Finance Committee

Reporting on Finance Committee activities, Jane Atwood stated that $390.50 has been granted to Boulder Society, plus the price of the Sunderland trophies, and that $648.00 has been granted to the University Band, part of which may be returned in income from band concerts. An appropriation of $1,580.00 was made to Windfall and one of $250.00 to the Dramatic Club. The latter will probably be returned in the spring. The Dramatic Club hopes to become self-perpetuating.

Jane said that the new accounting system is underway after a "briefing" of student treasurers. She submitted for consideration the handling of funds for organizations which do not derive money from the student treasury. Ed Costello moved that organizations using student funds but having other non-student-supported accounts, be required to have those accounts handled by Student Government and to accept the figures of the student accounting system and pay a charge for services amounting to 3% of its year's budget. Other funds may be handled according to the decision of the controlling organization. The motion was seconded by Jane Atwood and passed.

Jane announced that the student treasurers shall hold office hours in the Student Government office from 2.00 to 4.00 on Mondays and from 9.00 to 11.00 on Thursdays and asked that the office be kept vacant for that purpose.

Jane presented the budget of the Varsity Rifle Team for approval by the council stating that the budget had not been submitted to the Athletic Department soon enough to be included in its expenses. Ed Costello moved that the council grant the club $400.00 pending further discussion. The motion was seconded by Peter Haslam and carried.

Ken Belding appeared before the council to say that the Catamounts will play for one dance without charge. The W.S.S.F. dance around January 15 was considered the best time, but it will be left up to Ken to decide.

Jane Atwood, treasurer, announced that $552.01 has been appropriated for the Aggie Club, including the expenses of dairy judging. Alpha Zeta has been granted $290 and the Health Council, $85.

Jane stated that representatives of the Ariel have requested the purchase of a speedographic camera, to be used jointly by the CYNIC and Ariel staffs. Such a camera would cost roughly $400. Al Pratt moved that the request be referred to the Ways and Means Committee for consideration. Al Pratt, Dan Burke, and Ed Costello make up this committee. The motion was seconded by Ed Costello and carried.

Dartmouth Downs Cats At Hanover 64-42

Pierce, Kotlarczyk Share High Scoring For UVM In Opener

At Hanover, N. H., last Wednesday night the University of Vermont opened its 1948-1949 basketball season by losing to a strong Dartmouth College quintet 64 to 42. Coach "Fuzzy" Evans' combination was never behind more than ten points up until the last five minutes, but then the Big Green, led by Field and Leede, really began to pour it on to score 16 game-clinching points. Both clubs looked sloppy and ragged, but that is to be expected in the first game of the season. For a brief period in the second half of the fray Vermont looked very good when they came within eight points of overcoming the Indian's lead. U.V.M.'s performance against such rugged competition (the Big Green is the toughest foe on the schedule) definitely classifies the Green and Gold as a strong club in its circle of small college opposition.

In the first six minutes an evenly matched game ensued. However, at that point a Dartmouth field goal and foul shot put the Big Green out in front and they never relinquished their commanding position. At half time U.V.M. was behind Dartmouth by a score of 32 to 23 and that same margin was maintained until the last five minutes when the scoreboard read 48 to 40; then all fury broke loose in the Big Green's offense and they went on to sew up the contest.

High scorers for the Catamounts were Pierce and Kotlarczyk with 10 points apiece and Galli close behind with nine. For the Indians, Field led the way with 21 and next in line with 14 points came Leede.

Undefeated Sigma Nu Quintet Takes League Lead In Bowling

A darkhorse Sigma Nu bowling five roared by the ATOs to take over the top rung in the Interfraternity Bowling League ladder by virtue of their 901-831 verdict over the TEPs as the second week of the highly competitive alley play drew to a close. Dan Monieson led the attack of the winners, while Teddy Irwin was the big gun in the TEP machine.

Sigma Nu: Wood 176, Dalzell 172, Gendron 170, Snelson 181, Monieson 202.
TEP: Waterman 141, Levine 156, Irwin 190, Berman 172, Goodwin 172.

Phi Sigs 3, Phi Delt 1

Behind the Herculean efforts of Mickey Frank, indispensable anchor man, the Phi Sigs dumped the hitherto unbeaten Phi Delt by the close score of 989-982. After trailing at the halfway point, the Phi Delt, with Bill Dempsey setting the pace, nearly upset the Phi Sig appellation.

Phi Sigs: Thomas 204, Datnoff 171, Mickler 188, Brown 191, Frank 235.
Phi Delt: Schwyer 188, Link 199, Dempsey 212, Linsenmeir 179, Long 204.

Kappa Sigs 3, Sig Phi 1

In the third match of the evening, Wally McGarey spearheaded a second string drive with a blistering 135 pinfall as the Kappa Sigs overpowered the Sig Phi 1024-993. Dick Nostrand led the losers with a respectable 234 total.

Kappa Sigs: D'Elia 174, Hoskiewicz 197, McGarey 234, Lewkowicz 202, Gilbertson 217.

Sig Phi: Birge 192, Page 165, Nostrand 233, Tudhope 214, Goplet 189.

Delta Psi Wins Default

When the opposition failed to put in an appearance, the Delt captured four easy points to draw abreast of the Phi Sigs in the standings. Stu Haven scattered 239 pins, the high double of the week, to spark the Delt drive.

Delta Psi: Kehoe 198, Riddel 186, Ingram 190, Haven 239, White 189.

ATO 3, SAE 1

To round out the fraternity weekly schedule, the defending champions, the ATOs, outlasted the SAEs 980-952. The scoring on both sides was fairly even as the underdog SAE quintet strove desperately to recover from a 38 point half-time deficit.

Union College Opens '48-'49 Home Season Tomorrow At 8:30

The home stand of the University of Vermont's potent hoopsters will be inaugurated Saturday evening in Memorial Auditorium at 8:30 when the untried Garnet quintet from Union College take the floor for the traditional basketball clash. Still smarting from their failure to give the Big Green of Dartmouth a better tussle, the Evansmen will be fighting hard to notch their first verdict of the campaign. Unfortunately, the Catamounts were unable to control their offensive boards at Hanover effectively, so Coach Fuzzy Evans has been striving hard to correct this deficiency in the Green and Gold attack.

Reports from Schenectady have been pretty vague so little is known of the comparative strength of the two squads. However, local fans will remember that in the outing staged on the New York state court last winter, the Garnet outlasted U. V. M. to register a 40-39 decision.

The Evansmen have improved steadily since the opening game, so with their eyes on the return engagement with Dartmouth on Monday, the Livingston-captained courtsters will attempt to regain a little prestige at the expense of the Garnet when the opening whistle sounds tomorrow night.

UVM Seeks Revenge In Return Skirmish Here Monday Night

The Dartmouth Indians, coached by Earl Lamte, come to Burlington Monday night to meet the Catamounts in a return game. At this writing the outcome of the season's opener at Hanover, N. H., is unknown. The Big Green is the heavy favorite especially on their own floor, but underdog Vermont with its veteran squad can put up a good fight. The Indians possess an imposing array of talent which Coach Lamte can use against the Cats. With only two players lost by graduation, the Big Green hopes to better their last year's record of 13-12.

Although they have lost the services of their high scoring forward ace, Paul Campbell, and stellar guard, Captain Chip Coleman, the Indians can still put a powerful aggregation on the hard wood floors this winter. With the sharp shooting captain-elect, Ed Leede, back in uniform, Dartmouth has another potential high scorer to take Campbell's place. Leede finished second behind Campbell in the 1947-48 scoring circles with 327 points.

Lanky Wes Field is on hand to step into the center position which he so capably filled last year. Field is a good man on defense, and is generally in control of the backboards. Two seasoned starters for the Indians are guards, Emil Hudak and Joe Sullivan. These two have alternated at one guard post last year with the versatile Chip Coleman at the other. Hudak is a polished performer and can bear some watching in the game with the Cats. The remaining forward spot is uncertain with two or three outstanding reserves fighting it out for the starting nod. It will be hard for Coach Lamte to find a player who can take over Paul Campbell's jersey.

The University of Vermont boasts four veterans who have played varsity ball for at least two years. Led by the hard playing Hammie Livingston at guard, the Cats are pointing for a good season. With Captain Livingston at the other guard post will be Ed Kotlarczyk of Detroit who plays heads up ball all the way. At center is big Al Niemann who improves steadily each year. Ken Pierce, forward, is rounding out his fourth year of basketball for Vermont. Pierce along with Hammie Livingston will be the only men who will not be back to play for the Catamounts next year.

The other forward position seems to be between Keith Galli, the six foot star of the '48 freshman basketball squad, and Roy MacDonald who is shaping up as the drill sessions progress. Galli perhaps has the edge over MacDonald in that he can add much needed height to the starting five.

Kasap Starts First Year With Hockey Team

UVM Hockey Team Due For Good Year; Switzer Only Loss

There are very good prospects for a successful hockey team for the University of Vermont this coming season. Almost the entire squad of last year will be back to take over their old positions in the lineup. Big "Mike" Kasap will be at the helm for the first time and his ability to handle men should prove to be a favorable asset.

U.V.M.'s season opens on January 8 when the Green and Gold pucksters travel to Amherst, Mass., to tangle sticks with the University of Massachusetts. The schedule includes 13 games, of which six will be played on the Catamount's home rink. All home games will begin at 2.30 p.m. instead of 2.00 p.m. as was the policy last year.

One of the drawbacks of last year's squad, which compiled a record of four wins and six losses, was the lack of early conditioning. Hockey is a sport that requires top physical conditioning for the long and strenuous play that is involved. Early season conditioning may spell the difference between a standout team or just a mediocre sextet. To help make this a better than average year for U.V.M., Mike Kasap will start getting his men in shape right after the Thanksgiving recess. Calisthenics, running, and fundamentals will be stressed until ice is available. The splendid job that Kasap did with the football team this past season should indicate that his hockey team will be just as tough and hard for the opposition to handle.

Karl Switzer, who led the squad last year in all-around play, is the only regular not returning. Wendy Barwood, who teamed up with Karl on many occasions to give U.V.M. scoring power, will be back again to take over the center assignment. Jack Hurley, Al Berrault, Stewart McCracken and Bill Plankey, regular wing-men from last year, return to bolster Vermont's offensive strength. Two of last year's outstanding defense men, Bill Dempsey and Malcolm Mickler, will return to take over their positions in the lineup. Both proved tough for the opposition to get by on more than one occasion last season. To round out Vermont's defensive ability into a strong combination will be the return of Arnold Piche, one of the best college goalies in this section of the country. Arnold was not eligible to play last season due to scholastic difficulties. John Adams, who was regular goalie last year and a better than average player, will also add to the squad's strength as he returns for another season. Also returning to the U.V.M. sextet, all of whom saw plenty of service last year, will be Prescott Stearns, Jim Turnbull, Charlie Vosburgh, Dave Monieson, and Dan Lareau. Several freshmen from last year will undoubtedly help to give the squad much-needed reserve strength.

Meyer and Agar to Debate Vital Issue at Vt. Forums

Cord Meyer ex-Marine and National President of the United World Federalists, will speak at the next Vermont Forums meeting to be held in the City Hall on Wednesday, December 8, according to T. B. Braine, local forum chairman. Mr. Meyer is making only this one appearance in Vermont, he stated. Subject of the forum, is "Do we want world government now?"

President of the largest U. S. organization working for world government though still in his twenties, Cord Meyer is widely known for his book "Peace or Anarchy," which was judged one of the most important books of 1947. Coming out of the Marines with a determination to do something to prevent another war, Mr. Meyer served as veteran assistant to U. S. Delegate Harold Stassen at the San Francisco Conference in 1945. Since that time he has been working to abolish "international anarchy" through his writing and speaking, and through the activities of United World Federalists.

The other side of the case will be argued by William Agar, Chief of the UN Section for Lectures and Educational Liaison. Mr. Agar began his career in the field of geology, first with the Anaconda Copper Company in Montana, then at Yale and Columbia, and finally in the preparation of state surveys. In 1935 he became headmaster of the Newman School in Lakewood, N. J., where he remained until 1940. With the outbreak of the war, Mr. Agar devoted himself to assisting the government's search for much needed metals and to lecturing and writing about the meaning of the war and the requirements for peace and international co-operation. A veteran of the first World War, he served two years in Europe with the American Field Service, and as a pilot in the AEF.

With two gifted speakers and a clear-cut proposition in which their convictions are opposed, a dramatic debate is in prospect. Because of the popular nature of the subject and the size of this year's membership, only forum members can be accommodated at this meeting.
